The miners are unanimously opposed to any reduction of wages, which are already very low. The so-called $7.50 per day wage granted by the Jacksonville agreement, which the present wage negotiations committee is charged not to cut, is largely a fictious thing. The miners get paid for the most part by tonnage rates, and the company can discriminate, and does discriminate, at times forcing whole sections

Panama Labor Unions Protest to World at Imperialistic Greed

WASHINGTON.—Organized labor in the republic of Panama has efiled a resolution of protest against the pending treaty made by Secretary Kellogg with the government of Panama. That treaty, which Panama has refused thus far to ratify, makes Panama a party to any war in which the United States may engage—even in Latin America.

According to the statement of the Labor Federation of Panama, "it is astonishing that a rich and powerful nation such as the United States desires to maintain in economic servitude and subjugation the people of Panama, which is one of the most generous nations of America, and which has made possible the building of the Panama Canal by the United States for the benefit of the world.

"Now the reward which they receive, according to this treaty, is subjugation and servitude. This treaty should be opposed and protested as it already has been by the people of Panama. This problem of Panama has not only an intimate relation to our nation, but with the international relations of the Pan-American countries. The treaty should not be ratified until corrections are made to safeguard the liberties and dignity of both peoples."

Will Not Resign, Says Puppet Diaz, Supported By American Bayonets

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—"President" Diaz, of Nicaragua, will continue in office until his term expires in 1928 and has no intention of resigning before then, despite reports to the contrary, his foreign minister, Cuadra Pasos, said in a message to the Nicaraguan Legation today.

Elements in Rampage Over Globe Take Heavy Toll in Life and Property

Cyclones, earthquakes, blizzards and fogs, a seeming revolution of the elements, have taken a heavy toll of land and property damage in a sweep across the face of the globe in the past forty-eight hours.

Earthquakes in Jugo-Slavia are reported to have resulted in the loss of hundreds of lives and much damage to property.

In Queensland a cyclone has taken nearly fifty lives and done inestimable damage.

A cyclone in the Gulf of Cattaro is reported to have caused a Jugo-Slavian steamer to sink with a great loss of life.

Blizzards which have raged in northern Japan have taken a toll of well over 100 lives.

London yesterday entered its fifth day of foggy gloominess, the fog already having cost nearly a score of lives in accidents and heavy economic losses.

EVERYBODY SAYS COURT CAN KILL BOY OF TWELVE

Hungry, Homeless, Shot Man in Holdup

Weeping bitterly, his rosy cheeks having become white and drawn in fear, Michael Ponkrashow, a blue-eyed, yellow-haired boy of twelve, passed into the shadow of the electric chair yesterday when he was arraigned in the Children's Court in Jamaica for the slaying of e Richmond Hill storekeeper Monday night.

Will Burn In Chair.

If the court, which has adjourned till Friday, rules he has sufficient intelligence to know right from wrong, he will be charged with murder. If convicted, according to the New York state laws, he can be sent to the electric chair in spite of his youth, and apparent abnormal condition.

Michael had had trouble with his parents, who are Polish immigrants and speak no English, so five days he decided to run away from his home at 8947 Viola Place, Richmond Hill. He took a revolver from his father's desk, and when his hunger bothered him, he held up schoolmates and stole their lunches.

Was Hungry.

"These lunches dfiln't last long, so I made up my mind I'd have to get some money," Michael said in his confession to the police, in which he admitted everything. "I was hungry and desperate. I went into the store to pull this hold-up like I'd read about, and the gun went off."

Driven to desperation by hunger, he invaded the leather goods store of Marcus Gold, 42, at 108-17 Jamaica Ave., Richmond Hill. "I asked him to show me a belt," Michael went on. "I was scared then and I hadn't done nothin' yet. I didn't seem to have the nerve to tell him to hand over the money in the cash register.

Gun Aimed At Him.

"While I was trying to make myself say 'Hands Up!' the gun went off in my hands. The man kind of fell and started towards the front door. I ran in the back and hid. I was trying to get through a small window when a cop came in and pointed a gun at me."

Although according to detectives who heard him tell his story, he seems to be suffering from some kind of psycho-pathic illness, since he appears to be normal in most respects, and was an exceptionally good student at Public School 99, Kew Gardens, Queens, where he was in grade 6-A, it is likely that the present charge of juvenile delinquency will be changed to murder on Friday.

"Legal" to Kill Him.

Michael was shivering in terror when he was taken from the rooms of the Brooklyn Children's Society to the court. "He knows he is in real trouble now," said Charles H. Warner, superintendent of the society. "And he's right. There's no legal reason why the youngster shouldn't be convicted of murder and sent to the electric chair."

Canton Breaks Off Talks with British

English Treachery Blamed for Failure to Arrive At Peaceful Settlement

SHANGHAI, Feb. 15.—Eugene Chen, in behalf of the nationalist government, broke off relations with Owen O'Malley, British Charge d'Affairs, when the British government violated its promise to divert to other British possessions troops intended for Shanghai.

As soon as Chen was informed that the soldiers of British imperialism were provocatively parading through the streets of Shanghai he abruptly informed O'Malley that the Cantonese government could not negotiate while the British government continued to regard its agreements so lightly.

The Cantonese are quite satisfied with developments. The British here continue to brag about the ability of the empire to "bring the Chinese to terms" but they are worrying considerably over the loss of their Chinese trade which reached the enormous total of more than half a billion dollars in 1924.

Eugene Chen will inform Secretary of State Kellogg that the nationalist government cannot agree to Kellogg's proposal to make Shanghai neutral territory.

British Press Rages.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The London press continues to rage against the Nationalist Government of China. Rothermere's Daily News haughtily asks the government to restore to British subjects in China the "immunity and respect that a proper show of firmness will undoubtedly secure." Eugene Chen is bitterly assailed and called an agent of Moscow and accused of the deceit and trickery which "perfidious Albion" has been notorious for all thru her history.

The left wing of the trade union movement is carrying on a vigorous agitation against war with China but their efforts are hampered by the treachery of the right wing socialist leaders who give lip service to the freedom for China but actually support the Baldwin government.

Sze Talks Cold Turkey.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Asserting that "the people of the world do not realize the seriousness of the limitations the foreign powers have imposed upon China's sovereignty," Dr. Alfred Sze, Chinese minister to the United States, declared in an address here today that "China will not rest until her independence and territorial and administrative integrity shall become realities."

China will never be satisfied "with mere assurances in the form of high-sounding and pious declarations," the envoy said in alluding to the British memorandum of December 25, the recent American policy statements and other declarations made by the powers "since the beginning of the century."

Lisbon Rebels Lose Fortunes to Government

LISBON, Feb. 15.—An official decree was issued today dissolving the units of the republican guard and the political association which participated in the recent rebellion.

U. S. INTERVENTION IN NICARAGUA IS VERGING ON CRISIS

Liberals Control Entire Atlantic Coast

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15. — The United States "must either withdraw its support from Diaz or send the marines to stop General Moncada (liberal commander) by force of arms," Dr. S. S. Lacy, liberal Nicaraguan agent here declared in a statement today.

The capture of Mantagalpa by Moncada's army will bring the matter of American intervention in this country to a head, Vaca said. He expects to hear of the fall of Mantagalpa at any hour.

FATHERS OF THE PEOPLE VOTED BRANCH BANK BILL FOR MORGAN

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Suave politeness and mock deference which are the normal mask for mental laziness in the senate were suddenly dropped, on the morning after the passage of the farm relief bill, when Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania, in charge of Mellon's bill re-chartering the Federal Reserve banks, arose to demand action on that measure.

LaFollette, Norris and Wheeler, watching for the move, jumped up. Wheeler interrupted Vice-President Dawes, who was hastily putting to a vote Pepper's motion that "the senate proceed to consideration" of the bank bill. Dawes rapped his desk loudly, Norris raised a point of order. Dawes overruled him.

"I submit," shouted Wheeler, striding forward among the desks (Glass) heard that agreement, and so did the senator from Kansas (Curtis), who was present."

Cries of "vote" came from a dozen directions. Dawes gavelled down the hubbub. Glass got the floor to deny that he had agreed that Wheeler should speak; he said he gave notice

FORSTMANN-HUFFMANN STRIKERS PREPARE NOW FOR ORGANIZATION

Local Union President Issues Statement to Explain Situation; Back at Work

PASSAIC, Feb. 15.—In explanation of the ending of the strike of the workers in the Forstmann-Huffmann mills here, a statement has been issued in the name of Local 1003, United Textile Workers, by the Local president, Gustav Deak.

The Local's letter indicates that the strikers did not, win in this particular mill all they desired, but went back to work on the basis of a substantial concession wrung from the company, which can be retained if organization work continues.

The action of the Forstmann-Huffmann strikers in voting to discontinue the strike is the result of careful consideration of all the factors entering into the present situation. The whole objective of the struggle, which has now lasted more than one year, has been to establish the union for the textile workers in Passaic. This object has been the keynote and has won the support not only of the Passaic textile workers, but of the entire American labor movement and of all friends of labor.

We have been successful in getting agreements on the basis of collective bargaining with the two plants of the Botany Consolidated Mills, the Passaic Spinning & Worsted Co., and with the Dundee Textile Co.

The Worst Foe.

With the Forstmann & Huffmann Co. we have faced a situation where we have entered into a struggle with one of the most powerful corporations in the United States. The Forstmann & Huffmann Co. has always maintained a company union and has refused to grant the right of organization in legitimate unions to its workers.

Recently, thru the mediation of the Hon. W. Carrington Cabell and the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Kernan, the Forstmann & Huffmann Co. has issued a letter to the workers to the effect that there is no objection to the membership of their employes in legitimate trade organizations, whether religious, social or otherwise, and that they will re-employ as many of their former workers as they can without discrimination on account of membership in legitimate outside unions.

Not a Good Letter.

This letter was considered by the Forstmann-Huffmann workers and by our union as not being acceptable, in that it does not recognize the principle of collective bargaining, which is the basis for recognition of the union and which is the principle upon which the American labor movement is built. The Forstmann-Huffmann workers and our union, however, accept the Forstmann-Huffmann letter as a distinct concession to the strikers and retract from the former anti-union attitude of the Forstmann-Huffmann Co.

This letter in effect an agreement between the workers of the Forstmann-Huffman Co. and its management that no workers will be victimized on account of their membership in our union and forms the basis upon which the Forstmann-Huffmann Co. can be unionized. It was with this objective in view that the officers of the Passaic local union of the United Textile Workers advised the Forstmann - Huffmann workers to terminate the strike.

It now becomes our task to organize a local of the United Textile Workers of America in the Forstmann & Huffmann Co.'s mill. With the assistance of the workers, this work will begin at once, with the understanding that neither Mr. Julius Forstmann nor Mr. Reinhold, nor any others of the management of the mills can now have any objection to the organization of a labor union composed of their workers.

Heroic Passaic.

The Passaic strike with all of its heroic incidents is now a matter of history in the labor movement of America, and is an inspiration to the workers of the whole textile industry and to the American labor movement.

The Passaic strike has achieved positive results for the textile workers of Passaic. We started one year ago to form a union. The union is here as a result of our struggle. It has been established in struggle and thru the devotion, determination and solidarity of the textile workers in Passaic. It will be maintained and it will grow until every textile worker in Passaic carries a union card.

Victory Won.

We have won a substantial victory. The work of organization must now go on with more intensity and determination than ever before.

The work of organization in the textile industry which Passaic has initiated will go on. The Passaic strike remains an inspiration to the unorganized workers in America. The achievements won thru a year of struggle will not be lost.

Forward to the work of organization!

Every textile worker in Passaic a union man!

Build the union!

Join the union!

Long live our union!

Gustav Deak, President.

DEADLOCK STILL LASTS AT MIAMI COAL WAGE MEET

Miners' Wage Too Low To Stand Any Cutting

of the crew into bad working places, where they can make little money.

Don't Enforce It.

Furthermore, the Jacksonville agreement has been very largely violated, through failure of the reactionary officials of the union in certain large districts to insist on its strict fulfillment.

The violations are usually such as to reduce the workers' wages, through forcing him to do "dead work," cleaning out rock, or breaking up coal that take unreasonably long to mine, making the miner set the braces in his working place, or the entry to it, etc.

Mines frequently shut down, and when they start again, they do not always pay the wages the miner was cheated out of on his last pay day. From one cause or another, the average wages of union miners, working under the Jacksonville scale are close to, based on the amount of work done in a year, about four dollars a day, instead of seven-fifty.

Rank and File Struggle.

The struggle against a still further cut in the coal miners' already low wages, is largely dependent on the energy of the rank and file of the union, following the progressive leaders, such as Howat, of Kansas, and John Brophy, of Pennsylvania. The official leadership is too much inclined to trust to intrigue and is too timid. Thus International President John L. Lewis at the conference today, attempted to meet the attack of Baker of the operators' by dragging in a side issue. Baker demanded that the union wages be cut to where the union mines "could compete with the non-union mines south of them."

Side Issues.

Instead of showing the low cost of mining in the union fields, and proving that in many cases the non-company union and non-union miners, Lewis abused the senators from West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee for opposing the confirmation of Cyrus E. Woods, of Pennsylvania, to the interstate commerce commission. These senators, he declared, were either "in the service or direct employ of the non-union coal operators who are attempting to maintain discriminatory freight rates on lake coal shipped from the non-union fields."

SIGMAN MISUSES STRIKERS NAMES TO GET A CROWD

Rusbin and Shubin Out With Repudiation

In an effort to gather enough workers to hold a meeting in Beethoven Hall last night, the right wing of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, thru its official organ the Forwards, made the false announcement yesterday that Louis Rusbin and Jack Shubin, cloakmakers who have been released from the Tombs on bond of $2,500 pending the appeal of their cases, would be present at the meeting which was held under the auspices of the international officialdom.

"Please deny for us that we are going to have anything to do with Sigman's meeting in Beethoven Hall tonight," Rusbin said yesterday. "Sigman is merely trying to trick friends of ours who naturally are glad that we are released into coming to his meeting by advertising falsely that we will be there. Neither of us would go to a meeting called by the union-splitting Sigman."

Shubin reiterated his fellow prisoner's statement and added that the International had nothing to do with affecting their release. "The Joint Board has taken care of us and furnished bond for our release", he added. The two were tried in magistrate Otto Rosalsky's court on December 6 and found guilty on an assault charge. Their cases are being appealed.

Third Lie.

This is the third time within a few days that the International has tried to claim credit for helping prisoners. In the cases of Philip Zeinenberg and Jacob Gluck, who were discharged by Judge Collins on Friday the International, through the Jewish Daily Forward, attempted to claim credit for their dismissal, although they were represented by attorneys of the Joint Board.

In the case of Lenz and Cohen, the two workers who received sentences of two and one half to five years from Judge Goldstein, the International tried to fool the workers into believing that it alone was responsible for the reduction of their sentences to one year, although the sentences were reduced when restitution was made, and the International had nothing to do with the making of restitution.

The sentencing of Max Borenstein and Oscar Newman was postponed for the third time by Judge Rosalsky before the Court of Special Sessions next Friday, he announced, at which time they will have served two weeks in the Tombs awaiting sentence.

ANOTHER PASSAIC CASE PROSECUTED BY THIRD DEGREE

Torture Prisoner With Short Visit Home

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

PASSAIC, N. J., Feb. 15.—The second of the five Passaic strike prisoners held by Bergen county authorities on framed bomb charges is to be tried tomorrow at Hackensack. Tom Regan, a young striker active on the general strike committee and vigilant picket at Forstmann-Huffmann mill gates, is the victim.

Prosecutor Archie Hart has only the third degree statements brutally wrung from these prisoners as evidence against them. Police are now pressing on these textile strike victims in a desperate endeavor to make one or more turn state's witness.

Cruel Tantalizing

One of the prisoners was taken from the jail by police and tantalizingly shown his wife and children at home. He was asked cunningly if he did not want to be with them sooner if he preferred imprisonment for 20 years. Similar traps have been set for others of the five held on these flimsy bomb charges, carrying five to 20 years for conviction.

Besides Regan, there are Paul Kovac, Joe Toth and Nicholas Schilaci awaiting trial. Justice of the Peace Wisnefski, elected while in jail, was convicted on third degree evidence last week and waits sentence.

Evidence Illegal.

Legally, third degree statements are not supposed to be used against a prisoner, but actually they are frequently—as here—the sole basis of prosecution. In the case of the six prisoners tried at Paterson on similar framed bombing charges, the third degree statements were used against the men. The five remaining victims at Hackensack remember the double-crossing authorities dealt the Paterson men who threw themselves on the mercy of the court and are encouraging one another to resist pressure.

Prosecutor's Work.

Both groups of bomb cases in the mill strike bear unmistakable marks of an agent provocateur's work. It is well known that the management of at least one big mill several times consulted with a certain labor spy on bombing possibilities. This spy before the United Textile Workers came into the strike and seems to have been part of a plan to prevent the A. F. of L. union's entrance into Passaic.

It is a fact that one explosion occurred after the eleven men were arrested, but mill town police passed it off as an attempt to silence them from prosecuting those already arrested. In the cases to which these Hackensack prisoners have been framed, only harmless Italian fire-cracker bombs were used. Yet the men are charged with "possessing explosives with intent to injure property!"

More Cases Coming.

In another week the cases of 21 strikers charged with minor offenses in connection with picketing begin to come up in Passaic. There is no evidence against these workers but the joint defense committee for Passaic, set up by the American Civil Liberties Union and the International Labor Defense, expects that Passaic police will be as ready witnesses against the strikers as they have been previously.

Funds are urgently needed for defense work. Money should be sent to Hollace Ransdell, secretary-treasurer, Joint Committee for Passaic Defense, Room 14, 743 Main Ave., Passaic, N. J.

The Boasts of The Times Quickly Exposed by the Facts in the Day's News

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE New York Times, energetic propagandist against progress of the capitalist class, again informs us that, "More than prosperity, our defenses against Communism are democratic freedom and opportunity."

But in the same issue of the Times, and in all the other simultaneous editions of the New York tailles, one of the leading first page stories tells of a boy who murdered for food.

The headline of The Times stated: "Boy, 12, Murders Queens Storekeeper in Hold-up for Food; Hungry Runaway Kills Merchant in Hope of Getting Cash from Till in Store."

The next day in jail the boy, 12 years old, upon being visited by his father, declared:

"Sure, I'll tell you everything, Dad. I'm not afraid and I like this jail anyway.. It's better than at home."

A land in which the jails, rotten as they are, vermin infested and offering the worst possible excuse for food, can be offered as "something better" than home, is certainly not in a position to brag of its "prosperity." Its boasted "opportunity," merely consists of luscious words, the old trick of the bunch of carrots at the end of the stick to lure onward the tired workmule, human as well as mere animal.

These conditions grow directly out of the existing class rule. It is mere hypocrisy to talk of "democracy" under a social system where the great masses are enslaved to the profit producing machine of a few entrenched all-powerful class. That is the United States, in which the kept press hysterically beats itself upon the chest and blatantly shouts itself hoarse concerning "democracy" in this country, claiming at the same time that democracy does not exist in the Soviet Union. It is only in the First Workers' Republic, where classes have been abolished, that the basis is laid for real democracy.

That the vile housing conditions, that make a jail preferable to a home, are not exceptionable, but rather the rule in New York City is again revealed in the struggle to have the so-called "emergency rent laws" continued.

These laws have been in existence for seven years and will expire on June 1st, yet it is admitted that during this time little or nothing has been done to supply homes for that large group in the population unable to afford more than $8 to $10 a room a month.

Intolerable conditions, resulting in the doubling and tripling of families in totally inadequate accommodations, exist on a large scale. Human beings still nest in rookeries built 50 years ago and condemned as unsanitary and uninhabitable even before the present emergency laws were passed, witnesses revealing before the State Housing Board sitting in august session at the commodious city and thus even in centers two families could be found living in rooms described as "unfit for a pig to live in."

The Times on its editorial page boasts of "prosperity" under the prevailing capitalism in this country, but on its first page, in parallel columns with the news story of the boy who murdered for food, there is the following:

"The testimony showed that families with growing children, which, prior to the advance in rents time began in 1920, could afford a new limited income, were now reduced to the barest necessities, that no couples newly wed to pay rent Bisserio have been completely to be announced because of the rise in rents; that immigrant arrivals were given up because of the rents and that thousands of families were doubling up to meet the rent."

This is "prosperity" with a vengeance. It is no prosperity of the workmule and the pauper grave.

The public school statistics of the yearly murder increase he was very bright in his studies. The boy is definitely very intelligent. It was the latter thing proposed by the anti-strikers that capitalist society is that intelligence can not be investigated.

Further among these facts arouse the slumber of capitalist investigators into the cause of the capitalist social system which they live and suffer. It is a crazy system and one must destroy it through opportunity, and the worst forms of human degradation instead of it boasted "democratic freedom."

JOHN D WRECKS A FEW CHURCHES WHEN HE TRIES TO WRECK UNION

WASHINGTON (FP).—Protestant church congregations in some towns along the line of the Western Maryland Railroad have been torn asunder by hatred of the Rockefeller rail scabs in their midst.

Catholic groups in the same territory are found by catholic investigators to have failed to live up to the social teaching of the Bishops' program, as to safeguarding labor's rights.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., philanthropist and muralist, felt so grieved by the cruelty of his own railroad toward the locomotive engineers and firemen in the lockout and strike of the past two years, that he actually tried to interest himself in a settlement. However, he has found himself, as capitalism, unwilling to listen to himself as humanitarian. Business is business. Dividends are gilt. And the clergy along the line of the road appealed to him in vain to acknowledge that his stock ownership—the largest of any—permits him to veto the union-crushing program of the road.

Cynical Strike Breaking.

These are in substance the findings in the second half of the report made public by the joint investigating committee on this dispute, appointed by the protestant, catholic and Jewish churches of the United States.

Public opinion along the Western Maryland was first wrought up in the shop strike of 1922, by the hard-boiled cynicism of the management of the road. Hundreds of veteran shopman were driven from their accustomed jobs and had to take employment at lower wages in other places. Strikebreakers caused endless quarrels in the towns.

Rockefeller Leads Reaction.

Then in 1924 Rockefeller's management jumped into the battle against the train crews, dismissing the men who would not sign contracts hostile to union membership.

The brotherhoods at first refused, but at the request of mediators agreed to accept arbitration. The company refused. More quarrels and bitterness in the churches developed.

Wouldn't Interfere.

When Rockefeller the moralist was found powerless to persuade his own company to arbitrate, an appeal was made to him to mediate in person with his own company management. To this last appeal Rockefeller replied with a letter claiming that he could not do anything.

Coolidge In Action.

The Coolidge administration assisted in the strike-breaking. Its allen property custodian, Sutherland, of West Virginia, named a new director on the board during the fight. He was an ex-lieutenant.

Through the whole report runs a record of timidity on the part of the clergy in the strike region. They sympathized with the strikers but they did little—except under compulsion—to defend the workers' human rights against brutal aggression by Rockefeller's road.

GAG RULE MAKES BRANCH BANK ACT CERTAIN TO PASS

Wheeler Charges Bribe Was Offered

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—For the second time in decades, the Senate prepared today to authorize clotures in order to force a final vote on the McFadden-Pepper Banking Act, and insurgents charged that the American Banking Association was practically using bribery to get the bill through.

The "gag rule," restricting debate to one hour for each senator, was invoked by administration leaders because insurgents announced a war to the finish against the bill, which extends the powers and activities of national banks and the federal reserve system.

The only modern precedent for the use of cloture was established during the world court fight.

Dawes Suggested Gag

Insurgents' leaders declared they welcomed the use of cloture, and charged that the bill could not be enacted except under the "gag rule."

The use of cloture, it was understood, was suggested by Vice-president Dawes, who has again campaign for revision of the Senate's rules—to limit debate—ever since he took office.

Vote Without Knowing.

Senator Wheeler (D) of Montana, charged today that only a few senators understood the contents of the bill. The senator said he thought the most would give the federal reserve system an "indeterminate charter" as a substitute for the present one, which expires after 1934.

He charged that New York banker interests tried to "breach" Senators Howell (R) of Nebraska, and Bill (D) of Washington, who opposed the bill, and all "small bankers" who had protested against its enactment.

Wheeler further charged that Rep. Morton D. Hull (R) of Illinois, who opposed the measure in the House, had been "approached" by the banking interests. Wheeler read a letter sent Hull by Thomas B. Paton, general counsel for the American Banking Association, offering the congressman legal business. Patton said: "You have frequently been recommended to us and we shall be glad to recommend to you any business we can." As Hull has not engaged the law practice of Patton, Wheeler said, the offer was an attempt to suppress his opposition to the bill.

The vote to take up the Branch Banking bill was supported by 27 Democrats and 31 Republicans, and opposed by four Democrats, four Republicans and Senator Shipstead, Farmer-Labor member.

Detailed Vote on the Bill.

The detailed vote was as follows: For taking up the bill—36: Republicans—31: Bingham, Cameron, Capper, Couzens, Curtis, Dale, Gillett, Goff, Gooding, Gould, Greene, Hardwell, Howell, Johnson, Jones (Wash.), Keyes, McLean, McMaster, McNary, Means, Oddie, Pepper, Phipps, Pine, Reed (Pa.), Schall, Stanfield, Stewart, Warren, Watson, Willis. Democrats—27: Ashhurst, Bayard, Blease, Bratton, Bruce, Caraway, Ferris, Fletcher, George, Glass, Heflin, Hawes, Kendrick, King, McKellar, Mayfield, Overman, Randsell, Robinson (Ark.), Sheppard, Simmons, Smith, Stephens, Steck, Trammell, Tyson, Wade, Walsh of Mass.).

Against taking up the bill—9: Republicans—5: Brazier, LaFollette, Norris, Nye—Insurgents; 1: Pole, Heflin, Norris, Wheeler, Farmer-Labor—1: Shipstead.

Of the twenty-one Senators not voting, it was believed all would have been in the affirmative.

World War Veteran Refuses to Train; Given Five Months

PRAGUE, Feb. 15.—Franz Lederer, a veteran of the World War and recipient of numerous decorations for valor, has been sentenced to a court martial here to two months imprisonment in a military prison for refusing to don a uniform and shoulder a rifle.

Lederer, as a lieutenant in the reserve army, was recently called to the colors for annual training and refused. He maintained that his pacific creed forbade him to bear arms.

The testimony showed that Lederer had distributed his savings, amounting to 20,000 Czechoslovak crowns, among the poor and had even given up a good job in favor of another man whom he felt needed it more than he. In the coldest weather, he had left his coat in a field for anybody to pick up.

When asked why he had not given his rout to some needy person, he replied that it would obligate the person to express his gratitude. A board of alienists pronounced him entirely sane.

MAL DAUGHERTY "TALKED OVER" JESS'S ACCOUNT

And All the Evidence Just Was "Missing"

Mal Daugherty, head of the Midland National Bank in Washington Courthouse, Ohio, was called to the witness stand by the government in the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy trial this afternoon to explain the disappearance of certain important records from the files of his bank.

The records involved are alleged to show the disposition of money paid to the two defendants.

Harry Daugherty, former attorney general and notorious "red-baiter," and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, are charged with sharing in a $391,000 bribe in return for approving a $7,000,000 German claim for war-seized enemy alien property.

Little Talk With Harry.

Mal told of being subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury in New York with records of the bank. He said he, Harry, and his personal attorney held a conference in Columbus after receiving the subpoenas, and later met again in the Midland Bank, to "talk." The day after this "talk" they came to New York for the grand jury hearing.

"Did you bring the requested bank records?" asked United States Attorney Emory P. Buckner.

"No."

"Did you bring a single paper from the bank with you?"

"No."

"Missing—Missing."

"Do you know the deposit slips of October 13, 1921, are missing?"

"Yes."

"Do you know the daybook sheets for October 13 and 14, 1921, are ripped out?"

"Missing, you mean."

"Can you give any explanation as to the missing records?"

"I cannot."

"Did that conference between your brother and your personal attorney have anything to do with the missing records?"

Such a Straight Face.

"None in the world," said Mal loudly, rocking slowly back and forth on the stand, his knees clasped in his hands and a look of innocence on his face.

Mal then revealed that although he did not bring the records to New York, his brother Harry did.

"How did you happen to give your brother these original ledger sheets," Buckner asked.

"Because he wanted to see them," Mal replied in a low voice.

"Jess Smith was dead when you turned over the ledger sheets to Harry?"

"Yes."

"Went Over" Record.

Mal admitted that Harry and he had gone over the "Jess Smith extra" account in 1924 and 1925.

It was at this point that Mal stated that Harry had destroyed the records. They had gone west again after appearing before the grand jury, and when Mal asked for the papers Harry replied:

"I've burned them."

The testimony then turned to the so-called "Jess Smith extra" account in the Midland Bank, which the witness described as a "political account."

Forging at Iron War? German Steel Owners Threaten Reprisals

BERLIN, Feb. 15.—The German cabinet has decided to resort to reprisals in case America should impose anti-dumping duties on German iron products.

The nature of the reprisals will be determined when the details of the American duties are at hand.

At the same time it is expected the German government will propose a new and impartial investigation of the question whether German iron imports to the United States really constitute "dumping."

PILSUDSKI AWES SEJM; MAKES IT VOTE HIS BUDGET

Appears in Person and Parliament Succumbs

WARSAW, Feb. 15.—Marshal Pilsudski has again tamed the Sejm, or Polish parliament. He appeared personally yesterday, when the budget seemed on the point of defeat, and with a few brief words to various opposition delegates, calmed their ardor to such an extent that they permitted the budget to go through by a large majority.

During the last few days the Sejm has seemed on the point of revolting, and has passed what amount to votes of censure on nearly all of Pilsudski's cabinet. Pilsudski ignored that action.

Pilsudski's strength depends on his private army, a military club larger than the regular standing army of the state, and now supported by subsidies from the government. He has at various times demonstrated against the unruly Sejm by troop movements in the street, and since his violent overthrow of the previous cabinet, has signified his readiness to depose the Sejm altogether at any time he can not control it.

Pilsudski Scoffs at Polish Parliament's Vote Against Budget

WARSAW, Feb. 15.—Again betraying his love for dictatorship, Marshal Pilsudski has utterly disregarded the vote of the Sejm which indicated a lack of confidence in his government. The Sejm completely rejected or seriously altered every feature of Pilsudski's budget which was presented for the second time yesterday.

Ritualistic Dancing Resumed in Church

Ritualistic dancing was resumed in the Rev. Dr. William Norman Guthrie's church, the St. Marks in the Bouverie, yesterday afternoon, after a lapse of two years. This ritual was performed by four girls and six boys clad in filmy mantles. The spirit and occasion of this ritual was the Passion of Christ. Dr. Guthrie called it "sacred mime."

POWERS DECLINE CAL'S INVITATION TO LIMIT ARMS

France, Italy and Japan Shy at Trap

Naval Minister Delighted.

"The note is perfect," said Minister of Marine Leygues, following the cabinet meeting today, which was attended by President Doumergue.

M. Briand, foreign minister, who drafted the note, said it would probably be published late this afternoon or tomorrow.

The reply, couched in diplomatic terms and sympathetic in tone, is nevertheless a rebuff for the Coolidge proposals which may spell their defeat.

Squelches Coolidge.

Minister of Interior Sarraut, the note says, "points out firstly that the League of Nations is now handling disarmament problems, and secondly that naval disarmament interests all nations, not only the five big powers."

"France can't take the problem of disarmament from the League of Nations—that is the gist of the [illegible]" said M. Sarraut.

The French reply leaves little in the way of a loophole for any compromise and in French circles it is generally believed that it spells the end of the Coolidge proposals.

Japan Polite—But!

Japan is willing to participate in President Coolidge's armament parley, Premier Wakatsuki told the government peers today, but it is impossible for the government to cancel the appropriation for three cruisers, a possibility now being considered by the Diet.

The premier's statement was made before the upper house of the Diet and in answer to questions arising from the Diet concerning President Coolidge's proposals.

The premier declared Japan's naval and military forces were at a minimum strength in order to provide adequate defense.

"The government, however," he said, "has decided to accept President Coolidge's invitation because Japan favors any move to preserve peace and to avoid armament competition."

Cal Disappointed?

It was indicated in Washington that Mr. Coolidge was disappointed at the powers' decision, and that he expects little to come from continued discussions at Geneva under the auspices of the League of Nations. Another Geneva meeting is scheduled for next month.

Next Step If Any.

What President Coolidge's next step will be—if any—remains to be seen. He could propose, as suggested a year ago, that Great Britain and Japan join with the United States in applying the principle of the 5-5-3 ratio to auxiliary ships, irrespective of France entirely. There is little reason to believe, however, that Great Britain would agree to limit her cruiser and submarine strength while France would be left free to construct the great unlimited submarine fleet which French statesmen insist is France's potential defense against Britain's greater sea power.

May End Farce.

The British at Washington in 1921-22 declined absolutely to undertake any auxiliary limitation unless it included France and Italy, and British opinion is understood not to have changed on that point.

Some belief prevails that President Coolidge will take no further step at this time toward a new naval agreement, in view of the French rejection. Administration officials pointed out that the American government is now in the position of having proclaimed to the world its willingness to further curtail its navy, and that responsibility for continued armament has been placed now on France and her continental allies, and the way is clear for the administration to cease its bluff of "economy" and start building warships in quantity.

Workers College in Tokyo Is Popular

Tokyo has a labor college, which reports that in the two years of its existence it has graduated 250 pupils from its halls. This college is governed by the Tokyo Labor Educational Association.

Night Classes.

Lecturers who are recruited from labor's ranks and universities give courses in the following topics: Economics, sociology, politics, history of the labor movement, history of social thought, philosophy, laws, labor legislation, social history of Japan. These classes are organized for four nights a week for six months. The classes have attendance averaging about forty pupils.

The college is maintained by donations from the various labor organizations and by student fees. These fees are 50 sen a month (25 cents).

The officials of the college are M. Ando M. P., president; K. Asano, director; K. Kawanami, secretary.

FORD SITS ON HIS ROCKS

"Business Conditions in America Are Solid as a Rock."—Henry Ford.

Ford Opposes All Charity; Not Ready To Part With Cent

Henry Ford won't part with a penny of his wealth. In a recent interview given aboard his private car this modern Croesus explained his views on charity and kindred topics. The subject of money was quite distasteful to him, but he made a brave effort to meet the interviewer's questions.

"Don't Give Money."

"My business is built on proper lines and is not dependent on any one individual." He has made no will, for "I am too busy living." Asked if he would leave any part of his wealth to a foundation or similar endowment he said: "Smug satisfaction always follows endowments. It is another form of charity. Both are out of date. The easiest thing in the world is to give money. Creating and giving opportunity is the best charity."

Got Money Somewhere.

About seven years ago, a rumor was current that Henry Ford would have to come to Wall Street for a loan. He was asked about that. "That was due to a row we had with the minority stockholders, who sought court redress because no dividends had been paid that year. I never would have paid them a cent. But I let Edsel handle it. He got money somewhere and bought them out."

Farm Bloc to Rush Vote on Relief Bill

ated by the bill would be $790,000.

That collection of the equalization fee would require a trained body of governmental specialists as investigating agents, which might be compared with the present force of revenue agents of the internal revenue bureau.

That the collection of the equalization fee would be difficult and "the impossibility of the collection of every cent of the equalization fee is apparent."

That the collection of the equalization fee from any one of the three mediums provided by the bill—transportation, processing or acquisition by sale—"has so many disadvantages that it is not possible to say which would be the least difficult."

Bill's Friends Answer.

Backers of the pending measure, driving steadily toward its enactment, took direct issue with Mellon's statement that collection of the equalization fee that is to finance the surplus control plan, would be difficult and costly. They also denied his statement that the federal treasury would not get back every cent of the $250,000,000 revolving fund because no government could collect taxes in full.

The farm bloc prepared for its final real test in the house today on a rule substituting the senate bill for the pending house measure. Opponents of the bill will try to vote down the rule, and make possible a filibuster which could be kept up until the end of the present session.

GENERAL FENG REPORTED TO HAVE LOST CHRISTIAN SOUL IN MOSCOW; Y.M.C.A. WORRYING, NOT GENERAL

Editor's Note—The article printed below is liberally interspersed with hokum until we get to the last part of it. We publish it because it is of interest and gives the history of the rise and fall of christianity in the soul of General Feng Yu-shiang, once the "christian general" but since he lined up with the nationalist movement he gets little credit for his former devotion to the religion of western imperialism. Moscow is blamed for Feng's relapse. We are in favor of more relapses of this kind.

By EDNA LEE BOOKER

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 15.—The two outstanding military figures of the Nationalists are General Feng Yushiang, so-called "Christian General," and General Chiang Kai-shek, virtual head of the Nationalist movement and in charge of the forces now marching on Shanghai.

General Feng, because of his spectacular stand for Christianity, is wider known than any other military leader in China. He is the Billy Sunday of the Chinese.

It was on a young, the picturesque ancient capital of China in the Honan Province, at the headquarters of General Wu Pei-fu, that I first met General Feng.

With bands playing and soldiers singing "Onward Christian Soldiers" General Feng marched into camp in a most dramatic manner. He explained that on the march he led his soldiers in singing the two good old gospel hymns, "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "Hark the Herald Angels Sing." Feng believes them to be the best marches he knows to put "pep" in his men and to buck them up when on a long forced march.

General Feng requires his soldiers to read their Bibles, attend prayer meeting and church service and in most cases to be baptized in the Christian faith.

Feng's first contact with Christianity was during the Boxer rebellion, although only a young student at the time, he was greatly impressed with the fortitude with which Chinese and foreign Christians met their deaths at the hands of the fanatical Chinese mobs.

A few years later at a Young Men's Christian Association meeting in Peking, Feng was converted to Christianity. He became at once an ardent crusader.

But during the past two or three years, General Feng's enthusiastic missionary efforts are said to have slowed up. He surprised his friends and those who believed in the sincerity of his conversion and delighted his enemies and the "I told you so folks" by double crossing his former northern allies recently in the intricate Chinese political game.

Now a growing rumor has it that Feng has quit Christianity cold, if that is true it is a serious blow to missionary efforts in China.

Several months ago Feng gave out to the world that he was going to Germany for a rest cure—a sight-seeing trip—a pleasure excursion.

Instead—he headed straight for Moscow.

He spent many months with the leading Soviet officials and, upon his recent return to China, at once allied himself with the Nationalist movement.

Many of his old missionary friends called. He was not at home. He has been giving them the cold shoulder to such an extent that it is feared that Feng is turning against missions due to the Soviet influences.

It was gone farther than this—for the question is being asked in China today—"Has General Feng renounced his Christianity?" But Feng is silent on the subject.

Feng is a remarkably clever military man and is a tower of strength to the Nationalists. He commands the forces in the north and if the control of China comes to a showdown—it will be up to Feng to fight his former allies. Much depends on the fate of Shanghai.

If the Cantonese are victorious—there is little doubt that the Nationalist army with the aid of Feng can take Peking.

LITHUANIAN WHITE TERRORISM CONTINUES WITH MANY WORKERS AND PEASANTS ARRESTED

KOVNO, Feb. 15.—Despite the declarations of Pajaujis in the Seym and the statements of the Lithuanian ambassadors in Paris and Berlin that no Communist danger exists, the Lithuanian government continues to speak of preparations for a Communist insurrection.

Without a doubt it was the intention of the government to hand still more workers over to the courts martial and have them executed, but the numerous protests of the workers in western Europe and in the Soviet Union caused Lithuania to postpone its plan.

However, the danger is not yet past. Scores of arrested workers and peasants are in the hands of the military. The murders will be continued as soon as international public opinion has calmed down.

In reply to a question put by the lawyer of the old workers' leader, Dr. Domaschevitch, the president of the Lithuanian Supreme Court declared that Domaschevitch would not be executed, but that 30 of the arrested workers and peasants would be handed over to a court martial.

Dynamite Story a Lie.

The statement that dynamite was found when the prisoners were arrested is a lie. The weapons which were actually found at certain places belonged to the workers and served them as means of defense against the fascists. The military authorities have informed the press that for the moment no one has been blinded over for trial by a court martial.

Only a continuation of the protest action on the part of the working masses can save the lives of the threatened comrades.

Suit Against Lord Dismissed.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The suit of Miss Louise Owens, former secretary to Lord Northcliffe, seeking to re-open action against Lord Rothermere and others on the charge of their misappropriating the estate of Lord Northcliffe's property, was dismissed today.

CHURCH REPORT BLAMES JOHN D. FOR BIG STRIKE

Shows Greed for Profits Thru Western Maryland

By LAURENCE TODD

(Federated Press)

WASHINGTON. (FP)—Greed for big dividends on watered stock held by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and his friends, was the primary cause of the locking out of locomotive engineers, firemen and hostlers on the Western Maryland Railroad, and of the resultant strike which has lasted two years.

That is the verdict of the joint committee of investigators representing the research department of the Federal Council of Churches, the social action department of the Natl. Catholic Welfare Conference, and the social justice commission of the Central Conference of American Rabbis. They have been investigating the causes and consequences of this long struggle between Rockefeller's coal railroad and the train service brotherhood for the past six months.

Found Labor Right.

In their report, which is divided into 12 sections, each devoted to facts and conclusions on some phase of the dispute, the joint committee of the American churches to pass judgment on a labor battle against aggregated wealth has found labor in the right. It finds that the workers did everything within their power to avert the conflict, and that the road's president, Byers, and the chairman of its board, Gregg, arbitrarily refused to meet the labor representatives to adjust the points of difference. Beneath it lay the demand of the management for bigger returns on the preferred stock.

Against Discrimination.

This dispute arose over a demand that the company grant the same slight increase in wages that had been granted by all other class 1 roads in the eastern traffic territory. The management replied that higher wages would require higher freight rates. It began dismissing the men when a strike vote—an ordinary procedure in negotiations—was taken. The total wage increase asked was $56,000 a year, and the men would have gladly compromised on the rules that would have saved the company $15,000 of this.

Controlling Interest.

Rockefeller, according to the report, "with what are known as the Rockefeller interests, holds about one-fifth of the stock, nearly all of it first preferred, and controls a corresponding share in the Davis Coal & Coke Co. He holds about three-fourths of the first preferred stock. The allied principalities and potentates hold for the German Bank some 70,000 shares of stock, most of it common. These two interests together hold over 25 per cent of the stock and 43 percent of the stock that was voted at the 1925 stockholders' meeting—about half of the stock, and about 73 percent of the amount voted in 1925, is held by 20 individuals, financial groups or brokers . . .

Not Poor Road.

"The financial condition of the Western Maryland now puts it in a position where it cannot continue to plead poverty as a reason for not adjusting wages. The fact that no dividends have been paid does not indicate insufficient earnings in relation to operating cost items . . .

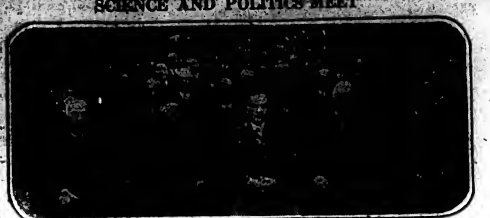
"The conflict is not between a wage settlement and bankruptcy, but between a wage settlement and dividends on preferred. It is specifically a conflict between a wage settlement and dividends on the first-preferred stock which has the first claim on the net income of the road, and which, after the extraordinary bond issue, stands as the next financial barrier to normal dividend-paying prosperity. The situation from the standpoint of the economist shows financial structure . . .

Could Pay.

"In the last year the company could have paid the interest charges and over 5% on its capital stock issue if all stock were on the same footing. As it was, it paid interest on the bond issue and had left for unpaid 'indicated earnings' 11 1-3% for the first preferred, 7.77% for the second preferred, and 0.75% for the common stock."

Rockefeller, in other words, got over 11% last year, while fighting the brotherhoods. He and the other first-preferred stockholders also received $325,000 a year since June, 1922, on the coal properties given them with their rail stock.

But the $40,000 a year to train crews was an impossible burden.



Nicaragua Liberals Fear Americans Will Interfere in Battle

PUERTO CABEZAS, Feb. 15.—With liberal forces in control at Matagalpa, and a battle with the conservatives impending, fears were expressed at liberal headquarters here that the United States marines might intervene.

There are a score of Americans at Matagalpa and it is reported they have asked for protection.

The liberal occupation of Matagalpa after some fighting in the outskirts followed at a considerable loss to the conservatives.

SCIENCE AND POLITICS MEET

At a conference to decide the future of the Smithsonian Institute, at Washington, D. C., leading scientists met with the heads of the government. Modern industry needs invention, and invention requires research—so the scientists are necessary. But the men of learning in this gathering were shoved in the background, where lesser servants belong, and the Wall Street boys took front place. Reading from left to right, front row: Andrew Mellon, sec'y of treas.; Frank B. Kellogg, sec'y of state; President Coolidge, Chief Justice Wm. Howard Taft; and the worried fellow on the end is Chas. G. Abbot, acting secretary of the institution.

SUN MAID RAISIN GROWERS ASSOCIATION BEING GOBBLED UP BY WALL STREET; ANNOUNCEMENT OF $5,500,000 BOND ISSUE

(By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press)

How the long agricultural deflation is extending Wall street control over the country's food producers is shown in the announcement of a bond issue of $5,500,000 for the Sun-Maid Raisin Growers Assn. Dillon Read & Co., known for their control of Dodge Bros., Goodyear Rubber, National Cash Register and many other corporations, appear as the fiscal agents of this raisin grower company which was once an independent farmer co-operative.

The collapse of the co-operative under pressure of wholesale grocers and bankers was told in the Federated Press labor letter of March 25, 1925. According to a former representative of the co-operative who told the story.

Price Slump.

"When they got 85 per cent of their crop into the co-operative producing and marketing pool in 1912, the price had been running from 11-4 to 3 cents a pound for the prepared raisins. They brought it up to 3 1-2 cents the first year, to 7 cents in 1917 and 14 cents in 1920. Then it slumped to 4 cents in 1922 and about 13-4 cents in 1924."

The slump in the price received by the raisin grower was not accompanied by a similar decline in the price paid by the consumer. It was a result chiefly of overproduction stimulated by the opponents of co-operation. In the same way that non-union coal production has been developed to undercut the union fields, so non-co-operative raisin growing was developed to the point where the co-operative Sun-Maid Raisin Growers could not control the market.

Credit For Corporation.

In 1921 the Sun-Maid Raisin Growers Assn., a Delaware organization, took over the debts of the co-operative and in return got all the properties and the exclusive right to sell the output of 15,000 or more members. Of course the corporation, with eastern financiers providing the cash, got bank credit where the co-operative had failed.

Under an exclusive contract expiring Nov. 23, 1973, between the corporation and the co-operative association, the corporation receives, without cost and free of lien, the entire crop delivered to the co-operative by its members. The Dillon Read announcement says: "The terms of the contract will provide that the corporation shall receive all raisins from the co-operative association without payment therefore and shall deduct from the proceeds of its sales all of its operating, selling and general expenses, including depreciation, interest, dividends on its preferred stock, and reserve to maintain net working capital at not less than $2,000,000. The balance of sales proceeds is then to be remitted to the co-operative association in lieu of payments for raisins received and sold."

Growers Patiently Wait.

In other words the growers get what's left after capital has gobbled its fill. What is more, the raisin growers get nothing until their crop is sold by the corporation except what a syndicate of local bankers chooses to allow in loans on the warehouse receipts for the crop.

The interest and preferred dividend now amount to about $525,000 a year. Deducting these the balance remitable to the co-operative would average just under $11,000,000 or just about one-half the value of their product at wholesale. The 1926 balance of $10,275,279 for the growers would give the average producer between 200 and 250 to cover the labor of producing the crop plus interest on his investment.

SOVIET COLLEGE WILL HELP FARM MECHANIZATION

Students to Run Farm While They Study

MOSCOW, Feb. 15.—The readiness with which Russia adopts new experimental methods of education and the rapid strides that she is taking to industrialize agriculture are both illustrated by an agreement recently concluded between Dr. Charles Kuntz of the American Polytechnic of California and the education department of the Ukrainian government.

The agreement provides for the establishment of a combined agricultural college and modern farm, where students can work and study.

Newest Technique.

The most modern agricultural machinery and the most advanced technique will be employed. Thorough mechanization of agriculture, which will include the establishment of machine shops and a power plant, is part of the program.

A former monastery, perched above the Dnieper, a little below the site of the huge hydroelectric plant which is now under construction, will be renovated and used for the college. The site is ideal in view of the plan for mechanizing agriculture. The buildings can house more than 500 students, and the adjoining farm contains 7,000 acres of the finest soil.

Take Up Soil.

Students will work four hours a day on the land and four hours in the class room. The college will be self-governing, students being represented on the governing board, which will include two members of the American group and one representative of the Ukrainian Board of Education.

Begin Teaching.

Not only will they work on the land and learn, but students of the college will teach. Part of their job is to spread modern agricultural technique among the peasants. The college will serve as a "service station" for the surrounding countryside, where peasants will be able to come for aid and advice. Graduates of the school will be called upon to organize similar groups throughout Russia.

Running a newspaper and a radio transmitting station and organizing athletics will be some of the other activities of the college.

Real Problems of Negro Are Observed By Harmon Awards

The opening of the second series of William E. Harmon awards for distinguished achievement by Negroes in the fields of literature, fine arts, religion and business organization has been announced. These awards are for the purpose of providing an impetus towards creative work among Negroes.

To Negro workers, however, these awards are just so much hokum. The Negro worker, besides being an economic serf, lives in an environment which is prejudiced towards him because of his color. He has a daily reminder of his position in the American economic scheme of things. His jobs are limited and are of the worst and poorest paid. His problems are not those of "art" or religion or business organization. His immediate problems are, rather, the struggle against an antagonistic environment and the right to work at jobs according to his capabilities. The Negro is barred from the American Federation of Labor and his big problem is to find some means of organizing his fellows into some union to protect their elemental rights, the rights of labor, with better wages and decent conditions.

These are his problems, not those of the William E. Harmon Foundation that will award him for his findings in religion or art.

Automatic Devices Urged to Prevent Rear End Collision

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The Interstate Commerce Commission in its report on a rear-end collision between two sections of the 20th Century Limited at Savannah, N. Y., on January 9, recommended that automatic train control devices be installed to prevent similar accidents in the future.

"The operation of several sections of a train under close headway at a speed of 80 miles an hour or more, frequently under adverse weather conditions, reduces the possibility of effective flag protection to a minimum and places practically all of the responsibility on the engineer," the report said.

"Such a situation clearly warrants the installation of an automatic train control device which will compel The engineer to begin bringing his train under control at the distant signal location."

As usual, the responsibility for the collision was placed upon the engineer, Scoville, for failure to observe and obey signals. Scoville was killed in the wreck and 54 passengers injured.

In Ferry Rescue.

CAMDEN, N. J., Feb. 15.—Eleven passengers and a crew of three were rescued today when the ferryboat "Harding Highway" struck a submerged spile and sank in the Delaware River, between Penn's Grove, N. J., and Wilmington, Del.

The accident occurred because of the heavy fog. There was no excitement because the captain assured the passengers the water was shallow at that point and there was no danger.

The Manager's Corner

SIGN THE PLEDGE.

Some time ago we issued the slogan, "Building—but not for a day." We are building up The DAILY WORKER in New York as a national labor paper—but not for a day. We are trying to put the paper on a firm and substantial basis, with excellent prospects ahead of us.

In the past we have waited with our appeals for funds and assistance until practically the sheriff was at the door. Then we had to send out frantic appeals for help. We want to do away with this policy if we can, and there is no doubt that we can. If we regularize our support so that instead of lumping the emergency over a few months or weeks, we spread it uniformly over the entire year, the task will be much easier all around.

The Management Committee has therefore decided to establish a Sustaining Fund. To this fund we will ask the closest friends of The DAILY WORKER to contribute regularly every month, or every week, if possible, as much as they can afford. We will thus establish a basis of financial support that will be dependable, that will be regular, that will run throughout the year. We are confident that our friends will like this method of stabilizing the financial support of the paper and that there will be a generous response to the pledges which are now being sent out to a limited number of comrades. We can conceive of no finer service to the workingclass and to the revolutionary movement, than the regular and dependable support of a militant working class daily like The DAILY WORKER. We can conceive of no surer method of eliminating the uncertainty which usually makes difficult the maintenance of a labor daily, than through the organization of a group of DAILY WORKER DIE-HARDS that will stick to the paper through thick and thin. Join the shock troops. Become a sustainer of The DAILY WORKER. Sign the pledge.—BERT MILLER.

THE religious opium joints in nationalist China are being padlocked. Missionaries are informed by government officials that they might find more congenial work than doping the minds of the masses with religious hokum. The devines are amazed to see those they had lined up in some branch of the christian religion stubbornly shedding their religious garments and purifying themselves in the waters of revolutionary nationalism. They originally joined the christian church for consolation in their misery. Now, they have learned that they do not have to wait for their pie until they die. They also know that most of the missionaries are grumpers for foreign imperialism. So they are telling the missionaries to take their hats.

KING George of England is of the opinion that Bishop William T. Manning of the Episcopal diocese of New York needs a panhandling instrument more than the lord of Buckingham Palace. George sent William a silver alms-dish by Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador to Washington, the same geezer who occupied that position during the regime of the so-called labor government of Ramsay MacDonald. Bishop Manning accepted the gift, praised their majesties the king and queen of England, mumbled something about god, peace and kindred subjects (while George's ships were getting ready to open fire on the Chinese) ordered the organist to bang out "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "God Save The King," unfurled the American and British flags, while the congregation stood at attention. This is some republic mates!

Bishop Manning said that nothing could keep America out of the world court and that the forces which were "on the side of god demand that this country shall stand with Great Britain and the other nations and bear her just share of world responsibility." This responsibility consists of robbing subject peoples with bible, booze and rattling gun. We must admit that the United States is playing a noble part in this godly work with the aid of the apostolic church, the catholic church and the other religious institutions that dig the brains out of the masses, pick their pockets and help to make life on this earth a more vivid hell for them than anything conjured up out of the debauched minds of hypocritical clergymen. The "Red Flag" will yet be sung by revolutionary workers in Manning's spiritual joss house and the red flag saluted. The day will come when those who would bedevil the minds of men with fear and superstition will be considered as dangerous to society as those who now cater to the appetites of drug fiends.

Congress Votes Branch Bank Bill for Morgan

that he would object. Glass has been Hellon's chief lieutenant in advancing the re-chartering of the Federal reserve system for an indefinite period of years.

Nine Opposed.

Only nine senators—all progressives—voted against Peppers motion. LaFollette served notice that if the bank bill was rushed thru he would object to every request for unanimous consent during the remainder of the session to March 4, and would insist upon strict application of the rules. That is to say, he would conduct a parliamentary filibuster.

Glass, shaking with rage, walked over to Wheeler, and they exchanged remarks. Glass grabbed Wheeler's arms. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic floor leader and red-hot supporter of Heflin and Glass on the bank issue, rushed to separate them. Glass went into the democratic cloakroom, gesturing as tho to challenge Wheeler to combat. Wheeler smilingly returned to his seat; he is nearly twice Glass' size.

Cloture Invoked.

Robinson replied to LaFollette's warning by asking Pepper to file the cloture petition which had previously been signed by nearly two-thirds of the senate membership. Pepper promptly did so. Under the cloture rule, debate on the bank bill was limited, after Monday noon, to one hour for any senator. That means that after eight or ten opponents of the bill have spoken an hour each, the senate senators in both parties will pass the bill, and President Coolidge will sign it. There will be a tremendous rejoicing and celebration in banking circles in New York and elsewhere. How many billions the bill is worth to the bankers is a matter for speculation, by the speculating public.

Shaking Fist.

Meanwhile Norris began a parliamentary battle to divide the section ranks, by moving the discharge from committee of his resolution to investigate the sale of federal appointments by republican party officials and public officials. The Arizona democrats favor this investigation, and the administration fears it.

Robinson, seeing the drift, warned Reed of Pennsylvania against making a point of order against Norris. Robinson said this was no time in the session to get angry. Norris assured him that he was quite cool and would ask no favors as to the rules. Presently Robinson was seen at Norris' desk, shaking a clenched fist. Norris was smiling.

The senators who opposed taking up Mellon's pet bill were Dill, Frazier, Heflin, LaFollette, Norris, Nye, Neely, Shipstead and Wheeler. Borah did not vote, but tried to placate both sides. His presidential boat was in rough waters.

DRAMA

Backing the 'Roaring Forties'

Eva Le Gallienne Does Ibsen With More Courage Than Insight

The "Master Builder," by Henrik Ibsen, Civic Repertory Theatre. Starring Eva Le Gallienne and Egon Brecher.

Eva Le Gallienne, turning her back on prosperous Broadway, has come down to a tawdry lopsided little theatre on 14th Street, and has been trying for the last few months to give the every-day person, who hasn't the advantage either of a college education or a seat on the Stock Exchange, good drama at low prices. One can't help admiring her nerve. Her nerve, in the first place, is expecting New York to support repertory, when the Theatre Guild and the Neighboring Playhouse, who sought to know, have discovered differently. Her nerve, in the second place, in trying to produce plays below the geographical deadline of the theatre. And her nerve, in the third place, in backing the price trust of theatres in "the roaring forties."

I wish I could praise Miss Le Gallienne's production of Ibsen's "The Master Builder" as much as I can her enthusiasm and courage. But it is a production sadly lacking in distinction of any kind without being absolutely bad. Miss Le Gallienne's Hilda Wangel suffers from too much rapture and the use of mannerisms which dishonor the character. Egon Brecher's Master Builder Solness completely misses the mark. The play, as nad been pointed out by Ibsen commentators, is autobiography sublimated into realistic symbolism. Solness is Ibsen himself, looking down in his lonely, nostalgic old age from the bitter tower of his greatness. His fame has become as an onsen, a threat of ultimate disaster. The younger generation is knocking at the door.' Instead of this poetic, tragic externalization of personal despair, Egon Brecher presents a middle-class tradesman, bourgeois and proxy.

If excuse it might be said that "The Master Builder" is one of Ibsen's most difficult plays to produce. It is one of the subtlest as well as the most personal works of the great anatomizer of modern bourgeois society in its moments of psycnopathic disintegration. So much depends on the adjustment of nuance and pace, of tone and gesture that the task becomes almost superhuman. The play suffers at the hands of Miss Le Gallienne and her company.

But this does not altogether damn the production. I would not do Miss Le Gallienne the discourtesy of comparing the work of the Civic Repertory Theatre with the boiler-plate drama whose production is one of the most lucrative trades that any interlate young man, impatient with the joy of handselling or real estate, can turn his hand to. 'Breaking Chains' to Be Repeated Next Sunday At Waldorf Theatre

The success of "Breaking Chains", the labor film, which had its metropolitan premiere at the Waldorf Theatre recently, signifies still another blow at capitalism, and places the still another feather in the mythical chopeau in the universal conglomeration of worker-proletarists.

Innumerable comrades who were bent upon seeing "Breaking Chains" were turned away due to the overcrowding of the spacious theatre on West 59th street. At each of the four performances standees were obvious in the rear of the house.

To accomodate the numerous people who failed to see this film the management has decided to repeat its presentation. It will take place at the Waldorf Theatre, Sunday afternoon and evening, February 20. Four showings will be given from two to eleven. Tickets con be purchased in advance at the box-office, at Jimmie Higgins Book Shop, at the office of THE DAILY WORKER.

MORRIS SIGMAN AGAIN SAYS THAT I. L. G. W. U. LEFT WING IS EXPELLED

After a three-day session at the Hotel Cadillac, the right wing members of the General Executive Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union ratified the expulsion program late yesterday afternoon when Locals 3, 9, 35 and 22 have been suspended for non-payment of the per-capita tax.

The four locals, it is announced, are ordered to turn over to the International their charters, books, moneys and all other property, and to consider themselves duly expelled—once more. There is also the announcement that nominations will be in order next Monday for officers of Locals 2, 9 and 35; and for officers of Local 22 on February 24.

Since there is supposed to be a net of applicated officers for these locals now functioning at International headquarters, 3 West 16th Street, the field is growing rather crowded.

"Nothing could prove more conclusively that the acts of the officials of the International up to the present have been irresponsible and illegal than this declaration suspending Locals 2, 9, 22 and 35.

Who Is Suspended?

"For nearly three months the International has been renouncing that the Joint Board and these locals were suspended, their officers removed, and others appointed in their places, and new locals organized. For months the International has been dragging workers to register in the "reorganized" locals by force and intimidation. Who, then, is suspended by this new order? Is the General Executive Board suspending the "ousted" locals which it has been claiming do not exist, or is the suspension meant for the "reorganized" locals which Sigman rules with his appointees?

Board Itself Irregular.

"This action of the International is just as illegal as the former ouster order. It was taken by a General Executive Board that did not call all of its members to be present as the constitution demands. Isadore Borushevitz and Julius Portnoy and myself are all vice-presidents of the International and as such members of the General Executive Board, yet we were not notified of the meeting.

SHIPLACOFF GETS MILITANTS FINED, BUT NOT GRAFTER

Two Who Attended Left Meetings Persecuted

Because they refused to support Abraham Shiplacoff in his attack against the workers in the local needle trades, two members of the Fancy Leather Goods Workers have been fined $99 each.

The charges against them was that instead of attending the mass meetings held in the 69th and 71st armories by Sigman-Beckerman and Company, they had gone to one of the seventeen halls where the left wing workers had gathered to counteract the right wing maneuvers.

Graft is O. K.

While the grievance committee was eager to fine militant members of their organization they quickly squashed charges brot against a shop chairman by one of the workers who claimed the chairman had accepted fifty dollars from the boss so the latter could violate the trade agreement. This shop chairman is one of Shiplacoff's henchmen and had to be protected while the two workers had to be punished for opposing the union wrecking policy that the right wing administration of the union is pursuing.

GARMENT BOARD CHANGES BOOKS; DEFIES SIGMAN

Shows Contradictions In His Attack

Working himself up to a pitch of unrighteous indignation yesterday, Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, denounced the left wing once again and this time accused the Joint Board of creating a "dual" union among the Italian workers of Locals 48 and 89.

Shows Confusion.

According to Joint Board spokesmen, this just "offers further proof of the confusion that exists in the right wing ranks as to how to justify the illegal ousting of the entire New York Joint Board and four of the most powerful locals of the union.

The statement made by Sigman points out that locals 4, 8 and 89 were not reorganized by the International union"; but at the time the ouster orders were given, the International claimed that it was "reorganizing" every local in New York, while admitting that it had reappointed officers of locals who were tools of the International.

More Contradiction.

"Although this statement implies that some locals were 'reorganized' even if Locals 48 and 89 were not, the International, through its attorney Morris Hillquit, declared at the hearing before the Impartial Chairman Raymond V. Ingersoll that 'The General Executive Board is without power to expel members or suspend locals without proper procedure, and up to this time there has been no expulsion or attempted expulsion nor removal from office, no suspension or expulsion of local executive boards.' The fact that the International claims one day that the Joint Board is expelled and the next day that there has been no expulsion, proves the weakness of its position legally.

"The Joint Board will continue to change the union books of any members of any local who come to ask for a new book. It is the duty of the Joint Board to issue new books every six months."

Politicians Throw Job In Philadelphia to Scab Contractor

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 15.—Politicans here are throwing the construction job on the new city hall to a scab contractor under a flaw in the agreement between the unions and the city to the effect that all municipal labor must be given to union men. As a result of the action a strike has been called by the following trades: structural iron-workers, hoisting engineers, electricians, plasters, lathers, cement finishers, and other trades in the building trades council.

The general contractor, Fuller and Company, originally handed out all the work to union labor in accordance with the city agreement. Under pressure from city hall politicians, however, the company gave a subcontract to Nicholas Connolly, who is unfair to labor.

Organized labor is now in a position to show that Mayor Kendrick does not practice what he preaches in his statements that he favors union labor. Carpenters, bricklayers, not being in the building trades council, are still at work on the job.

GREEK FURRIERS DENOUNCE PLAN FOR FAKE UNION

"Be Prepared," Leaders Warn Mass Meeting.

"Be prepared for anything", was the warning of S. Leibowitz, assistant manager of the Furriers Joint Board, when speaking to members of the Greek branch of this Joint Board and a group of delegates from the Greek Brotherhood who met in Webster Hall last night to discuss the attempt of the International and the A. F. of L. to use the Greek workers as pawns in their scheme for disrupting the union.

Greek Workers Meet.

This meeting had been called to inform the Greek fur workers of the secret conferences between representatives of the A. F. of L., the Greek Brotherhood and the International Fur Workers Union whose officials had offered to grant a local charter direct to the Brotherhood, a company union, and thus not only ignore the Greek branch of the Joint Board but violate the constitution of the union.

"If the International was concerned with the welfare of the members of the Greek workers", said Leibowitz "they would not have waited until this particular time to grant a charter, when for the past year and a half they have refused to consider the matter which has been brought up repeatedly by Vice-President A. Gross whom they recently expelled.

"If the International cared for the Greek workers, it would not ignore the Greek branch of the Joint Board and attempt to give a charter to a company union which was formed by the bosses, in the interest of the bosses. And while promising this group a charter they have fooled the Brotherhood members into thinking that with a charter from the International they could work in any fur shop in New York, which is not true. Our union constitution says every worker in a fur manufacturing shop in this city must be a member of the Joint Board; and members of a local chartered direct by the International would not be members of the Joint Board."

Wanted Any Support.

According to Leibowitz, the International's sole reason for offering a local charter to the Brotherhood, and thus breaking off the agreement which had been reached by the Greek branch of the Joint Board and the Brotherhood, was to gain the support of these Greek workers to fight their battles and help keep them in power in the union.

"They wanted to form the nucleus of a new Joint Board to which some of the disgruntled Jewish workers—who had to pay heavy fines for scabbing in the last strike—would be sure to turn. They want to pit the Greek against the Jewish workers. They want to use the Greeks to do their dirty work in the fight which they are planning on the New York Joint Board."

Plan Dual Board?

Rumors were current yesterday that the right wing of the furriers International was so open fire upon the lefts within a few days, their plan being to "supercede" the Joint Board or take over its affairs, or some such action which would set up a dual board manned by appointees of the International.

Besides Liebowitz, I. Shapiro, chairman of the Joint Board also spoke; and the other speakers were all members of the Greek Branch of the Joint Board — George Particritis, John Pappas and George Avenitis, who was chairman.

Care for Children of Workers Demonstrated At Chicago Next Week

Among the features of the Workers' Carnival Bizaar to be held February 25-26-27 at the Ashland Auditorium, Chicago, will be a workers nursery, demonstrating the most modern scientific methods of child care.

A trained director, will be in charge, with her corps of able assistants, and literature will be available on all aspects of child care. Parents visiting the bazaar are urged to bring their children.

The bazaar is to be held under the joint auspices of The DAILY WORKER, Daily Freiheit, and International Labor Defense. Donations of toys, furniture or other articles suitable for children should be marked "For the Workers Nursery" and delivered at 19 S. Lincoln Street, at an early date. All equipment demonstrated will be on sale during the bazaar.

Amplifiers Will Be Used When Aimee Speaks in Church

Aimee McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, will speak here next Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Glad Tidings Tabernacle, a pentecostal church at 325 West 33d Street, of which Rev. Robert Alexander Brown is pastor.

As this church can normally seat only 1,000 people arrangements have been made so that 2 like number can be accommodated in the basement and hear her sermon by the aid of amplifiers. Amplifiers, though akin to radio, require no operators.

MEETING TO PROTEST LITHUANIAN FASCIST TERROR WILL BE HELD BY CHICAGO WORKERS

CHICAGO.—In protest against the fascist terror in Lithuania, the murder and imprisonment of working class leaders in that country and to voice the demand of Chicago workers that they insist on recognition of Soviet Russia, a meeting in Lithuania will be arranged—a conference will be held here on Sunday, January 30, 2 p. m., at 1902 W. 23rd St., Halsted Br. The central committee of all Lithuanian progressive organizations of Chicago and the International Labor Defense are backing this conference. All labor unions and workers' societies are urged to send delegates.

Against Deportation.

The local body of I. L. D. is also at present active in the campaign for the right of political asylum and against the deportation of Enos Berdichevsky, Russian U. S. senators and representatives have been appealed to by the local committee to state their position regarding our demands as above and to act in accord with them. Congressman A. J. Sabath of Illinois has wired here for full information on Sorrentti's case. Sabath has previously interested himself in the Sacco-Vanzetti case following the requests of the Sacco-Vanzetti conference of Chicago, of the International Labor Defense and other Chicago bodies.

Branches Meet.

Among the Chicago branches of I. L. D. which are engaged in these campaigns, that meet this week are:

The Russian, Lakeview Scandinavian and Karl Marx Club branches, which meet Thursday, 8 p. m., January 27, at 1902 West Division St., 3208 Wilton Ave., and 2733 Hirsch Blvd., respectively.

On Saturday evening, January 27, the Irving Park (English) branch will hold an entertainment and dance at 4021 N. Drake Ave. for the benefit of the Prisoners' Relief Fund. This branch pledges and pays $5.00 per month to that fund and corresponds with class war prisoner A. Bratund, No. 38363, San Quentin, California. Everybody is welcome to I. L. D. branch meetings and affairs.

'Jazzy Jimmie' Says the Public Is Pure

Magistrate Renaud in Jefferson Market Court yesterday afternoon held the author, manager, and seven members of the cast of "The Virgin Man," one of the three alleged objectionable Broadway plays closed last week by police, for arraignment in Special Sessions Court. Bail was continued, $1,000 for the principals and $500 for the others.

Those held were William Francis Dugan, author-manager, Virginia Smith, Paul Clape, Don Hillaway, "The Virgin Man"; Betty Alden, Charlee Morn, Joseph Baird and Dorothy Hall, the star.

Decision of the court followed lengthy argument on the part of counsel.

Principals of the play "Sex" will be arraigned today.

Public Pure, Says Mayor.

Mayor Walker, who is now taking a much-needed rest from his duties as head of reception committees for various kinds of celebrities, explained the basis for the recent raids on so-called "immoral plays" before he left New York. This is made clear in an article by the debonair mayor which appears in the March issue of the Theatrical Magazine, which he prepared before his departure.

His Honor, in this article, expressed confidence that "a clean-minded and discriminating public would automatically protect itself by bestowing the patronage as a reward of merit." Declaring that "play producers are in a sense the trustees of the morals of the theatre," Walker said that "as such it is their duty jealously to guard the stage against indecency and vulgarity. The public is interested them with this responsibility. If they shirk it, public opinion will devise some other method of protecting the theatre and so in the long run the esthetic sense of the people of New York City."

Meanwhile, Max D. Steuer, Gilbert D. Miller, and other high-priced lawyers are battling the cases of the producers whose shows were raided recently by orders of Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee, in various courts of the city.

Negroes in Denver Oppose Segregation Scheme of Whites

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 15.—Attempts on the part of white people in Denver to segregate negro children according to color, which have been met with an indignation meeting by the negroes, held recently at the Zion Baptist church.

Equity speakers at the meeting stressed the importance of "soft pedaling" action and depending upon prayer to right matters. More enlightened, however, seemed to be a remark by a colored veteran of the Spanish American war who raised the question, "Why should the negro have bared his black breast to the cold steel for the stars and stripes and then go about suffering from an inferiority complex?"

Comrade Whidden stated the position of the I. L. D. and the audience seemed both surprised and pleased that a world-wide organization existed that would take up the cudgels in behalf of the negroes.

Force and Violence in Congress.

Those cynical people who have come to the conclusion that sincerity is a stranger in both houses of congress may find cause to reconsider judgment when they read of two engagements that took place in our federal law factories, between two democrats who quarreled over one bill and two republicans who engaged in hostilities over another.

Of course ring fans will put the two fistic encounters down as fakes. There was no blood drawn. There was no knockout. In fact neither one succeeded on connecting with his opponent's body.

Senator Glass of Virginia, notorious reactionary, quarreled with Senator Wheeler of Montana over the McFadden-Pepper, branch banking bill. The Virginia democrat called the Montana democrat a liar, which the latter resented with his knuckles. The two senatorial representatives of the cauliflower industry parried and feinted but the result was as undecisive as a bundle of signed petitions against war. The customers expressed dissatisfaction over the showing and pushed the performers into the cloak room.

In the House of Representatives, J. N. Tincher and James G. Strong, two republicans from Kansas, began to feel out the tender spots in each other's anatomies. The fists of the combatants struck out furiously but returned to their bases without having encountered anything more substantial than wandering clouds of tobacco smoke. "Just like politicians," some will say, "always pawing the air."

But for us who have not yet reached the lower levels of cynicism, there is something grand in the spectacle of solons taking their respective political positions so seriously as to be ready to try them out on each other's bodies in knight-errant fashion without giving or taking quarter.

It is also consoling to know that frankness of speech and veracity are beginning to put in an appearance in congress. We note that the embattled quartet hurled "liar" at each other in the preliminaries. This way of settling refractory questions appeals to us provided the fighting is done by the capitalist politicians. There is always the danger that our kill-joy secretary of state will interfere, send a detachment of marines into congress and declare Pennsylvania avenue a neutral zone. Mr. Kellogg does not like to see policies determined by "force and violence." And then Mexico, Nicaragua and China might dispatch gunboats, tugboats and junks up the Potomac to protect their nationals, if the civil war continues.

Expelled Again!

Thanks to the New York Times we are advised that Mr. Morris Sigman, acting as chief executioner of the I. L. G. W. has again expelled the locals comprising the New York Joint Board, from the International.

What is the use in being an executioner unless you can have the satisfaction of relieving somebody of a head occasionally, the oftener the better if the position is not honorary?

It must be tough on an executioner who is proud of his profession, to see he has been beheaded so often, walking the streets wearing the latest in headgear and wagging their ears in derision at the executioner. This is the way it is with the Joint Board and its officials.

Sigman relieved the elected officials of the Joint Board of their positions. In doing this Mr. Sigman had the unanimous support of the open-shop employers, Tammany Hall, the capitalist press, of everybody except the members of the locals affiliated to the Joint Board and the radical workers in the trade union movement. Such trifles do not bother a reactionary labor bureaucrat. John L. Lewis could not fight the Wall Street government in 1919 when Wilson threatened to jail himself and his officials if they sent out a strike call. But the bureaucrats do not hesitate to fight the militant members of their own unions.

Sigman's action is not an isolated incident. It is part of a general attack against progressive unionism. Sigman is playing the same role in the I. L. G. W. that the company tool Rickert played in the United Garment Workers.

Hunger as a Recruiting Sergeant.

The Sunday Worker of England, organ of the left wing in the trade unions, carried several pictures in a recent issue, showing British troops marching off to war against the revolutionary Chinese movement. The paper quotes a statement once made by General Roberts that: "Hunger is the great recruiting sergeant." The general was right.

Hunger is the great recruiting sergeant and the great strike-breaker, and the capitalists are anxious to have a plentiful supply of hunger-driven human beings on hand to break strikes and go out to kill their fellow men in the interests of the rich.

The British workers, who are shown parading the streets of London on their way to barracks, are of the same type as those that were driven by hunger last May to scab on the workers who rallied to the call of the general strike. Those victims of capitalism have no reason to feel any animosity towards the Chinese. They had no reason to feel hostile towards the British miners, in whose behalf the general strike was called. They are demoralized by unemployment and hunger and deserted by the bureaucracy of the trade union movement.

The trade unions must consider the problem of the unemployed as one that strikes at the heart of unionism. The unemployed must be organized and treated as part of the army of labor, instead of being permitted to become a standing army from which the imperialists can pick their strikebreakers and their cannon fodder.

IV.

Bertie arrived in Angel City a week behind her, brother, and afforded him still more evidence of the unchangeable nature of femininity. Bertie had come to get our share of the estate, and she went after it with the single-mindedness of a rabbit-hound. Bertie knew a lawyer—her kind of lawyer, another rabbit-hound—and she saw him the day of her arrival; and then Bunny must come to this lawyer's office, and have the help of Bertie and a stenographer have the insides of his mind turned out and recorded; exactly what Dad had said about his arrangements with Mrs. Aylse Huntington Forsythe Ollivier—Dad hadn't said a word about it to Bertie, alas, nor to anyone else; he had made a will, of course, and that infamous woman had destroyed it—Bertie knew that with the certainty of God.

And then, everything else about Dad's affairs that Bunny could recall; where he had kept his money and his papers, what secret hinding-place for stocks and bonds he may have had, what he had spent, so far as Bunny could guess, who had been in his confidence. And then the statements which Vernon Roscoe rendered; and all the files of Dad's correspondence with Verne; and the trusted employees executives—Bolling and Heimann and Simmons and the rest; and the bankers and their Nerks; and Dad's secretary whom Bertie had brought back from Paris with her—a veritable mountain of detail, and Bunny was required to attend all the sessions, and he just as much a rabbit-hound as the rest. He told bimself that it was his duty to the movement, which so badly needed the aid of a "fat angel"!

Right at the outset, there was one bitter pill that Bertie had to swallow. Her lawyer advised her that there was no chance of depriving Mrs. Alyse Ross of her half of the estate. Bunny's testimony was worth, in law, precisely nothing; and so, unless there should be found another will, they must accept the inevitable, and combine with the executors to get as much as possible out of Vernon Roscoe. Mrs. Ross's Paris lawyers had named some very high priced lawyers in Angel City as their representatives, and Bertie had to swallow her rage and admit these men to their counsels.

There were troubles enough to need the very highest-priced lawyers. Accountants put to work on the books of J. Arnold Ross, and on the statements rendered by his partner, and in a few days there began to emerge out of the tangle one colossal fact; over and above all money that Dad had put into new business ventures with Verne and others, above all the cash which he had handled through his bank, there was more than one million dollars worth of stocks and bonds which had disappeared without a trace. Verne declared that these securities had been taken by Dad, and used by him for purposes unknown; and Bertie declared that was idiocy, and that Vernon Roscoe was the biggest thief in all history. Having access to Dad's safe deposit box, he had simply helped himself to the contents. And with rage Bertie turned upon her brother, asserting that he was to blame—Verne knew that Bunny would use his money to try to overturn society, and so it was only common sense to keep him down.

Nor could Bunny deny that this sounded reasonable. It was easy to imagine Verne saying to himself that Bunny was a social danger, and Bertie a social waster, and the widow a poor half-wit, while he Verne, was a capable business man, who would use those securities for the proper purpose—to bring more oil out of the ground. Learning of Dad's death, Verne had quietly transferred the securities from Dad's strong box to his own, before the state inheritance tax commissioner came along to make his records! Verne wouldn't consider that stealing, but simply common sense—the same as taking the naval reserves away from a government which hadn't intelligence enough to develop them.

Now Bertie wanted to start a law-suit against her father's partner, and put him on the stand and make him tell everything about his affairs; and Bunny, with the help of the lawyers, had to argue with her, and bear the brunt of her rage. So far, Verne had been careful to put nothing into writing; and when he took the stand, he would have a story fixed up to leave them helpless. He could say that Dad had given him the securities, and how could they disprove it? He could say that Dad had taken the securities, unknown to his partner, and lost the money on the stock market—how could they disprove that? Even if they traced the sales of Dad's securities through Verne's brokers, they would gain nothing, because Verne could say that he had turned over the money to Dad, or that he had been authorized to invest it, and had lost it—a hundred different tales he could invent! "Then we've simply got to take what that scoundrel allows us!" cried Bertie; and the lawyers agreed that was the situation. Being themselves on a percentage basis, their advice was sincere.

Then an incident that multiplied the bitterness between Bertie and her brother. Bunny went to the storage warehouse where his belongings had been put away, and in an atlas that his father had occasionally consulted he came upon five liberty bonds for ten thousand dollars each." It was some money Dad had been keeping handy—possibly to bribe the officers in case he should be caught; anyhow, here it was, and Bunny would have been free to consider it a part of the million which Dad had tried to give him in Paris. But he haugbtily decided that he would not join in pulverizing the estate; he would turn the bonds in, to be counted as part of the assets.

But he made the mistake of telling Bertie about it—and oh, what a riot! The imbecile, to make Alyse and her lawyers a present of twenty-five thousand dollars! Instead of quietly dividing with his sister, and holding his mouth! That twenty-five thousand became to Bertie a thing of more importance than all the millions that Verne had got away with; these bonds were something tangible—or almost tangible—until Bunny took them out of her reach, and made them a present to those greedy vultures! And right when both of them needed cash, and were having to go to one of their father's bankers to borrow money on the basis of their claims to the estate.

Bertie raved and stormed, and Bunny, to get it over with, put the bonds to the bank and turned them in; and after that Bertie never forgave him, she would mention his imbecility every time they were alone. She was making herself ill with all this hatred and fuming; she would sit up half the night poring over figures, and then she couldn't sleep for excitement. Like all young society ladies, she set much store by the freshness of skin and its freedom from wrinkles; but now she was throwing away her charms, and making herself pale and haggard. In after years she would be going to beauty specialists and having the corners of her mouth lifted, and the skin of her face treated with chemicals and peeled off—because now she could not control her fury of disappointment, that she was to get only a paltry one or two millions, instead of the glorious ten or fifteen millions she had been confident of some day possessing.

Another Solon Aims to Protect Shaky Morals From Salacious Prints

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 15.—A new attempt to muzzle free speech was made today in the form of a bill introduced in the state legislature by Assemblyman Hofstadter, a New York republican.

"This bill," declared the lawmaker, "is in no sense a consorship measure. It is merely designed to put teeth in the present law, which virtually has become a dead letter as a result of interpretations placed on decisions by the higher courts."

Getting Monotonous

Bills of this kind have been introduced with monotonous regularity during the past four years, but they have always been defeated. The present measure which, according to the assemblyman, is aimed at "obscene prints and publications," is said to be not so drastic as the so-called "clean books" bill which has met defeat a number of times.

Old time members of the legislature are reported to have expressed the belief that this bill has a better chance of passing in view of the present moralistic campaign against the theatres in New York City.

Boss Tactics Strike

Two thousand pickets reach the paper box factories of the Bronx every morning to prevent the scabs from going to work without a union agreement.

Mostly Youngsters.

The paper box industry in New York City, employs about 7,000 workers, one half are young workers and children.

For many years the paper box workers were entirely forgotten and unnoticed by the labor movement. The bosses took advantage of their division among different nationalities languages and exploited them severely.

The conditions under which the paper box workers toil are most unsanitary and injurous to their health. Statistics show that the health of the majority of the paper box boy workers is affected by the nature of their work.

Conditions Force Strike.

Day after day conditions of the workers were getting worse and worse, reaching a stage which even beasts of burden could not endure. The class-conscious element among the paper box workers realized that the only chance they have of bettering their conditions is in forming a union, thru which they could demand human conditions in their shops.

The foundation of a Paper Box Workers' union was laid in 1923 by this group of class-conscious workers. They began a drive for membership in the union among the rest of the paper box workers who as yet were not awakened to the necessity of organizing themselves.

Fight Dissension.

In addition to the hardships with which they were confronted in convincing the workers of the importance of joining the union in order to fight the bosses, they also had to fight an element in their own ranks which came into the organization with the purpose of destroying it.

After a long and bitter struggle they succeeded in cleaning up the union of that undesirable element. A capable and militant leadership remained in the union, representing 30 percent of the industry.

Realizing that the organization of the workers into a union and the growth of the same, is minimizing their possibilities for the exploitation of the workers the bosses started to employ every method available to break up the union.

In reply to their mobilization of anti-union forces, the union issued a call for strike on October 31, 1926.

All Come Out.

A solid mass of over two thousand workers left the shops at the call of the union. The following demands were put in by the strikers.

1—Recognization of the union.
2—A forty-four hour week.
3—Better sanitary conditions in the shops.
4—A minimum increase in wages of five dollars.

In opposition to the picket line organized by the strikers the bosses lined up the local police department of the city of New York.

Police Ride In.

A squadron of cossacks of the police department rode into the picket line.

Wholesale arrests of the strikers was another method of breaking the strike. Dozens of strikers were arrested daily. Bailing out of the striking men and women cleaned out the treasury of the union. Though the left wing of other unions supported them to their utmost, it was unable to help a great deal, because it was engaged in a bitter struggle of its own. Every company car driven by scabs was decorated by a uniformed policeman, which prevented the strikers from speaking to the scab driver. Many other kinds of ammunition were used by the bosses in order to break the strike.

Surprise Bosses.

The long struggle put up by the strikers, which lasted nineteen weeks, was a very unpleasant thing to the bosses. They expected to starve the workers back to work within the first few days of the strike. The devotion and militancy of the leadership, however, made it possible to keep up the struggle for the length of time.

The loss of the strike is not a defeat in the general sense of the word, because the lessons of the strike are of great value to the workers. It has been proven to them clearly that the bosses are uniting all their forces to fight all workers, and gave them a better understanding of the necessity of a stronger organization and of preparing themselves for the future battle against the exploiters.

Rail Workers Killed.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 15.—Fatally scalded when their engine struck a boulder, washed down by heavy rains, engineer E. Landen and fireman E. L. McMurtry died on a relief train today.

Although the locomotive and several cars overturned, none of the passengers was reported injured.

At Last, A History of American Communism.—James Oneal has written what he calls a history of Communism in America. Having run across some of his notes on the subject in neglected corners like the New Leader, we know that his opus will be a masterpiece of falsehood, cool judgment, and objective historical writing. For impartiality there will be nothing to match it except the reviews of his book which will appear in Communist publications.

Histories and biographies used to be written by friends of the subjects treated. A reversal of the proceeding should prove very amusing if not exactly instructive. Carlo Tresca tells us that he is writing a biography of Benito Mussolini. It's an interesting beginning. Engdahl might do one of Oneal.

Revising Abe Lincoln.—The favorite sport of politicians, bot-air spouters generally, editorial fibbers, etc., on Lincoln's Birthday is to revise his opinions to fit their own. Witness this gem from the mouth of Senator Smoot: "What would Mr. Lincoln say of Communism and similar creeds? He was the apostle of human rights and as such, insisted upon the right of the individual to acquire property and hold it under the protection of the law." How does Mr. Smoot fit the emancipation proclamation—a clear-cut set of confiscation of private property—into his picture?

Help Wanted: Clergymen for Cabaret Work.

Will de Kalb takes up our casual suggestion that contributors be blasphemous. He submits the following "candidate for the Index Expurgatorius":

"A fair damsel and I were wining and dining in a Broadway cabaret the other night, when the majestic figure of an Irish 'dry-dick' stalked through the door. Merely out of consideration for the proprietor, we hastily gulped out of evidence's way the contents of our flasks, although I must admit they contained more legal fusel oil than illegal alcohol. After our badged and sheeted trespasser had left, it occurred to me how convenient it would have been for us had I been a 'drunken-collared' priest. By simply breaking a piece of bread, and whispering the phrase, 'This is my body; this is my blood,' over the wine, what had been bread and wine (and vile stuff at that) would have become the body and blood of Christ (hundreds of infallible Popes are my authorities). But then—would the Irish booze-sleuth have been willing to believe in this supernatural hocus-pocus ontside the awe-inspiring precincts of the tabernacle? I wonder . . . At any rate, if church attendence continues to fall off, here's a new job for the clergy—emergency magicians in the 'blind-pig' cabarets. By popular request, I'll be quite willing to run an employment agency along this line."

LABOR ENTERS THE ELECTION FIGHT IN CHI

Ruthenberg Nominated For Mayor

By TOM KERNEY,
(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—Although the usual noise and bustle of the mayoralty campaign is well under way here, the real vital issues are not being touched by the old capitalist candidates.

In the republican primaries there are three aspirants to the mayoralty nomination: Edward R. Litsinger of the Deneen-Brundage group; William Hale Thompson, ex-mayor, candidate of the Crowe-Galpin group, and John Dill Robertson, former health commissioner of Chicago, who is being backed by the Lundin group and the so-called Chicago Business Men's Republican committee.

Dever Has Dems.

While in the republican primary there is a three-cornered fight, Mayor Dever will have easy sleighing in the democratic primary.

There are certain indications which lead one to suspect that the Robertson campaign is a "blind horse" to split the Thompson forces in favor of the Litsinger camp. These indications are (1) The main bulk of the personal filth hurled from the Robertson camp lands on the head of Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney, and his pet candidate, Thompson, while Litsinger is hardly mentioned; 2.) Certain followers of the Robertson camp have deserted for Litsinger, and there is talk going on of more desertions before the republican primary on Feb. 22.

But What About the Workers?

The fact that, the issues are barely mentioned in the election rallies makes it hard to detect the class interests behind the smoke screen of personal filth. However, there is one thing that the workers can be sure of, and that neither the republican nor democratic candidates if elected will enact a single pro-labor measure in the local demonstration.

Workers Party Enters.

The Workers (Communist) Party here is raising the banner of independent working class politics in the local elections. Although it has placed its own mayoralty candidate in the field, C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, it is willing at any moment to withdraw from the race of a candidate chosen on a united labor ticket and for a real labor program. Meanwhile, the Workers (Communist) Party is busy securing signatures on the petition for its own candidate.

Workers who wish to support working class politics against the anti-labor politics of the two capitalist parties ore urged to stay away from the primaries of the republican and democratic parties, to sign the petition for the Workers Party candidate, to raise the question of the United Labor Ticket in workers' organizations and to register on March 15 for the general election on April 5.

THE FIVE MINUTES OF CZECHO-SLOVAKIAN PARLIAMENT FOR OPPOSING CLERICAL LAWS

On January 19 in Prague began the trial of the four Communist deputies, Hais, Safranek, Kreibich and Jilek, and the national socialist deputy, Koeglik. The accusation is connected with the events in the Czechoslovakian parliament in June, 1926, when the Communist radios obstructed the adoption of the customs bill and the bill for the increase of the salaries of the clergy.

The deputies are accused of infringement of the law for the protection of the republic and for causing serious bodily harm. In the indictment the prosecution attempts to transform this purely political trial into a process against common criminals. It is directed mainly against the Communist Party as an organization.

The leading judge of the proceedings does his best to exclude all political arguments. Every time one of the accused attempts to explain the political motives of the actions in question, the leading judge interferes.

When Comrade Safranko pointed out that he, as a representative of the workers realized that the adoption of the customs bill meant a deterioration of the standard of life of the broad working masses, the judge interrupted him and stated that there was no time for political speeches.

When Comrade Kreibich spoke, these interruptions became still more frequent. Comrade Kreibich said: "The opposition supported that we wanted to prevent by mechanical means and technical obstruction, which is an old right of all parliaments and which was permitted also in the Austrian parliament, the Bohemian Diet and in the German Reichstag . . ."

Chairman: "I tolerate no political speeches, we would stay here a long time if I did."

Comrade Kreibich: "For me it is a question of months and years and I can, therefore, not take care of half an hour or so of your time. By mechanical means one cannot prevent the adoption of a bill. We are not of the opinion that on important matters decision is passed only within the parliament; Marx called already such an opinion parliamentarian cretinism. . . ."

Chairman: "I will not tolerate that you smoke here all kinds of authors."

This is only an example of the methods used in this trial. After the examination of the accused, many clerical deputies appeared as witnesses and most of them did not repeat under oath their former statements. Their statements were vague and general.

ILLINOIS FEUD WHICH HORRIFIES POLITE PULITZER CAUSED BY STRIKEBREAKING

By THURBER LEWIS
(Special to the DAILY WORKER.)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 17.—The end of the sensational gang feud between the Birgers and the Sheltons in Southern Illinois is giving the St. Louis plute press a chance to revive the horror of "Bloody Williamson" county and trace it all back to the miners' strike of 1922. The shooting affray at Lester Strip mine in Herrin during that struggle, that threw the bosses of this region into a panic of frenzied "defense," cannot be forgotten.

Still Hunt Revenge.

The late Pulitzer's "independent" St. Louis Post-Dispatch remarks, "Had the people of Williamson County stood with the law and held up its hands, the Herrin incident would have ended with the labor fight at the Strip mine."

The veiled inference here is that the union miners who participated in the "labor fight" would not have been acquitted if the "people" had "held up the law" and Glen Young and the subsequent "lawlessness" would not have heppened.

Young a Gunman.

The present writer was on the scene for The DAILY WORKER in 1921 when Glen Young met his death from the gun of Ora Thomas, member of the miners' union, who died at the same time.

It was then established by The DAILY WORKER and ignored by the press generally that Glen Young was a company gunman, who was in the scab barricade in Lester mine at the time of the shooting in 1922, and escaped.

Ora Thomas was one of the leaders of the miners who took up arms in defense of their right to live. Glen Young came back to Herrin—or was sent back—to "get even."

K. K. K. Against Union.

That is why Ora Thomas died. The "Ku Klux Klan" wave in Williamson County was, in reality, and all its other angles notwithstanding, on attack on the miners' union.

The subsequent killings and gangsterism that has made Herrin a constant source of first-page copy can in a large measure be traced back to the "labor fight" of 1922. But only insofar as the community was unbalanced by the fact that the coal operators did everything possible to break the miners' union.

It was no accident that Glen Young's extra-legal "crusade" was directed in most instances against union miners—principally foreign-born workers—the type who fought and won at Lester Strip mine.

Bosses Feel Defeat.

For the bosses, Lester Strip mine represents a shameful example of "lawlessness" that had its echo in death and later gangsterism of a practically various sort.

For the workers, Lester Strip mine symbolizes a heroic fight for class interests against great odds. The union miners who fought there—Ora Thomas among them—are heroes of the working class. The "Ku Klux Klan" raids and the gangsterism that followed may be marked down as a logical corrallary to a struggle that released the most vicious forces of the system in an effort to break the fighting spirit that shone among the miners in 1922.

FOLLOW COMRADE JONES.

One day after the publication of the notice of the establishment of The DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund, we received from Comrade James R. Jones, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a pledge whereby he promises to pay one dollar on the second of every month to help The DAILY WORKER. It is this kind of steady, throughout-the-year, day-to-day support that will build up our paper. It is the solid phalanxes of shock troops like Comrade Jones, which will be its backbone and its main source of strength.

Comrade Jones is the pioneer. We are confident that he is but the first of a great army of DAILY WORKER supporters who are ready and willing to pledge one, five, ten dollars and more to place our paper solidly on its feet. We are all sick and tired of crises, panics, and scares. The only way to get rid of them is to provide a regular, all-the-year-round support of the paper. One of the best ways to do this is to join the ranks of the Sustainers of The DAILY WORKER. We do not propose to run any extended campaign for Sustainers. We are just issuing a quiet appeal to those who are most anxious to put The DAILY WORKER on a stable footing. If you are one of these comrades, we hope you will sign on the dotted line at once.—BERT MILLER.

DIARY OF EVENTS IN LAWRENCE MILL SECTION; SHOWS CONSPIRACY TO LENGTHEN WORKING DAY

(By Worker Correspondent.)

LAWRENCE, Mass., Feb. 17.—The latter part of 1926 found the capitalist press spreading the bosses' propaganda for general wage cuts and lengthening of hours in New England.

On December 24th over 100 weavers of the Barnard mills in Fall River went on strike. These weavers were previously paid at the rate of $1.00 per cut for weaving spot cotton; but a first reduction was made when the management of the plant announced that in the future, the price paid would be 90 cents per cut. This was followed with another reduction of 10 cents per cut. These workers are organized in what is called a Weaver's union and its secretary is William C. McNamara. The other 900 workers are members of the plant were thrown out of work.

Jan. 6.—Notices were posted in the Otis company mills at Ware, Mass., and Greenville, New Hampshire, that a wage cut to go in effect Jan. 17th. About 1500 workers are employed in the Ware mill and 1,000 in the Greenville plant.

Closing Mills.

Jan. 7.—The press announced that the Uxwood mill of the United States Worsted company in Lawrence, employing 1400 workers would close down officially February 1st but some departments would run until March. The company has a yarn mill in North Chemsford, Mass., a weaving plant in Lowell, Mass., and the Lawrence Dye Works and a weaving plant in Lawrence.

Jan. 10.—The Manomet mills, largest cotton yarn manufacturing plant in New Bedford, Mass., with between 4,000 and 5,000 workers announced today that it would close indefinitely.

Long Hours Bill.

A bill sponsored by the Arkwright Club, an organization of the textile bosses, to amend the 48-hour law to permit women and children to work 54 hours a week was filed with the clerk of the state senate today.

Jan. 11.—Upon call of Agent Irving Southworth of the Pacific mills, the industrial commission was called together today. "Andy" B. Sutherland, merchant, speaking for the textile bosses, urged the repeal of the 48-hour law that is in effect in Massachusetts.

Jan. 17.—A wage cut of at least 10 percent went into effect in the Otis company's plants of Ware, Mass., and Greenville, New Hampshire, today.

Jan. 18.—A reduction of 10 to 12½ percent in wages was announced today at the Star Worsted Mills, Fitchburg, Mass., where 300 workers are employed.

Central Union Denounces.

Jan. 20.—The Lawrence Central Labor union at its meeting tonight denounced the industrial commission for giving its aid in trying to repeal the 48-hour law and instructed its president, Robert J. Watt, to visit Mayor Rochfort and demand that the commission restrict itself to revising old industries and procuring new ones.

Every delegate denounced those who would return the workers to the 54-hour week. There was no one present who defended the commission. It was voted to hold a monster mass meeting of the textile workers, Friday night, Feb. 11th, against the repeal of the 48-hour law. Final plans for the holding of t tag day, Saturday, Jan. 22, for the Passaic textile strikers was made.

Sutherland Cringes.

Jan. 23.—"Andy" Sutherland, the Lawrence merchant and spokesman for the textile bosses, in a public statement tries to defend himself from the general condemnation of the workers for his efforts in aiding the bosses to repeal the 48-hour law, but makes matters worse for himself. It is said that his business has taken a decided drop the past week, workers buying their goods elsewhere.

Mayor Rochfort of Lawrence announced today that the textile bosses would meet with the Industrial Committee Tuesday evening, February the 8th. At this meeting the bosses will tell how much "cooperation" the workers must give to keep the industries going. According to them the workers haven't been speeded and doubled up enuf and altho they haven't found 34 hours a week for most of the textile workers for the past 3 years, they want to increase the hours from 48 to 54.

Daily Worker Sold.

Jan. 31.—The DAILY WORKER was put on the Lawrence newsstands for the first time today.

Feb. 3.—Final plans for the big mass meeting to be held in Oliver school hall, Friday evening, February 11th, were made at the Central Labor union tonight. A large committee representing all locals was elected. Thousands of leaflets and a hundred placards will be printed announcing the meeting. All workers are urged to attend. JOIN THE UNION.

United Textile Union Gains Support Among Unorganized Workers

BIDDEFORD, Me., Feb. 17 (FP).—The United Textile Workers drive into the sheeting mill towns grows more promising. The last meeting of the Pepperell Manufacturing Co.'s Social and Athletic Club was able to attract only half the number that came to hear Organizer Francis Gorman expound the advantages of trades' unionism.

The Social and Athletic Club meets in the old weave room that has been remodeled into auditorium, gymnasium and club rooms, as part of the company's welfare plans.

Two years ago the Biddeford workers, then under the leadership of the independent American Federation of Textile Opratives, were defeated in a long strike. Since then the A. F. of L. union has launched an organization campaign. The present drive is actively assisted by the Salem local union of the U. T. W., where 2,400 sheeting workers are employed by the unionized Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co.—a firm that pay 20 per cent higher wages than its open shop rivals and still manages to make more money per spindle than any of them.

Nicholas Miraculous Don't Want Cal's Job; Naw! Tours for Fun

NEW YORK, Feb. 17. — Nicholas Murray Butler, whose publicly avowed purpose is to game a wet republican for the presidency, is about to make a tour of the middle west.

While protesting that "nothing is further from my thoughts than becoming a candidate for the presidential nomination," the Columbia University head starts next Saturday, for a ten-day tour of Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, and other state.

Prime Hoover and Hughes in Grab of N. Y. Water Power

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 17.—Another effort to grab the state's water power was under way here today with a republican proposal for a new water power commission. The bill authorizes a "survey".

The republicans propose to spike public ownership of the great St. Lawrence waterway power resources by placing Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce and agent of the U. S. department of commerce on the commission with Charles Evans Hughes, former secretary of state and now chief counsel for the oil interests raping Mexico, and a politician and a banker. To redeem the commission in the public's estimation, General George H. Gosthals of Panama Canal fame, is included.

MORAL CASTOR OIL

"Sinner" Is a Small Dose After A Big Debauch

Reviewed by HARBOR ALLEN.

"SINNER," by Thompson Buchanan, staged by Allan Dinehart, and produced by Richard Herndon at the Klaw Theatre, is one of those comedies which for 2¾ acts ridicules marriage, bats it over the head with risqué situations, slashes it with epigrams, clutters up the stage with cuckold husbands; then, in the last ¼, doses the lame with moral castor oil, patches it up with moral courtplaster, and sends the audience home groggy but saved.

"Sinner" contains:

1. An emancipated heroine nicknamed "Sinner," who wears two costumes in Act I (including a riding habit); two in Act II; and a spangled decolleté accoutrement in the middle.

2. An artist who is a libertine, who walks as if he had the cramps, who talks only in bad epigrams, who wears patent leather hair and nothing short of riding boots or evening dress.

3. A bridge game which must be very funny if you know bridge.

4. A big he-man husband who is fighting for his oil wells against the vile Bolshevik "spigs" of Mexico (a telegram from Washington tells all about it); but who calls time out just before the final curtain to clean up on the artist to the vast enjoyment of the audience

5. A roadhouse, in Connecticut which, I want you to know, is no ordinary bawdy house. "We charge $25 a day. That cuts out the skimmed milk," says the proud proprietor.

A poor old-fashioned mother, married to a roué, who suffers audibly for 2¾ acts, but rises in the final ¼ as champion of the good old institution or marriage.

7. A scene in which the he-man strikes the emancipated heroine.

8. A scene immediately following in which she says: "I love you."

"Sinner" is called a comedy in three lessons." The lessons are, I gather: (1) Young girls should marry; (2) they shouldn't find it afterwards; (3) they won't if their husbands show them who's boss of the family. But the lesson I draw from it is this: If you want to write a popular play, pick out a "sacred institution' in a state of lush decay, crack ribald jokes at its rottenness, its perfection, its stupidity. Then put it back on the altar. It's a sacred institution.

KELLOGG REFUSES TO GIVE SENATE NOTES TO MEXICO

Divulges that American Oil Men Defy Law

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Secretary of State Kellogg today answered the Norris resolution in the senate for information on the situation of American oil properties in Mexico and the negotiations about them with Mexico, with a refusal to turn over the correspondence, by stating that the state department will not advise the companies what to do, and that the state department considers all the oil companies that have acquired land in Mexico to have obtained it legally.

"Vested Rights" in Mexico.

"Ever since the question at issue arose during the administration of President Wilson the government of the United States has consistently maintained and continues to maintain that there should be no question as to the security of valid and vested rights which have been acquired by American citizens in accordance with Mexican laws as they existed at the time of their acquisition. This attitude of the government was asserted by the American commissioners in the conference in Mexico City in 1923, and there is no departure from it in the understanding which they reached with the Mexican commissioners; and the government of the United States has maintained this position in the recent diplomatic correspondence upon the question between the United States and Mexico."

Land Was Stolen.

The fact that many of the oil companies secured their titles from the Diaz and Huerta governments, which simply robbed the land from its Mexican owners and sold it for a song to foreign capitalists was not even considered by Kellogg in his reply to Norris.

Won't Show Notes.

Kellogg refused to turn over correspondence between the department and persons and corporations interested in Mexican oil lands, on the ground that such correspondence "has been necessarily voluminous." The correspondence, he said, "consists almost exclusively of inquiries or information concerning the Mexican petroleum law and the official attitude of this government with respect thereto. The department has consistently refrained from giving advice and counsel to such persons and corporations as to the course which they should themselves pursue."

Americans Defy Law.

Only four American companies have applied for confirmatory concessions under the provisions of the petroleum law, the statement added. Those companies are: Penn-Mex Fuel Co., Texas Petrolene & Asphalt Co., East Coast Oil Co., and New England Oil Co.

"I understand," Kellogg said, "that the first two mentioned companies are not actively producing petroleum in Mexico and that the last two own no free properties in that country."

Don't Know How Many.

More than 50 concerns which acquired oil properties prior to May 1 1917, have not yet applied for concessions, Kellogg said. The names of these companies were furnished in the statement with the qualification that the state department has found it impossible to furnish a complete list.

About 20 other companies have definitely refused to accept the new petroleum law, according to the statement. These companies, although Mexican owned, hold their titles in the name of Mexican companies.

Steel Depression Staggering to Wall Street

Annalist Sees End of Prosperity Era

By WALLPROL.

Good by, good times!

The industrial machine, geared to the tune of profits, has reached the top of the grade and is now sliding down hill with a rapidity sickening to Wall Street.

That the swing from a prosperity that was a gold mine to the investing class but only mean: a little less unemployment to the worker, to real depression has been on the road for months was well known down here in the narrow caverns of financial Manhattan. The fat, sleek old gents who finger ticker tape nervously and look into the future anxiously, have known ever since November that the industrial activity of 1923-26 is going to slacken.

Now they admit it. Annalist, staid financial weekly of the New York Times, voices their fears in its current issue, being read today in every office below Fulton street. In its summary of the business outlook, Annalist says:

"Conditions in the entire field of the steel and iron industry point to a developing recession in business more pronounced than could have been safely inferred from the year's earlier records. The movement looks increasingly like the true cyclical decline to be expected unless new credit stimulus prevents."

Quick, Watson, the needle! That is old lady Annalist's idea of the only way to keep factories, mills, mines and railroads running. The needle of credit inflation, easier money and more stock speculation!

The needle may be used. That was why Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, was gunshooting around New York and Washington the other week. He was in heavy conference with Strong, Mellon, Jay and other financial overlords of these free and independent United States, contriving for a reduction of the bank rate from 5 to 4½ per cent in both Throgmorton Street in old London and Wall Street, simultaneously, just like that. Proving of course that there is not the slightest connection between the Bank of England and the Federal Reserve System, any more than there is between the British foreign office and the American state department.

Annalist bases its sour prediction on the sad plight of the iron and steel market where prices sag due to decline in orders. Iron and steel but reflect the reduced activity in automobiles and building, two of the main consumers of Pittsburgh products. Auto production slumped in December to the lowest point since 1921 and is now recovering in a slow halting manner. Building continues to go forward, not so fast as last year, under the pressure of the investment market seeking any old outlet for its accumulated billions of surplus values.

Production, true to capitalist economics, has pressed forward far faster than the consumer—the building trades have been able to buy back the fruits of their toil. Now the whole machine has to slow down while millions hunt factory gates, unless—

"...unless new credit stimulus prevents."

But some of the "best minds," and among them H. Parker Willis, editor of the New York Journal of Commerce, professor of banking at Columbia and financial adviser to the Irish Free State warns that another hypodermic shot in the arm will send industry straight into the DTs." More credit, from the huge well of surplus values, may finance production by enabling manufacturers to keep their plants operating. More credit may also finance added instalment buying.

Too Much Stimulus Now.

But there's a limit, says Parker Willis, and we've there already, now seven billion dollars tied up in instalment finance, the banks handling 14 billion dollars more paper than is normal for ordinary capitalist trade and Wall Street using 3 billion dollars just for speculatin' on the Stock exchange.

Another shot in the arm, and the patient will jump off the topmost tower of the Woolworth Building into the bay, Willis says, not us!

No wonder many a sugar daddy after his night is closed by Jimmy Walker's 3 a. m. curfew, tosses his gray old head on a sleepless pillow, wondering how he's going to finance his little outing with things going this away. Either industrial depression now, or more credit and a real wow of a depression in a year or two.

But back to the Annalist. The serious-minded worker can read Annalist's own dope right here:

Annalist's Statement.

For the second time this year the outstanding feature of the week's business records is the general weakness in metal prices, a weakness represented by specific and considerable price declines in practically the whole range of steel products and pig iron, and extending also to a slight drop in lead and a substantial drop of one-half a cent a pound in copper.

From several points of view the movement of metal prices since the beginning of the year, together with the slightly sagging tendency of the general commodity price average, seems to be one of the most significant items in the prospect of this year's business. The fact is pretty generally recognized that the demand for steel, which enters an almost infinite number of final consumption forms, is a very significant reflection of the plans and expectations of the great sweep of business which is concerned with the final manufacture and selling of steel products.

It is also generally recognized (and in fact of specific and detailed record) that the country's equipment for producing all forms of steel as well as pig iron is more than equal to supplying a larger demand than has ever existed—hence that there is a very large surplus of producing capacity over present demand. The shrinkage in present demand from the high levels of last year must be attributed in part to the uncertainty in the mind of steel consuming business as to the prospect of marketing at a profit last year's volume of steel; in other words the steel consuming business of the country plainly shows hesitation and uncertainty as to its planning for the business of the next six months. Being thus uncertain as to the prospects, the steel consuming business asks for price concessions from the steel producers; the steel producers, having an excessive capacity, lower their prices; steel consumers may, hoping that all further price reduction, delay ordering such steel as they really expect to need.

Plant Over-expanded.

The significance of the situation just sketched is not limited to the steel and iron industry. Much the same situation in varying degree exists for the industry of the country as a whole. There is obvious uncertainly in business minds about the business outcome of the next six months, and this is reflected in pressure for lower prices for all manufactured commodities and all manufactured materials and as much delay as is practicable in order to take advantage of possible further price concessions. The producing plant, taking industry as a whole, seems considerably in excess of the present reduced demand, is therefore driven to shade prices in order to get heating orders.

This seems to be in a broad, general way the position of the country's business. The condition does not inevitably forecast still further hesitation developing into e visible recession of enough decisiveness to lower seriously the general activity of production and trade. But as this article pointed out a month ago—and the opening paragraphs of this present article sketch in some of the main forces and conditions—the general position of production and demand suggests that there is present the beginning of what is in its essential quality a true cyclical recession.

The ... Rome had been passed at the open day. The alliance decided "to sti with the oppressed people of t whole world in order to fight Imperialism and to cooperate with the wor ers of the whole world in order t improve the conditions of the wor ing class."

In the succeeding conferences, su topics as the dispatch of soldiers t the British to China, the oppressi of the Mexicans and Nicaraguans the U. S. had been discussed. The p presentatives of the Kuomintang an the Chinese nationalist governmen delivered speeches which had grea influence in the alliance.

WU WOOS THE MUSE WHILE FOES FLIRT WITH HIS NECK

(By Our Chinese Correspondent).

THE report that Wu Pei-fu is spending his time composing poems in the flowery ancient language of the classics is causing some youthful amusement among the younger men of the Kuomintang here.

The spectacle of the former warlord, now sitting amidst ruins of Chengchow, going into an apparent dotage of senile decay, is looked upon at times as tragic. But, for the most part, it is considered a tragi-comedy, its comedic aspects strike home here, especially amongst the hosts of young and modern-minded men who make up the ranks of the lesser officialdom of the Nationalist Government and who are numerous among the Kuomintang Party workers.

One of these, whose knowledge of the classics was a foundation upon which has been superimposed an education in economics at two American universities, has done some verses by way of reply to Wu Pei-fu. They are couched in the ancient language, and their quaint phrases have connotations which the savant will recognize.

Some of these phrases means precisely what it says. They form part of the language of symbolism, which is the real significance of the classic Chinese language. Those phrases translated, the verses breathe the spirit of the new and modern age which is dawning for China under the aegis of Kuomintang domination. The verses follow:

The ancient sacred men of the North
Are no more, whose branches are withered.
In Kuangtung and out the old Yangtze
The morning Sun is shining.

Yellow Hair and a child's teeth—
Such is the ancient ideology of our enemies, who yet are our brothers.
They have known many changes of fate and grass cloth,
But ... mood of Today
is not theirs.
We are raising their end.
The future belongs to the fresh clean blood of youth.

A halo around the moon for wind, and a moistened pavement before rain.
That, for the truly wise, is a portent of what is to come.
Between us and the ancient-minded men.

There is ice and ardent charcoal.
We see on the edge of the pool
there grows the grass of spring.
The upper and the lower jaws trust each other.
We whet the weapons and feed the horses.
We fight for the thorny arbutus that has flowers.

This constitutes the reply of Youth to Age in China. It is the answer of the new movement, composed of modernity and the west, to Old China, whose decadent ideas and technic are now in the midst of their last war.

U. S. Directs Financial Boycott Against the Mexican Government

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The United States is directing a financial and economic boycott against Mexico "that is far deadlier than armed intervention," Jose Miguel Bejarano, of the Mexican chamber of commerce, New York, charged before the Senate Foreign Relations Sub-Committee today.

"American bankers are refusing to renew loans in Mexico, and, in many cases, have recalled loans," Bejarano declared. "It is the general belief in Mexico that this financial boycott is being conducted at the direction of the state department."

Wool Executives Meet In Washington; Told of New Production Study

WASHINGTON, (FP)—Feb. 17.—Nearly 30,000 wool producers who marketed about 30,000,000 pounds of wool last year were represented by the executive of 29 co-operative marketing associations which met in the capital to discuss technical problems of marketing with officials of the department of agriculture.

This conference is one of a series called by Secretary Jardine following the action of grain growers' organizations in denouncing Jardine as an enemy of the farmer. Those representative told the wool men that J. F. Walker, of the newly created division of co-operative marketing, will make a study of wool production and marketing in New Zealand and Australia, because the wool from those countries threatens to dominate the American market. It is better graded and sorted to suit requirements than is American wool generally.

Rumanian Peasants Not Eager to Have Carol Back; Party Is Split

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—The Rumanian nationalist party and the peasant party, have split over the question of the return of Prince Carol demanded by the nationalists.

Former Minister of the Interior Lupu led the secession of the former peasant party and has formed the peasants again as a separate party. Lupu is credited with having republican leanings. In an interview at Bucharest he gave the details of how Julu Maniu, head of the nationalist-peasant party, sent intermediaries back and forth between Bucharest and Paris to negotiate with Carol without the knowledge of the other members of the party. This caused he split.

Says America Spoils The Innocent Chinese

According to the Rev. Dr. Caleb R. Stetson, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, America spoils the Chinese who visit this country.

"The young men who come here from China after being taught by our missionaries there what christianity is are much disillusioned when they get to America," said Dr. Stetson. "They are disillusioned when they study in our pagan universities and when they see our pagan civilization. They find when they get here that christianity is almost a negligible quantity in our civilization. The result is that they got back to China worse than they came."

Portugese Revolution Refugees Flee to Spain

MADRID, Feb. 17.—Hundreds of Portuguese revolutionary refugees are making their way to Spain. Captain Jaime Moray, leader of the Oporto revolt, is among the numerous arrivals.

At Badajoz the Spanish police arrested Portuguese Lieutenant Colonel Alves Coope, the southern chief, who escaped from Lisbon in an automobile disguised as a peasant.

He was making his way to Madrid when it was discovered he had no passport.

Aimee Finds Venture, Or Adventure, of Hers Draws More Than Jesus

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. — The national capital had the "slow down" today on the Aimee Semple McPherson case.

It got it last night straight from Aimee herself in the big Washington auditorium where 12,000 persons fought for 7,000 seats.

"What will it be, my friends," said the evangelist, "do you want to hear the story of my life, or the story of the second coming of the Lord Jesus?"

By a vote of about 3 to 1, the audience voted for the story of Aimee's life. They were willing to wait or forego entirely the other. So Aimee told 'am.

BRANCH BANKING BILL LAYS BASIS FOR WORLD FINANCIAL ADVENTURE

WASHINGTON (FP)—Concealed in the re-chartering of the Federal Reserve Banks, which is the vital point in the McFadden banking bill driven to passage under the closure rule, is the bankers' plan for domination of world government as well as world business.

This was the warning given the senate by Senator Nye of North Dakota in protesting against passage of the measure.

Broader Governments.

He pointed out that the bill permits the Federal Reserve Banks to deal in foreign investment securities, and said this action will give the big banking combine is to "underwrite every bankrupt government in Europe" by manipulation of the securities in the world courts against political and social progress. Efforts are now being made, he said, to legalize the listing of these foreign securities on the New York stock exchange.

World Banking.

Foundations have already been laid for an international federal reserve system, Nye stated. The British have lately established in India a duplicate of the American scheme, and the international bankers are reaching out from New York and London to gather into this sweatshop of money the control of all countries in which international finance can get a hold. While America has shrunk back from the League of Nations and the World Court, it has blindly walked into the world government of finance, confirming the bankers' claims to dictate the conditions of life—the earnings, crop prices, wages and profits—of farmers, wage workers, merchants and all other classes of their subjects.

"Already," he said, "this super-finance has more than half enslaved the world."

Nye's speech was one of the series of blows dealt the Mellon re-chartering scheme, after a combination of democrats and republicans led by Glass of Virginia and McLean of Connecticut had enforced the gag rule on debate. Senator Wheeler of Montana taunted the bi-partisan alliance with handing over the nation to the bankers' mercies without giving the country notice that it was to be sold. Borah and Norris of Nebraska, Dill of Washington and Heflin of Alabama were among the opponents who spoke. Like Nye and Wheeler they asked why the senate was so eager to grant "relief" to the bankers' lobby while it had been so hostile to granting justice to the defeated farmers. They pointed out that the senate's adoption of the farm bill came only after the reactionaries felt sure the measure would be nullified in the courts if not killed by veto.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Feb. 17.—Mabel Normand is at the crisis. Suc; was the terse bulletin issued today from the bedside of the screen star in the Santa Monica Hospital where she is waging a fight against pleuro-pneumonia—aggravated by an abscess on the right lung.

INDIA'S NATIONALIST PARTY LAUDS CHINESE MOVEMENT; DENOUNCES BRITISH IMPERIALISM

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Feb. 17.—The Hindustan Gadar Party (India's national party), in a special meeting on Feb. 7, 1927, unanimously adopted the following resolution:

WHEREAS, British imperialism is the common enemy of China and India, and,

WHEREAS, the Chinese people are struggling with arms themselves from this imperialism, and,

WHEREAS, It is in the interest of humanity at large that British imperialism must be destroyed at all costs,

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that we, The Hindustan Gadar Party, sympathize with, and endorse, in its entirety, the national program adopted by the Kuo Min Tang Party of China in its national struggle for freedom from the domination of the foreign powers, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that we condemn and repudiate very strongly all and every act of British imperialism in interfering in China's internal affairs, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that we declare our disapprove of any and all acts of brutality committed by the Indians, in the British service, brought to China under brute force, to hinder in any way, shape or form the movement for the national freedom of China; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that if England declares war against China for whatsoever reasons, or under whatsoever pretext, we will oppose with all means at our disposal such a military campaign, advising our countrymen everywhere not to encourage, associate, or assist such malicious and unjust action on the part of the British Government, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that as a national government of India, we urge upon our countryman everywhere to render any assistance within their power to the people of China in their struggle for freedom, and oppose by all means the insidious activities of the British Government, which may endanger the traditional friendship between two of the greatest nations of the globe, China and India, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that we request the government and the people of China not to have any understanding whatsoever with the British Govarnment concerning India, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that all treaties and negotiations between China and India must be carried and approved of directly through the foreign office of the Hindustan Gadar Party (India's national government), and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the secretary be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to the Kuo Min Tang Party of China, to the press of India, to the press of China, and to the press of the United States of America.

New York Teachers Are Mechanized by Educational Czar

(By a Worker Correspondent)

While the factory worker has the peacemaker and the speed up to pester him, the teacher has the supervisors and principal. The busy bodies criticize petty details, insist on numerous rattings for the teacher and exams for the pupils, to make his work distasteful.

One strains throughout a term to carry an entire class over a certain amount of work. Perfect discipline which means absolute quiet, must be maintained in the class room at all times. Children must sit still, without talking all day. When standing or leaving the room, going around the building, the pupils must go according to rule. Each principal has his own pet formulos.

Clerical work is a part of our task also and must be done whenever you can find time. But you are permitted to take time to collect and record money which the children bring in hand, over to the bank.

At any time we have extra work piled up for us in the form of drives for whatever the capitalist world is interested in. In almost all the schools of the city teachers are working under these almost unbearable conditions with the additional burden of part time.

In our building we have all the nerve racking conditions described above, plus the inconvenience of an old inadequate plant. Here there is no covered yard into which the children may come in bad weather.

One of our classrooms, the one in which I work, is a passageway. No such thing as uninterrupted teaching can be done in this room. The children are distracted by doors continually banging, or someone always passing.

And lastly, there has been absolutely no provision made for the comfort or health of the teachers. After grueling work a teacher has no place in which to rest or even in which to eat her lunch in decent privacy.

Heavy Harbor Fog Causes Ferry Crash

Three hundred passengers were shaken up and thrown into a panic yesterday when the Municipal Ferryboat Gowanus, enroute to South Ferry from 39th Street, Brooklyn, in the thick fog, collided with a tug attached to a barge about 500 feet from the Brooklyn shore.

Cantonese Smash Thru Sun's Lines

Communist Party of China in New Appeal Says Revolutionary Spirit Unbreakable

SHANGHAI, Feb. 16.—The Cantonese armies by a clever outflanking movement have inflicted a disastrous defeat on the mercenary forces of Sun Chung-Fang and are now within 35 miles of Hangchow.

As previously cabled to The DAILY WORKER the recent Cantonese retreat was a tactical movement designed to draw the enemy into a trap. Sun walked into it and is now trying to walk out again as best he can.

Imperialist elements here are plainly worried over the turn events are taking. They hugged the delusion that Sun's troops were winning. Now the horrible truth is being told. Sun's troops are demoralized, Chang Tso-Lin's boasted "advance" is almost stationary, Wu-Pei-Fu is still in the questionable column and General Feng is reported to be giving his army the final "once-over" before setting it on Chang's tracks. Sun Chuan-Fang is reported rushing his troops southwards in a frantic effort to halt the victorious Cantonese.

Both Sun and the Cantonese have spurned the proposals embodied in Kellogg's note.

Communists Denounce Imperialists

PEKING, Feb. 16.—The Communist Party of China in a new appeal to the masses declares that nothing can break the revolutionary spirit of the workers, peasants and artisans.

It was the nationalist revolutionary movement that crossed swords with the forces of imperialism in Hankow, the manifesto states.

The imperialists realize this, and under the direction of Great Britain they are using armed forces for the third time against China while ordering the Northern militarists to attack the National Army.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Oswald Mosley, newly elected laborite member of the house of commons, caused an uproar in commons today when he heckled Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, on the British Government's action in sending troops to China.

"Under what treaty rights are British troops being landed on Chinese soil?" queried Mosely.

"The right of a state to protect the lives of its nationals abroad," answered Sir Austen. "This right does not depend on any treaty."

There were ministerial cheers, but Mosely continued.

"Are we to understand that British troops will be landed in violation of international law?"

"Certainly not," responded the foreign minister.

"Even when there is no treaty?" pursued Mosely.

At this juncture there was a general uproar in the tory benches and shouts of "order" and "sit down Mosely."

"If there are no treaty rights will not the landing of these troops be in violation of international law?" Mosely asked.

"No," was the curt response of Sir Austen.

Eugene Chen, Chinese nationalist foreign minister, has raised new questions concerning British troop movements and the financing of the Hankow conversion, according to reports received here today, and Owen

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

UNLESS all signs fail, Coolidge's attempt to embed his reputation in history by staging a fake reduction or arms conference is liable to be as successful as Woodrow Wilson's effort to jam the United States into the league of nations. Coolidge may emerge from the wreckage with his faculties intact, since one cannot take nothing from nothing. Wilson was one of those "do or die" fellows. "Call" is content with making recommendations and watching them being kicked about the lawn by the jolly old senators.

The French government does not hesitate to inform the president that it does not intend to be caught without a girdle when the next war breaks out. England grins and intends to advise Washington that its heart throbs with peaceful desires but what can be done when France bars the way? Britain then sets about laying the keels of a few more cruisers and dispatches another ship-load of soldiers to China. Peace under capitalism is an illusion.

All governments are working their chemical departments overtime. Poisonous gases of more deadliness are being invented. The several governments have officially frowned on the use of poison gas and vowed not to use it in the next war, they are producing it in large quantities. Yet, they raise their eyebrows in feigned horror when they read that the war department of the Soviet Union is preparing for the inevitable attack of its enemies. This may be displeasing to the pacifists who profess a great love for the Soviet Union but don't like to see good boys using their knuckles on bad boys.

STEPHEN Raditch, Croatian radical, has expressed his sympathy with China in the struggle against imperialism. He declared that Russia and China represented a mighty continental bloc against Western imperialism which controlled the seas. Yugo-Slavia would be in the West European imperialist system, said Raditch, until the Soviet system reached the Danube. This kind of language may smack of the old Pan-Slaviam, but the Soviet system is going to spread until it takes in the whole world, Yugo-Slavia included.

RICARDO Trevino, general secretary of the Mexican Confederation of Labor, is reported to have urged the Mexican workers to produce more native products and to boycott foreign products, "especially those of the United States." This is a good way of striking a blow at imperialism. The Chinese used the boycott weapon with considerable effect on the Japanese and British imperialists. But the Mexican workers should realize that whatever sacrifices they make will be unavailing for them in the long run if they leave government power in the hands of the rising Mexican bourgeoisie that Calles represents. The workers and peasants of Mexico are facing the agents of American imperialism. It will help them if they should have no illusions about the alms of the native capitalists.

Senator Defies Coolidge And Moves for Union Of Latin Americans

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16. — In the face of express presidential disapproval, Senator Shipstead, (F.L.), of Minnesota, today further pressed his proposal for a Federation of Central American Republics by offering in the senate a resolution calling upon President Coolidge to invite the five southern countries to send plenipotentiaries to Washington to arrange such a union.

President Coolidge, through his official spokesman, recently let it be known that he felt such a proposal should go through the proper diplomatic channels without publicity rather than be aired and exploited through the press and from the senate floor.

Coolidge Urged To Frame New Mexican Pact

Kellogg Unloads New Cargo Of Falsehoods

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16. — The senate foreign relations committee today favorably reported the Boran resolution requesting President Coolidge, to negotiate a treaty with Mexico extending the life of the general claims commission between the United States and Mexico.

The resolution was sponsored by Senator Borah, so the commission could be used to adjudicate the present controversies over Mexican oil and land laws.

The committee also discussed the Frazier resolution, prohibiting the president from using American troops in Mexico during the recess of congress but no action was taken.

Living up to his practice of spreading misinformation thru the state department, Secretary Kellogg today informed the senate that 70 per cent of the oil produced in Mexico have refused to subscribe to Mexico's new petroleum law. The secretary had been requested to furnish data from the department bearing on the oil situation.

This statement is at variance with the facts given out by reliable sources which show that most of the oil producers in Mexico have come under the provisions of the new law.

Miners Buried Alive Eight Days; Company Gives 2 Days Wages

HAZLETON, Pa. (FP). — Entombed eight days in a Lehigh Valley Coal Co. mine last November five union coal diggers are demanding full time pay for the time lost underground. That means 24 8-hour shifts. The company offers only two shifts' pay. District 7 officers will probably have to fight the case out before the anthracite conciliation board.

SENATOR GEORGE GIVES BANKER DAWES FARM RELIEF BILL CREDIT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16. — Vice-president Dawes was publicly credited today with having fathered the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill to which President Coolidge is opposed, on its successful journey through the senate.

Describing Dawes as the "directing genuis" behind the bill, Senator George (D) of Georgia, protested against credit being given to a "certain ex-governor of Illinois."

Earlier, Senator Caraway (D) of Arkansas, made a mock protest against President Coolidge ignoring Secretary of Agriculture Jardine on agriculture matters and criticised a recent statement by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon denouncing the bill.

Caraway said Mellon wouldn't "know a horse from a cow if tho cow was dehorned."

Credit to the Banker.

"I rise to keep the record straight on farm relief legislation," said George. "It seems to me that credit should not go to a certain ex-governor of Illinois, who is possibly a presidential candidate.

"The president of this distinguished body should be accorded full credit for enactment of the McNary-Haugen bill by this chamber."

Discredits Mellon.

Caraway said the president should have consulted Jardine instead of Mellon to get an advisory opinion on how

Coal Operators Propose Taft Set Wages

Lewis' Program Actually an Efficiency Plan

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 16.—Both the miners' committee for negotiation of a wage scale in the central competitive coal mining field, and the operators submitted plans today. The essential difference is that the operators' program provides for an openly recognized arbitration board, to prune wages to the point where coal mining requires no more of a payroll in the union fields than in the unorganized cheap labor districts of the south.

Supreme Court To Control.

This board would have vast powers, and would be controlled by its neutral members, appointed by the chief justice of the supreme court of the United States, if not agreed upon by the two parties.

The union program, as presented by International President John L. Lewis, allows for the creation of a board of technical advisers, counsel, rate experts, and so on, to be selected by the present conference, and to meet on all questions of dispute over the application of the contract.

Lewis, in answer to questions during the discussion of his proposition, said that wages would not go down during the two years of the conference. Some of the operators have stated that the offer to appoint such a council is the first step of retreat on the part of the miners, and that this council, could, in fact, reduce the pay-roll expenses, either by forcing the miner to do more dead work without pay, or by actually cutting wages, in spite of Lewis' statement.

If adopted, the miners' union plan would require both sides to "recognize the inadequacy of wage reductions to effect commercial security and stability in the bituminous industry."

Lewis also demanded a readjustment of freight rates to wipe out alleged discriminatory schedules given the non-union fields.

Lewis attacked the Interstate Commerce Commission, unfair freight rates, he said, are largely responsible for the demoralized conditions in union fields.

He declared that the republican national committeemen from West Vir-

STATUS OF CHINA IS LOWER THAN A CROWN COLONY

Peking Minister Says Chains Will Be Broken

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16. — China is governed "more autocratically" by the powers than are the subjects of a British crown colony, said Dr. Sze, Peking minister speaking at a forum of the National Popular Government League, adding:

"How would you Americans feel if the foreign nations should impose upon you a fiscal regime, inferior even to Britain's dominions, depriving you of the right of raising revenue according to your own judgment and needs?

"How would you feel if the various foreign settlements in your big cities, for example, say Chinatown, should claim an almost independent status, with their own laws, courts and police?

"The world may rest assured that the Chinese nation will not rest until her independence and territorial and administrative integrity become realities. She will not be satisfied with mere assurance in the form of high sounding and pious declarations as the powers have been doing since the beginning of this century.

The Russian Soviet government is regarded with favor in China because it has lived up to its promises," said Dr. Sze.

California Edison Co. Construction Workers Buried in Avalanche

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16.—One man is known to have been killed and many others are believed to have met the same fate when a tremendous snow-slide wiped out an outlying construction camp on the Deep Creek tunnel project of the Southern California Edison Company, last night according to belated advices received at company headquarters here late today.

William Lukes met death in the slide. There were 250 other workers in the camp, which is approximately 75 miles northeast of Fresno and 7,000 feet up in the Sierra Nevada mountains. Relief parties have been sent to the scene from the main camp at Deep Creek.

Ford's Hatred of Usurers Hurts Couzens

Banker Choate Would Not Handle Henry's Stock

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Wall Street's tireless buying and selling, its liking for prices stamped on a chattering ticket tape, and its panicky fear of "radicalism", rose up today to plague the former partners of Henry Ford.

These things, thrown into the conflict with the "anti-Wall Street" measures Ford used to keep bankers and brokers at arm's length, forced down the value of Ford Motor Company stock, according to Arthur O. Choate, New York banker.

To Get Back Tax.

Choate was a witness for the government in its fight to collect $30,000,000 more income taxes from Senator James Couzens of Michigan and other former Ford stockholders. He testified that Wall Street's alarm over the election of Woodrow Wilson in 1912, and the drastic restrictions Ford threw about the sale of his company's stock to "outsiders," held the value of this stock down to $4,000 a share in 1913.

To a broker buying the stock for resale to the public the value was decreased still more, to a "perfectly ridiculous figure," Choate said.

Couldn't Sell 'em.

"Absolutely unmarketable," was his summary of the effect of the Ford restrictions.

"I don't think the stock could have been listed on any stock exchange, with the restrictions," Choate continued. He added that only under extraordinary conditions would he have accepted it as collateral for a loan.

The restrictions were written into the Ford Company's by-laws. They prohibited any stockholder from selling to an "outsider" until tho other stockholders had been given the opportunity, first collectively and then individually, to "match" or better the offer. They would have applied both to purchase by a broker, and to repurchase by an investor, according to the government's view.

NO DISARMAMENT FOR LONG TIME, NOW THE SONG OF THE DIPLOMATS

ROME, Feb. 16.—Italy's formal reply to President Coolidge's disarmament proposals, which will be a refusal, will be handed to the American ambassador shortly, according to the Stefani semi-official agency.

Italy refuses to bind herself to any reduction of lesser naval craft, and intimates that the submarine will be the great weapon with which Italy will oppose "superior armament"—of what country not stated but plainly either England or France.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—France's note of rejection was being studied today. It seemed to afford but little hope of any concrete success in the near future toward further naval disarmament. Indeed, Secretary of State Kellogg characterized it indirectly as "striking a serious blow at the whole cause of disarmament." Future moves on the part of this government, if any, will, however, await the receipt of replies from Great Britain, Italy and Japan, the other powers addressed last week.

No Hope In League.

In no official quarter in Washington is there any hope of the Geneva conference accomplishing anything real in the way of disarmament, despite the expression of lofty hopes in the French note that the Geneva gathering is working toward the same goal as President Coolidge proposed.

The British government at Washington in 1921-22 refused to join with the United States and Japan in applying the 5-5-3 ratio to auxiliary

New York workers will pay 25 to 100 per cent more rent after June 1.

This was the threat today in dispatches from Albany where reactionary republican state legislators are threatening to allow the rent laws to die when they terminate this summer.

Assemblyman Edmund B. Jenks, in charge of the rent laws, declared "the emergency is over," although Health Commissioner Harris drew an appalling picture of the danger of epidemics in the slum areas of New York.

The city was drawn into two opposing camps today on what is probably the most vital immediate issue before the metropolitan public. On one side were:

4,000,000 workers and their families.
Social workers.
Workers' Health Bureau.
Public health authorities headed by Commissioner Harris.
Fair Play Rent Association and scores of tenants' associations.
Consumers' League.
Trade unions and workers' clubs.

On the other side were:
Real estate agents.
Property owners.
Professional patriots.
Reactionaries generally who regard the rent law as "socialism."

In hearings just concluded before the state board of housing, meeting at the city hall this week, scores of workers and renters' representatives told just how one half of New York lives.

"Dozens of families in north Harlem are living in coal bins and cellars and paying $25 and $30 a month for such quarters," declared James Middleton of the North Harlem Community Council.

Walter Ife, of the Fair Play Rent Association, warned the rent situation today is just as critical for 90 per cent of the workers as it was six years ago when the rent laws were enacted.

Dr. Harris told of reports made to him by public nurses.

They visited 3,384 apartments in the section comprising Elizabeth street, Cleveland Park, Center Court, Canal street, Grand street, Mulberry and Hester streets. Of these apartments 3,313 were occupied. In 141 apartments the families both lived and carried on business on the premises. Thirty-four of these families lived in basements, "not at all in accordance with what we consider our health ideals," said Dr. Harris.

"We made a study of occupancy of bedrooms, which is very important, because if bedrooms are overcrowded, communicable diseases are bound to spread in normal times, and should an epidemic occur, we would have a situation that might mean disaster.

"We found there were 1,059 bedrooms in which two children slept, exclusive of the adults that used the same bedroom—I am thinking only in terms of children, who are the inflammable material, susceptible to disease.

"There were sixty-seven bedrooms in which, aside from adult occupancy, a single child was housed for sleeping purposes.

"There were 458 bedroms where three children slept in addition to

U. S. MARINES TO RULE NICARAGUA, SAYS COOLIDGE

Will Continue to Wield Big Stick Over Her

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The American government tonight abandoned any hope for peace in Nicaragua, and will continue to police the republic with United States marines, it was officially learned at the state department.

The navy transport Henderson was ordered to leave Philadelphia and pick up 800 apprentice seamen at Newport, R. I., to stop at Hampton Roads for 600 marines and proceed for southern waters. The seamen are to be dropped at Guantanamo, for training with the U. S. fleet there, and as many more trained sailors or marines taken on board. They will proceed direct to Nicaragua.

To Save Diaz's Neck.

The battle at Matagalpa, in which the Diaz forces were routed and the Sacasa forces were accused of firing upon the United States charge d'affaires prompted this action, it was learned.

President Coolidge today expressed the hope that Dr. Juan Sacasa, leader of the rebels and Adolfo Diaz of the constitutional government would come to terms.

Admiral Julian Latimer, commander of the American forces in Nicaragua, conferred with Dr. Sacasa early today. It was learned that he left there to make the long passage through the Panama Canal and back to the west coast to confer with Diaz. No one would say whether his mission proved profitable.

SODUS, N. Y., Feb. 16.—The authorities here were today continuing their investigation into the deaths of J. Rosco Griffin, 35, and William Smith, a 15-year-old Sodus school boy whose bodies, both with bullet wounds, were found under an over-turned car.

British Official in Firing Squad Threat To War Opponents

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Sir Mitchell-Thomson, chief civil commissioner during the general strike, now postmaster general, threatened to use firing squads on Communists and left wing socialists and radical trade unionists who were opposing the dispatch of troops for war against the nationalist government of China.

"If they continue to oppose the steps being taken by his majesty's government to protect British property in China, they will end up and very properly, too, against a wall with a firing party in front of them. I think it is as well that they should know this right from the start."

Sir William Joynson-Hicks stated in the house of commons that the government was trying to find out the party responsible for publishing the leaflets distributed among the troops urging them to refuse to fight against the Chinese.

MURDERS VIE WITH ROBBERY IN WILD SPREE

Crime Breaks Out Like Pox on N. Y.'s Face

Manhattan's tabloids shrieked with delight today as a wierd assortment of crimes joined to jazz up headlines, languishing since the lid was put back on the Peaches-Browning mess.

1. Walter Ward, scion of the bread trust family, was facing suit here in a $35,000 action by parents of Clarence Peters. The young millionaire killed Peters, a seller, "illegally and unlawfully", to quote the quaint legal phrases and not because he was being blackmailed. The unlawful stuff won Ward's freedom at the murder trial several years ago.

Peters' parents claim damages because their son was a source of income. Mystery witnesses to prove Ward committed the murder in cold blood were being primed for the case.

2. Seak "Crime Teacher".

2. Police dragged forth a "crime teacher" theory to account for the murder committed by Michael Ponkrushaw, 11. He shot and killed a Jamaica storekeeper. The boy is headed straight for the gallows if the cops can uncover a suspected underworld character whom he is supposed to be shielding. "Let them kill him, I don't care", asserted his father.

Young Michael, whose ideas came from the movies, he claims, has been implicated in other local robberies.

3. Harold F. Webster, who killed his mother-in-law, was "torn all night by sobs" after his wife had testified she hated him. Webster used a hammer.

4. The Tombs held John Sweeney for a mail truck holdup in Elizabeth, N. J., in which a cop and the driver were killed by machine gun bullets. $300,000 was stolen.

5. Frances-or-Carmen, Rudolph, who killed the physician who he said, had killed his son, was charged with murder in the first degree. He maintained stoutly that he had killed Dr. Pendola, "but not with a knife."

6. Also Found Guilty.

Anthony Alloy was found guilty in the Brooklyn County Court, charged with arson in the first degree as a second offender. This verdict means at least forty years imprisonment.

After the verdict Chief Fire Marshal Thomas F. Brophy told the jury that Alloy was one of the most dangerous criminals in the country."

A lad of twenty climbed up the fire escape wall of the apartment house at 1464 Forth Avenue, entered the bedroom apartment of Thomas M. Baine through an open window and rifled the bed rooms of jewelry worth more than $10,000.

Old Taxi Corporation Involuntary Bankrupt; Rivals Will Benefit

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the Quaker City Cab company of Philadelphia recently by creditors of the company, Chas. Blaikie, of Philadelphia, was named temporary receiver for the company with a bond of $25,000.

The Quaker City company was one of the oldest taxi corporations in the city, of Philadelphia. It had gradually declined in power for a number of years but after the Yellow Taxi was purchased by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company (the Mitten interests) new financial backing was secured by Quaker City and it was announced that a determined struggle would be made to dominate the bus and taxi business in and around Philadelphia.

Announcement of that the Quaker City company had been petitioned into bankruptcy would appear to leave the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. in full control of the car and bus business of Philadelphia.

Coal Barons Place Hope in Bill Taft

ginia Kentucky and Tennessee were in Washington circulating reports that if President Coolidge names to the commission another was from Pennsylvania he won't get republican delegations from those states if he runs for a third term.

Lewis said the miners' settlement plan would result in "cooperation upon an intelligent basis and it would give wide authority to the conference."

Official Hope to Dicker.

There is a growing feeling of optimism in the ranks of the miners' union committee that a general breakdown in the industry can be avoided by signing agreements with separate districts or with individual coal companies. Union officials declared that if some of the operators sign for a renewal of the present contract others can be stamped into line before March 31. Even if an agreement is reached there may be a temporary suspension in April to allow American industry to absorb the surplus stocks on hand, variously estimated between 60,000,000 and 85,000,000 tons or at least a two months' supply.

Coal Was Ammunition

These coal supplies were accumulated for the purpose of breaking the strike expected on April 1, an agreement is not made before that date. The rank and file of the miners and non-union also say such closing down of mines for the purpose of saving the operators their campaign expenses against unionism, be allowing them to use up the coal reserves they have accumulated as a stand against their employees.

Operators Propose Court.

William G. Perry Illinois operator, offered as an amendment to Lewis' plan, the operators' proposal for a commission of four miners, four operators and three neutral mediators to settle any disputes that were not solved by the Joint Wage Conference. The central mediators would be named by the chief justice of the supreme court of the miners and operators could not agree upon them.

The operators' plan, as set forth by Perry, and more especially by William H. Hawkins, Secretary of the Eastern Coke Operators' Association provided for wages to be settled by a commission provided for the agreement by the conference on a wage scale that would be competitive with that of the non-union districts, and for the commission, as outlined above, to remain in session and to

1. Determine a competitive wage scale for the central competitive field.

2. To readjust such scale from time to time in order to maintain competitive condition.

3. To have final jurisdiction in all grievances upon which I cant the several districts.

Civil Liberties Wires Protest When Official Stops Debate Over God

Governor Howard M. Gore of West Virginia was urged yesterday by the American Civil Liberties Union in a telegram from Forest Bailey, a director, to restore the rights of free speech in Huntington and to rebuke Mayor W. E. Neal for banning a religious debate from the Huntington city auditorium, and intimidating other hall owners.

At the same time Mr. Bailey wired to Mayor Neal protesting against your high-handed procedure" in violation of "fundamental American rights of free speech." He declared he would "seek other means of redress through executive channels is not obtained."

In a third telegram, Mr. Bailey urged the barred debaters, Dr. T. T. Martin, field secretary of the Anti-Evolution League of America, and Charles Smith, president of the Negro Association for the Advancement of Atheism, to join the union in staging a free-speech test in Huntington. The speakers are now in Indianapolis, Ind., where they are to debate on the subject tabooed by the

OFFICE UNION BANS FREIHEIT OFFICE STAFF

Officials Refuse to Organize Big News Shop

Freiheit office workers cannot join the Office Workers' Union. This is the edict of Ernest Bohm, secretary of the union, revealed today in the publication of correspondence between the workers in the Freiheit office and the union.

Freiheit is the only Jewish workers' daily newspaper in New York City, and that is regarded the real reason behind the action of the officialdom of the union, which takes orders attestively from Hudson Fruyne, local representative of the A. F. of L. hierarchy and Matthew Woll, leader of the reactionary union-disrupters in the A. F. of L.

The relationship between Freiheit and the Office Workers' Union is an interesting one. The office staff was the only unorganized section of the entire Freiheit staff until November 1925. When workers asked the Freiheit manager why the office workers were not in the union, he answered that the union never came to organize them. The manager immediately communicated with the union.

On March 23, 1926 the manager wrote to the union informing them of the actual conditions. The secretary came and took a list of the workers and their wages. But the office remained unorganized. On May 19 the manager wrote again. The secretary came again and asked for one more week's time. But the week turned into a month, and the office remained non-union.

In answer to the above, the president of the union offered the Freiheit staff the right to pay dues to the union without the elementary privileges of coming to union meetings and participating in the union activities. Needless to say such proposition was voted down by the staff. It was considered an insult.

But this did not close the matter. The office staff remained unorganized until two ambitious union members came to the Freiheit and stated that they would use their influence in convincing the president of the union that the office staff should be organized. They were given the names and salaries of each member.

Before the staff was unionized the secretary stated that he was in favor of organizing the Freiheit but the president of the union and his followers were not.

The secretary's position seemed to have won. The ambitious girls' influence was convincing. The Freiheit office staff was initiated on the union floor, without a single objection, at the November, 1926 meeting.

"Hooray", the Freiheit staff felt like telling the world. But they remembered Dr. Pledge into the "young office workers" ear they would give no publicity to the fact that the Freiheit was unionized. And they kept their promise. No publicity—and all was well until—

On January 18, 1927 each office worker received a registered-receipt-requiring letter with a check covering initiation fees and dues. The letter read:

"Greeting: Since your appearance before the membership committee of this union, additional information has been brought for the committee showing that contrary to the impression created there, you are opposed to the principles of trade unionism as sanctioned by the American Federation of Labor. We therefore return the money you have paid on account of initiation fees and dues, enclosed. Very truly yours, (signed) Ernest Bohm, secretary".

Mexico Loans Money To Progressive Latin American Republics

GUATEMALA CITY, Feb. 16.—Two million pesos in Mexican gold —a million and a half of which is in Guatemala and a half million as a loan to Juan Sacasa, liberal president of Nicaragua—has been received by Alfonso Cortes, Mexican ambassador here, according to reports in circulation here.

The Honduras revolutionary general Farfan is understood to be in Mexico and it is believed that he will leave shortly for the East Coast of Honduras with an insurrectionary force.

Dawes Gets Credit For Farm Relief Bill

the McNary-Haugen bill improved the cotton situation, prices having increased as soon as the senate passed the farm bill. Last week, he said, 193,000 bales of spot cotton were bought as compared with the 60,000 bales of spot cotton bought the corresponding week of last year.

In the house the bill was slowly being steam-rollered through, today.

The announcement by Representative Aswell, democrat, of Louisiana, at the close of yesterday's session that he will move for the substitution of his own farm measure for the McNary-Haugen bill is considered a challenge, which probably will result in a real test of strength in the voting on the motion. If his motion is lost then another substitution—that of the Curtis-Crisp bill—will be attempted.

To Vote Friday.

After consideration of amendments to the bill its supporters expect to have the final vote on the measure by Friday or Saturday, and if the legislation is passed in that form approved by the senate, as no conference is necessitated, it will be sent to the White House immediately.

The belief that President Coolidge will veto the bill was voiced at yesterday's session by several representatives. Many members said they would vote for the bill because they think the president will veto it. Representative O'Connor, democrat, of Louisiana, said: "Others are pinning to vote for it, although they openly admit it is unconstitutional."

Cotton Mills Object.

An announcement by the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers that the governors of five New England states had urged the twenty-eight representatives of their five states to vote against the bill came as an eleventh hour assault on the legislation. The association is sponsoring a drive against the measure.

Now that the branch banking bill has passed the senate, the struggle back of the farm bill shows some indications of a split. It was a log rolling bargain between the eastern bankers' senators and the western farm senators that passed both bills through the senate.

Since that time Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, a banker, has delivered his attack on the McNary-Haugen bill, and the insurgents have become frightened of the branch banking act. The passage of the "farm relief" bill in the house, is not therefore, the cut and dried affair it was in the senate. But its proponents feel sure of putting it across.

Must Kid John Farmer.

The bill is demanded by political exigencies. There is widespread misery among the farmers, and though the bill does not, in the opinion of those who have studied it, do much for the farmer, it may make some farmers think their representatives are doing something for them, which is all that politics requires.

Necessary Purification.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Purifying the air of congressional chambers after long debate is expensive business.

President Coolidge today submitted a budget request for a $245,000 appropriation for a new ventilation system for the house chamber.

He recently made a similar request for the senate.

Rep. Abernathy (D) of North Carolina, declared that foul air in the house chamber probably had been responsible for the deaths of several members.

West Virginia mayor, "Is There a God in the Universe?"

Mayor Neal, replying to the union's first protest on February 7 to his ban, declared that he had "filed the telegram in the waste basket," according to the Huntington Daily Advertiser. Both Dr. Martin, a fundamentalist, and Mr. Smith, an atheist, were charged by Mayor Neal and Colonel E. H. Weldon with being members of the Civil Libertias Union. Mr. Bailey in his telegram stated that neither is a member. The union, he added, is concerned solely with the constitutional right of free speech and is not interested in supporting either atheism or religious orthodoxy.

Bankers are Victors in Congress Thru Maneuver With the Fake Farm Bloc

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

It is now being called the farm-bank bloc. This is merely a confession of the existence of a condition that has prevailed in the legislative halls of congress ever since the present session convened.

The insidious forces that were rallied in support of the McNary-Haugen bill have been repeatedly exposed in these columns. It has been shown that the fact that Frank O. Lowden, multi-millionaire and former governor of Illinois, and Vice-president Charles W. Dawes, Chicago banker, supported this so-called "relief" measure, boded no good for the workers.

It was the organization of the farm-bank bloc that made it possible for the McNary-Haugen bill to pass the senate, with clear sailing at present in the house of representatives.

It has also made possible the passage thru the senate of the conference report on the McFadden-Pepper banking bill, which develops the power of the great financial institutions thruout the farm areas, thru establishing a system of branch banks, wiping out the small privately-owned banks.

Thus the banker crowd, using the McNary-Haugen bill as bait, won the support it desired for the passage of its own legislation to strengthen its own position to exploit the farmers.

None other than Senator Nye, of North Dakota, now admits that the attack made on this parliamentary tactic of combining two bills to bring no good results to the dirt farmers is perfectly correct.

At this late day, Senator Nye now proclaims rather loudly:

"I resent the false information the friends of honest farm legislation entered into a deal with the banking interests to secure preferred places for the two bills. I resent it because I had no hand in such a deal. As one who believes in the intent of the international banker to crush and pauperize the American farmer and the farmers of the world I could not have brought myself to help such a deal.

"Frankly, I should prefer to see the McNary-Haugen bill defeated than to see this banking bill made into law. Every advantage gained under the McNary-Haugen bill will be offset many times by the McFadden banking bill, which extends the privileges of the Federal Reserve System and condones its damnable activities of 1920 and 1921.

"Where restrictions should now be written on the system, we find, instead, that congress is extending an invitation to the system to engage in another murderous program, at will, with the assurance that it will not be seriously molested for 60 years".

That sounds like an impetuous child bawling its eyes out after it has spilled its bread and milk and crashed the bowl. Frazier, LaFollette and Wheeler are found weeping along with Nye.

But it is exactly this outfit, the so-called LaFollette progressives, who made the farm-bloc deal possible. They have been heralding the McNary-Haugen Relief bill, sponsored by the reactionary American Farm Labor Bureau, and supported by Dawes and Lowden, as a step forward. They have found it to be instead one of the biggest steps backward in the history of the agrarian struggle.

At no time did these political worthies ever consider developing an independent viewpoint toward the question of farm relief. It was, of course, in keeping with their own class position, supporting the middle class of rich farmers, small bankers, landlords and little business, whom they hoped would be benefitted by the McNary-Haugen measure. They have in fact, played into the hands of the agricultural capitalists, who are the actual winners.

The support of big business by these muddle class politicians has not been passive. They have actually fought, openly and bitterly, against the workers and farmers themselves developing independent political action on their own behalf. In recent years the whole struggle of the LaFollette movement has been to crush the rising farmer-labor party movement.

Frazier and Nye, of North Dakota, have been among the worst offenders. When he could have devoted his time making a real fight for the wheat growers of his state, Nye was busy seeking political favors, in the shape of federal patronage, from Coolidge at the White House.

Some of the rotten fruits of the sacrifices of the LaFollette progressives to the republican "old guard" are just beginning to give off repulsive odors. The workers and farmers, the victims, will learn the real nature of the mess prepared for them by so-called "insurgents" in the old parties. Capitalism is already in legislative victories in congress, but these victories will drive workers and farmers into a class Labor Party of their own in the struggle for the overthrow of capitalism.

COOLIDGE SIGNS LENROOT TABER PURE MILK BILL

Although Harris Claims It Means Impure Milk

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Over the protest of New York City, President Coolidge today signed the Lenroot-Taber Canadian milk inspection bill. The measure will permit Canadian milk producers who ship their products into the United States, to conform to the inspection standards similar to those required of American dairies.

President Coolidge signed the bill after long conference at the White House with Senator Lenroot, who urged its enactment as a vital health measure. Senator Lenroot denounced New York's opposition as "unsound and inaccurate."

"The cause of Health Commissioner Harris' opposition is difficult to estimate," said Senator Lenroot, "but the Canadian milk which comes into the United States is controlled by a few influential milk contractors, and milk contractors in the past have evidently been influential with Tammany Hall."

The circumstances referred to by Lenroot are probably the charges made during the last gubernatorial campaign, when various parties testified that the milk supply of New York City was badly inspected, and that dirty milk was sold by connivance of grafting officials.

Lenroot in his arguments with Coolidge is said to have stated that New York does not need even half the 120,000 quarts of Canadian milk which Commissioner Harris declared was necessary to the proper upbringing of its children.

Women of Plentywood Put Crop Grabber On Run; Need His Office

PLENTYWOOD, Montana, Feb. 16.—A masterpiece of direct action was accomplished by the irate citizens of Sheridan county when women of Plentywood moved the office fixtures of the McKee and Langer Land company, characterized as "crop grabbing organization," into the street, and took possession.

The office is in the public library, and the women demand that it be converted into a public rest room for women coming in from the country. The Board of County Commissioners having refused to act on their request, the women tried the more direct methods, and announced that they would occupy the room until the Board came to a decision.

Lease Expired.

The lease of the ousted firm had expired the day previous to the eviction, and although a month's advance rent had been paid to the county treasurer, a renewal of the lease had been refused by the county commissioners. The woman therefore considered that they had a right to the room as the land company, and moved the fixtures into the street.

Hold the Fort.

After placarding the place as a "Public Rest Room," the women proceeded to occupy it in shifts day and night, having moved in chairs and couches as furnishings for the "Rest Room."

The women of the town had desired this office for a rest room for some time, and circulated petitions in the county for the removal of McKee and Langer because of their notorious crop-grabbing activities. In spite of the large number of signatures to the petition, the county commissioners had refused to take action.

A special meeting of the Board of County Commissioners has been called to consider the situation.

SENATE PASSES MORGAN'S BANK BILL; 71 TO 17

Now Up to Coolidge, Is Expected to Sign

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The McFadden-Pepper banking bill, extending the powers of the whole federal banking system, was enacted into law this afternoon when the senate adopted the final conference report.

The bill now goes to President Coolidge for his signature. While Coolidge has not expressed himself it is understood that he will sign it.

Farmenent Federal Reserve.

The bill is one of the most far-reaching of any in recent years. It continues the federal reserve system indefinitely, and strengthens the banks in it by permitting them to run their branches as part of the reserve system and to establish new branches wherever state laws permit state banks to have such branches.

Centralizes Banking.

The general effect is to tremendously centralize the business of banking, and to increase the importance of the federal reserve banks, most directly dominated by Wall Street's big bankers, and able to increase or curtail the quantity of currency in circulation. Before the branch banks of the financial machine, the "independent" bankers will be powerless.

Insurgents Oppose.

The vote was 71 to 17.

Those opposing were: republicans —Deneen, Ill., Frazier, N. D.; Gooding, Idaho; Powell, Neb.; La-Follette, Wis.; McMaster, S. D.; Norris, Neb.; Nye, N. D. and Shipstead, Iowa, Democrats—Dill, Ashington, Heflin, Ala.; Steck, Iowa; Trammel, Fla.; Walsh, Montana, Wheeler, Montana.

Senator Borah, (R.) of Idaho, was paired against the measure.

No Disarmament Now, Song of the Diplomats

ships unless France was willing to join in "outlawing" the submarine as a weapon of war. The French retorted that the submarine was France's defense against superior naval power, meaning England, and the proposition speedily fell through. There is no reason to believe the British government has changed its position since the Washington conference. On the contrary, it is considered more likely the British viewpoint is more securely established.

Now For Cruisers!

The collapse of President Coolidge's disarmament proposals leaves his position a delegate one in the matter of the future of the American navy.

Coolidge, while shoffing at "reduction of armaments" and laying the basis for militarist campaigners to claim that this is the most unprotected country in the world, has committed himself against the three cruiser program now being agitated in congress. It has been freely insinuated that the made the disarmament proposal knowing beforehand that it would fail to get an excuse for changing his policy on cruisers.

Now that the disarmament failure has burst, at least for the time being it is expected that the agitation for cruiser construction in congress will increase enormously. The Americans navy admittedly is sadly deficient in cruisers. Whether Mr. Coolidge will now change his position toward the cruisers remains to be seen.

Panama American Ship Breaks Down; One of Many Such Accidents

The Panama American steamer Finland is back in port with a broken propeller shaft. Passengers are being put up in hotels, or are scattering about the country. The ship is being prepared for damages caused by loss of time.

The Panama American line is only about two and a half years old, but during its short career, its vessels have had five serious accidents and many lesser ones. A bursting steam pipe some time ago killed a couple of men. Failure of the company to keep the equipment in proper shape is the cause.

WORLD BOYCOTT AGAINST BRITAIN

Congress of Oppressed Plans China's Defense

BRUSSELS, Feb. 16.—Demanding that the civilized nations of the world boycott Great Britain in event of a war in China and that a commission composed of George Bernard Shaw, Henri Barbusse and Fritjoff Nansen investigate conditions in the Dutch East Indies, the German Communist Deputy Munyenburg startled today's session of the Congress for Oppressed Peoples.

A resolution passed by the executive committee to organize a world league to fight imperialism and to aid nations struggling for national independence was another feature of the session.

Horrors of Dutch Rule.

Describing the horrible conditions in the Dutch East Indies which have given birth to the recent revolts described as "bolshevist" in press dispatches, Deputi Munyenburg made a plea for the appointment of a committee which wold investigate and expose the savage exploitation of natives by foreign capitalists.

Further evidence that the world faces a "white" peril rather than a "yellow peril"—if peril is to be described in racial rather than in social terms—was presented by Theodore Lessing, the German philosopher, who declared that the expansion of the white race was far more noticeable than that of the yellow. "The tremendous growth of the white race in a hundred years from one sixth to one third of the population of the earth emphasizes that danger," he declared.

Lessing warned his audience that only liberty for all people and social quality could save the world from the white peril.

Africa for Africans.

The demand of exploited peoples of Africa for liberty was voiced by the Senegalese Nego Senghor, a former letter carrier ari now a vigorous agitator for a league of black people against the French and the British.

"Africa for the Africans," was the slogan that he raised in his plea for the liberation of the black race. He described the exploitation of the African Negro by the British, French and Belgians and contrasted his economic condition with that of the American Negro.

POLICE IN LATVIA LARGER THAN STATE'S MILITARY FORCE

MOSCOW, Feb. 16.—A prominent leader of the working class in Latvia made the following statements concerning the fascist danger there:

The unsuccessful fascist putsch in Wolmar proves that there is an immediate fascist danger in Latvia. The fascists are supported by the rich peasants, the bankers and the house-Property owners.

The fascists are well organized. The higher commands in the army are on their side, particularly the supreme commander Radsin.

The chief organizations of the fascists are: The national club, Tewsas Sargi and the Aisargi (self-defense). The latter is a military organization of rich peasants and has 30,000 members, that is to say it is larger than the army. One of the leaders of the fascists is the ex-president Ulmanis, the leader of the rich peasants' party and of the "Aisargi," a man who is a consistent visitor at the British embassy.

At the beginning of January the left-wing trade unions made the following proposals to the Central Bureau of the unions and to the social democrats for the purpose of fighting fascism: The liquidation of the three fascist organizations and the closing down of the newspaper "Tscshiz," the abolition of all laws dating from the period of Kerensky and the Tsar; a general amnesty for all political prisoners; complete freedom of the press and meetings; no further persecutions of left-wing workers; the dismissal of the reactionary supreme commander of the army and the democratization of the army and the police.

The Central Bureau of the unions made no answer to these proposals and the social democratic newspaper made ironical comments upon them. A successful fascism and the prevention of a coup d'état on Lithuanian lines is only possible if the left government with the assistance of the social democracy bases itself on the broad masses of the workers and the poorer peasants. The social democrats and the Second International have the opportunity to show if they are really prepared to join hands with the workers to defeat fascism.

PAPADOS SELLS POWER MONOPOLY FOR ALL GREECE

Communists Lead Bitter Opposition

By B. G. KALFIDES.

A power contract signed by General Pangalos, former dictator of Greece and head of the Traction company of England, was ratified by the Greek parliament last week after a fight that nearly caused the fall of the present coalition government of the country, and over the united protests of the working class, which was led in demonstrations against it by the Communist Party.

The contract, which was the object of the special solicitation of Secretary of the Treasury Winston Churchill, who, according to report, came to Greece purposely to urge that the contract be ratified as it stood, if Greece were to receive further loans from England, gives away enormous concessions to the British.

Political Trickery.

Its ratification was effected, in spite of powerful opposition, by a political trick. While the secretary of transportation Mr. Metaxas, deplored its conditions, he insisted that the signature of the state must not be dishonored "even though this contract makes Greece a slave to the foreign capital."

In the meantime, frightened by the determined opposition of the workers under Communist leadership, the monarchist liberals and the Venizelists united in making the matter into a "vote of confidence," threatening new elections if the members refused to vote for ratification.

Give Monopoly.

The provisions of the contract give the company the monopoly of electrical and traction in the largest centers of Greece for a period of sixty years. The company is unrestricted in the matter of fixing prices, and can set any figure necessary to pay rich dividends to the holders of Quai d' Orsay of London.

The traction company is relieved of all taxes and duties on importing raw material or machinery, cars, and rolling stock in general. It is further relieved of income taxes, real estate taxes, occupational taxes, taxes on dividends and bonds, and so forth. Another article of the contract gives the company the right to forcibly appropriate any piece of land it deems necessary for transportation purposes. Thus the private property rights of the Greek citizens, supposed to be inalienable, are swept aside for a foreign concession.

When the treaty came up for ratification in the Greek parliament workers organized a huge demonstration to protest against it, but were dispersed by soldiers. A general strike, which included the anti-privilege tramway motormen, and other crafts was the next demonstration, and all classes united against the policy of the government.

The government finally forced ratification by the "vote of confidence" trick, and on February 11 the parliament voted for the contract by a majority of 25, with 13 refusing to vote, and 100 members, who feared to express an opinion, absent from the parliament.

Communists Led.

The most militant fighters in the parliament against ratification were the Communist members, and the fight that they made resulted in great prestige for the Communist party among the workers of Greece. "Rizospastis," the official organ of the party, played an influential part in mobilizing the workers.

The Greek section of the Workers' Party of America sent the following cablegram to the president of the Greek parliament, T. Sofoulis, to the Greek Communist fraction of the parliament, and to "Rizospastis"; "Greek workers of America protest vigorously against ratification of Power and Traction contract which enslaves and lowers Greece to the status of a colony of England."

"Captive" Bows to Vice Crusaders

Leaders of the anti-vice crusade scored a rather hollow victory yesterday afternoon when "The Captive," one of the plays raided last week was withdrawn. Negotiations were already under way by which "The Captive" will be put on by another producer after a very short suspension.

The withdrawal of the play by the management was promised when District Attorney Banton agreed to drop the prosecution of the members of the cast, arrested on the charge of "corrupting morals" and "maintaining a public nuisance." Similar action may be taken by the management of "Sex" and "The Virgin Man," it was rumored.

That the production of "The Captive" may be taken over by new producers, perhaps by Horace Liveright, was intimated by the Actors' Equity Association yesterday.

PROGRESSIVES PLEA TO RETAIN DON WISHNEVSKY

Local 38 Administration Has Fine Record

A statement has been made by progressive members of Local 38, International Garment Workers, of New York City, on the important election coming up February 18, at Bryant Hall, between noon and 7:30 P. M., as to the two tickets in the field for secretary-organizer, Italian business agent, executive board members, etc.

The two groups contesting for office are headed by Don Wishnevsky, the present secretary-organizer and B. Drasin, a renegade, who was ousted last election.

Wishnevsky's Fine Record.

The present administration, made up of Wishnevsky and associates, has a fine record of real trade union activity. It is these lefts which brought the two locals of ladies' tailors and dressmakers to amalgamate into one local.

It is this administration which conducted the most aggressive organization drive amongst the dressmakers, which resulted in an increase of 300 members.

It is this administration that fought for the tailors' demands at a time when there were no funds in the International and even all treasury in the local itself and in a short strike, the 40-hour as well as wage increases.

It is this administration that established the unions standing amongst the great number of unorganized workers, the custom dressmakers by an aggressive organization campaign and forced a substantial reduction of hours and increase of wages even in the unorganized shops.

This was accomplished despite the obstruction, sabotage and demoralizing activities of the group that is led by Drasin in this election. The many difficulties as a result of this sabotage rent the union additional expenses and some smaller shop strikes could not be conducted with the full strength that the union could otherwise muster.

Drasin's Treachery.

Drasin, who opposes Wishnevsky, on the other hand, has a bad record. The progressive group in Local 38 points out that he got himself elected in 1923 by pretending to be a progressive, but once in, settled down to a soft snap, and did nothing beyond drawing his wages and attending to small routines.

He conducted no organization drive. He referred most of the demands of the members to the governor's commission.

Sold Out for Job.

After being defeated for the position of secretary-organizer, at the last election, Drasin got on the executive board. But since this is not a paid position, he did not care for it, say the lefts, and resigned in order to be a good boy and keep his job at Carnegie's.

While on the settlement committees, Drasin sacrificed the demands of the employees, such as double pay for overtime, and one additional holiday. He also, by his every day dealings, many agreements and understandings with the boss, which involved the right to discharge, division of work, etc. Drasin's associates have worked now with even like Rosenfarb, against whom Drasin himself had to bring charges of graft at one time, and with the former treasurer of the union, who is now in boss.

The DAILY WORKER has consistently supported the Calles administration against American imperialism. But we notice that on many instances government troops are used against the workers in strikes. The Calles administration has done splendid work in educating the Mexican masses and in reducing the power of the catholic church. But it is not a workers' and peasants' government. This must be the goal of the Mexican masses.

ONE dispatch informs us that negotiations between the British and Cantonese governments are broken off. Another dispatch tells us the exact opposite. One moment Li-Fei-Fu threatens to attack Chang-Tso-Lin's forces. The next wire tells us that Wu is marching on Hankow side by side with Chang. We are told that Japan will not co-operate with the British against the Chinese and we are told that Japan will co-operate. The trans-Pacific cables are in the hands of the imperialist powers. Most of the news is written by them examined liars. Lying dispatches will not defeat the Chinese revolution. It will be won by those who have right, backed up by cannon, and the heaviest number on their side. The Cantonese have the man-power and right. Let us hope they can collect enough artillery.

It is well to be on guard against sensational stories of Cantonese defeats within the next few days. The stage is set for as fine a campaign of preparation as the world war produced when the tie mills of Geneva and Helingsburg were working twenty-four hour shifts. Of course a Cantonese setback is possible. When His Majesty the Devil was bounced out of heaven we do not believe Jehovah depended entirely on his superior virtue to defeat him. We are of the opinion that the archangel Michael, the celestial commanding general, had a supply of stone hatchets in hand.

Some people persist in not believing unpalatable facts. When Germany was defeated in the war and Great Britain towed the once-haughty Teuton fleet into a Scottish harbor, in humiliation, a strong anti-British frenzy of hatred swept the entire British navy was at the bottom of the North sea and that the kaiser's vessels were occupying British ports as victors. This honest fellow persisted in this belief even after the treaty of Versailles was signed. Whether he ever changed his opinion, I do not know and never will, the poor fellow having been killed by a truck on the street a few months ago.

SECRETARY of the Navy Wilbur believes that Communists are all over the place and that we need a large navy to protect the children from their propaganda. James Oneal, on author of parts, tells the world that there are only a few thousand Communists in America, just enough to write a book about. The New York Times takes note of Oneal's figures but fails to find consolation in that gentleman's assurance that the Communists are a negligible factor. Perhaps the Times editorial writer reads the New Leader, including the columns of space that organ devotes to the "negligible" Communists.

Paul Painleve Admits French Army Mutiny In 1917; Wanted Peace

PARIS, Feb. 16.—Paul Painleve, minister of war, admitted today that there was a mutiny in the French army in 1917. French regiments actually turned their backs upon the enemy and began to march to Paris to demand peace, he said.

The hitherto unpublished story of French mutiny has just been revealed in Churchill's new book of the world war.

Admits Mutiny.

Painleve admitted the mutiny. For five anxious weeks, he said, the French high command battled to suffocate the germs of revolt spreading along the front and restore discipline and morale in the ranks.

Painleve summarized the spring of 1917 as one of the most thrilling periods of the great war.

"It is history," he said, "of which it is difficult and painful to write. The truth develops slowly and with difficulty from passions and controversies."

As to the Russian troops, Painleve said:

Refers to Russia.

"The Russian General staff threatened them and the artillery was even forced to fire on them several times. But the number of wounded was slight."

adults in one bedroom. There were 157 bedrooms where four children were housed in addition to adults, seventeen bedrooms where five children were housed in addition to adults, five bedrooms where six children were housed, one bedroom housing seven children and one bedroom housing eight."

"It was not a nursery, was it?" he asked Chairman Derwin R. James of the board.

"Tenement dwellings used for residential purposes," replied Commissioner Harris.

"When we study tuberculosis frequency, when we study the frequency of other communicable diseases," he explained, "we see far more tragedy and drama than the newspapers ordinarily record when they display a flaming headline of a single murder."

The real estate sharks drew on imagination to describe the beautiful housing ready for industrial workers at $5 to $6 a room "in every type of apartment." Social workers established that these accommodations were inherited from the civil war period.

Judge Jacob Panken defended the rent laws and denounced their evasion, bringing from Edmund Doyle of the Real Estate Board the remark that he was astonished the state housing board would listen to such "socialism."

"Go on, Doyle," the realtors shouted as their leader waded into a vicious attack on the laws. Wagner, he declared, had gone up from $1.50 to $20 a day since the rent laws were enacted while the poor landlords were at the point of destitution.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 16.—Little expectation was held today that the general railway strike, called for tomorrow, can be averted. The conferences between representatives of the railway managers and the workers, arranged by the secretary of industry, have thus far been fruitless. Another conference will be held tomorrow.

CHARGES AGAINST NEWARK FURRIERS DROPPED BY A. F. L.

International Quashes Injunction

NEWARK, Feb. 16.—A victory over the reactionary bureaucrats of the Furriers' International was scored by Local 25 of Newark yesterday when Organizer Peter G. McGrady, of the A. F. of L. appeared at the "hearing" to which local officials had been summoned, and announced that all charges had been withdrawn.

"Communism" Smoke Screen.

The international had brought charges of Communism against officials of the local in an effort to displace the left wing leadership that had been elected in the local after the discovery of corruption in the previous right wing administration. In their efforts to force the old administration back into power, the International applied for an injunction against the officials to prevent their functioning in office. The injunction proceedings were also dropped yesterday.

The efforts of the International to obtain an injunction against the officers were condemned generally by locals of furriers and other workers. Local 54 of Newark, which is under right wing control, has passed resolutions on last Saturday condemning this action, as did the Boston Local 56 at its meeting on Monday.

Newark Workers Meeting.

All Newark workers have been summoned to a meeting arranged by the Newark Hebrew-Progressive Workers Club to be held next Saturday afternoon at New Montgomery Hall, 103 Montgomery Street, to hear the truth about the struggle of furriers and cloakmakers. Representatives of the New York Cloakmakers' Joint Board and the Furriers' Joint Board will speak. Ben Gold, manager of the Furrier's Joint Board, will be one of the speakers, according to the announcement.

Cantonese Smash Thru Sun's Lines

O'Malley, British charge has asked for new instructions.

Cantonese armies have captured Chuchow, according to a central news dispatch from Shanghai.

Chuchow is to the south of Hangchow and its capture would mean a serious reverse to the Chekiang forces defending Shanghai.

The northern generals, Liu Yu Chun and Chen Chiamo, are charged with defending Wu Chang against the siege of the Cantonese, before a revolutionary court, it is reported here.

The revolutionary court is said to consist of fourteen persons representing the workers, farmers and military and includes Miss Chwan Lukiang, delegate to the revolutionary women's organization. Miss Yuki has participated actively in the trial.

BOSTON FURRIERS DEMAND TO HEAR N. Y. DELEGATES

Officer Breaks Meeting; Workers Find New Hall

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

BOSTON, Feb. 16.—A membership meeting of Furriers' Local 30, of Boston, was broken up by Vice President Botkowitz of the International on Monday night when members insisted on hearing delegates from the New York Joint Board who had come to speak. After being dispersed by police, called in by the vice president, the members met in another hall and listened to addresses of Fannie Warshawsky, S. Kravitz, and A. Vinogradsky.

Denies New Yorkers Hearing.

The meeting was called to hear the report of the financial investigation committee. Chairman Botkowitz denied the committee representing the New York Joint Board the right to speak on the grounds that the Joint Board has been suspended from the international.

This statement was vigorously denied by Fannie Warshawsky, who pointed out that the Joint Board had a right to be represented, since it had financed the last strike, and was not legally expelled since no notification of any such action had ever been given.

Here Come The Police.

Botkowitz refused to preside if the New York delegation was to be heard, whereupon the membership elected George Pearlman to take the chair. Before any of the delegation could be heard, police appeared upon the scene and cleared the hall. Botkowitz and business agent Beekman pointing out the three Joint Board members to the police.

Meeting Resumed.

The meeting was immediately resumed in the Imperial Hall, 9 Appleton street, where the New York delegation spoke. Resolutions were adopted condemning the action of the officials Botkowitz and Beekman and demanding the withdrawal of Botkowitz as vice president of the International from Local 30. The meeting voted to bring charges against Beekman by a special committee elected for that purpose.

The resolutions also protested against the action of the General Executive Board at Montreal in expelling Vice President Gross for political views, contrary to the decision of the last convention which was held in Boston. The members voted to invite a committee of Local 25 of Newark to present the facts of the seeking of an injunction against the local by the International. Resolutions criticizing the action of the International officials in the last strike in failing to give full support, were also adopted.

Asia Large Purchaser Of U. S. Cigarettes

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16. — America's output of cigarettes last year, placed end to end, would reach to the moon and back eight times.

Production totaled ninety billion, a ten-billion jump from 1925, the commerce department announced today.

Eighty billions were consumed in this country. The nation's cigarette bill was about $662,000,000. A per capita consumption record of 720 was hung up.

Working Women: Paris Decrees Your Seaside Garb; Try and Get It

PARIS, Feb. 16.—It is no longer possible for a smart woman to bathe in a regular bathing costume, nor to be seen parading the beach at Santa Monica, Deauville, Cannes or Palm Beach in an ordinary bath robe.

The modern beach attire requires no less than six different articles, a cloth rug, a bath parasol, a smart cloak, a rusy cap, a beach cushion and, of course, a bathing suit.

The latter is intentionally last and least. They are charming, though.

The shortest of the short pantalettes reach a good ten inches above the knee and are delightfully held by a water-proof belt placed just about where the lovely blouse—decolete and sleeveless — should join the breaches. The choice of this exact meeting spot is conveniently left to the wearer, who chooses it according to her waist and girth size.

The material employed are generally satin or taffetas.

The cloak is an elaborate affair, preferably sleeveless if made of satin or with full sleeves if they are of the models featured by Patou and Marie Nopitzki.

The rug is light, soft, comfortable and large enough to accommodate, when spread out on the sand, the fair bather and her friends.

The parasols are tiny and gorgeous in color. They are made chiefly of silk but novel feather flowers make them extremely attractive, although they are hardly adequate to protect anything except the head.

NEW EDUCATIONAL DIRECTORS BEGIN WORK IN PASSAIC

Taught Miners; Will Now Teach Mill Hands

PASSAIC, N. J. (FP)—Passaic textile workers are getting acquainted with their new education director. Paul Fuller and his assistant, Clara Johnson, have been speaking to some of the nightly mass meetings. They are taking up with the executive committee of Passaic local 1603, United Textile Workers, the question of what work is most urgent. A class on How to Run a Union will probably be first, since the workers realize their own need to know such elementary essentials.

Offices for educational work have been taken by Fuller in Carpenters Hall, Passaic, where most of the town's local union offices are. The textile union office is a few blocks away. The Workers' Education Bureau is sponsoring Fuller's work in Passaic with the approval of the United Textile Workers.

Fuller comes to the Passaic textile strike area from the soft coal mine fields of central Pennsylvania. He and Miss Johnson, former school teacher and the daughter of a union miner, have been in charge of educational work for Dist. 2, United Mine Workers. Their Labor Chautauquas, to which miners' families contributed talent in music and dancing and union officers gave educational talks, have been especially successful. Union problems, nationalization of the coal industry, labor party possibilities are some of the discussion topics brought the miners. Miss Johnson organized women's auxiliaries among miners' families and started classes so that the women as well as the men could learn the ills of the industry and how to overcome them.

After telling a big meeting of Passaic workers how their great struggle bucked up a mine strike where workers were fighting attempts to break the union, Fuller said:

"You've learned the value of sticking together, of unionism. Now you want to learn how unionism can make you still stronger and more powerful. We aren't going to teach you how to be a boss, but how to be 100% union men and women, so that next time you will fight solidly from the beginning and not have to struggle so long."

Green and Morrison Satisfy Coolidge, No Fear of 5-Day Week

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—President Green and Secretary Morrison dined with President Coolidge on February 12, it has just become known, and "explained" to him why the Detroit convention adopted the five-day week. Although Coolidge is a fanatical believer in long hours and short pay, the two high officials of the American Federation of Labor were able to make him see that the Detroit convention means no harm.

Whether they discussed also the pending coal wage scale negotiations, or any of the score of labor bills now dying in congress, was not disclosed.

Philadelphia Defense Local Increases Its Activity; Has List Out

PHILADELPHIA.—Our local of the International Labor Defense is working hard to raise $500 to fight the deportation of Pajor, Snyder, Danerbach and Peter Klein, who were arrested during the famous "Palmer Red-Scare" times. The executive committee has decided to ask the various branches to arrange special affairs and parties to help raise the required amount. Also an emergency collection list will be issued for that specific purpose. The lists are being mailed now and the members of the I. L. D. are asked to take notice and act. These members must be defended as also many others, such as the Ziegler miners, whose cases are coming up now. It is our duty to raise this money without fail.

As the first reply, we received $50 for this purpose from the Philadelphia branch of the Anti-Fascist Alliance. The Kensington branch of the I. L. D. has promised to give some from the affair they had on February 12.

Send all donations to the secretary, John Lyman, 235 Rochelle Ave.

The local is preparing to celebrate the "Paris Commune" on a much larger scale than last season. It is the opinion of the executive committee that it should be turned into a magnificent demonstration to the memory of those martyrs of years gone by.

The annual bazaar of Local Philadelphia has proved to be a regular feature in the labor movement of Philadelphia. This year the bazaar will be held on April 15 and 16 at the New Traymore Hall.

JIM REED GRILLS COOLIDGE'S QUIET DURING GRAFTING

Harding's Appointees Hideously Corrupt

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 16.—Blame for failure to punish the principals of the scandals of the Harding administration was placed squarely upon President Coolidge by Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, who painted a hideous picture of political corruption before the Indiana Democratic Editors' Association.

"It was the business of the president to carefully guard the public interests," declared Reed, with great solemnity. "It is entirely possible that he did not know of the rape of the public domain by Fall, Doheny and Denby; but the body of the fraud was dragged into the daylight by the senate.

Did Not Do Duty.

"The moment the facts became apparent, it was his duty to have set in motion every resource of the government in order to apprehend the culprits.

"He remained impassive and silent. "He allowed the machinery of justice to remain under the control of Mr. Daugherty, the chief of the culprits.

"Even the White House telegraph instrument and the secret code of the government was employed to convey information to those implicated in the scoundrelly transaction.

Daugherty Lasted Weeks.

"Weeks and months dragged, Daugherty remained in his place of power, where he could to a large extent block and render negatory the efforts of the senate to ascertain the facts.

"At last, and for an assigned reason which in itself was utterly insufficient, he yielded to public indignation and gently, ceremoniously and almost apologetically requested Daugherty's resignation.'

Likening the present situation to the fall of the Roman Empire, as a result of corrupt officials, Reed exclaimed:

"Are we approaching such a catastrophe?"

The senate resolution by which former Senator Truman H. Newberry of Michigan was seated with a denunciation of his $195,000 campaign fund, was called a "monstrous thing" and an "open confession of infamy" by Reed. And then he took up the nomination of President Harding. He said:

Convention Well Trained.

"All men know the story of the nomination of Warren G. Harding. It was accomplished when Harry M. Daugherty agreed with Penrose that Harding would be suitable to the great protected industries.

"The convention obeyed the mandate of its masters as obsequiously as a well-trained office boy obeys the command of his employer.

"From the seed thus planted only an evil crop could be expected.

"The whole story may never be completely disclosed but there are certain outstanding facts that the public will not soon forget."

Paris Commune to Be Celebrated at I. L. D. Bazaar This Sunday

LABOR AND THE POWER OF THE PRESS

Miniature typewritten editions of the Albuquerque, N. M., dailies have appeared in place of the regular editions. The two newspapers affected were the Evening Journal and the New Mexico State Tribune. These powerful capitalist journals failed to appear in their usual form, for one simple reason. Labor did not want them to appear. The pressmen, of the plant, having failed to reach an agreement with the publishers, walked out and thus the paper was forced to suspend publication in its printed form.

Last May the printers of London demonstrated in a similar way their power over the leading dailies of the British Empire, which were forced to suspend operations on account of the printers' strike. The foremost sheets of the Empire were virtually put out of existence by the irresistible power of organized labor.

But labor cannot depend solely upon its ability to stop the production of capitalist papers, in its struggle against their pernicious influence. Not every struggle of the workers involves the printers. The sense of solidarity among the various trades has not yet developed to the point where we can look forward confidently to the support of the newspaper workers, when other workers are on strike. The large mass of the workers therefore have no guarantee that labor's case will be properly presented unless . . . unless there is developed at the same time a strong labor press.

The workers must be taught to read labor newspapers at the same time that they build up their strength against these who control the channels of capitalist publicity. By building up this economic and political power and at the same time a real appetite for news from a labor viewpoint, the workers will soon be in a position to defy the present tremendous destructive power of the capitalist press.

2 CONGRESSMEN PUNCH HEADS IN BLUE LAW TALK

Pious Lady Calls Jesus To Part Combatants

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Two congressmen staged a fight which spread into a "free-for-all" melee and broke up a congressional hearing today.

It was a near riot. During the panic a woman screamed and in shrill tones which sounded above the din of battle, implored the lord to restore order.

Rep. "Tom" Blanton (D) of Texas attacked Rep Sol Bloom (D) of New York and the set-to wound up with Bloom lying across a table with Blanton on top of him.

'Twas a Religious Affair.

Strangely enough, it all happened at a hearing of the House District of Columbia Committee on the Lankford "Sunday Blue Law" bill, designed to put the lid on capital sports and amusements on the sabbath.

Nearly a thousand persons were present. Many joined in the fracas while the joining was good.

Harry L. Bolby, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, an advocate of the bill, landed his right fist on the jaw of the official stenographer.

L. B. Sloss, manager of a Washington amusement park, was knocked to the floor by Blanton and Bolby, according to observers. Sloss was trying to break Blanton's strangle hold on Sol Bloom.

Jesus—Referee.

In the midst of the tumult Miss Hettie Pitts of Washington, D. C., jumped upon a chair and repeatedly screamed, "Jesus, stop this fight."

After the storm had subsided and the crowd was dispersed, she said:

"You notice that the fighting stopped when I called upon god for aid."

Blanton Clinches.

Bloom, giving his version of the fracas, said that Blanton rushed him after he had denied Blanton's statement that he represented big New York moving picture interests.

"He grabbed me around the waist and both wrists and pushed me over a table quite unexpectedly," said Bloom.

Sees a Knife.

Blanton, however, had a different version.

"After I facetiously had said that Mr. Bloom was interested in the fight of the big picture houses, he said 'that is absolutely untrue" and started after me. I met him half way and grabbed his wrists and held him.

"A little fellow started toward me I was told later that he had a knife open."

It turned out that nobody had a knife. But the witnesses, the members of the committee, and the spectators milled around generally, and despite the loud calls to Jesus as a peacemaker, considerable damage was done.

WOMEN'S PARTY STILL FIGHTS FOR LONG HOURS

Delegation to Coolidge Reactionary as Ever

WASHINGTON (FP).—How far from sympathy with the immediate demands of working women the remnants of the National Women's Party now promoting the so-called "equal rights" amendment to the federal constitution have drifted, was shown in public statements by members of the Women's Party delegation which called at the White House on Feb. 15. They asked President Coolidge to oppose all 48-hour laws and other measures giving special safeguards to women in industry by supporting the proposed amendment.

Mrs. Frances G. Roberts was advertised in their official press publicity as their "former waitress" spokesman. She is now a department manager in one of the biggest restaurant enterprises in New York. She recently appeared before the New York Industrial Survey Commission in opposition to the new pending 48-hour law for working women in that state.

"The only reason why I joined the Women's Party," she is quoted by the party's press statement as saying, "is because they came out for industrial equality. That is what working women need and want. Others who are urging special legislation, like the 48-hour law, should change their point of view when there is so much evidence that the women who will be effected by it do not want it."

She is further quoted as claiming that some of the New York restaurants are already beginning to dismiss their women and put men in their places, in anticipation of the passage of the 48-hour law in New York state.

This delegation of women was led by Mrs. Stephen Pell, daughter of Col. Robert Thompson, and it took the occasion of the 107th anniversary of the birth of Susan B. Anthony to make the appeal to Coolidge to line up his administration for the proposed bar to humane laws which effect women only. No appeal was made to the president to assist in getting a 48-hour law for men.

SEES WORKS SIGMAN USING THE INJUNCTION IN WAR ON LEFT WING

Hyman Charges the Reaction Prepares Court Weapon Against Workers

"The International is beginning to prepare the ground for the use of injunctions against the workers," Louis Hyman, manager of the Joint Board, said yesterday.

He pointed out that the continuous propaganda now being carried on in the Jewish Daily Forward to the effect that the Joint Board is using injunctions, is an attempt to deceive the workers so that this weapon may be used against them by the International.

Vague Accusations.

"The International never states when and where an injunction is used by the Joint Board, for the simple reason that no injunctions have been obtained by the Joint Board, but it continues to make vague charges that the "Communists" are procuring some kind of injunctions to use against the workers.

This is no more than a trick to deceive the workers and pave the way for such an action on the part of the International. This practice, which has been so much condemned by all people interested in labor, is to become a tool in the hands of the International in its fight against the Joint Board, and against the interests of the workers. The purpose of the present propaganda is clear.

The International has begun to threaten us with an injunction with which it will attempt to restrain us from carrying out our duties to the members."

No Notice Yet.

Mr. Hyman said that no formal notice of the new suspension, voted by the General Executive Board meeting in the Hotel Cadillac without its full membership being notified, has been received by the "suspended" locals, 2, 9, 22 and 35, up to late yesterday. "Perhaps they intend to suspend these locals through the capitalist press," he said. "That would be in line with the illegality of their whole procedure."

Two Pickets Beaten.

A. Regan and R. Feranti were severely beaten when six gangsters attacked them this morning as they were picketing the shop of Haber and Seifert, 236 West 26th street. Although members of the Industrial Squad were standing by, the gangsters attacked these pickets with impunity, chased them to the roof, and there beat them up while they cried to the police for help. This shop was called on strike by the Joint Board on Monday after the employer had locked out all his old workers, on the plea of going out of business, but had an agreement with the International, and at once employed new workers.

The policy of expelling individuals or groups opposing the bureaucratic officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union was begun by these officials more than ten years ago. Since that time many active workers have been expelled, and at intervals whole executive boards have been suspended or expelled.

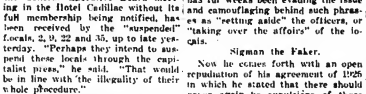
In June, 1925, the international opened its attack upon Locals 2, 9 and 22 by expelling their executive boards and attempting to seize the local buildings by force. They succeeded in capturing Locals 2 and 9, but Local 22 was held by its members and from there the famous campaign of the joint action committee against the international was carried on until Sigman begged for peace in September of that year.

Violates Peace Treaty.

The terms of the treaty which Sigman signed at that time he violated before the ink was dry on the paper, and his continued effort to keep control of the union in spite of the repeatedly expressed wishes of the membership for proportional representation and a democratic rule by the majority, led him to renew his expulsion policy—which in the peace treaty he swore he would abandon for all time.

Profiting by his bitter experience in 1925, Sigman has hesitated to come forth with an acknowledgment that he was again expelling the local officers chosen by the members. He has for weeks been evading the issue and camouflaging behind such phrases as "retting aside" the officers, or "taking over the affairs" of the locals.

Sigman the Faker.



Now he comes forth with an open repudiation of his agreement of 1926 in which he stated that there should never again be expulsions of those who differed with the administration. He brands himself by his own acts and by this pronouncement of the general executive board, he prepares himself not for a duplication of the defeat administered in 1925, but for total elimination from the union. Sic semper tyrannus!

Arrests for Attempted Robbery.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Feb. 16.—Three men are being held in the usergen county jail here, it was learned today, for questioning as possible suspects in connection with the recent attempted air mail robbery in New Brunswick, N. J., in which Frank J. Kearney was killed, and a shooting affray at the French Hill Inn, near Paterson, N. J., in February, 1926, in which state trooper Charles Ulrich was shot and killed.

Stalin Denies That He Is In Geneva; He Even Denies That He's Dying

(By Special Cable).

MOSCOW, Feb. 16.—A London dispatch which stated that Josef Stalin, general secretary of the Communist Party of Russia was dying in Geneva, was called to Stalin's attention in his offices in the Kremlin.

Stalin, fondled his mustache as a sly grin overspread his countenance.

"Please inform the anxious bourgeoisie," he chuckled, "that in my opinion I am not in Geneva yet. In fact I have not the slightest intention of dying, therefore, I am keeping away from Geneva."

This was all the Soviet leader would say about the rumor. Nevertheless foreign correspondents are scanning the news carefully as they suspect that another political assassination has been committed in Swiss territory. Vaslav Vorovsky, Soviet envoy was murdered by a fascist in Lausanne a few years ago and the murder went unpunished by the Swiss government.

JERSEY BOSSES GET INJUNCTION ON ORGANIZERS

Teamsters and Building Trade Drive Starts

HACKENSACK, N. J. (FP).—Building trades and teamsters' unions are leading a movement to organize the unorganized in Bergen County, across the Hudson River from the upper end of New York City. And open shop employers are countering with a temporary injunction issued by Vice Chancellor Church.

Much Building.

The fight is the result of the building boom that is turning the Bergenline section of northern New Jersey into a populous region. It will determine whether the growing towns near the Palisades will develop as union or open shop communities. Many New Yorkers are moving into northern New Jersey and it is estimated that when the new Hudson River bridge is opened and new ferry lines are running that hundreds of thousands of new residents will move into Hackensack, Palisade and the surrounding region.

Issue Injunction.

As usual in such cases the restraining order forbids interference with the plaintiffs' business by boycott, sympathetic strikes and the weaning away of customers. The writ charges the union representatives are visiting Jersey business men and advising them to have nothing to do with open shop firms.

Employers who are party to the writ are the Tidewater Coal & Supply Co., the Comfort Coal-Lumber Co., the John Wehrle, Jr., Trucking and Rigging Company, Hayanone Ripp Co., dealer in building materials; O. Weisgerber & Sons and F. Schultz & Sons, truckers.

Big Industries.

Labor forces enjoined are Local 560, teamsters; Locals 825 and 825A, steam and hoisting engineers; the Hoisting and Portable Engineers' Local of northern New Jersey and Local 45 of the iron workers and its officers.

The teamsters' and building trades' fight is exciting interest among the workers in the big manufacturing plants of Bergen County, in the Forstmann & Huffmann woolen mills of Garfield, where the United Textile Workers are holding the line and in the open shop city of Kearney where Henry Ford has a big assembly plant.

Croakrin, New Leopold, On Trial for Murder

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—The murder trial of Harold J. Croarkin, 26, scion of a prominent family, accused of slaying Walter Schmith, a six-year-old boy to prevent him from telling his parents of improper acts, got under way before a jury here today.

The battery of legal talent retained by the defense and the public interest aroused by the brutality of the crime, indicated the trial might be a packed-sized edition of the fight to save Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb from the gallows.

Say Boston Ward Heeler Robs City Ashmen

BOSTON, Feb. 16, (FP).—Some grafter in city hall is pocketing 70 cents a day off the city ashmen in the Dorchester section, Councilman Geo. F. Gilbody believes. He reported to the city council's unemployment committee that the men are getting only $4.50 a day, though their wages are nominally $5.20.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Princess Mary is now a surgeon. She was admitted to the royal college of surgeons as an honorary fellow, the first women ever to be admitted to this institute. The Princess was awarded an "honorary diploma."

HEARING REVEALS OVERCROWDING OF NEW YORK HOMES

Two Shifts of Boarders; Even in Cellars

At hearings held by the State Housing Board at the City Hall, on the question whether the emergency rent laws, that expire June 1, should be continued, there were startling revelations of conditions under which most of the workers in New York city live.

The testimony given before the board will be reported back to the state legislature, and is supposed to be used as a basis on which to decide on continuance of the rent laws.

Members Shocked.

Social conditions, which they ascribed to high rents, were described in some detail by witnesses whose stories shocked members of the housing body. Testimony was given by the deputy commissioner of health, the chief justice of the Municipal Court, welfare workers, lawyers and rent payers, and it was brought out that doubling and tripling of families in apartments near all piers going on, and that this condition obtained in rookeries built fifty years ago and condemned as insanitary and uninhabitable before the rent laws were passed.

Unfit for Pig.

Even in cellars, it was said, two families could be found living in rooms described as "unfit for a pig to live in."

The testimony showed that families with growing children, which, prior to the advance in rents that began in 1919, could afford a few limited luxuries were now reduced to the barest necessities; that old couples barely able to pay rent hitherto have been compelled to go to almshouses because of the rise in rents; that landlords have been notifying tenants to "wait until the rent laws lapse in June and we will give you the trimming of your lives"; that landlord and tenant litigation in 1926 increased over the previous years, and that in 95 per cent of these cases the invariable reply of tenants to the courts was inability to afford the higher rents.

Worst in Harlem.

The worst conditions described were in the Negro section of Harlem, where it was said, "double shifts" of boarders used bedrooms day and night and rents had advanced more than 100 per cent.

Opposes Rent Law Extension.

ALBANY, Feb. 15.—Defeat for the rent laws is seen as the result of the statement of Assemblyman Edmund B. Jenks, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, who said today that he would oppose any further extension of them.

Unless other members override him, he will not let any rent extension bill out of his committee.

The committee had intended to act on rent bills today, but decided to postpone action until after receiving a report of the housing commission.

Mr. Jenks said that his visit to New York Saturday convinced him that the emergency rent laws were no longer needed.

"Go To The Movies."

The tenement dwellers of New York city aren't so bad off after all. They dress well, go to the movies and everything. This is the view of Assemblyman Forman E. Whitcomb, a rural district member from Broome County, who accompanied the legislative party to New York last Saturday.

"To my way of thinking," he said, "they all dress well, no matter what they pay for rent. They are also strong for the movies. I noticed long lines of them at these places of entertainment."

London is Tied Up By Dense Fog; Fifth Day With No Relief Seen

LONDON, Feb. 16.—For the fifth day a dense fog has practically tied up shipping on the English Channel.

Not only are hundreds of ships waiting in the harbors but scores, not daring to attempt to move, are anchored in narrow strips of the sea.

Cross channel boats are unable to leave and hundreds of passengers are being held up at Dover, Folkestone, Calais, Boulogne and other places.

The king and queen of Belgium, who are visiting privately in London, were unable to return to Brussels today according to their plans.

The Donaldson liner Cordillera, of 16,865 tons, from South America to London, collided today with an unknown vessel and was slightly damaged.

Among the hundreds of steamers that are stationary in the channel between Dovar and Beachyhead is the Cumard liner Antonia on its way from New York to London.

The fog continued heavy over London today but was not dense enough to stop traffic.

Skeleton Identified as Miss Rachel E. Wood.

KINGS PARK, N. Y., Feb. 16.—The skeleton of a woman found in the woods near Northport has been identified by Dr. R. E. Blaisdell, assistant superintendent of the New York State Hospital here, as that of Miss Rachel E. Wood, 43 years old, a paranoiac patient who disappeared from the institution on July 11 last.

In addition to the Avella meeting Weisbord will address two meetings in Pittsburgh and East Pittsburgh. CLOAKMAKER IN HOSPITAL SCORES SIGMAN BETRAYAL

Attempted Suicide In Despair and Disgust

Jacob Goldstein, 56 years of age, was allowed to see visitors for the first time today since he was taken to Beth David Hospital suffering from a relapse.

He had been thought to be recovering from the effects of drinking when gallon more than ten days ago in his home at 245 East 110th street, but grew worse on last Saturday and was removed to the hospital.

Worked Many Years.

Goldstein is a cloakmaker, who has worked at his trade for many years, educated his children, and was trying to lay aside savings for old age from his wages as a cloakmaker. He was a good union man, for he had seen what benefits the union could bring the workers, in his own experience.

During the cloakmakers' strike, Goldstein went on the picket-line. He was arrested, and a scab who was nearby testified that he and Joseph Goretzky, manager of Local 35, had tried to beat him up. The day of his

What Does President Lewis Mean by "No Backward Step?"

The proposal made by President Lewis of the United Mine Workers at Miami to the coal operators' representatives, i. e., a commission of technical experts to devise ways and means of overcoming waste in the industry certainly is not in line with the "no backward step" slogan with which the rank and file delegates were beguiled at the Indianapolis convention.

This move of President Lewis is nothing less than acceptance of the principle of compulsory arbitration coupled with something still more dangerous—the organization of efficiency machinery in co-operation with the operators. That such a proposal can be made in the first few days of the negotiations is proof that the main line followed by the Lewis machine at the recent convention—that of bringing the UMWA into line with the worker-employer-co-operation-efficiency-unionism doctrine of the American Federation of Labor—is to be given its practical application in the negotiations in Miami.

There is no essential difference between the Lewis proposal and that of the operators who put forward a scheme for compulsory arbitration with persons appointed by the United States supreme court as the final board of appeal. President Lewis wants a board of technical experts. There is no difference except over the personnel of the commission. This of course is important but upon the main principle President Lewis and the coal barons are in agreement.

This is the beginning of the major operation that it is hoped the United Mine Workers will submit to without much protest. The efforts of the Lewis machine have been directed to chloroforming the membership so that, as is the usual case with major operations, the victim suffers no pain until he recovers consciousness.

The essential organs of the union are to be removed if this scheme goes through. The will to fight for control of working conditions by the union is to be paralysed.

At the convention the Lewis machine did its best to destroy all rank and file resistance in advance of negotiations with the operators but it did not succeed. It did succeed in convincing large numbers of delegates by its onslaughts on rank and file democracy and its unscrupulous repudiation of the former militant traditions of the union that it had in mind just such a plan as has been broached.

Against this preparation for surrender to the coal barons camouflaged under the stereotyped phrases of the industrial efficiency experts, flavored to taste less nauseating, the left wing will fight with all its might.

The negotiations, even in their early stages, have shown that the slogan of "Save the Union" raised by the left wing correctly puts the problem which faces the UMWA on March 31 when the Jacksonville agreement expires.

"No backward step" for the coal miners means no reduction in wages—either by an actual cut or by a worsening of conditions—and immediate organization of the non-union fields.

The operators will change their tune the moment the UMWA drives in earnest into West Virginia, western Pennsylvania and Kentucky with the full force of the union behind its organization campaign.

100,000 more miners brought into the union while the negotiations are going on will enable the UMWA to take the offensive.

Rank and file pressure on an officialdom which puts negotiations ahead of organization is the answer the left wing will make to the retreat of President Lewis.

Fred Marvin Has a Competitor.

The New York Times announces that Mr. James Oneal, prominent socialist has added his mite to the efforts of Fred Marvin, of the late New York Commercial, William J. Burns, who needs no introduction and divers spies and detectives, to scotch the "Communist menace" before it pulls the props from underneath the capitalist system.

Mr. Oneal is alleged to have given the "low down" on Communism in the United States. He is reported to have pried into the innermost recesses of Communist Party organizations. His book on American Communism is intended to fill in the blank spaces in the D. of J.'s scrap book on the revolutionary movement in the United States. But we fear that Mr. Oneal arrived on the scene too late.

The field has been ploughed too often. The soil has become impoverished. We fear the shekel crop will be poor. "Exposing" the Communist movement was a paying proposition until the capitalists discovered that a subscription to The DAILY WORKER would supply them with all the necessary information. Then the stocks of the stool-pigeons fell and most of them were forced to take a job with the prohibition enforcement department of the government.

Fred Marvin and a few others still hammer away on the old anvil but those fellows are so long in the game that they find it difficult to turn their hands to something else.

We noticed Max Eastman's book exposing the Communist Party of Russia lying in a second-hand book-stall on 4th avenue, marked "5 cents." Those who can afford to curb their impatience to learn what Oneal has learned about us, outside of what the detective agencies have already published, can save money by waiting a few months until they see the nickel sign on Oneal's latest "exposure."

Another "general strike" against Communism and even Morris Sigman may get a free lunch at the White House.

Capitalism's Solution of the Housing Problem.

The Farmer in the Nitrogen Age

By H. T. AHRENS

THE present congress, like its predecessors, will discuss farm relief measures. The discerning farmer no longer looks upon this farcical action with any seriousness. He realizes it is just a fake fight staged for his benefit in order to have him remain a partisan voter. Nothing will be enacted to help the farmer; the metropolitan press will blame the farmer for the failure by saying the argument that the lack of unanimity of the latter as to the remedy to be used was the cause of not obtaining relief.

Co-operative Marketing.

Other pseudo-friends try to give proof of their interest by advising the farmer to co-operate in marketing.

The farmer is not only robbed by those who juggle his products but he is subject to greater exactions from the industrial and transportation interests. Co-operation in marketing would only prevent insignificant exaction compared with those taken by the monopolists of transportation.

The farmer to a great extent relies on succor from a number of associations whose main object is to inspire him with false hopes.

In reality these associations constitute the masked batteries from which the interests fight and defeat their unsophisticated dupes.

These associations have a taboo on the discussion of political or kindred subjects and the members conscientiously toe the mark. The Grenge of Washington at the state assembly last summer was so conscientious that its members refrained from discussing their misery or demanding relief. The taboo ridden Polynesian would be very proud of his brother of the Grange.

The agricultural tragedy is contemporary with the world war. When the Entente declared the illegal blockade against Central Europe the price of wheat, also cotton, went below the cost of production. The invisible government of America was more interested in the welfare of the people of the entente than in their compatriot farmers. There was not an earnest remonstrance against the illegal blockade.

Kept Prices Down.

Upon the entrance of the United States into the big slaughter a government price and absolute control of wheat was established. Wheat was the only commodity which was denied a competitive market. As a rule the price of wheat is double the price of corn.

The quotation for the latter was $1.75 per bushel; in accordance with this rule the price of wheat should have been $3.50 per bushel, but by reason of the government established price, the wheat grower only received $2.20.

The commission houses, as formerly, were retained as intermediaries, reaping exorbitant profits. At the conclusion of government control the U. S. grain corporation found a fund of $50,000,000.

The government appropriated this sum, refunding was not fashionable in this case. The farmer had positive proof that he had been robbed inasmuch as the price of wheat went above $3.00 per bushel when government control was abrogated. Very few farmers received the benefit of this price, as they no longer were owners of wheat.

Prices Went Down.

The year following the cessation of the war the price of wheat settled down to a little above $2.00 per bushel. The banking interests deemed this price too high. The farmer was deflated through the action of the almighty reserve banks. Credit was refused to the purchasers of wheat. Without any warning wheat became a dead commodity. Not a bushel of wheat was purchased during a number of days. The stunned farmers' world stopped with a jolt.

When commerce, through the permit of the reserve banks, was resumed wheat was purchased at one dollar less the late price. The new established price became the permanent quotation. Last year we exported wheat to a point where it became uncertain if there was enough left for home consumption.

The threat of the banking interests no doubt was severe; there would have been excessive speculation at all former times, but it seems no one dared to take hold of the market.

Every argument was brought out to lower the price of wheat. In one instance the arrival of 30,000 bushels at a terminal point was used as successful argument for the lowering of the price. In view of the whole matter the farmer is fully entitled to the conclusion that he is the victim of deep plots.

Government Won't Help.

The farmer is entirely too optimistic when he hopes that relief will be given through government action. There are too many factors which, from the viewpoint of certain industrial and financial interests, forbid the inauguration of any artificial relief measures. Prosperity of agriculture would mean a general rise in prices on account of a greater increase and devaluation of the currency with a higher cost of living as a consequence. This would entail the inability to compete with European industrialists on the world's market. At present a precarious hold on foreign commerce is retained by speeding up labor and keeping the farmer deflated and furnishing farm products at low cost. It is only too obvious that the domestic market is destined to suffer on account of the submergence of the farmer. The interests must choose between the two evils and it seems they consider the reduction of the domestic market of less importance than the debarment from the world's markets. Hence the opposition of the interests against any relief measures of importance.

Principal Factors.

The chief factors which cause the unfortunate conditions are as follows:

1.—The abyssmal ignorance of the farmer regarding economic and political questions engendered by the shrill dispensing metropolitan press.

2.—The exactions levied upon the farmer in the way of contribution towards enormous dividends on watered values, and the upkeep in general of a top heavy system.

3.—The opposition of the "powers that be" toward any artificial relief measures.

4.—Purchasing in an artificially inflated market and selling in the world's market to impoverished purchasers.

5.—Having to compete on the international market with people who make less demands on life and who do not bear the burden of such a heavy economic super-structure as the American farmer.

6.—The elimination of horse traction, meaning less consumption of farm products.

7.—The elimination of grain consumption on account of national prohibition.

8.—The under-consumption of the masses of the world owing to unfavorable conditions brought about by the severe exploitation by the interests and bearing the burden of a top heavy economic system.

Here Comes Nitrogen.

A new actor is about to enter upon the world's stage, reeking with blood and corpses. Nitrogen in the hands of the militarists is a cruel agent of death and destruction. In the hands of the farmers it is humanity's friend and benefactor.

Nitrogen is the main ingredient used in making explosives, at the same time it is the rehabilitant of robbed soil. The process of manufacture has been cheapened to such an extent that the Chilean nitrate can no longer compete with the synthetic product.

Germany had to rely on synthetic nitrogen for making explosives. The plants which formerly furnished the death-dealing product are now being used to make nitrogen for agricultural purposes. Germany, by the use of nitrogen as a fertilizer, has reduced the importation of cereals to a very great extent, with the prospects of having a sufficiency within a few years.

Plentiful As Air.

The supply is inexhaustible inasmuch as it is derived from the air. Other wheat importing countries are certain to follow the example of Germany. The scientists are so enthusiastic about the new agent and the revolutionary changes that will be forced upon the world through its general use that they make the prediction that this will be called the nitrogen age. The first to feel the effects of nitrogen will be the wheat exporting countries and the farmer will not be the only sufferer.

The Effects upon the Exporting Countries.

When the wheat importing countries increase the crop yield can be readily calculated. When the effects of this revolution in agriculture are felt greater expediencies must be used than those incorporated in the Haugen-McNary bill. Then the people will have to choose if nitrogen shall drive humanity into the caves and jungles or whether it shall be the force which will compel humanity to shape economics to conform to freedom is to adopt the bad habits of the men. If the movement really meant enough to socialists, they wouldn't have to spend money for

A NEW NOVEL

By Upton Sinclair

V.

Rachel had published a brief article about Bunny's return from abroad, quoting him as saying that he intended to use his inheritance for the benefit of the movement. And this statement had attracted the attention of a bright young newspaper woman, who had written a facetious article:

MILLIONAIRE RED TO SAVE SOCIETY

And now it appeared that there were a great many people who had ideas as to how to save society, and they all wanted to see Bunny, and waited for him in the lobby of his hotel. One had a sure cure for cancer, and another a perpetual motion machine actually working; one wanted to raise bullfrogs for their legs, and another to raise skunks for their skins. There were dozens who wanted to prevent the next war, and several who wanted to start colonies; there were many with different ways of bringing about socialism, and several great poets and philosophers with manuscripts, and one to whom God had revealed Himself—the bearer of this message was six feet four and broad in proportion, and he towered over Bunny and whispered in an awe-stricken voice that the words which God had spoken had been set down and locked in a safe, and no human eye ever had beheld them, or ever would. Several others wrote that they were not able to call because they were unjustly confined to asylums, but if Bunny would get them out they would deliver their messages to the world through him.

There was one more "nut," and his name was J. Arnold Ross—no longer "junior." He had a plan, which he had been turning over and over in his mind; and now he gathered his friends to get their reaction. Old Chaim Menzies, who had been a long time in the movement, and watched most of its mistakes, Chaim was working in a clothing shop as usual, and giving his spare time to getting up meetings. And Jacob Mensies, the pale student—Jacob had got a job teaching school for a year, but then he had been found out, and now was selling insurance. And Harry Seager, who was growing gray and escaping the boycotts. And Peter Nagle, who was helping his father run a union plumbing business in an open shop city, and spending his earnings on a four page tabloid monthly ridiculing God. And Gregor Nikolaieff, who had done his socialist duty working for a year in a lumber camp, and was now assistant to an x-ray operator in a hospital. And Dan Irving, who had come from Washington at Bunny's expense—these six people sat down with Raebel and Bunny at a dinner party in a private dining room, to discuss how to save society with a million dollars.

Bunny explained with becoming modesty that he was not putting forth his plan as the best of all possible plans, but merely as the best for him. He wasn't going to evade the issue by giving his money away, getting off the job on other people; he had learned this much from Dad, that money by itself is nothing, to accomplish anything takes money plus management. Moreover, Bunny himself wanted something to do; he was tired of just looking on, and talking. He is a big paper, but he had no knowledge thought for a long time about edge of journalism, and would only be a blunderer. The one thing he did know was young people; he had been to college, and knew what a college ought to be, and wasn't.

"What we're doing—Rachel and Jacob and the rest of us Ypsels—is trying to work on young minds; but the trouble is, we only get them a few hours in the week, and the things that count for most in their lives are the enemy's—I mean the schools, the job, the movies—everything. So I want to get some students together for a complete life, twenty-four hours a day; and see if we can't build a socialist discipline, a personal life, with service to the cause as its goal. Rachel will agree with me in this—I don't know if anyone else will—I think we have come to the movement suffers is that we haven't made the new moral standards that we need. Our own members, many of them, are personally weak; the women have to have silk stockings and look like the bourgeoisie, and their idea of freedom is to adopt the bad habits of the men. If the movement really meant enough to socialists, they wouldn't have to spend money for tobacco, and booze, and imitation finery."

"Dat let's me out!" said old Chaim Menzies, who had already lighted his ten-cent cigar.

The substance of what Bunny wanted was a labor college on a tract of land somewhere out in the country; but instead of spending his million on steel and concrete, he wanted to begin in tents, and have all the buildings put up by the labor of the students and teachers. Everybody on the place was to have four hours' manual labor and four of class work daily; and they were all to wear khaki, and have no fashionable society. Bunny had the idea of going out among the colleges and high schools, and talking to little groups of students, and here and there seducing one away from football and fraternities to a new dedication. Also the labor unions would be invited to select promising young men and women. It was a thing that should grow fast, and take little money, because; with the exception of building materials, everything could be produced on the place; they would have a farm, and a school of domestic arts—in short, teach all the necessary trades, and provide four hours' honest work of some sort for all students who wanted to come.

Letters From Our Readers

Organizing the Unorganized.

Dear Comrades:

Since the arrival of The DAILY WORKER in New York it has already accomplished big things for the workers of New York and the class struggle in general.

The DAILY WORKER is not only writing labor news, but is also organizing the unorganized. Here is how it happened: The shops of "Myers Hats, Inc., where ladies' hats are made, has been for years a fifty-fifty shop, half slave and half free. The men operators were members of the Millinery Union, while the girls, copyists, were left in the cold and neglected by the bureaucrats of the union, unorganized for years and years, until the happy arrival of The DAILY WORKER on the newsstands of New York.

One of the girls of the shop, Jean is her name, began buying and reading daily the only labor paper in New York and was deeply stirred by its message to the workers to organize. Jean at once began organizing the unorganized girls. Her appeal to the 20 girls of the shop to join the union and strike for better conditions was just the thing they were waiting for. Jean, with the ability of a leader and heart of a rebel, with the aid of a few other girls of Myers' shop succeeded in getting the girls to go to the millinery local union to register and organize into a body and demand recognition from the boss, that he is to deal with the girls thru their union, and not individually, as he used to do in the good old times.

The boss, learning of the union movement, fired Jean and eight more girls and declared that they can never again work in his shop. The rest of the girls refused to go to work without Jean and the other fired girls who dared to agitate and organize the exploited and insulted girls into a union, and a strike was declared.

The boss tried to fill the places with scabs and tried all kinds of tricks in order to confuse the striking girls and force them back to slave for him without a union, promising all kinds of sugared conditions, but seeing that his tricks didn't work, he recognized the union and took all the girls back and sent down his few scabs.

So, The DAILY WORKER was instrumental in organizing the unorganized girls who had been for years exploited and insulted and criminally neglected by the decaying bureaucratic officials of the Millinery Union. More power to you, comrades of The DAILY WORKER. Long live The DAILY WORKER.

ABE OLKEN.

New York Housing Crisis Can Be Solved Only By Workers [Communist] Party Program

Edmund B. Jenks, assemblyman in charge of the rent laws, declares that "the housing emergency is over" and proposes to have the so-called Emergency Rent Laws repealed. These laws at best were a hopeless makeshift which not only have not solved the problem they were intended to meet, but have permitted it to get progressively worse.

The laws cover two matters: 1. They exempt certain newly constructed buildings from taxation for a period of ten years. 2. They prevent eviction of tenants in order to increase rentals.

But the problem of a city as enormous and as rapidly growing as New York is not solved by such makeshift legislation. While Jenks is declaring that the emergency is over, we find Health Commissioner Harris admitting that the crowded slums are a source of a high disease and death rate, of "tuberculosis frequency and frequency of other communicable diseases.

Must Have City Housing Plan.

The emergency rent laws should of course be continued, but under them conditions have gone from bad to worse. What the city needs is a socially planned building construction program which would keep pace with the rapidly growing population and congestion, just as much as it needs a socially planned transit program.

Just as new bridges are being thrown over the East River and new subways and bus lines are being constructed throughout the city, so new homes, accessible to the workers, should be constructed on a large scale by the city in a planful manner to keep pace with the growing population. Less than a year ago, in the last state electoral campaign, the Workers Party proposed:

Workers Party Program.

(1) The construction of dwellings by the municipalities for the workers to be rented to them without profit. Adequate representation shall be given to the workers in the management of such houses.

(2) State credits to the municipality for the above purpose.

(3) The encouragement of non-profit making co-operatives for building construction by exemption from taxes and other fees and by loans at a low rate of interest.

(4) Enforcement and extension of non-eviction, compulsory repairs, rent laws, and other measures tending to curb the landlord's profit greed.

Fight Increased Fares.

Nothing short of this program will give anything like an adequate solution of the problem of soaring rents, congestion, slums and landlord profiteering. Yet legislators and lobbyists, representing the landlords, are urging the repeal of the emergency rent laws and the little protection they afford. Moreover, Governor Smith's transition consolidation plan contains the possibility, and even probability, of an increase in fare which would make congestion in New York worse by putting the outlying portions of the city outside of the single fare rate and compelling workers that cannot afford a higher carefare to try to seek homes in the already congested portions of New York.

The workers of New York must demand the continuance of the emergency rent laws for an indefinite period, but that is not sufficient. They must also demand the construction of dwellings for the workers by the city to be rented to them without profit, a system of state credit, the encouragement of co-operative housing and the further extension of the emergency rent laws. In short, they must demand the carrying out of the full program proposed by the Workers Party in the state platform at the last elections.

COLONEL R. R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, the magazine Liberty and the Daily News, New York tabloid sheet, on his return from Europe on the ocean greyhound Mauretania, had some things to say about conditions on the other side of the Atlantic (see below) is one of those hard-boiled capitalists who can afford to tell about as he sees it, but capitalists suffer from political astigmatism, a good thing for them at that, else they might get too philosophical and jump into the nearest open sewer before the working class save them the trouble.

Disregarding other matters commented on by the colonel, his views on the British labor party are worthy of the hammer. He said that it was led by "a certain number of bankrupt peers who are resentful at being poor while their brother peers

New U. S. Minister to Hungary May Have Some Special Stunt

BUDAPEST, Feb. 17.—News of the appointment of J. Butler Wright, assistant secretary of state, as American minister to Hungary caused a sensation here because of Wright's high official position in Washington.

The appointment was generally interpreted here as indicating Wright may have a special mission to perform, possibly the establishment of a central information bureau for the collection of agricultural news of Europe.

Vote $25,000 Only for Investigation of Big Deal in Federal Jobs

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. — A fund of $25,000 for the proposed senatorial investigation into charges that federal offices were sold in southern states to the highest bidder, was authorized today by the senate committee on control of contingent expenses, in reporting the Norris resolution.

The limit of $25,000 was imposed after debate in the senate, and was brought about by a motion from opponents of the bill. Millions will be spent to conceal any such commerce in federal offices.

Matagalpa Fall Brings More Marines

Discuss Making Nicaragua A "Neutral Zone"

PUERTO CABEZAS, Feb. 17. — Conservative forces have retired from Matagalpa and liberals are in occupation, having taken 150 political prisoners, according to advices received at the liberal headquarters here.

The American consul at Matagalpa has been in conference with General Moncada, leader of the liberal armies which have been kept outside the city limits, in an effort to make arrangements to prevent any disorders or looting by the troops.

Admiral Latimer has paid a visit to Dr. Sacasa, liberal leader, here.

Rush Airplanes.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. — The American government is preparing for further exercise of force in Central America.

The dispatch of 200 additional marines from Guantamano, and six airplanes, manned by a personnel of 100 officers and men, together with the departure of the transport Henderson to the fleet in Caribbean waters, merely reflected the growing uneasiness with which the administration regards the trend of developments below the Rio Grande.

The Henderson, scheduled to leave Philadelphia tomorrow with 800 apprentice seamen for the fleet in Cuba, was ordered by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur to stop off at Quantico, Va., and pick up 1,000 marines concentrated there and 200 additional at Parris Island.

All "Neutral."

It is understood that the project of Latimer's declaring all Nicaragua a "neutral zone" has been considered, although no official confirmation can be obtained about it here. The direct question as to whether the American admiral's authority goes that far was met evasively with the reply that he had "blanket authority to declare neutral zones."

To declare all Nicaragua a neutral zone would be tantamount to the American government's summarily ordering the Nicaraguan civil war to stop, and to do this the United States would have to have sufficient military force in the country to enforce the order. In a country where transportation is difficult and conditions naturally lend themselves to guerrilla warfare, this would be a huge undertaking, and one not lightly to be gone into.

Liberals Won't Stand It.

At the same time, reports are re-

Coal Operators Still Demand Cut in Pay

"Almost Persuaded" By Lewis Efficiency Plan

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 17.—The negotiations between the coal miners' union committee and the operators' representatives were not open to the public today, the crucial matter under discussion having been handed over to a sub-committee of eighteen, equally divided between operators and members of the union whose duty it is to try and decide on a basic wage. The committee at a late hour this afternoon had failed to report any agreement and seems to be deadlocked.

The sub-committee has under consideration the submitted and defended by Wm. H. Haskins, of the Eastern Ohio Operators Association, and Herman E. Perry, of Illinois. This plan of a competitive scale, based on that prevailing in the non-union districts, with an arbitration board to decide everything else, the neutral members of the board to be selected by Wm. Howard Taft, chief justice of the supreme court, and notoriously anti-labor.

Lewis' Efficiency Plan.

The sub-committee also is supposed to be considering International President John L. Lewis' proposal for a continuation of the same wage (nominally $7.50 a day, actually less because of dead work, etc.) and the creation of a "bureau", which shall be a "tribunal" to settle all problems arising in the industry, and which shall endeavor to promote efficiency on the part of the miners and operators alike.

This proposal of a tribunal seems to have rather enthused some of the operators.

Pleasant Surprise.

Perry, of the Illinois operators, said he "was almost persuaded by Lewis' proposal, because, outside of wages, it contains nothing that has not already been proposed by the mine owners from the floor."

However, he wished to amend it by increasing and more strictly defining the arbitration powers which Lewis' "tribunal" plainly possesses.

Arbitration Unpopular.

One of the progressive miners' demands at the international convention last month in Indianapolis, was "no compulsory arbitration", and though the Lewis machine overwhelmed the arbitration resolution unpopular with the rank and file of the miners, and union officials will take many chances with their already waning popularity if they yield too openly on this point.

In spite of the fact that Lewis' proposal seeks, in his own words to secure "conditions that will give a proper return to capital and advance the living standards of employees; reduce hazards; promote a sales policy to destroy the practice of selling below cost of production;" work for readjustment of freight rates and cooperate in legislative matters, the operators jockeyed for time when the matter was presented to them, and immediately transformed the conference into a secret meeting of the wage scale sub-committee.

Probable Shut Down.

Observers here are confident of a suspension of work next April, whether it be called a strike or not, because of the ninety million tons of coal accumulated by the companies and consumers as well as dealers in preparation for a walk-out. It will take about sixty days to use this up and release the capital invested in it.

ADMIRAL LATIMER EXPECTED TO SEIZE NICARAGUA FOR UNITED STATES IN A FEW DAYS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Six airplanes and 200 additional marines have been dispatched to Nicaragua from San Diego, Cal., the navy department announced this afternoon. The planes—all of the D-H type—will be used, it was stated, largely for observation purposes. To keep Admiral Julian Latimer in touch with the east and west coasts of the Central American republic. But a significant touch was added with the reminder that, in case of emergency, they could be equipped with 25-pound bombs. The destroyer tender Melville will convoy the latest American detail to Corinto.

This movement was interpreted in many quarters as additional indication of Latimer's intention of declaring the whole of Nicaragua to be a "neutral zone" within the next few days.

Farm "Relief" Bill Passes Test Vote

Opponents Try Parliamentary Tricks But Lose Steadily

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Fighting a losing cause desperately, opponents of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill in the House fell back on every trick in the bag of filibuster tactics this afternoon in an effort to prevent a vote. Votes were forced on no less than 29 amendments, roll calls being demanded in almost every instance.

The farm bloc was still in the saddle late in the day, however, retaining its original majority, and hopeful of a vote some time tonight.

Substantial Majority.

It won a test victory in the House today when a motion to substitute the Aswell agricultural bill for the McNary-Haugen measure was defeated, 144 to 160. This was regarded as the biggest hurdle the McNary-Haugen bill has to take in its road to enactment, and indicates the final passage of the measure.

Reject Grange Plan.

The bloc won another victory by voting down the Curtis-Crisp bill, 177 to 156.

Still another victory was chalked up by the bloc when it defeated, 33 to 110, a motion by Rep. Jones (D) of Texas, to substitute the debenture plan sponsored by the National Grange.

Tammany Bargains.

Tammany democrats in the House are trading their votes to the farm bloc on the McNary-Haugen bill in exchange for future southern and western support of Governor Al Smith's presidential ambitions, Rep. Fish (R) of New York, charged today during debate on the farm relief measure.

Fish declared the New York congressmen who are supporting the bill are doing so with the hope and expectation of lining up delegates that will vote for Smith in the 1928 convention.

Opportunistic More.

The deal with Tammany is only the latest of a series of the most unprincipled and opportunistic "cow-trades" that have ever been in congress. The farm bloc has been built up of the most diverse elements.

In the Senate alliance was made between the middle western senators anxious to placate the rich farmers and small bankers, and the big banking interests who wanted to pass the McFadden-Pepper Branch Banking act. Along with them came the industrial groups who desire lower taxes. And there were others.

Supporters Worried.

The result is that some of the support of the bill is crumbling away, due to the realization on the part of "farmer" and small banking representatives that what they might gain by the farm bloc bill, they would lose and more likewise, through the branch banking bill.

Occupy Important City of Hangchow

Revolutionary Forces Smash Thru Sun's Lines As Northern Generals Join Nationalists

SHANGHAI, Feb. 17.—The Cantonese are now in full control of Hangchow.

The forces of Sun Chuan Fang have withdrawn and a nationalist regime has been established.

The fall of Hangchow to the Cantonese is the stiffest blow that the defenders of Shanghai have suffered.

Sun's Army Demoralized.

Sun's army became demoralized when General Bei Pao-San, garrison commander at Yenchow, suddenly moved his forces toward Chuchow for the purpose of joining up with the Cantonese.

This defection was largely responsible for the debacle suffered by Sun, to whom the treachery was wholly unexpected.

The city of Fuyang, eighteen miles southwest of Hangchow was captured by the Cantonese. The southerners attacked Sun Chuan-Fang's lines from three directions, the attacks all converging toward Hangchow.

Refugees were streaming out of Hangchow and other cities along the railroad.

Kuomintang (nationalist) headquarters today revealed that Chiang Kai-Shek plans to take Hangchow, Kashing and Sunkiang, in Chekiang province, hence driving toward Soochow and Changchow, cutting the Nanking railroad. Chiang then plans to launch his drive directly on Shanghai.

The British transport Rohna arrived today with a contingent of British artillery, a company of miners and sappers, a field hospital and doctors and nurses.

Perhaps and Perhaps Not.

PEKIN, Feb. 17.—The Northern China government is ready to compromise with the Cantonese government, according to a statement published in a Chinese paper here and attributed to the legal adviser of Marshal Chang Tso Lin.

The readiness for compromise is due to a desire to present a united front to the powers, it is stated.

Hear of Sun's Defeat.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The foreign office admitted today that there is no prospect of an immediate agreement with Eugene Chen, Cantonese foreign minister, regarding the future of Hankow.

The question has now become involved in the wider question of assurances regarding Shanghai and the possibility of negotiations with other Chinese authorities, the foreign office stated.

News of the defeats suffered by Sun Chuan Fang, British imperialist tool has been received by the foreign office.

U. S. Troops Ordered to China.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The American transport, Chaumont, with several hundred U. S. marines aboard, has been ordered to proceed direct to Shanghai as the result of reports of the fall of Hangchow according to a central news dispatch from Shanghai.

The central news states that this announcement has been made in Shanghai by the American consul there.

Exposure of Letters Reveals Chamberlain Plot With Czarists

MOSCOW, Feb. 17.—The publication of fascimiles of secret correspondence of ex-czarist diplomats now living in England, "reveals the existence of a conspiracy between Winston Churchill, Lord Birkenhead, Locker Sampson and Sir William Joynson Hicks with czarist agents to bring a break" in the trade relations between England and Soviet Russia, according to the newspaper Pravda today.

The letters boast that the English government has recognized the defacto czarist diplomats in London where representatives of the White Russians are now living, and is framing its Russian policy according to their advice.

French Cabinet Talks Armaments; No Time to Discuss Any Debts Now

PARIS, Feb. 17.—The postponement of ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt accord until autumn was foreshadowed today when the cabinet decided to ask parliament to discuss military reform, the 1928 budget and electoral reform, before adjourning July 14.

These discussions would allow no time for a debt discussion, which it is now believed can not be taken up before a special session beginning in October.

LABOR BANKERS ALSO BACK NEW WALL ST. LAW

Senate May Look Into Charge of Lobbying

A senatorial investigation into charges that banking lobbies have furnished in the halls of congress was imminent today as a sequel to final enactment of the McFadden-Pepper branch banking bill.

The Hand of Green.

Coincident with this, and during the debate upon it, it was revealed that the bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor had been actively lobbying for the passage of the bill, thus continuing its policy of class collaboration, and showing the influence of labor banking on a capitalistic basis on the political programs of the unions.

Reactionary Bill.

The bill, granting the Federal Reserve System a perpetual charter and considerably enlarging the powers of national banks, so that they may crush all opposition and become a centralized combine, went to the White House this morning for the signature of President Coolidge. The president was expected to sign the bill without hesitation.

Glass Makes Charge.

Senator Nye during the debate over the bill read letters showing that the big banking interests were subtly bribing certain lawyer members of the senate with offers of patronage.

However, the proponents of the bill seized the offensive, today, and made the attack, on the principle, evidently, that that was their best defense. The investigation itself was proposed by Senator Carter Glass (D) of Virginia, one of the measure's leading advocates. He charged that a group of small bankers had banded together to raise a $100,000 fund with which to promote opposition to the measure.

"I have plenty of evidence about the activities of this lobby," said Glass, "I have definite information, too, but I will make it public only to the investigating committee.

"This lobby directed its fight first for enactment of the so-called Hull amendment but when they were defeated, fought on the bill itself. They were active up to the minute of the vote in the senate, and I saw one of their lobbyists out in the corridor ten minutes before the vote, pouring his poison into the ear of a senator. The senate should investigate such activities in order to safeguard its own integrity."

More Lobbyists.

FARMER-LABOR REVIVAL COMES TO NORTHWEST

Workers' Clubs, Local Unions, Affiliate

(Special to DAILY WORKER.)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 17.—The Farmer-Labor movement is reviving. After the elections of last November, the capitalist press in various widespread sections of the country announced gleefully that it had been practically liquidated in the Northwest, because of the results of the Minnesota elections. That the wish is father to the thought is proven by the fact that the working farmers and industrial workers of Minnesota are going ahead energetically with the work of building up their party, and are already making plans for the campaign of 1928.

Conference To Reorganize.

The Farmer-Labor Conference held in St. Paul, Jan. 17—18, as reported in a recent issue of The DAILY WORKER, affirmed the need for a national party of workers and farmers in 1928, and authorized its officers to call a state convention within the next few months for the purpose of laying down plans and developing intensive activities for the success of the party ticket in the next election. Proposals were also adopted in favor of a Northwest Conference to be held some time during the summer, to be followed by a national convention for the launching of a national ticket.

Seek Affiliation.

The results of the Jan. 17-18 conference are already manifest in the revival of activity in different sections of the state. It is reported that many worker clubs, cooperatives and local unions are applying to the state office of the Farmer-Labor Association for affiliation, and indications are that these applications will come in increasing numbers during the coming weeks and months.

The farmers in the outlying sections and the workers in the cities have received the reports of the conference with enthusiasm, which has been translated into definite work for the building up of a solid, united party in the state, which augurs well for the success of the party ticket in the next general election.

Labor Unions Busy.

In Duluth and Minneapolis, labor organizations are at present busying themselves with the municipal campaigns. Preliminary conferences have been held in both cities, where sentiment was expressed in favor of the behalf of independent political action of the workers and farmers in municipal as well as in state and national elections. In the near future, the Hennepin County Committee of the Farmer-Labor Association will convene for the purpose of discussing the candidates for municipal offices, and in this connection the overwhelming sentiment is that the workers should run a Farmer-Labor ticket to the municipal elections, and that there should be no deals or trading with the candidates of the old line parties.

Such a campaign in Minneapolis at the present time would doubtless revive and rebuild the Farmer-Labor Association and develop yet further the powerful Farmer-Labor sentiment that was expressed in the last elections in Minnesota by a vote of 266,000 for the Farmer-Labor ticket.

Earthquake Shock.

Rush More Marines To Nicaragua Front

ceived from Mexico City, that the Nicaraguan (Sacasa) representatives there, Pedro Zepeda, has stated that no further "neutral zones" will be permitted.

"Every time the liberals capture a town," said Zepeda, "Admiral Latimer cheats them of the victory by declaring that town a 'neutral zone.' This will not be tolerated indefinitely. Though the liberal forces are not anxious to engage in conflict with the U. S. marines, they will apparently be forced to defend themselves sooner or later.

Matagalpa Test.

He stated that the liberal administration of the important city of Matagalpa, just captured, would show the world that "neutral zones" were not necessary to preserve order.

He reiterated that his party was willing to negotiate with Admiral Latimer for a settlement admitting of the elimination of Dr. Juan Sacasa, head of the present liberal government at Puerta Cabezas, provided Gen. Adolfo Diaz, head of the conservative government at Managua, also was eliminated. Otherwise they would fight until Diaz was overthrown. The Nicaragunn people would not support any other agreement, he said.

Zepeda announced receipt of advices that liberal forces under Gen. Mena had inflicted a "crushing defeat" upon conservatives at Bocal del Pinta.

Aid from Honduras.

The Nicaraguan civil war is becoming daily more serious, despite the indirect aid given Adolfo Diaz by the American occupational forces through the establishment of "neutral zones" in the pathway of the victorious Sacasa revolutionists.

A new revolution is reported brewing in Honduras and may break out next week. Honduras followed the lead of the United States in recognizing the Diaz regime in Nicaragua, which inflamed the liberal element of the republic to the point where it gave impetus to the revolutionary movement that smouldered beneath the surface.

In Guatemala, next door to Mexico and Nicaragua, extensive army recruiting is reported under way, financed in part by a loan of a million and a half pesos just secured from Mexico. Guatemala has consistently refused to recognize Diaz in Nicaragua, although pressure was brought by the state department to persuade her to do so. Guatemala is also one of those countries in which the state department considers "radical Mexican doctrine" has made great headway.

Latimer Fails.

The efforts of Admiral J. K. Latimer, in charge of the American occupational forces, to defeat the Nicaraguan liberals have resulted thus far in no success whatever, according to reports reaching Washington. Several reports from Latimer have reached the state department in the last few days, but none of them have been made public.

LOCAL 38 ILGWU TO VOTE TODAY AT BRYANT HALL

Local 38, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union will hold its regular election today for the new term. The voting will start at noon and end at 7:30 p. m., at Bryant Hall, 42nd St. and Sixth Ave.

"Yankel Bimberg."

Brazen interferences in the regular affairs of a local union are being used by the right wing. Upon their interference, their vice-president, Mollie Friedman, S. Greenberg and one from Philadelphia, are sitting as visiting members of the election objection committee in order to give the right wing group in the local a majority on that committee.

There is no provision in the constitution of the I. L. G. W. which gives appointees of Sigman such rights, but what is a constitution when it interferes with Sigman's policies. This action of Sigman created a furor among the members and unusual participation in the elections is expected.

Full Progressive Ticket.

The progressives in the local who carried it thru an organization campaign and strike, winning the 40-hour week and a 10% wage increase in a ten-day strike, have put up a full ticket for the various offices and are confident of victory.

The usual bunk is spread by the right wing group that the strike was a failure, that the last wing administration spent too much money, that the organization campaign which brought the membership of the local from 1,000 to 1,200 was a joke, etc., false issues as Communism were also used, the same as the bosses do. The brisk cannabign of the progressives has dumbfounded this propaganda.

The progressive group appeals to all its friends and supporters to vote for the following.

Secretary-organizer: B. Wishnevsky, chairman of the local; A. Abraham; vice-chairman, Morris Goodman; secretary of local, Sarah Packer; members of executive board, X 6 G. Berry; X 7 C. Wm. Rubinsky; X 11 H. Fomin; X 15 Wm. Lupu; X 16 B. Mosopust; X 18 J. Pavlicek; X 20 H. Rosenberg; X 21 A. Sherman; X 22 C. Wilker, X 31 Asia Lamp; X 32 Rose Lamb; dressmakers, X 27 Bella Cohen; X 28 Eva Cohen, X 29 Olga Carabilo, sick committee, X 34 E. Sherman; X 36 Mary Sherman; trustees X 48 J. Goodman.

HUDSON DRIVERS WIN STRIKE FOR $45 WEEK SCALE

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Feb. 17.—The strike of the 400 Hudson Boulevard bus drivers in progress for the last thirteen days was ended this afternoon by the signing of a three year wage contract. The drivers are to get $44 weekly for the first year and $45 a week the next two years.

The settlement of the strike followed the presentation of a compromise plan by President Joseph Payton of the Hudson County Boulevard Commission. The strikers had been asking for $45 weekly while the bosses had refused to pay more than $42.50.

Return To Work.

After the formal signing of the agreement it was announced that the workers will be back to their posts at 3:15 tomorrow afternoon.

The first news that the strike was nearing its end was seen yesterday at a conference held at the headquarters of the Boulevard Commission, where representatives of the workers, the bosses and the Boulevard Commission meet.

At this meeting Moses Greenberg, representing the bus owners, stated they were willing to pay the workers $44 this year and $45 in the future.

This was a complete change from Greenberg's former policy of stubbornly insisting that the workers return at the $42.50 a week rate. Last Thursday Greenberg went so far as issuing an ultimatum demanding that the workers return by Monday at $40 a week. His complete change of tone from that day's threatening remarks of last Thursday is looked upon as a victory for the workers.

are rich." This is nonsense. The British labor party is led by such proletarians like J. R. Thomas, Arthur Philip Snowden, J. R. Clynes and James MacDonald. The peers in the British labor party are few and have little influence in the labor party councils.

The labor party leaders mentioned here are just as loyal to the imperialist system as the peers. Indeed more so. The peers have had their fill of flunkeyism. The debauched ex-proletarians are just tasting the sweets and they want more. However, the important thing to consider in connection with the British labor party is not that there are a few peers scattered among its membership or that MacDonald, Snowden and Thomas are willing tools of capitalism, but that the British proletariat has left behind it the time when its leaders could be imported to Van Diemen's Land for daring to beg the master class for an extra loaf at brend a day.

Colonel McCormick has no doubt stopped at the Hotel Cecil or some other high-class London hotel and did not see behind the decksaed or renegade peers who decorate the higher reaches of the labor party. The Colonel says that the leadership of the British labor party wants a revolution. It does not. It is quite contented with the status quo. But the revolutionary elements in the British working class movement want a revolution and they are going to have it, since without it they cannot exist except in a condition of servitude.

A good short story could be written about his mental travail during the time he was at the mercy of the illegitimate businessmen who courted his cash.

Prior to becoming secretary of the Democratic State Committee, Powers was for years one of the democratic leaders of the southern tier.

He was once president of the common council of Binghamton. At one time he held a state position in Binghamton Hospital, and later was identified with the old state excise department.

There Are No Champions of Labor in Congress to Expose the Capitalists

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

NOT content with having delivered a knockout blow to the small bankers, thru the passage of the McFadden-Pepper Branch Banking Bill, the big bankers now propose to rub it in a little more by investigating a $100,000 lobby that the little fellows are alleged to have maintained. This develops more clearly than ever that the struggle over the bill was a bitter war between the big and little bankers, with the so-called farm bloc split both ways.

It was brought out that the lobbyists of the American Federation of Labor supported the big bankers. This is explained in part, it is claimed, thru the development of labor banking, altho only the banks of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers can be benefitted by the provisions of this legislation. The branch system has not yet been taken up by the other labor banks. An additional explanation is the close relation of the A. F. of L. officials with the great capitalists, thru the development of union-company management schemes, that force them into alliance with the big exploiters as against the middle class elements.

Thus while the reactionary labor officialdom goes over to big money, the La Follette progressives, with whom the A. F. of L. was associated in the 1924 campaign, protest their loyalty to the small bankers, voting for them and against the McFadden-Pepper bill.

Altogether, with some reactionary support, only 17 votes were cast in the senate against the big bankers' bill, with this small opposition almost equally divided between democrats and republicans. But the total of opposition came from western farming states. There were Frazier and Nye from North Dakota; La Follette, from Wisconsin; Shipstead from Minnesota; Howell and Norris from Nebraska, Master from South Dakota; Stewart and Steek from Iowa; Gooding from Idaho; Walsh and Wheeler from Montana. Bill from Washington, Breese and Ilieflin from the South, and Deneen from Illinois. There was nothing east of the Mississippi Valley while the big bankers got big support from senatorial delegations all the way from coast to coast.

McNary, the author of the McNary-Haugen Bill, voted with Wall Street, as did Schall from Minnesota, and Capper and Curtiss from Kansas.

It should be impossible for the La Follette progressives that had progressive labor in the cities and on the land into the McNary-Haugen trap, to soothe the wrath that must inevitably arise, then using explosive phrases against the moneyed crowd.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (democrat, Montana) announces that he welcomes the inquiry of the big bankers. In attacking the bill, which included a near fist fight with one of its chief sponsors, Senator Glass (democrat, Virginia) Wheeler charged that the great banking interests of the country had maintained a lobby in Washington solely for the purpose of forcing passage of the measure. Senator Nye joined Wheeler with the declaration that "never so adroit, so powerful or so successful a lobby had ever gathered in the halls of the capitol" as worked in behalf of the McNary-Haugen Bill.

The question naturally arises, what do Wheeler and Nye think the big bankers are in business for? It is certainly not for the purpose of handing out doles to the little bankers out west, on the verge of bankruptcy or already in the hands of the receivers. They are in business to wine out the little fellows, in order to increase their own power, and if they send their best lobbyists to Washington to get the required legislation, that is "good business."

If the big bankers have better lobbyists than the little bankers, that merely shows that they take their class interests more seriously and take greater care in conserving those interests.

In 1924 the LaFollette movement, in developing "the third party" while the elder LaFollette still remained in the republican party, sought to bring in the workers and farmers, with the claim that this third party movement really was a labor party movement. But it was actually used to disrupt and betray the labor party movement, a treason cleverly carried out under the direction of the late Sam Gompers, assisted by those forces that are now red-raiding against the left wing in the trade unions.

Having thus become adepts at treason, this same LaFollette movement, through its surrender to the McNary-Haugen farm relief program, which included support of the McFadden-Pepper legislation, again committed a second betrayal, this time of the middle class. The appetite for treason was well developed at Coolidge's breakfasts.

It should thus be very apparent to the rank and file workers that they are totally without representation in congress. The great capitalists got all but 17 members of the Senate on the bank bill vote. Those 17 represent the wavering middle class politicians.

Before such a spectacle, the American producing masses must realize more than ever the big fight ahead for the development of their class power. Big and little capitalism both have lobbies in Washington, both in the legislative chambers and in the adjoining corridors. Through the development of their labor party, the workers and farmers must send their "lobby" to Washington to expose the enemy capitalists and fight for labor's interests until such time as the workers can take over all power and build their own government.

Illinois Mine Workers Convention Will Meet; Frank Farrington Gone

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 17. (FP). The Illinois Mine Workers, Dist. 12 of the U. M. W. A., will hold their 31st convention in Peoria. It will be the first convention in many years to meet without the presence in the chair of Frank Farrington, who sold out while president to the Peabody Coal Co. At last reports Farrington was in a sanitarium.

If a strike comes April 1 when the Jacksonville national agreement expires there will be no scabbing in Illinois as the district is 100% organized. Even in the 1922 strike the only attempt at strikebreaking was at a surface strip mine near Herrin and that was stopped before any coal was shipped out.

If the committee of miners and operators convenes in Miami Feb. 14 to negotiate a new national scale reaches an agreement before March the Illinois miners will probably act on it.

Delegates to the convention will be paid $9.60 per day, except Sundays, and $5 a day expenses.

with Glass last Saturday while leading the opposition to the bill, announced he welcomed the inquiry. In attacking the bill, Wheeler charged the great banking interests of the country had maintained a lobby in Washington solely for the purpose of forcing passage of the measure. He was joined in his charges by Senator Nye (R) of North Dakota, who declared that "never so adroit, so powerful or so successful a lobby had ever gathered in the halls of the capital" as worked in behalf of the McFadden-Pepper bill.

The resolution, proposing the investigation, as sponsored by Glass, was referred to the senate committee on control of contingent expenses. It would authorise the senate committee on banking and currency to conduct the inquiry.

SETTLE TWO MORE PASSAIC TEXTILE MILL WALK-OUTS

Terms Along Same Line As Forstman-Huffman

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Feb. 17. — The strike in two more Passaic textile mills ended yesterday when the workers of the Gera Mills and the New Jersey Worsted Mills at a meeting held at Mokray Hall, Fourth Street, Passaic, decided to return to work on terms similar to those accepted by the Forstman and Huffman workers earlier in the week.

Starr Reads Letter.

James Starr, vice president of the United Textile Workers of America, who has been conducting the strike, read to the assembled workers a letter that Judge Cabell received on Tuesday from the vice-president and general manager of the Gera and New Jersey Worsted mills, both owned by the same corporation. In this letter the bosses stated that their workers could belong to any organization they desired without any discrimination.

Vote for Acceptance.

After Starr read this letter at the meeting, presided over by Gustav Deak, president of the local union, speeches in favor of acceptance were made by Ell Kaller, secretary of the local; Francesco Ceco, general organizer; Ben Leninski, Polish organizer and several others.

A secret ballot was then taken which showed almost unanimous agreement for acceptance.

About 2,500 workers are effected by this decision. It is believed that some of the workers will return to the mill by tomorrow and others will follow suit within a short time.

The only mill which is still on strike now is the United Piece Dye works of Lodi, N. J.

Starr Tells of Settlement.

In his speech Starr said:

"We have been trying for quite some time to get some sort of understanding or agreement. But owing to the circumstances that surrounded the Gera Mills they were not free to act before because Mr. Forstmann had a one sum of $100,000 over their head and so long as Mr. Forstmann held out they held out.

"We have done our best, but we have not succeeded as far as we have with Botany, Passaic Worsted and Dundee. But even with the settlement we now have there's a good chance for us to go ahead and land without any interference from the employers.

Sees Strong Union Coming.

"If you workers want to maintain an organization and protect yourselves in the future you have the opportunity. This time should not be far distant when we should have a powerful organization as we are building now in Botany and the other mills.

"Some of the workers of the labor movement and its sympathizers think that the workers in Passaic and vicinity were unable to hold out so long. When a strike of 16,000 workers goes into effect and holds out for one year and more, it should teach the employers that the workers had real grievances, otherwise they would not have been kept out so long by any man or set of men.

Praises Doggedness of Strikers.

"You have stuck doggedly by your convictions. You have fought courageously for a union. The waiting class of the country, and even the press, have given credit to you because of your courage and tenacity. And I am convinced that the American labor movement will continue to send you relief while you are waiting to return to work.

"The workers have at last conceded the right of their workers to belong to any trades union organization. You have forced them to say that they will not discriminate against workers for belonging to a union.

KELLOGG REFUSES TO GIVE SENATE NOTES TO MEXICO

Divulges that American Oil Men Defy Law

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Secretary of State Kellogg today answered the Norris resolution in the senate for information on the situation of American oil properties in Mexico and the negotiations about them with Mexico, with a refusal to turn over the correspondence, by stating that the state department will not advise the companies what it will do, and that the state department considers all the oil companies that have acquired land in Mexico to have obtained it legally.

"Vested Rights" in Mexico.

"Ever since the question at issue arose during the administration of President Wilson the government of the United States has consistently maintained and continues to maintain that there should be no question as to the security of valid and vested rights which have been acquired by American citizens in accordance with Mexican laws as they existed at the time of their acquisition. This attitude of the government was asserted by the American commissioners in the conference in Mexico City in 1923, and there is no departure from it in the understanding which they reached with the Mexican commissioners; and the government of the United States has maintained this position in the recent diplomatic correspondence upon the question between the United States and Mexico."

Land Was Stolen.

The fact that many of the oil companies secured their titles from the Diaz and Huerta governments, which simply robbed the land from its Mexican owners and sold it for a song to foreign capitalists was not even considered by Kellogg in his reply to Norris.

Won't Show Notes.

Kellogg refused to turn over correspondence between the department and persons and corporations interested in Mexican oil lands, on the ground that such correspondence "has been necessarily voluminous." The correspondence, he said, "consists almost exclusively of inquiries or information concerning the Mexican petroleum law and the official attitude of this government with respect thereto. The department has consistently refrained from giving advice and counsel to such persons and corporations as to the course which they should themselves pursue."

Americans Defy Law.

Only four American companies have applied for confirmatory concessions under the provisions of the petroleum law, the statement declared. These companies were: Pennmex Fuel Co., Texas Petrolene & Asphalt Co., East Coast Oil Co., and New England Oil Co.

"I understand," Kellogg said, "that the first two mentioned companies are not actively producing petroleum in Mexico and that the last two own no free properties in that country."

Don't Know How Many.

More than 30 concerns which acquired oil properties prior to May 1, 1917, have not yet applied for concessions, Kellogg said. The names of these companies were included in the statement with the qualification that the state department has found it impossible to furnish a complete list.

About 20 other companies have definitely refused to accept the new petroleum law, according to the statement. These companies, although [illegible] hold their titles in the name of Mexican companies.

Steel Depression Staggering to Wall Street

Annalist Sees End of Prosperity Era

By WALLPROL

Good by, good times!

The industrial machine, geared to the tune of profits, has reached the top of the grade and is now sliding down hill with a rapidity sickening to Wall Street.

That the swing from a prosperity that was a gold mine to the investing class but only meant a little less unemployment to the worker, to real depression has been on the road for months was well known down here in the narrow caverns of financial Manhattan. The fat, sleek old gents who finger ticker tape nervously and look into the future anxiously, have known ever since November that the industrial activity of 1923-26 is going to slacken.

Now they admit it. Annalist, staid financial weekly of the New York Times, voices their fears in its current issue, being read today in every office below Fulton street. In its summary of the business outlook, Annalist says:

"Conditions in the entire field of the steel and iron industry point to a developing recession in business more pronounced than could have been safely inferred from the year's earlier records. The movement looks increasingly like the true cyclical decline to be expected unless new credit stimulus prevents."

Quick, Watson, the needle! That is old lady Annalist's idea of the only way to keep factories, mills, mines and railroads running. The needle of credit inflation, easier money and more stock speculation!

The needle may be used. That was why Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, was gumshoeing around New York and Washington the other week. He was in heavy conference with Strong, Mellon, Jay and other financial overlords of these free and independent United States, contriving for a reduction of the bank rate from 5 to 4½ per cent in both Threadneedle Street in ol' London and Wall Street, simultaneously, just like that. Proving of course that there is not the slightest connection between the Bank of England and the Federal Reserve System, any more than there is between the British foreign office and the American state department.

Annalist based its sour prediction on the sad plight of the iron and steel market where prices sag due to decline in orders. Iron and steel but reflect the reduced activity in automobile and building, two of the main supports of prosperity. Production of automobiles in the Detroit district, Pittsburgh and Canada in January was 20 per cent below December production and 30 per cent below January, 1926. Auto production stamped in December by the lowest point since 1921 and is now recovering in a slow halting manner. Building continues to go forward, but not so fast as last year, under the pressure of the investment market seeking any old outlet for its accumulated billions of surplus values.

Production, true to capitalist economics, has pressed forward far faster than the workers—the consumers—have been able to buy back the fruits of their toil. Now the whole machine has to slow down while millions haunt factory gates, unless—

"...unless new credit stimulus prevents."

But some of the "best minds," and among them H. Parker Willis, editor of the New York Journal of Commerce, professor of banking at Columbia and financial adviser to the Irish Free State warns that another hypodermic shot in the arm will send industry straight into the DTs. More credit, from the huge well of surplus values, may finance production by enabling manufacturers to keep their plants operating. More credit may also finance added installment buying.

Too Much Stimulus Now.

But there's a limit, says Parker Willis, and we're there already, with seven billion dollars tied up in installment finance, the banks handling 14 billion dollars more paper than is needed for ordinary capitalist needs and Wall Street using 3 billion dollars just for speculatin' on the stock exchange.

Another shot in the arm, and the patient will jump off the topmost tower of the Woolworth Building into the bay. (Willis says, not us).

I wonder many a sugar daddy after his night is cloard by Jimmy Walker's 3 a. m. curfew, tosses his gray old head on a sleepless pillow, wondering how he's going to finance his Miller, entertainments and tuxedo this week. Either industrial depression now, or more credit and a real row of a depression in a year or two.

But back to the Annalist.

The most confident man can read Annalist's own dope right here:

Annalist's Statement.

For the second time this year the outstanding feature of the week's business records is the general weakness in metal prices, a weakness represented by specific and considerable price declines in practically the whole range of steel products and pig iron, and extending also to a slight drop in zinc and a substantial drop of one-half a cent a pound in copper.

From several points of view the movement of metal prices since the beginning of the year, together with the slightly sagging tendency of the general commodity price average, seems to be one of the most significant items in the prospect of this year's business. The fact is pretty generally recognized that the demand for steel, which enters an almost infinite number of final consumption forms, is a very significant reflection of the plans and expectations of the whole sweep of business which is concerned with the final manufacture and selling of steel products.

It is also generally recognized (and is a fact of specific and detailed record) that the country's equipment for producing all forms of steel as well as pig iron is more than equal to supplying a far greater demand than has ever existed—hence that there is a very large surplus of producing capacity over present demand. The shrinkage in present demand from the high levels of last year must be attributed in part to the uncertainty in the mind of steel consuming business as to the prospect of marketing at a profit last year's volume of steel; in other words the steel consuming business of the country is not planning for business of the next six months. Being thus uncertain as to the prospects, the steel consuming business asks for price concessions from the steel producers; the steel producers, having an excessive capacity, lower their prices; price concessions beget buying, but still further price reduction, delay ordering such steel as they really expect to need.

Plant Over-expanded.

The significance of the situation just sketched is not limited to the steel and iron industry. Much the same situation in varying degrees exists for the industry of the country as a whole. There is obvious uncertaintly in business minds about the business outcome of the next six months, and this is reflected in pressure for lower prices for all manufactured commodities and all manufactured materials and as much delay as is practicable in order to take advantage of possible further price concessions. The producing plant, taking industry as a whole, seems considerably in excess of the present reduced demand, is therefore driven to shade prices in order to get hesitating orders.

This seems to be in a broad, general way the position of the country's business. The condition does not inevitably forecast still further hesitation developing into a visible recession of enough decisiveness to lower seriously the general activity of production and trade. But as this article pointed out a month ago—and the opening paragraphs of this present article sketch in some of the main forces and conditions—the general position of production and demand suggests that there is present the beginning of what I in its essential quality a true cyclical recession.

CHINESE SPEAK AT ANTI-IMPERIALIST WORLD MEETING

Pledge to Join Workers In International Fight

BRUSSELS, Feb. 17.—The Anti-Imperialist Alliance organized by the oppressed people of the whole world was formally opened at Feb. 11th in Brussels, the capital of Belgium. Besides the delegates sent by Mexico, Nicaragua, India, Egypt, and Germany, the greatest number of delegates came from Chinese delegates. The regulations had been passed at the opening day. The alliance decided "to ally with the oppressed people of the whole world in order to fight imperialism and to cooperate with the workers of the whole world in order to improve the conditions of the working class."

In the succeeding conferences, such topics as the dispatch of soldiers by the British to China, the oppression of the Mexicans and Nicaraguans by the U. S. had been discussed. The representatives of the Kuomintang and the Chinese nationalist government delivered speeches which had great influence in the alliance.

New York Teachers Are Mechanized by Educational Czars

(By a Worker Correspondent)

While the factory worker has the peacemaker and the speed up to pester him, the teacher has the supervisors and principal. The busybodies criticize petty details, insist on numerous rattings for the teacher and exams for the pupils, to make his work distasteful.

One strains throughout a term to carry an entire class over a certain amount of work. Perfect discipline, which means absolute quiet, must be maintained in the class room at all times. Children must sit still, without talking all day. When standing, leaving the room, going around the building, the pupils must go according to rule. Each principal has his own pet formulas.

Clerical work is a part of our task also and must be done whenever you can find time. But you are permitted to take time to collect and record the money which the children bring to hand over to the banks.

At any time we have extra work piled up for us in the form of drives for whatever the capitalist world is interested in. In almost all the schools of the city teachers are working under these almost unbearable conditions with the additional burden of part time.

In our building we have all the nerve racking conditions described by Frank Harris' incomparable of an old inadequate plant. Here there is no covered yard into which the children may come in bad weather.

One of our classrooms, the one in which I work, is a passageway. No such thing as uninterrupted teaching can be done in this room. The children are distracted by doors continually banging, or someone always passing.

And lastly, there has been absolutely no provision made for the comfort or health of the teachers. After grueling work a teacher has no place in which to rest or even in which to eat her lunch in decent privacy.

WU WOOS THE MUSE WHILE FOES FLIRT WITH HIS NECK

(By Our Chinese Correspondent).

THE report that Wu Pei-fu is spending his time composing poems in the flowery ancient language of the classics is causing some youthful amusement among the younger men of the Kuomintang here.

The spectacle of the former warlord, now sitting amidst the ruins of Chengchow, going into an apparent dotage of senile decay, is looked upon at times as tragic. But, for the most part, it is considered a tragi-comedy, its comedic aspects strike home here, especially amongst the hosts of young and modern-minded men who make up the ranks of the key of officialdom of the Nationalist Government and who are numerous among the Kuomintang Party workers.

One of these, whose knowledge of the classics was a foundation upon which has been super-imposed an education in economics at two American universities, has done some verses by way of reply to Wu Fei-fu. They are couched in the ancient language, and their quaint phrases have connotations which the savant will recognize.

For some of these phrases means precisely what it says. They form part of the language of symbolism, which is the real significance of the ancient Chinese language. Those phrases translated, the verses breathe the spirit of the new and modern age which is dawning for China under the auspices of Kuomintang domination. The verses follow.

The ancient-minded men of the North
Are as trees whose branches are withered.
In Kuangtung and on the old Yangtze
The soothing Sun is shining

Yellow Hair and a child's teeth—
Such is the ancient ideology of our enemies, who yet are our brothers.
They have known many changes of rain and grass cloth, [illegible] of Today
is not theirs.
Now we are reaching their end.
The future belongs to the fresh clean blood of youth.

A halo around the moon for wind,
And a moistened pavement before rain—
That, for the truly wise, is a portent of what is to come.
Between us and the ancient-minded men.

There is ice and ardent charcoal.
We see on the edge of the pool there grows the grass of spring.
The upper and the lower jaws trust each other.
We whet tho weapons and feed the horses.
We fight for the thorny arbutus that has flowers.

This constitutes the reply of Youth to Age in China. It is the answer of the new movement, compact of modernity and the west, to Old China, whose decadent ideas and technic are now in the midst of their last war.

U. S. Directs Financial Boycott Against the Mexican Government

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The United States is directing a financial and economic boycott against Mexico "that is far deadlier than armed intervention," Jose Miguel Bejarano, of the Mexican chamber of commerce, New York, charged before the Senate Foreign Relations Sub-Committee today.

"American bankers are refusing to renew loans in Mexico, and, in many cases, have recalled loans," Bejarano declared. "It is the general belief in Mexico that this financial boycott is being conducted at the direction of the state department."

Aimee Finds Venture, Or Adventure, of Hers Draws More Than Jesus

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. — The national capital had the "low down" today on the Aimee Semple McPherson case.

It got it last night straight from Aimee herself in the big Washington auditorium where 12,000 persons fought for 7,000 seats.

"What will it be, my friends," said the evangelist, "do you want to hear the story of my life, or the story of the second coming of the Lord Jesus?"

By a vote of about 3 to 1, the audience voted for the story of Aimee's life. They were willing to wait or forego entirely the other. So Aimee told 'em.

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Feb. 17.—Nearly 36,000 wool producers who marketed about 30,000,000 pounds of wool last year were represented by the executive of 29 co-operative marketing associations which met in the capital to discuss technical problems of marketing with officials of the department of agriculture.

This conference is one of a series called by Secretary Jardine following the action of grain growers' organizations in denouncing Jardine as an enemy of the farmer. Jardine's representative told the wool men that J. F. Walker, of the newly created division of co-operative marketing, will make a study of the production and marketing in New Zealand and Australia, because the wool from those countries threatens to diminish the American market. It is better graded and suited to mill requirements than is American wool generally.

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—The Rumanian nationalist party and the peasant party, have split over the question of the return of Prince Carol demanded by the nationalists.

Former Minister of the Interior Lupu led the secession of the former peasant party and reorganized the peasants again as a separate party. Lupu is credited with having republican leanings. In an interview at Bucharest he gave the details of how Juliu Maniu, head of the nationalist-peasant party, sent intermediaries back and forth between Bucharest and Paris to negotiate with Carol without the knowledge of the other members of the party. This caused he split.

Says America Spoils The Innocent Chinese

According to the Rev. Dr. Caleb R. Stetson, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, America spoils the Chinese who visit this country.

"The young men who come here from China after being taught by our missionaries there what christianity is are much disillusioned when they get to America," said Dr. Stetson. "They are disillusioned when they study in our pagan universities and when they see our pagan civilization. They find when they get here that christianity is almost a negligible quantity in our civilization. The result is that they get back to China worse than they came."

Portugese Revolution Refugees Flee to Spain

MADRID, Feb. 17.—Hundreds of Portuguese revolutionists and spies are making their way to Spain. Captain Jaime Moray, leader of the Oporto revolt, is among the numerous arrivals.

At Badajor the Spanish police arrested Portuguese Lieutenant-Colonel Alvaro Coope, the southern chief, who escaped from Lisbon in an automobile disguised as a peasant.

He was making his way to Madrid when it was discovered he had no passport.

BRANCH BANKING BILL LAYS BASIS FOR WORLD FINANCIAL ADVENTURE

WASHINGTON (FP)—Concealed in the re-chartering of the Federal Reserve Banks, which is the vital point in the McFadden banking bill given to passage under the cloture rule, is the bankers' plan for domination of world government as well as world business.

This was the warning given the senate by Senator Nye of North Dakota in protesting against passage of the measure.

Defies Governments.

He pointed out that the bill permits the Federal Reserve Banks to deal in foreign investment securities, and said it would make the big banking combine as to "valorize every bankrupt government in Europe" by manipulation of the securities to control the policies against political and social progress. Efforts are now being made, he said, to legalize the listing of these foreign securities on the New York stock exchange.

World Banking.

Foundations have already been laid for an international federative system, Nye stated. The British have lately established in India a duplicate of the American scheme, and the international bankers are reaching out from New York and London to gather into this arrestate of money the control of all countries in which international finance can get a hold. While America has shrunk back from the League of Nations and the World Court, it has blindly walked into the world government of finance, confirming the bankers' claims to dictate the conditions of life—the earnings, crop prices, wages and profits—of farmers, wage workers, merchants and all other classes of their subjects throughout.

"Already," he said, "this super-finance has more than half enslaved the world."

Nye's speech was one of the series of blows dealt the Mellon rechartering scheme, after a combination of democrats and republicans led by Glass of Virginia and Meehan of Connecticut had enforced the gag rule on debate. Senator Wheeler of Montana accused the bi-partisan alliance with handing over the nation to the bankers' mercies without giving the country notice that it was to do so. Borah of Idaho and Norris of Nebraska, Dill of Washington and Heflin of Alabama were among the opponents who spoke. Like Nye and Wheeler they asked why the senate was so eager to grant "relief" to the bankers' lobby while it had been so hostile to granting justice to the defiated farmers. They pointed out that the senate's adoption of the farm bill came only after the reactionaries had sure the measure would be nullified in the courts if not killed by veto.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Feb. 17.—The Hindustan Gadar Party (India's national party), in a special meeting on Feb. 7, 1927, unanimously adopted the following resolution:

"WHEREAS, British imperialism is the common enemy of China and India, and,

WHEREAS, the Chinese people are struggling to free themselves from this imperialism, and,

WHEREAS, it is in the interest of humanity at large that British imperialism must be destroyed at all costs,

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that we, The Hindustan Gadar Party, sympathize with, and endorse, in its entirety, the national program adopted by the Kuo Min Tang Party of China in its national struggle for freedom from the domination of the foreign powers, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that we condemn and repudiate very strongly all and every act of British imperialism in interfering in China's internal affairs, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that we express our disapprove of any and all acts of brutality committed by the Indians, in the British service, brought to China under brute force, to hinder in any way, shape or form the movement for the national freedom of China, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that if England declares war against China for whatsoever reasons, or under whatsoever pretext, we will oppose with all means at our disposal such a military campaign, advising our countrymen everywhere not to encourage, associate, or assist such malicious and unjust action on the part of the British Government, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that as a national government of India, we urge upon our countryman everywhere to render any assistance within their power to the people of China in their struggle for freedom, and oppose by all means the insidious activities of the British Government which may endanger the traditional friendship between two of the greatest nations of the globe, China and India, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that we request the government and the people of China not to have any understanding whatsoever with the British Government concerning India, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that all treaties and negotiations between China and India must be carried and approved of directly through the foreign office of the Hindustan Gadar Party (India's national government), and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the secretary be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to the Kuo Min Tang Party of China, to the press of India, to the press of China, and to the press of the United States of America.

LABOR ENTERS THE ELECTION FIGHT IN CHI

Ruthenberg Nominated For Mayor

By TOM KERNEY.

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—Although the usual noise and bustle of the mayoralty campaign is well under way here, the real vital issues are not being touched by the old capitalist candidates.

In the republican primaries there are three aspirants to the mayoralty nomination: Edward R. Litsinger of the Deneen-Brundage group; William Hale Thompson, ex-mayor, candidate of the Crowe-Galpin group, and John Dill Robertson, former health commissioner of Chicago, who is being backed by the Landin group and the so-called Chicago Business Men's Republican committee.

Dever Has Dems.

While in the republican primary there is a three-cornered fight, Mayor Dever will have easy sleighing in the democratic primary.

There are certain indications which lead one to suspect that the Robertson campaign is a "blind horse" to split the Thompson forces in favor of the Litsinger camp. These indications are (1) The main bulk of the personal filth hurled from the Robertson camp lands on the head of Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney, and his pet candidate, Thompson, while Litsinger is hardly mentioned; 2.) Certain followers of the Robertson camp have deserted for Litsinger, and there is talk going on of more desertions before the republican primary on Feb. 22.

But What About the Workers?

The fact that the issues are barely mentioned in the election rallies makes it hard to detect the class interests behind the smoke screen of personal filth. However, there is one thing that the workers can be sure of, and that neither the republican nor democratic candidates if elected will enact a single pro-labor measure in the local demonstration.

Workers Party Enters.

The Workers (Communist) Party here is raising the banner of independent working class politics in the local elections. Although it has placed its own mayoralty candidate in the field, C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, it is willing at any moment to withdraw him in favor of a candidate chosen on a united labor ticket and for a real labor program. Meanwhile, the Workers (Communist) Party is busy securing signatures on the petition for its own candidate.

Workers who wish to support working class politics against the anti-labor politics of the two capitalist parties are urged to stay away from the primaries of the republican and democratic parties, to sign the petition for the Workers Party candidate, to rave the question of the United Labor Ticket in workers' organizations and to register on March 15 for the general election on April 5.

THE FIVE MEMBERS OF CZECHO-SLOVAKIAN PARLIAMENT FOR OPPOSING CLERICAL LAWS

On January 19 in Prague began the trial of the four Communist deputies, Horsa, Šafránek, Krelíšek and Jilek, and the national socialist deputy, Knejšlik. The accusation is connected with the events in the Czechoslovakian parliament in June, 1926, when the Communist fraction obstructed the adoption of the customs bill and the bill for the increase of the salaries of the clergy.

The deputies are accused of infringement of the law for the protection of the republic and for causing serious bodily harm. In the indictment the prosecution attempts to transform this purely political trial into a process against common criminals. It is directed mainly against the Communist Party as an organization.

The leading judge of the proceedings does his best to exclude all political arguments. Every time one of the accused attempts to explain the political motives of the actions in question, the leading judge interferes.

When Comrade Šafránko pointed out that he, as a representative of the workers realized that the adoption of the customs bill meant a deterioration of the standard of life of the broad working masses, the judge interrupted him and stated that there was no time for political speeches.

When Comrade Krelíšek spoke, these interruptions became still more frequent. Comrad Krelíšek said: "The accusation, suppose that we wanted to prevent by mechanical means and technical obstruction, which is an old right of all parliaments and which was permitted also in the Austrian parliament, the Bohemian Diet and in the German Reichstag . . ."

Chairman: "I tolerate no political speeches, we would stay here a long time if I did."

Comrade Krelíšek: "For me it is a question of months and years and I can, therefore, not take care of half an hour or so of your time. By mechanical means one cannot prevent the adoption of a bill. We are not of the opinion that on important matters decision is passed only within the parliament; Marx called already such an opinion parlimentarian cretinism. . ."

Chairman: "I will not tolerate that you quote there all kinds of authors."

This is only an example of the methods used in this trial. After the examination of the accused, many clerical deputies appeared as witnesses and most of them did not repeat under oath their former statements. Their statements were vague and general.

ILLINOIS FEUD WHICH HORRIFIES POLITE PULITZER CAUSED BY STRIKEBREAKING

(Special to the DAILY WORKER.)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 17.—The end of the sensational gang feud between the Herrin and the Shelton in Southern Illinois is giving the St. Louis plute press a chance to revive the horror of "Bloody Williamson" county and trace it all back to the miners' strike of 1922. The shooting affray at Lester Strip mine in Herrin during that struggle, that threw the bosses of this region into a panic of frenzied "defense," cannot be forgotten.

Still Hunt Revenge.

The late Pulitzer's "independent" St. Louis Post-Dispatch remarks: "Had the people of Williamson County stood with the law and held up its hands, the Herrin incident would have ended with the labor fight at the Strip mine."

The veiled inference here is that the union miners who participated in the "labor fight" would not have been acquitted if the "people" had "held up the law" and Glen Young and the subsequent "lawlessness" would not have happened.

Young: a Gunman.

The present writer was on the scene for The DAILY WORKER in 1922 when Glen Young met his death from the gun of Ora Thomas, member of the miners' union, who died at the same time.

It was then established by The DAILY WORKER and ignored by the press generally that Glen Young was a corrupt gunman who was in the weak barricade at Lester mine at the time of the shooting in 1922, and escaped.

Ora Thomas was one of the leaders of the miners who took up arms in defease of their right to live. Glen Young came back to Herrin or was sent back—to "get even."

K. K. K. Against Union.

That is why Ora Thomas died. The "Ku Klux Klan" wave in Williamson County was, in reality, and all its other angles notwithstanding, an attack on the miners' union.

The subsequent killings and gangsterism that has made Herrin a constant source of first-page copy can in a large measure be traced back to the "labor fight" of 1922. But only insofar as the community was unbalanced by the fact that the coal operators did everything possible to break the miners' union.

It was no accident that Glen Young's extra-legal "crusade" was directed in most instances against union miners—principally foreign-born workers—the type who fought and won at Lester Strip mine.

Bosses Feel Defeat.

For the bosses, Lester Strip mine represents a shameful example of "lawlessness" that had its echo in death and later gangsterism of a particularly vicious sort.

For the workers, Lester Strip mine symbolizes a heroic fight for class interests against great odds. The union miners who fought there—Ora Thomas among them—are heroes of the working class. The "Ku Klux Klan" raids and the gangsterism that followed may be marked down as a logical corrallary to a struggle that released the most vicious forces of the system in an effort to break the fighting spirit that shone among the miners in 1922.

FOLLOW COMRADE JONES.

One day after the publication of the establishment of The DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund, we received from Comrade James R. Jones, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a pledge whereby he promises to pay one dollar on the second of every month to help The DAILY WORKER. It is this kind of steady, throughout-the-year, day-to-day support that will build up our paper. It is the solid phalanxes of shock troops like Comrade Jones, which will be its backbone and its main source of strength.

Comrade Jones is the pioneer. We are confident that he is but the first of a great army of DAILY WORKER supporters who are ready and willing to pledge one, five, ten dollars and more to place our paper solidly on its feet. We are all sick and tired of crises, panics, and scares. The only way to get rid of them is to provide a regular, all-the-year-round support of the paper. One of the best ways to do this is to join the ranks of the Sustainers of The DAILY WORKER. We do not propose to run any extended campaign for Sustainers. We are just issuing a quiet appeal to those who are most anxious to put The DAILY WORKER on a stable footing. If you are one of these comrades, we hope you will sign on the dotted line at once.—BERT MILLER.

DIARY OF EVENTS IN LAWRENCE MILL SECTION; SHOWS CONSPIRACY TO LENGTHEN WORKING DAY

LAWRENCE, Mass., Feb. 17.—The latter part of 1926 found the capitalist press spreading the bosses' propaganda for general wage cuts and lengthening of hours in New England.

On December 24th over 100 weavers of the Barnard mills in Fall River went on strike. These weavers were in previously paid at the rate of $1.00 per cut for weaving spot cotton; but a first reduction was made when the management of the plant announced that in the future, the price paid would be 90 cents per cut. This was followed with another reduction of 10 cents per cut. These workers are organized in what is called a Weaver's union and its secretary is William C. McNamara. The other 800 workers of the plant were thrown out of work.

Jan. 6.—Notices were posted in the Otis company mills at Ware, Mass., and Greenville, New Hampshire of a wage cut to go in effect Jan. 17th. About 1500 workers are employed in the Ware mill and 1,000 in the Greenville plant.

Closing Mills.

Jan. 7.—The press announced that the Uswico mill of the United States Worsted company in Lawrence, employing 1400 workers would close down officially February 1st but some departments would run until March. The company has a yarn mill in North Chemsford, Mass., a weaving plant in Lowell, Mass., and the Lawrence Dye Works and a weaving plant in Lawrence.

Jan. 10.—The Manomet mills, largest cotton yarn manufacturing plant in New Bedford, Mass., with between 4,000 and 5,000 workers announced today that it would close indefinitely.

Long Hours Bill.

A bill sponsored by the Arkwright Club, an organization of the textile bosses, to amend the 48-hour law to permit women and children to work 54 hours a week was filed with the clerk of the state senate today.

Jan. 11.—Upon call of Agent Irving Southworth of the Pacific mills, the industrial commission was called together today. "Andy" B. Sutherland, merchant, speaking for the textile bosses, urged the repeal of the 48-hour law that is in effect in Massachusetts.

Jan. 17.—A wage cut of at least 10 percent went into effect in the Otis company's plants of Ware, Mass., and Greenville, New Hampshire, today.

Jan. 18.—A reduction of 10 to 12½ percent in wages was announced today at the Star Worsted Mills, Fitchburg, Mass., where 300 workers are employed.

Central Union Denounces.

Jan. 20.—The Lawrence Central Labor union at its meeting tonight denounced the industrial commission for giving its aid in trying to repeal the 48-hour law and instructed its president, Robert J. Watt, to visit Mayor Rochfort and demand that the commission restrict itself to reviving old industries and procuring new ones.

Every delegate denounced those who would return the workers to the 54-hour week. There was no one present who defended the commission. It was voted to hold a monster mass meeting of the textile workers, Friday night, Feb. 11th, against the repeal of the 48-hour law. Final plans for the holding of a tag day, Saturday, Jan. 22, for the Passaic textile strikers was made.

"Sutherland Cringes."

Jan. 23.—"Andy" Sutherland, the Lawrence merchant and spokesman for the textile bosses, in a public statement tries to defend himself from the general condemnation of the workers for his efforts in aiding the bosses to repeal the 48-hour law, but makes matters worse for himself. It is said that his business has taken a decided drop the past week, workers buying their goods elsewhere.

Mayor Rochfort of Lawrence announced today that the textile bosses would meet with the Industrial Committee Tuesday evening, February the 8th. At this meeting the bosses will tell how much "cooperation" the workers must give to keep the industries going. According to them the workers haven't been speeded and doubled up enuf and altho they haven't found 54 hours a week for most of the textile workers for the past 3 years, they will want to increase the hours from 48 to 54.

Daily Worker Sold.

Jan. 31.—The DAILY WORKER was put on the Lawrence newsstands for the first time today.

Feb. 3.—Final plans for the big mass meeting to be held in Oliver Hood Bay hall, Friday evening, February 11th, were made at the Central Labor union tonight. A large committee representing all locals was elected. Thousands of leaflets and a hundred placards will be printed announcing the meeting. All workers are urged to attend. JOIN THE UNION.

United Textile Union Gains Support Among Unorganized Workers

BIDDEFORD, Me., Feb. 17 (FP).—The United Textile Workers drive into the sheeting mill towns grows more promising. The last meeting of the Pepperell Manufacturing Co.'s Social and Athletic Club was able to attract only half the number that came to hear Organizer Francis Gorman expound the advantages of trades' unionism.

The Social and Athletic Club meets in the old weave room that has been remodeled into auditorium, gymnasium and club rooms, as part of the company's welfare plans.

Two years ago the Biddeford workers, then under the leadership of the Independent American Federation of Textile Operatives, were defeated in a long strike. Since then the A. F. of L. union has launched an organization campaign. The present drive is actively assisted by the Salem local union of the U. T. W., where 2,400 sheeting workers are employed by the unionized Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co.—A firm that pay 20 per cent higher wages than its open shop rivals and still manages to make more money per spindle than any of them.

Nicholas Miraculous Don't Want Cal's Job; Naw! Tours for Fun

NEW YORK, Feb. 17. — Nicholas Murray Butler, whose publicity avowed purpose is to game a wet republican for the presidency, is about to make a tour of the middle west.

While protesting that "nothing is further from my thoughts than becoming a candidate for the presidential nomination," the Columbia University head starts next Saturday for a ten-day tour of Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, and other state.

Prime Hoover and Hughes in Grab of N. Y. Water Power

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 17.—Another effort to grab the state's water power was under way here today with a republican proposal for a new water power commission The bill was described as "survey."

The republicans propose to spike public ownership of the great St. Lawrence waterway power resources by placing Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce and agent of the U. S. department of commerce on the commission with Charles Evans Hughes, former secretary of state and now chief counsel for the oil interests raping Mexico, and a politician and a banker. To redeem the commission in the public's estimation, General George H. Gosthals of Panama Canal fame is included.

DRAMA

MORAL CASTOR OIL

"Sinner" Is a Small Dose After A Big Debauch

Reviewed by HARBOR ALLEN.

"SINNER," by Thompson Buchanan, staged by Allen Dinehart, and produced by Richard Herndon at the Klaw Theatre, is one of those comedies which for 2¾ acts ridicules marriage, bats it over the head with risqué situations, slashes it with epigrams, clutters up the stage with cuckold husbands; then, in the last ¼, doses the issue with moral castor oil, patches it up with moral courtplaster, and sends the audience home groggy but saved.

"Sinner" contains:

1. An emancipated heroine nicknamed "Sinner," who wears two costumes in Act 1 (including a riding habit); two in Act II; and a spangled decollété accoutrement in the middle.

2. An artist who is a libertine, who walks as if he had the cramps, who talks only in bad epigrams, who wears patent leather hair and nothing short of riding boots or evening dress.

3. A bridge game which must be very funny if you know bridge.

4. A big he-man husband who is fighting for his oil wells against the wily Bolshevist "spies" of Mexico (a telegram from Washington tells all about it); but who calls time out just before the final curtain to clean up on the artist to the vast enjoyment of the audience

5. A roadhouse in Connecticut which, I want you to know, is no ordinary hawdy house. "We charge $25 a day. That cuts out the skimmed milk," says the proud proprietor.

6. A poor old-fashioned mother, married to a roué, who suffers audibly for 2¾ acts, but rises in the final ¼ as champion of the good old institution of marriage.

7. A scene in which the he-man strikes the emancipated heroine.

8. A scene immediately following in which she says "I love you."

"Sinner" is called a comedy in three lessons." The lessons are, I gather: (1) Young girls should marry; (2) they shouldn't flirt afterwards; (3) they won't if their husbands show them who's boss of the family. But the lesson I draw from it is this: If you want to write a popular play, pick out a "sacred institution' in a state of lush decay, crack ribald jokes at its rottenness, its putrefaction, its stupidity. Then put it back on the altar. It's a sacred institution.

POISON BOOTLEG DIVE MANAGED BY U. S. MADE MONEY

Senator Investigates; Where Did Cash Go?

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Comptroller-General McCarl was asked today for an accounting of $19,578 "profit" made by the Leshone De Paris, Inc., as a "government under cover bootleg liquor concern," by Rep. La Guardia (R) of New York.

Charges that this company, operating in New York, has sold 7,500 gallons of poisoning denatured alcohol in an attempt to entrap other diverters of alcohol, were made by La Guardia in a letter yesterday to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

Profit In Poison.

Government agents bought poisonous alcohol at 90 cents a gallon and sold it to bootleggers who put it into beverages, at an average of $3.50 a gallon, declared La Guardia in a letter he sent to McCarl.

La Guardia said he had received reports that Maj. Chester P. Mills, federal prohibition administrator at New York, was attempting to get "under-cover" in the Leshone De Paris case.

"I do not blame any one for seeking to get under cover in this disgraceful case, which in all probability resulted in the loss of lives of many people," said La Guardia, adding:

"Mills knew all about the case, because his own letter of May 8, 1926, reports the fact to Washington in reply to an inquiry from his own department."

Lovett Fort Whiteman Making Tour of Cotton Mill Towns; For Negro

BOSTON, Feb. 17.—Lovett Fort Whiteman, national organizer of the American Negro Labor Congress will tour Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Lovett Fort Whiteman will speak in Springfield, Mass., on Saturday, February 19th at 8 o'clock in the evening at Zion Church, 20 Vine street, Springfield Mass.

The whole question of the social, economic and political equality is being involved in these bills and Whiteman will speak on these questions.

Chicago Police Chief Says Gen. Dawes Was Liquor Dealer's Shield

EVANSTON, Ill., Feb. 17. (FP)—From top to bottom, which is to say from banker to bootlegger, graft and pull have hamstrung the chief of police of Evanston, the home town of Gen. Charles G. Dawes, vice president of the United States and William recruiting sergeant of the Senate Men of the Constitution. Whether the minute men are all napping as Dawes did on a critical occasion, when he was supposed to preside over the debate or whether graft is the normal patriotic order in Evanston does not appear.

Corrupting Children.

But chief of police Wilsberger says that if he is removed from office it will be because when he tried to stop blind pigs where school children got booze or gambling joints where husbands were skinned out of their week's earnings or houses of prostitution where the boys and men lost their health through venereal disease, he was always blocked.

Whose Bank?

He mentions also business and financial influence that not only thwarted him on the outside but corrupted his department. He tried to close a drugstore that sold liquor to high school boys and girls and found that an Evanston banker (Dawes is also a banker, become notorious in the Dortmer scandal and forced to make restitution) stood in the way. "I suppose he banker had a loan on the place", Wilsberger says.

Hell an' Maria Dawes is reported too busy in the senate to look into his Evanston backyard.

Halifax Fire Fighters Are Pleading for Two Shift Basis In City

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. (FP)—Secretary-treasurer George J. Richardson of the International Association of Fire Fighters has gone to Halifax, N. S., at the request of the local union in that city, to explain how Halifax can change its city fire departments from a one-shift to a two-shift basis without spending an additional dollar.

Halifax has 583 population to every city fire fighter, while the average of other Canadian cities is 882 population per fireman, and the average for 27 largest cities in the United States is 694 per firemen. Having thus a large quota of firemen than the rest of the cities, Halifax will be invited to divide them into two 12-hour shifts, as many other cities have done. A few cities have three platoons on duty 8 hours each.

Fire losses in cities in North America are increasing, but in proportion to the property values in the protected cities they are decreasing.

Gitlow Will Speak in Boston On "Right and Left in Trade Unions"

The subject will be "The Right and Left in the Trade Union Movement.' Benjamin Gitlow will speak on the question of the latest developments in the trade union movement and on the difference of policy between the reactionary trade union officials who conferred the trade union movement into company unions, and the policy of the left wing movement that unions are the weapons of militant class struggle.

CHICAGOLITES

By M. A. S.

Odds and ends of news from the Middle Western Metropolis

This Ain't Bolshevik Russia, Chicago is heading up its record of crime. Daylight robberies and murders are as everyday occurrences. An "educational" stick-up took place at the University of Chicago. The experts received $1,000 in cash and trouble. The police saved $9,000, which was left behind by the go-getters in their hurry to get away.

As usual, nobody was arrested.

We'll Leave It To Them.

Jacob Rosenthal, 3637 North Madison Avenue, laundry owner, was shot and killed by two robbers. There were a couple of other murders, but we'll leave to the capitalist sheets the glory in them.

Yes, Who in Hell Does Work?

John W. Gibson, a new county commissioner, who is new in the game, made some startling discovery, that nobody on Cook County's payroll does any work. After listening for hours to reports he finally got up and bluntly asked:

"Who in hell on the county payroll does work? Isn't there any bright side to this county government?"

How charity is distributed to the poor by the county was shown in a report by the efficiency engineer of the board, J. L. Jacobs. According to his inquiry the cost of distributing clothes, coal, food and other supplies to the poor in 1926 was 80 per cent of the cost of the supplies.

After all, you can't get poor by helping the poor in Cook County....

Curing the Free American.

"Those army cots are alive with bedbugs," reported a nurse in one ward of the county hospital to the new board of county commissioners when they visited the hospital.

"Frequently I cannot bathe a patient before noon because I cannot get any hot water before that time," reported a nurse in another ward.

"There are 112 beds on one side and 54 on the other, and they average 75 sheets for the whole ward," stated still another nurse.

A committee that visited the tubercular hospital reports "Bathrooms are the outstanding things that need attention. Hot and cold water was running, and could not be turned off. The pipes and faucets for hot water to be used in sterilizing were all out of order, and in some cases had been removed."

When Thieves Fall Out.

The election campaign is in full swing. Charges of graft are flying back and forth. Some interesting facts and figures come to light. One politician who is running as a candidate against the present administration claims that "Chicago is the crime capital." According to his figures murder in Chicago increased 9% per cent since 1921.

Bum Guess of "Bum Squad" Head.

In a cable from Oslo the Chicago Daily News claims that Comrade Borodin, advisor to the Canton government, once lived in Chicago. Lieut. Mike Mills, former head of the "bum squad," specialists in anarchists, Communists, and other "ists," claims that he remembers Borodin very well. He also claims that before 1916 Borodin had in Chicago "a Soviet preparatory school." It does not matter that there were no Soviets at that time.

Ask Mike, he knows.

To Call Schieffelin

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 17.—Governor Smith today suggested to Joab M. Banton, New York county district attorney, that he call William J. Schieffelin, before the grand jury to determine if he can justify his "extraordinary statements" about health department graft in the milk scandal.

RIGHT WINGERS BAIL OUT THUGS BEATING PICKETS

Sensational Charge Made at Hearing

Bail bonds and attorneys for gangsters who beat up pickets are furnished not by the bosses but by the right wing officialdom in charge of the machinery of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

This startling development was featured in magistrate's court yesterday at the hearing of four gangsters. These pluggers were arrested last week and identified as the men who shot and wounded Samuel Cohen at 37th Street and Broadway, near Columbus Circle, as he was leaving the picket line at Rothman, Rothman and Beaver. The hearing was held before Magistrate Simpson's court on 54th Street and will be continued Saturday.

Only one of the gangsters said he was a garment worker. Harry Goldman claimed to be a salesman, Samuel Ober said he was a chauffeur and Max Richter declared he was a loan broker.

"It is very strange that the International should be furnishing the defense for salesmen, chauffeurs, and loanbrokers", commented Louis Hyman, manager of the Joint Board.

"Evidently the International is not interested in defending the cases of cloakmakers who tried to defend themselves on the picket line, since it withdrew its lawyers and abandoned them to their fate, yet "chauffeurs" and loan brokers" seem to obtain its protection.

"As a matter of fact the three all have the same profession, that of hired gangster and thug."

Cleveland Garment Workers Hear Hyman Describe Hillquit

CLEVELAND, Feb. 17.—Louis Hyman, general manager of the Joint Board of the I. L. G. W. U. of New York, spoke before a meeting of about 700 workers and gave a picture of the situation in New York. He showed up the corruption, doubledressing of Sigman, Baroff, Ninio and Dubinsky, their betrayal of the union and the workers. He painted a picture of the "proletarian" lawyer, Mr. Hillquit, who charged him $200 for each "consultation" he held with him, which consisted of talking over old times in the revolutionary movement in Russia.

Fat Salaries.

"These are the men, who once may have been revolutionists, but who now enjoy fat salaries and incomes, and are supposed to be in sympathy with the workers who are going thru all kinds of sufferings," said Hyman, in answer to a question as to how he, Hyman, claimed that Sigman no longer represents the workers.

Gangsters Kept Out.

Information had reached the ear of the committee of progressive cloak and dressmakers who arranged the meeting, that the socialist party, which is practically extinct, would try to disrupt the meeting. It had also been stated that other people were interested in preventing the meeting from being held. It is true that about a half-dozen gangsters tried to get into the meeting, but were kept ouside.

In any case, a large number of cloakmakers and dressmakers attended the meeting—and also the Jewish socialists.

Pass Appropriation Bill.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 17.—The senate today passed the annual appropriation bill, providing $147,000,000 for the support of state government.

LABOR TO ANSWER BOSSES' JUDGE ROSALSKY, WITH U. S. CONFERENCE

New York Workers Form Cloakmakers Defense Committee to Voice Labor's Protest

The workers' answer to Judge Rosalsky and his savage sentences against striking cloakmakers will be given by a national conference to be held here in the near future.

The Cloakmakers' Defense Committee, which swung into action today in behalf of the victimized union men following its organization by a delegate committee elected at the Webster Hall meeting on Feb. 5, declared that its first big job is to mercilessly mobilize national protest against Rosalsky.

Defense of the prisoners and the relief of their families, the formation of committees to visit various shops and unions to tell the truth about the sentences, and the holding of mass protest meetings are listed as the committee's first big jobs.

"We believe that these cruel sentences struck a blow at all American labor, and that it is the duty of all workers to help free the brother cloakmakers, first similar sentences be meted out to other workers in other strikes. The cloakmakers intend to do all in their power to free these men, and we call upon all other workers to aid in their liberation," said Hanry Robbin, chairman of the Defense Committee. He explained that the fund for the needy families of the prisoners will be administered by the Defense Committee.

Funds For Families.

"These women and children need help badly," he said. "The breadwinner of the family has been taken away, and in many cases there are young children so the mother cannot go out to work. They are our responsibility while these cloakmakers are confined in jail."

The Cloakmakers' Defense Committee is composed of 35 members, elected at the mass meeting, from all trades. David Biro, of the Furriers' Shop Chairmens' Council, is secretary, and the press committee, which issued the statement, includes Biro, Robbin, Isadore Barsner and Joseph Kleinman, chairman and secretary of the Cloakmakers' Shop Chairmens' Council, and Bernard Rosenfeld, of Dressmakers' Local 22.

The Voice of Britain's Imperialists

Two things cause the hypocritical smile of capitalist democracy to disappear and tilt lips to draw back from its teeth in a snarl.

One is a strike or some other form of mass protest by workers; the other is a revolt of colonial peoples against imperialist rule.

Sir Mitchell-Thomson, who as chief civil commissioner during the general strike in Britain was instrumental in putting the police force on a military basis, now has a new opportunity to display his talents in behalf of the empire. Sir Mitchell Thomson, with Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary, ably seconding his motion, now declares that all those who oppose the shipment of troops to China should be stood against a wall and shot.

The Communists of Great Britain distributed leaflets among the outward bound troop contingents urging them to refuse to shoot down Chinese workers and peasants for the benefit of lords, dukes, landlords and capitalists, and British imperialists are alarmed. They may well be nervous because once such things get started it is hard to tell where they are going to stop and in these days of disillusionment of the once credulous masses it is entirely possible that Thomas Atkins may do one of two things—refuse to shoot colonials or go a step farther and shoot a few imperialists or such of their lackeys as may be within easy range.

Middle class liberals and social democrats will protest against such crassness as Sir Thomson exhibits. They will explain that he does not voice the sentiments of the saner section of the British ruling class and—this is exactly where they will be mistaken or consciously trying to deceive the masses.

Not only is Sir Thomson in deadly earnest but he speaks for that section of the British ruling class which really counts—the so-called diehards who will hesitate at nothing to suppress, not only attempts to win the army and the navy to the side of the masses, but the struggles of the masses for better wages and improved working conditions.

Those who laugh at threats like those made by Sir Mitchell Thomson are of two kinds—enemies of the working class and fools.

The armies and navies of imperialist powers are organized and trained to fire at three targets—rival imperialist nations, workers and peasants of the colonial and semi-colonial countries and the working class at home. But in no war with a rival does the fury of an imperialist ruling class reach the high point it does when the struggle is with the working class or with national liberation movements like that in China.

It is when the working class of an imperialist nation makes common cause with the colonial masses that the rulers have the greatest reason for worry and it is exactly the fear of this occurrence which produces the coldblooded murderousness of a Thomson.

But the Communists have shown the workers of Britain the way and, in spite of threats this is the way the British working class will travel—sooner than even Sir Mitchell Thomson thinks.

"Efficiency Unionism" at Miami

The capitalist press has no difficulty in interpreting correctly the meaning of the proposal made by President Lewis of the United Mine Workers to the operators at Miami in joint session with the wage scale committee of the union.

The New York World for instance states in its head to its story of the proceedings that Lewis offers efficiency in place of a wage cut.

The terms are synonymous. The Lewis proposal for a tribunal composed of technical experts and lawyers to settle disputed questions for the industry takes for granted that compulsory arbitration is no longer a debatable question although the membership of the union has never been allowed to pass upon it. The disastrous effects of such a policy are clearly apparent in the anthracite fields.

The left wing, by putting the issue squarely before the membership and consolidating all elements honestly willing to fight to save the union from the menace of "efficiency unionism," will be able to defeat the Lewis machine.

The advocacy of such a policy as compulsory arbitration and efficiency methods when the union is faced with the possibility of a strike on April first and needs to have its morale raised to the highest possible level is additional evidence of the utter disregard for the interests of the rank and file shown consistently by President Lewis and his henchmen.

Mrs. J. McEntee of Philadelphia needed a housekeeper, so she inserted an ad for a housekeeper in a capitalist sheet. "In one day, more than 50 people applied for the position and the right girl was chosen," writes the advertising manager. Which proves that there are more jobless than jobs in Philadelphia. Would it not be funny if Mrs. McEntee found a flea on her favorite poodle one of those days, despite her sagacity in picking the "right girl" out of fifty.

British Labor M. P.'s who exposed the horrors of Polish prisons are now charged with being Communists. Because their visit had the approval of Ramsay MacDonald the Polish fascist government trusted them. But the fact that they told the truth proves conglusively that they are Communists! The good presbyterian MacDonald is being continually imposed on.

UNION MINER: "Come On, We Need You."

The union fields produce 35 percent of the soft coal in the United States, while 65 percent of coal production is still non-union. Union wages are higher than non-union wages. But unless the unorganized fields are organized, the employers will be able to cut the union wages.

Duke's New Dean

Central Press

Dr. Wilbur Cornell Davison, above, newly appointed dean of the medical school at Duke (Duke's Mixture) University, at Durham (Bull Durham), N. C. This is no joke. Duke, the tobacco king, has endowed a private college at Durham. Presumably the medical department will not be allowed to cure any tobacco habits.

OIL!

A NEW NOVEL

By Upton Sinclair

VI

What did they think about it? Chaim Menzies was, as always, the first to speak. Perhaps his feelings had been hurt by the reference to tobacco; anyhow, he said it looked to him like it was another colony, you didn't change a colony by calling it a college, and a colony was de worst trap you could set for de movement. "You git people to go off and live by demselves, different from de rest of de workers, and vedder dey are comfortable or vedder dey ain't and dey won't be all de time dey are talking about someting else but de class struggle out in de world."

"That's quite true," said Bunny. "But we don't lie so far from the world, and the purpose of our training will be, not the colony, but the movement outside, and how to help it."

"De people out dere got to help de movement by getting jobs and getting more; dey have got some sort of graft den, sometime or other, dey are no longer workers."

"But it isn't going to be so easy, Comrade Chaim."

"Listen to him! He is going to get nice young college ladies and gentlemen to come and live lives dat will not seem easy to de workers!"

"You might as well admit it, Bunny," put in Harry Seager. "You'll have a nice polite place, with all the boys and girls wearing William Morris costumes. They'll work earnestly for a while, but they'll never be efficient, and if you really have any buildings put up, or any food raised, you'll have regulation hard-fisted workingmen to do it. I know, because we're picking walnuts now!"

"I don't want a polite place," said Bunny. "I want a gymnasium where people train for the class struggle; and if we can't have discipline any other way, how about this as part of the course—every student is pledged to go to jail for not less than thirty days."

"Attaboy!" cried Peter Nagle. "Now you're talking!"

"Vot is he going to do—break de speed laws?" inquried Chaim, sarcastically.

"He's going into Angel City and picket in a strike. Or he's going to hold socialist meetings on street corners until some cop picks him up. You don't need me to tell you how to get arrested in the class struggle, Comrade Chaim."

"Yes, but he might run into some judge dat vould not understand de college regulation, and might give him six mont's."

"Well, that's a chance we'll have to take; the point is simply, no senior student is in good social standing until he or she has been in jail for at least thirty days in a class struggle case."

"And the teachers?" demanded Gregor Nikolaieff.

"Once every three years, or every five years for the teachers."

"And the founder! How often for the founder?" Peter clamored in glee; but Dan Irving said the founder would have to wait until he had got rid of his money.

They argued back and forth. Could you interest young people in the idea of self-discipline? Would your danger be in setting the standard too easy, so that you wouldn't accomplish much, or in setting it too high, so that you wouldn't have any students? Bunny, the young idealist, was for setting it high; and Harry Seager said that people would volunteer more quickly to die than they would to get along without tobacco. And he wanted to know, what were they going to do about the Communists. Harry was no politician any more, he was a social revolutionist, and only waiting for the day of action. Regardless of what socialist party members might wish, they couldn't keep Bolshevik students out of a college, and even if they did, the ideas would bust in.

Bunny answered by setting forth his ideal of the open mind. Why couldn't the students do their own educating, and make their own decisions? Let the teachers give the information they were asked for; and then let the students thresh it out—every class room and open forum, and no loyalty except to research and freedom? They were all willing to admit that there would be no use starting a sectarian institution, to advocate one set of doctrines and exclude the others. Also, it took a partisan of each doctrine to set it forth fairly. So then, here was Bunny pinning them down: "Chaim, would you be willing for Harry to explain his ideas to your class? Harry, would you give Chaim a chance to talk?" Bunny could see his own job—the arbitrator who kept these warring fractions out of each other's hair!

Then said Chaim, the skeptic, "I vant to know, vot are you going to do about sex?"

Bunny admitted that this worried him. "I suppose we'll have to conform to bourgeois standards."

"Oh, my God!" cried Peter Nagle. "Let the bourgeoisie begin!"

Jacob Menzies, the student, had just been reading a book about Ruskin, the old time Socialist colony in Tennessee. It was the sex problem which had broken up that colony, he declared; and his father chimed in, "It vill break up any colony dat ever exists under capitalism! Dere is only vun vay you can make vun man live vit vun voman all his life, and date is to shut dem up in a house togedder and never let dem out. But if you let dem get vit odder couples, den right away vun man finds he vants some odder voman but de right vun."

"But then," said Dan Irving, "according to bourgeois standards, they get a divorce."

"Sure ting!" said Chaim. "But not in a Socialist colony! If dey vould do it in a colony, it vould be a free love nest, and you vould be on de front page of de papers, and de American Legion come and bust you in de snoot!"

Park Avenue Nursed By Mr. H. Gordon Duval Who Likes His $-Bill

H. Gordon Duval is the founder of the Park Ave. Association and an ambitious fellow at that. So we find that he has many ways of making his association grow, and incidentally to bring in the shekels at the same time.

His method is as follows: He has two divisions. His residential division consists of one thousand millionaire residents who pay him $26 a year each to maintain Park avenue's exclusiveness.

The second division consists of merchants who pay Mr. Duval $52 a year each for the use of the names and addresses of the inhabitants living in the wealthiest gold coast district in the city.

When it is all said and done, Mr. Duval is quite happy, thank you, and may soon join his clients in the millionaire class.

BOOKS

"IMPERIALISM & WORLD POLITICS," by Parker T. Moon. Macmillan, 1926. $2.50.

EUROPEAN editors and public men are slow to attach the word "imperialism" to the United States. They still remember Wilson's phrases. They are still deluded by the 80 non-aggressive years between the Mexican War of 1848 and the Spanish-American War of 1898. Now and then, a voice is raised against "the American Empire." One German papér recently commented on the danger that American capital faced from the Mexican revolution and the evident sympathy which Central America feels for Mexico in its struggle to emancipate itself from the leading strings of American financial imperialism.

Well-informed people no longer question the imperialistic role which the United States is playing. Prof. P. T. Moon, of Columbia University, in this book, lists the United States among the "ten imperialist nations of the world today." Describing the pre-war world struggle for colonies, he first notes the failures and then writes, "of the more successful Empires of France, Britain, Russia, and America" . . . "All the great Powers save the United States boldly and frankly set themselves to the epic task, in the 19th Century, of carving out stupendous colonial empires; and even the United States, feeling the same urge to action, reach into the Pacific and into the Caribbean for modest parcels of colonial territory."

This is Prof. Moon's summary of the position which the United States has obtained as a colonial empire. "Take this fairly consecutive list of quasi-dependencies—Cuba, Haiti, Santo Domingo, Panama, Nicaragua, and Liberia,—and add it to the list of territories and possessions, we obtain a grand total that will put the United States colonial empire in the sixth place for area and for population, and in the second place for commercial influence."

Capital is being exported; trade is being built up; territory is being "acquired." The United States has all of the imperial trappings of its less opulent European predecessors.

"ALPHA," Emery Balint, Macy-Masius, $2.

You may sit around a table in a Greenwich Village speakeasy, expose an adamsapple neck to its dim lights, spit lava—and announce the birth of proletarian art. But proletarian art won't be born. It ain't born that way.

Here is an honest book by a young Hungarian writer which represents the reaction of a sensitive artist to this cockeyed world. It is a bitter, negative book that exposes our slimy civilization—but it is not at all proletarian. No more proletarian than R. U. R.

Alpha is a young artist who wastes his time drawing pretty pictures, playing with girls and attending booze parties. He gets involved in a sexual mix-up and drives a young girl to suicide. A troubled conscience and profound disgust with the rapid life drive him into an extended drunk. The young Alpha winds up in the hospital.

Then comes the war. Alpha, like a good many other young men, plunges into it in the hope of personal salvation. Like a good many other young men, he is bitterly disappointed. Its brutality breaks him. He comes out of it half-mad.

He goes to live in a little village where he is tolerated by an old peasant woman, who knows him. The boys and girls of the village run after him and call him names. Alpha is half-mad.

One afternoon Alpha goes into a little cafe, where swinish officers and pot-bellied business men guzzle beer and leer at the thinly-covered bodies of cafe prostitutes. In a burst of frenzy, he sets fire to the cafe. The village burns down.

Alpha meets his death at the foot of a cross beneath the heels and the pitchforks of the angry villagers.

The book is expressionistic—and its episodes are, with one or two exceptions, convincing. Balint's bitterness is not a matter of words; it's not a pose. Its intensity often makes it unpleasant for the reader who is accustomed to words.

Is "Alpha" proletarian? I do not think so. But that is not a criticism against the book.

How can a genuine piece of literature be other than negative in a decaying society? You may invoke the revolution at the end of a poem or a novel and express the pious wish that the revolution will change things (which, of course, it will), but that does not make your work of art proletarian. Literature is rooted in its social background; you can't get proletarian literature until you get a complete change of social structure.

Take a native example. Mike Gold has done some fine things. But his best stuff is negative. It is a sweeping condemnation of a putrid society which confines children in dark East Side tenements, which murders steel workers, which drives factory girls to prostitution. But Dickens did that.

Capek, like Balint, is a Communist and an excellent artist. But his work is negative and bitter, too. Capitalist society, he tells us, makes automatons of men; capitalist society brings out the ugliness in men. Capek is an excellent artist, but he is not a "proletarian" artist. How can he be when bourgeois society is putrid and the proletarian society still unborn?

"ESSAYS OF REVOLT," by Jack London. Vanguard Press, New York. $.50.

How quaint these latter-day Socialist manifestos sound! I can picture the first president of the Intercollegiate Socialist Society (now the harmless "League for Industrial Democracy) giving his famous lecture on "Revolution" to the students at Harvard in the fall of 1907. Jack London, handsome, picturesque,—one of the first of the financially successful short story writers,—must have seemed the original Superman to the college lads of the time. I sometimes even imagine that many of the present members of the executive committee of the L. I. D., The World Tomorrow and the patrons of the Community Church must have been converted by the dynamic personality and the vivid logic of the author of "The Call of the Wild" and "Martin Eden." Someone has even told me that the man who writes some of the sanctimonious editorials for the New York World, Walter Lippman, was one of his earliest converts to the cause of the Revolution.

"I received a letter the other day," wrote London in one of his insurrectionary essays. "It was from a man in Arizona. It began, 'Dear Comrade.' It ended 'Yours for the Revolution.' I replied to the letter, and by letter began, 'Dear Comrade.' It ended, 'Yours for the Revolution.' In the United States there are 800,000 men, of men and women nearly 1,000,000, who begin their letters 'Dear Comrade,' and end them 'Yours for the Revolution.' In Germany there are 3,000,000 men who begin their letters 'Dear Comrade' and end them 'Yours for the Revolution.' In France, 1,000,000 men; in Austria, 800,000 men; in Belgium, 700,000 men; in Italy, 250,000 men; in England, 100,000 men; in Switzerland, 100,000 men; in Denmark, 55,000 men; in Sweden, 50,000 men; in Holland, 40,000 men; in Spain, 20,000 men—comrades all and revolutionists."

I guess you can see that Jack London was a stickler for statistics, especially those in round numbers. You can also see that these statistics were compiled before the Archduke Ferdinand was shot in Sarajeve, and long before many of those who were in the habit of beginning their letters, 'Dear Comrade,' and ending them 'Yours for the Revolution,' had a chance to whoop it up for their respective ruling-class governments during the recent bloodfest.

"I found that all things were commodities," wrote Jack London in another essay, "What Life Means to Me."

"The one commodity that labor had to sell was muscle. The toiler of labor had no price in the market-place. . . . I learned further that brain was likewise a commodity. But a laborer was worked out or broken down at forty-five or fifty. . . . As a brain merchant I was a success."

He once was. London published 19 books in 16 years, and many of them were best-sellers. Some were translated in numerous foreign languages. And of course several were jazzed into the movies. Was London a proletarian writer? Not if the test of a proletarian writer is one who expresses in prose or poetry the frustrations and hopes of class-conscious workers, as a class. True, London wrote about workers in several of his novels. But they were all after "tachiers." They were, with few exceptions energetic careerists. Like the semi-autobiographical Martin Eden they didn't enjoy working on oyster-ships, in sweaty laundries, or even being footloose hobos. They all wanted to get up in the world, to be deserving of the "little lady of the big house."

Jack London brandished the epithet revolutionist as a description of himself and his theories, but he was gullible enough to swallow Kipling's dubious doctrine of the White Man's Burdan, believed joyously in the supremacy of the Nordics, and clung to socialism, it would seem, chiefly to give an additional luster of bravado and romanticism to his career. "For," according to a contemporary critic, socialism, to London's middle-class contemporaries, was an adventure more desperate than the rush for gold in the Klondike."

Wall Street Plans to Smother Nicaragua

Sending Enough Marines to Police Whole State; Only Way to Save Puppet President Diaz

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The American government has decided to smother the Nicaraguan civil war, hoping thereby to prevent a general conflagration in Central America, where the people in general are writhing under the financial tyranny of the United States.

This was the only explanation advanced today for the sudden dispatch of 1,400 additional marines to the little republic. With these reinforcements, the United States will have in Nicaragua, a mobile force of rifles equal in size to the Sacasa revolutionary army, and, of course, enormously superior in equipment.

The smothering process apparently is to involve policing the entire country, from Honduras on the north to Guatemala on the south—no light undertaking in view of the scarcity of good roads and transportation. How long it will be necessary can only be guessed, but the consensus today was that the marines are in Nicaragua to stay for a long time.

For Conquest.

There was not much pretense in Washington today that the marines, bluejackets and airplanes have been concentrated in Nicaragua merely to "protect American lives and property." A handful of marines could do that—as they have done it on divers occasions in the last twenty years.

The force being concentrated in Nicaragua today is different. It is enormously larger, better equipped.

Other Countries Angry.

Guatemala, to the north, and Costa Rica, to the south, are out of sympathy with the state department's aiding President Diaz. Both countries resisted pressures from Washington, and refused to recognize Diaz.

Pro-Diaz "Neutrality."

The reinforcements being sent Admiral Latimer, commander of the American occupational forces, will give him enough men to patrol both the northern and southern borders of Nicaragua after a fashion. Both the Pacific and Atlantic coasts have already been pretty well taken out of the war zone through Latimer's declaring these "neutral zones." Likewise he will have enough men to police the railroad that links up the principal cities of the country. This railroad is owned by the Nicaraguan government; hence it cannot be said that in protecting this road the marines are "protecting American property."

Airplane Police.

The airplanes being sent to Nicaragua are understood to be for the purpose of patrolling the borders to prevent the liberals from receiving new supplies of arms. This is to be the "smothering" process—to choke the war to death through stoppage of supplies.

Despite the large force of marines now on Nicaraguan soil, there is at close hand most of the scouting fleet,

DISTANCE may make the heart grow fonder provided local competition is not too keen, but charity begins at home. Hence I am calling the attention of the multitudes to the L. L. D. bazaar, which will be held in New York on March 10, 11, 12 and 13., the Chicago is also howling for publicity. The International Labor Defense is worthy of the support of all class conscious workers. There are only three weeks left to push the sale of tickets and help make the affair a success. Money is needed to defend victims of capitalist courts and conduct campaigns to halt the bloody hands of the fascist oppressors in Poland, Lithuania, Italy and other countries.

Four days for New York; three for Chicago. That's about fair since we have a subway and other conveniences here that do not exist in the windy city, tho as far as gas is concerned we have our share of it. This is another way of saying that the Chicago bazaar (it's called carnival out there) will last three days. But the men and women from the midwast live fast and furiously and stay up late. So they expect to accomplish as much in three days as we of the effete east will in four. From what we have learned about the preparations for the Chicago bazaar from personal correspondence we can sincerely urge all those who read these lines to patronize the affair, which will be held in the Ashland Auditorium on Feb. 25, 26 and 27.

Misery, Disease, Squalor Part of Housing Problem; Workers Tell Own Stories

The DAILY WORKER today gives two different views of New York's housing problem, which Assemblyman Jenks says doesn't exist. Jenks, whose comfortable quarters in a luxurious Albany hotel convinces him that "there is no emergency" might take a stroll along New York's east side, through the Brooklyn workers' areas and out in Harlem and the Bronx. There he will find pale children, shuffling men whose environment has crushed all hope, disease-breeding tenements and nauseating, filthy quarters where it is criminal even to house rats.

Every New York worker knows a thousand times more than Assemblyman Jenks whether an emergncy still exists in housing. Send in your own story of your personal experiences or those of your fellow workers. Don't mind the punctuation or grammar, just give us the unadorned facts. Names will not be used, if requested.

Rosalsky Victim's Home Shows Real Emergency

By HARRY FREEMAN

The housing "emergency" is over, they tell us, and everything is jake. It is for the landlord.

Two weeks ago I went to see Joseph Goldstein, who attempted suicide rather than face the savage jail sentences meted out to striking cloakmakers by Judge Rosalsky.

Goldstein wasn't home. He was in the Harlem hospital, hovering between life and death. But that's incidental. It's of the Goldstein "apartment" that I'm going to sing.

The Goldsteins—there are four of them—live in a dark little three-room flat on 110th St., three doors from the 1st. Ave. L. The Goldsteins can't hear the First Ave. L. because they live in the rear of the house, on a first floor that is suspiciously like a basement.

The rooms are small and damp, and when it's cold (and it was the day I visited the Goldsteins) Mrs. Goldstein sits near the coal stove in her tiny kitchen to keep warm. She has to. If the Goldstein flat is heated in any other way I did not notice it.

A little light filters into the kitchen through a window perched above the sink. The window is small—and it is kept shut. If it were opened, the cold would pour in.

What the other rooms are like I do not know. Mrs. Goldstein refused to let me look at them. She violates every rule of etiquette laid down by Emily Post. She insists on receiving her visitors in the kitchen.

I did succeed in catching a glimse of the bedroom adjoining the kitchen. It looked darker and damper and smaller than the kitchen.

Yet the Goldsteins are singularly fortunate—for a cloakmaker's family. Joseph Goldstein gets as much as forty-five dollars a week—occasionally—and he is blessed with only one

Left Wing Expulsions Ruled Out in Hearing On International Bank

Ruled into court yesterday to show cause why they should not be restrained from damaging the Joint Board's heavy interests in the International Union Bank, attorneys for the reactionaries in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union suffered a serious rebuff. Supreme Court Justice Bijur cut short a long argument by Morris Hillquit, chief right wing counsel by ruling that the alleged expulsion of left wing locals has nothing to do with the Joint Board's action in seeking to protect its interests in the bank.

Justice Bijur continued the hearing, taking briefs and affidavits under consideration. A decision on the Joint Board's application for an order restraining the International will be given next week.

Fiorella La Guardia, erstwhile "socialist" and now a republican congressman, led gangs of "gorillas" from one polling booth to another in the November elections, a Tammany leader testified yesterday. A general probe of election methods used by the Tammany-republican machines in New York City, under way in the 17th Assembly District, brought forth the charges.

Three carloads of gangsters swept through the 17th District on election night, the disgruntled Tammany politicians declared. Charles Firestone, one of them, testified that the 17th was "formerly a socialist district, but the socialists became democrats, and as they made money, moved out and became republicans."

Kuomintang Army Now Sweeping On Toward Shanghai

Reactionary Forces Fleeing in Disorder as People's Armies Capture Treaty Port

SHANGHAI, Feb. 18.—The drive of the nationalist revolutionary armies on Shanghai continues, and the Chekiang forces appear unable to offer resistance.

The Canton forces today captured Ningpo, a treaty port, and the capital of Chekiang.

In Complete Control.

Authoritative reports to the China Press, English language daily of Shanghai, said the nationalist forces were completely in control of Hangchow although the southern troops had not occupied the city. A Kuomintang government has already supplanted that of the fleeing Chekiang officials.

After defeating the Sun Chuan-Fang troops on three fronts yesterday, the Cantonese continued their drive toward Kashing, where Sun is reported entrenching himself in a desperate endeavor to halt the southerners' drive toward Shanghai.

Fall of City Near.

The atmosphere in Shanghai today was extremely tense as it was evident that the deciding struggle for the possession of Shanghai is developing swiftly. Foreign officials here declared the capture of the International city will come with lightning-like suddenness.

Twenty thousand of Sun Chuan-Fang's troops who evacuated Hangchow yesterday were entraining today for Kashing, where the main line of defense is being established, with a second line at Sungkiang. Four thousand Sun troops arrived from Ningpo, and were dispatched to Sungkiang this morning. More troops are expected to arrive from Mingpo shortly.

Attack Chang-Tso-Lin.

Reports from Chengchow, Honan Province, indicate that Marshal Wu Pei-Fu's generals Wei Yi-San, Tient Wei-Chin and Chin Yu-Nao are cooperating in a movement to resist the advance of Chang Tso-Lin's Fenctien troops through Honan to Hnpeh Province. Wi Pei-Fu appears powerless to control his subordinates, who, it is expected, will engage the Fengtien troops in an attempt to prevent their crossing the Yellow river.

The Fengtien troops stationed to the north of Kiangsu have been ordered to assist General Sun Chuan-Fang in his stand before Shanghai, according to a report from Nanking.

WOLL EMBRACES B.&O. PLAN AFTER ATTACKING REDS

Having led the manhunt against militants in the Central Trades and Labor Council, Matthew Woll has been given the glad hand by the employer-controlled National Civic Federation. At a federation luncheon at the Lawyers Club, Woll took the B. & O. plan of "efficiency unionism" to his bosom and patting its head affectionately, gave it his warmest approval.

At the close of the after-dinner speebes by labor leaders and railroad employers the officers of the Civic Federation were instructed to appoint a special committee to study the plan.

Eulogies of the new method of carrying on the trade union movement were given by M. Woll and Daniel Willard, The first, is acting president of the Civic Federation and vice-president of the A. F. of L. Willard is a representative of the employers on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

The B. & O. president described the plan as a money saver as well as a harmonizer of labor-capital relations. "With the same men, the same tols and the same wages the road was able to get "better resnlts" in its Pittsburgh shops by the aid of the union-management cooperation plan.

Matthew Woll, as toastmaster, landed the new policy of the A. F. of L. of encouraging cooperation between men and management and increasing production and eliminating inefficeincy.

Charging the reactionary General Executive Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union with illegal action in its arbitrary expulsion proceedings of February 14th, the four "left wing" local, 2, 9, 22 and 35 yesterday dispatched a letter to the International officials refusing to recognize their expulsion order.

Since the meeting of the General Executive Board of the I. L. G. W. U. at which this expulsion was decided upon, was held without the knowledge of the "left wing" members, and they were not summoned to attend this session, the four locals maintain that they cannot be expelled by this group on any charge whatsoever.

Show Bad Faith.

The locals also point out that in stating that these locals are expelled for not paying their per capita tax, the International officials show their "utter bad faith," since they themselves have been interfering with the collection of dues in the locals and have without authorization collected from members of these locals an amount far in excess of the per capita tax they mention.

Woll Shows True Character of Right Wing in Labor Movement

IF any remnants of working class principle hung in tatters about the shoulders of the leaders of the right wing drive in New York on trade unionism free from capitalist control they were thrown to the winds by Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, Thursday night, in his speech from the throne when the unseating of delegates of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and Furriers' Unions came before the Central Trades and Labor Council.

Woll's speech—and on this reports from all sources are in agreement—was a combination of anti-Semitism, Civic Federation reaction and denunciation of foreign-born workers.

It was the speech of a fascist.

He tried to incite Americans against Jews, Jews and Americans against Greeks and Christians against Jews. He stated that the issue was "Americanism" and urged the council delegates to stand behind the A. F. of L. committee for this reason.

In the face of the conviction of strikers and pickets by the capitalist courts working in cooperation with the right wing and the sentencing of these workers to prison for long terms, Woll accused the Communists and left wing of "terrorizing" members of the needle trades unions. Right wing gangsters with police protection have slugged and stabbed rank and file members of the needle trades unions but there have been no prison sentences handed out to these underworld elements. Woll had nothing to say on this matter.

Communist workers, of course, came in for Woll's most unrestrained abuse. The reason for this is clear.

The Communist press has exposed Woll and it will continue to expose him. He is an agent of the bosses in the labor movement. He is acting president of the Civic Federation, the organization with which the capitalist class penetrates the labor movement. Confmunist workers expose Woll in their unions.

Woll is also the agent of an international organization—the Roman Catholic Church. In the labor movement he carries out the policy of both the Civic Federation and the instructions of the political wing of the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

It was Woll, who at the Detroit convention of the A. F. of L. in spite of the drive of the open shoppers, tried to prevent the trade unions coming to the assistance of the Passaic strike although the workers were members of the United Textile Workers affiliated to the American Federation of Labor.

It is Woll who fought the hardest against any assistance being given to the Mexican labor movement in its struggle against feudal catholicism and American imperialism.

We say that the right wing is welcome to the leadership of Matthew Woll and that this leadership whose policy, under the guidance of labor's most powerful enemies, is becoming more reactionary day by day, will produce, as the rank and file of the labor movement comes to understand its full implications, a revolt that will send Woll and his ilk whimpering back to their capitalist masters.

The right wing is wrecking the labor movement by open destruction of unions as in New York, by a deliberate conspiracy against the rank and file as in the United Mine Workers and by open co-operation with the bosses as in the machinists and railway shop unions.

In the United Mine Workers of America the denunciation of Communists and the Communist Party was followed by destruction of all rank and file democracy. This same policy will be carried out in every union where Woll and other agents of the bosses gain the upper hand.

The unseating of Communist and left wing delegates in the Central Trades and Labor Council will be a signal for a further extension of the powers of the Tammany Hall bureaucracy at the expense of the rank and file and a still closer alliance of officialdom with the enemies of the labor movement.

REVEAL ORGANIZED CONSPIRACY TO INVADE UNION OF SOVIET REPUBLICS

MOSCOW, Feb. 18.—Charges that the German General, Hoffman, maker of the Brest-Litovsk treaty, has offered to lead an army against the Soviet Union were made today in the newspaper Isvestia.

The Isvestia reveals that General Hoffman made the offer to Locker-Lampson, British, M. P., on condition that the M. P. raise a fund of £200,000,000.

The Isvestia publishes correspondence between the former czarist ambassador Giers, now in Paris, and M. Sablin, former Kerensky charge in London. This correspondence states that Locker-Thompson couldn't raise the funds for the expedition due to the impoverished conditions in Great Britain.

Sablin a Jew Killer.

Eugene Sablin was an organizer of Black Hundreds under the Czar, and transferred his allegiance readily to Kerensky after the fall of Nicholas II. The Menshevik minister sent him abroad to raise money, and Sablin remained to organize invasions of Bolshevik Russia after Kerensky fell.

The first letter published over Sablin's signature is from London and is dated shortly after the calling off of the British general strike and thanks Minister of the Interior Sir William Joynson-Hicks for the enlistment of White Russians as emergency police and strike breakers. But the Pravda declares it will later publish other facsimiles up to the end of last year.

Planning Discord.

M. Sablin claims he is already "recognized" by the British as the representative of the Russian emigres and expresses the hope that this recogni-

NEGROES ASKED TO JOIN UNIONS; A. F. L. INACTIVE

Study Shows International Is Inactive

While the American Federation of Labor still fails to interest itself actively in the plight of the Negro worker, many local unions and district councils continue to enlist Negro members.

T. Arnold Hill, research worker in the industrial relations department of the National Urban League, reaches this conclusion after an intensive study of the field. He declares sentiment favoring Negro membership in trade unions is growing.

In Atlanta, Ga., labor union officials have recorded their opinion that "The labor movement in Atlanta does not feel safe with Negroes out of the union," writes Hill. They have expressed a desire to organize Negroes in auxiliary unions in certain trades.

Building Laborers Loyal.

In Philadelphia where 2,500 tobacco workers are employed, efforts are being made to secure their membership in the union. "Ninety per cent of the hod carriers and building laborers in Kansas City are Negroes. They remained loyal to the union during a carpenters' strike in July."

Hill mentions that colored motion picture operators have been admitted to the union in New York City; relates the progress of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; tells of colored workers in the New York cloakmakers' and paper box strikes, and of colored woman date workers striking in Chicago.

"In Columbia, S. C. the number of colored plumbers and electricians increased, these trades being those in which very rigid restrictions prevail against colored membership," he recounts. In Chicago an electrical workers' union made concessions to colored electricians. In Philadelphia and Harrisburg efforts were made to organize building trades workers and in Atlantic City colored waiters were sought for union membership."

A. F. of L. Refuses to Act.

"Against these favorable conditions there are a number of instances which show that considerable prejudice still exists against Negro membership in trade unions," states Hill.

"An attempt to get the American Federation of Labor, through its executive council, to appoint a colored advisor and organizer failed. The metal lathers' union denied a charter to colored men in Chicago. None of the international trade unions, which refused membership to Negroes at the beginning of the year changed its policy."

The National Urban League is a Negro social welfare organization largely interested in helping Negro workers get into new and more skilled kinds of work.

Tex Guinan's Hangout For Rich Loafers Is Placed Under Padlock

As the result of the most sensational liquor raid staged on Broadway, the "300" Club, of which the famous "Texas" Guinan is the hostess, was ordered padlocked for a period of six months by Federal Judge Bondy here yesterday.

Texas herself will be haled into court today, to face charges of possession and sale of liquor. United States Attorney Lowell Wadman announced that contempt proceedings also would be brought against the jovial hostess, charging that she violated a previous injunction restraining her from selling liquor.

FORTUNATELY our warning to readers to be prepared for a fresh load of militarist victories in China now seems to be a bit premature. The position was almost perfect. In fact, if Sun managed to stay put for a few more days the imperialist correspondents would find some of their share. But Sun fell down on the job. Ha took to his heels and this Cantonese took Hankchow. As it is now, our warning must be put in cold storage for future use.

THERE are rumors that the noted boxing impresario, Tex Rickard, may be invited to assume the position of congressional czar. Baseball has one, so has, the movie industry, why not congress? Judge Landis's job has to do with exposing players who bet on the opposite team's chances of winning. Will Hays is busy trying to well pedal the amorous affairs of screen stars. Tex's job would be to see that senators and representatives stopped throwing the standards of pugilism, by pulling off no-hit fights.

The gentlemen is reasonably safe in taking the offensive since a German soiion can have all the bear he wants without leaving the reichstag building and is therefore not obliged to wear stuff outside his skin. But let us suppose that Charley Dawes hurled his highball at "Jam" Reed of Missouri, what a hurricane of glassware would disturb the atmosphere?

CAL'S VETO OF FARM BILL WILL ASSIST LOWDEN

President's Action to Affect 1928 Race

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—A foundling has appeared on President Coolidge's doorstep, and no one knows whether he will adopt and nurture it, or kick the embarrassing brat into the nearest snow bank. Congress has laid on him the task of either signing or vetoing the McNary-Haugen Farm "Relief" Bill, offspring of some of the weirdest political miscegenation of modern times.

What Will Cal Do?

Administration supporters were sharply divided in their predictions. The majority opinion is that he will veto the bill. Those who believe in the veto denounce the bill as a price-fixing measure and a dangerous experiment which would put the government in the farming business.

Sponsors of the bill, on the other hand, declared that Mr. Coolidge had left the problem to Congress and thereby was virtually pledged to sign it.

Political observers saw in Mr. Coolidge's action an answer to the riddle of 1928. Approval of the bill, they asserted, would be tantamount to a declaration of his candidacy for the next Republican presidential nomination.

Veto Aids Lowden.

With the middle west aroused over the farm relief problem, a veto would boom the stock of two other presidential aspirants, Ex-Governor Frank A. Lowden of Illinois, and Vice-President Charles G. Dawes, it was predicted.

An alternate course open to the president is to permit the bill to become a law without his signature, but few believe that he will adopt so negative a course.

Party Lines Melt.

The bill was passed last night by the House, 214 to 176, after a spectacular fight of nine hours, in which the farm bloc rode down all opposition. The margin of victory, 38 votes, was about what had been anticipated, and it is too small to permit of hope of re-passage over a veto.

Party lines were badly split. The leaders in both parties voted against it. Generally, the line-up found the agricultural middle west and west in support, and the industrial east against it. The south has divided, but a majority of the southerners supported it.

Vote Trade Passes It.

The bill came to the House from the floor in the Senate, into which the so-called "farmer" senators made a deal with the Morgan group to trade support for the farm bill for votes to put over the Democratic Woodson-Pepper branch banking act, centralizing the banking business as much as Marx ever predicted, and creating the basis for an international Wall Street owned money trust.

Bankers Cheated Bloc.

After they did it, apparently some of them regretted it. A few "insurgents" fought the branch banking act, in vain, and the bankers double-crossed the farm bloc, having Mellon write a last-minute counterblast against it. However, both bills have passed.

Creates Board.

The McNary-Haugen act is briefly as follows:

It creates a Federal Farm Board, appointed by the president from nominees selected by cooperatives, banks and state departments of agriculture.

Loans $250,000,000 to the Board from the Federal treasury.

Permits the Board to declare an emergency exists in wheat, cotton, corn, rice, tobacco and swine, on approval of more than half the producers.

Permits the Board to make agreements with cooperatives or processors to finance the purchase, storage or sale of the commodity to remove a surplus from the market.

Creates a stabilization fund for this purpose, provided by the levying of an equalization fee upon each bale of cotton, each bushel of wheat, etc., which is sold.

By removing the surplus from the market, it is contemplated that the domestic price of the product shall be higher than the world price.

Permits the Board to insure producers against price fluctuations and loan money to cooperatives to establish terminal marketing facilities.

President Coolidge has not yet decided whether to veto or sign the McNary-Hangen farm relief bill, he told callers at the White House today.

The bill was discussed at today's cabinet meeting, and will take the usual course of being referred to the various departments for consideration before either signature or veto.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Three sketches of a proposed toll bridge over the Hudson River at Catskill have been submitted to the legislature by Col. Frederick Stuart Greene, state superintendent of public works. The bridge, and its approaches, would be about one mile long and would cost upwards of $6,000,000, Col. Greene said.

tion will "automatically become an official case we succeed in breaking diplomatic relations of Britain and the Soviet."

A White Guard Bloc.

Sablin tells gleefully of relations he has established with leading British conservatives, including Lord Birkenhead, Winston Churchill, Joynson-Hicks, and Commander Locker-Lampson, etc., together with oil magnates and others. Thus, it is said, with the British association of Russian creditors, form the backbone of an organization of which Locker-Lampson is president, called "Out With the Reds" which is devoted to a rupture in Anglo-Soviet relations.

Sablin permits himself free criticism of the British mission in Moscow.

Proposes Forgery.

He relates the trickery he had to use to introduce Russian monarchist propaganda into British newspapers "which might suspect 'white' propaganda if we gave it to them direct through the good offices of our particular agency and other friends." He adds the cynical suggestions that M. De Giers prepare anti-Bolshevist documents "which we can get published and then intercepted letters from leaders of the Russian Communist Party opposition."

Churchill Wants Rupture.

LONDON, Feb. 18. — Coincident with the revelations that Winston Churchill was part of the plot against Russia intrigue Sablin's conspiracy to rupture trade relations between the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and Great Britain, comes confirmation through a speech made last night by Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill, in which he said: "Well, nothing could be less alarming from the government's point of view than a gesture to swasp the Russian delegation, trading associations and diplomatic representatives out of the country," but stated that though the government shared the opinions of the critics of the Bolshevik, certain considerations hindered this action just at present.

which carries thousands of blue jackets. They could be landed at any spot in Central America in a short time, and there are Quantico, Paris Island and San Diego, another force of 1,000 marines available for duty and "awaiting orders."

To Bully Latins.

It was developments outside Nicaragua, rather than inside, that prompted the administration to make this new and greater display of armed strength in the Caribbean, it was said today.

Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, the Nicaraguan revolutionary leader, has refused to be intimidated by the many times sent to impress him many weeks ago. Despite their presence, Sacasa has regularly purchased arms and ammunition from other countries which recognize him, as well as peso loans, and so marked has been his military successes over the American-supported President Diaz that anti-American revolutionists throughout Central America have been encouraged to "start things." There have been rumblings of a new revolution in Honduras for several weeks.

Chancellors of Nicaragua, and such like highwaymen, who ruthlessly plundered their own countrymen of land and mineral rights, to sell to their secret allies, the industrialists of the United States, are gone.

Formerly American banks could make deals with the reigning free-looters in the contemptuously named "banana republics" of Central America, and by giving them loans at ruinous interest, could get half the country in pledge, the local tyrant using what of the loan he did not squander on himself to maintain an army of "rurales" or other armed forces to whip his countrymen into the American yoke.

Use Own Forces.

Since the series of rebellions started in Mexico in 1911, however, these tactics have failed. More and more it has been necessary for the oil, copper and cattle and fruit interests of America to call the state department to their aid. This process reaches a culmination now, in the brutal invasion of Nicaragua, to open a war of conquest that a wave of indignation is sweeping all Latin America, and anything may happen, from a boycott of American goods to open declarations of war.

Reckoning Day Coming For Fake Progressives Who Betray the Workers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

VICTOR L. Berger, the lone socialist congressman, voted in favor of the McNary-Haugen Farm Relief Bill and thus gave what aid he could in its passage.

The socialist program is supposed to be one separate from and against the capitalist program. Since the war, however, it has become the practice of socialists, in all countries, to get their leadership from the capitalists, the socialist parliamentarians trailing along in the wake of their bourgeois competitors. This was the tendency under the development of the Second (Socialist) International, accelerated by the events following the world war, when the capitalists needed the socialists more than ever to combat labor's struggle for victory.

It is not necessary to array any testimony against Berger to show that he follows this course, that in other countries masses socialists members of anti-labor governments and even premiers of the capitalist type. Berger admits it. He confessed it in his speech on the McNary-Haugen Bill before the assembled members of the house of representatives and they applauded him.

Berger voted against the McNary-Haugen legislation in the last congress. He has now changed his mind, which is always the privilege of the socialist politician who refuses to stand on the firm basis of the class struggle, but listen to berger speaking:

"Mr. Chairman, I admit that when the McNary-Haugen bill was up last year I voted against it. I was not quite sure at the time that I did right. I am going to vote for it now, and I am not any more certain that I am right now."

Thus Berger says he finds himself in the position of the "Pennsylvania Dutch" justice of the peace who listened to the lawyers in a damage case. "He agreed at first with one of them and then with the other," according to the story. "And finally he said that they were both right, and decided that the constable had to pay the costs."

Which brought much merriment and given this Morgan-Mellon bill by supporters of the McNary-Haugen Relief Bill.

Berger, Frazier, Nye, LaFollette and the rest may not know where they are at in congress. Very evidently they don't.

But the workers and farmers, as a result of these bitter experiences with "know-nothing" members of congress, will awaken to the fact that they must build an independent political power of their own. The support of the masses drifts to the labor party as the false friends of the working class confess their treason in Washington.

Labor needs spokesmen in congress who know why they fight, now to fight and when to fight. Labor will get them.

High-Priced Lawyers Save Heir to Baker's Millions in Lawsuit

Backed by a high-priced legal staff, Walter S. Ward, wastrel son of the baking trust magnate, escaped judgment yesterday of $75,000, asked by the parents of the boy he slew five years ago.

The jury disagreed, but Judge Anderson immediately ordered a new trial.

Young Ward claimed in the White Plains trial in 1922 that he shot in self-defense. In this case he refused to testify. The wealthy slayer fled the United States and was discovered only a month ago living in the lap of luxury at Country Club Park, a suburb of Havana, where his father's home is located.

The old millionaire has stayed in the background, lavishly financing his son's trial but refusing to come out in the open.

FORCE EDISON CO. TO RENEW HUNT FOR MEN

FRESNO, Cal., Feb. 18.—Although efforts to rescue the bodies of the construction workers killed in the snow slide that buried the camp of the Southern California Edison Co. at Big Creek, 70 miles from here, had ceased, reports that some of the men were still alive caused public sentiment to force the company to renew them.

The Southern California Edison Co. is the power trust which has control of all available water power sites in the southern part of the Sierra Nevadas. It not only provides light and power for the cities, but due to the fact that most of Sarf Joaquin Valley farms are irrigated with ground water, pumped by electric pumps, it grips the agricultural life of the community, and levies enormous toll, on dairymen and fruit growers.

The company is continually expanding its system, opening up new power plants back in almost inaccessible parts of the mountains. Its construction gang camps have many times been shut down by strikes organized by the I. W. W. General Construction Workers Industrial Union No. 310.

The fighting point on which the I. W. W. was able to organize the walk-outs was dangerous work, poor food, and mistreatment of the men.

The lastest disaster is nothing more than could be expected, say the workers familiar with Edison Co. work, for the location of the camps is maue without reference to the conveniense or safety of the men.

Passaic Sheriff Rebuffed in 'Bomb' Case

Labor Hater Fails to Run Whole Show

PASSAIC, N. J., Feb. 18.—Sheriff Nimmo of Passaic "riot law" fame appeared as a chief actor again yesterday at the trial of the second of the five Bergen county textile strike prisoners on flimsy bomb charges. "Little Nimmo" tried three times to have Hollace Ransdell, secretary of the Joint Committee for Passaic Defense, ordered out of the courtroom.

Nimmo is the man who read the riot act in front of Forstmann-Huffmann mills early in the Passaic textile workers' strike. He has done the same stunt every time the workers struck at these mills.

Under his "riot law" in this strike Norman Thomas, Robert Dunn, David Weinstein and the Federated Press reporter were arrested, though their cases were dismissed months after. Forstmann-Huffmann have been pretty clearly identified as the behind-scenes instigators, through agent provocateurs, of the bomb plots which brought 11 strike victims into the courts.

Defense Wins Point.

Little Nimmo did not score with Judge William Seufert, however, and Miss Ransdell was permitted to remain and aid defense attorneys. Alexander MacLeod and Arthur Garfield Hays. Prosecutor Archie Hart had unexpectedly brought Paul Kovae up instead of Tom Regan, so that Ransdell's work in rounding up defense witnesses quickly was essential.

Coal Mine Wage Negotiations Interrupted

Next Meeting Monday; Lewis Still Boosts Efficiency

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 18.—The joint sub-committee to which were referred the two plans for settlement of the wage controversy between the coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America has adjourned until Monday. No agreement has been reached.

Most of the miners' and operators' representatives have gone to Havana for the week-end.

Discussion in the sub-committee is said to have centered around the proposals made by William C. Haskins for the operators and that of President Lewis on behalf of the union.

Two Proposals.

The Lewis proposal provides for a continuation of the Jacksonville scale of (nominally) $7.50 per day with the organization of a commission composed of technical experts, lawyers, etc., to work out plans for adding to the efficiency of the industry.

The Haskin plan asks a reduction in wages in the central competitive fields—Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania—to the level of the prevailing rate in the non-union districts and provides machinery for constant adjustments of wages and working conditions. Four miners, four operators, and three "impartial" mediators would constitute the Haskin commission. In the event the miners and operators are unable to agree on the three mediators they are to be appointed by the chief justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Both plans have a more efficient organization of the industry as their basis.

Report Agreement Rumors.

There is much gossip here relative to the probability of separate agreements with the union in the four states comprising the central competitive field.

Ohio and Western Pennsylvania operators claim that the short distance from their markets to the non-union fields of West Virginia places them under a handicap from which the Illinois operators do not suffer.

While there are reports that Illinois will sign a separate agreement the opposite appears to be more probable—that the operators of the other competitive fields will insist on separate agreements whether Illinois does or not.

It will be remembered that before the exposure of Frank Farrington, former president of District 12 Illinois, as an employe of the Peabody coal interests, he advocated a separate agreement for the Illinois sections of the union.

The statements that separate agreements will be signed in the central competitive field are probably based on the belief that the liquidation of Farrington did not mean the liquidation of his policy.

LATEST AMERICAN OPERA NOT AMERICAN AT ALL; LEISURE CLASS STUFF FROM MEDIEVAL TIMES

By TREBLE.

For reasons best known to himself, The DAILY WORKER'S musical critic decided not to pay eight or ten dollars to witness the world premiere of the latest American opera, "The King's Henchman"; libretto by Edna St. Vincent Millay, music by Deems Taylor.

Since no press tickets for this event found their way down to the office on Thursday, or before that, this reviewer has had to satisfy his curiosity by reading yesterday's newspaper reviews of the tenth American opera produced by the Metropolitan, and the first one definitely commissioned by that organization.

Accounts differ as to the amount of praise the performance deserves, but since Miss Millay is a poet of unquestioned talent, and Mr. Taylor has shown himself to be a capable musician, one can believe that the opera was as good and maybe better than many a work produced by the Metropolitan.

But why write an opera in 1927, why have it the story of a tenth century English king—even if you make it sound rather modern by varying the conventional type of operatic story?

Old Wine in Old Bottles.

When there were courts and courtiers, in silks and satins, all bored to death with hunting and love making, new operas were part of the life of those for whom music was composed. It fitted right in with the artificiality of the times, and was part and parcel of the scene.

Now that we have discarded those clothes, those modes of life, and after we have developed opera to the point of music dramas like Wagner's, why try to continue this form? A new time like ours demands a new form. The trouble is, though, that a new form demands some imagination and that's always a bit difficult.

The Metropolitan's commissioning of two Americans to write an opera, is an interesting indication of a new phase of America's development. Now that we have become the richest nation in the world, our millionaires are going to have us the most artistic nation in the world, no matter how much it costs. This is not to condemn the habit of handing out subsidies to artists in any field, provided the artists are allowed to create what they want to create. The trouble is that not many members of the American bourgeoisie will hand out money for anything that does not suit their tastes; and if the matter is left to them, we will keep on having operas, and art in many another category, molds.

Why Not Operas of 1927?

Why shouldn't modern America have some new combination of music and the spoken word? It would be impossible to have any phase of present-day life portrayed in the old opera form, if they sang it in English as "The King's Henchman" was sung. We can't stand hearing even Jeritza warble a request to "Pass the soup"; or Gigli demand, in the most approved tenor tones, "What has become of my rubbers."

For modern America we must have a new form; and that means we must have new ideas. Why not music with a story about some of the people, living in America, who fill the galleries at the Metropolitan, and Carnegie, and Mecca Temple?

Workers' lives may not be romantic, but they certainly are dramatic, vigorous, thrilling, colorful—and American. What better subject material could a twentieth century artist have?

If the Metropolitan or others of the millionaire class will subsidize an artist to produce such a novel and untested work, all well and good. If not, it will have to be produced anyway, in spite of America's official culture seekers and without their encouragement, official or otherwise.

Worker-Reporter Tells Of New York Lodgings

By FRED HARRIS

For a worker, single or married, coming to live in New York, the joyful anticipation of a metropolitan life ceases as soon as he leaves his train or ship and embarks upon that painful task of finding lodging. I have went thru the mill and speak from my own personal experiences.

Arriving here by boat I engaged a room near the waterfront in the Christopher Hotel on Christopher St. The charge is $2, but as soon as I see the room I am sorry. It is filthy, dirty and repulsive.

The wall paper, old and faded, hangs in strips and is falling down. The remnant of what has once been a rug is vermin infested.

The bed and a chair are on verge of breaking down. There is a cold water faucet but the wash basin is so dirty that I prefer not to use it.

The place is lighted so dimly that I can hardly discern anything in the hallway. I look for a toilet but upon finding it I turn away; the place is unfit for human use.

With a sense of disgust I leave the place the next morning to look for a more suitable room. I search along 13th, 14th, 15th and 18th streets, both east and west and gain a knowledge of what is known by "the slums".

$7, $8, $9, and $10 a week for furnished rooms which under no condition would pass an housing inspection. Dirty attic holes, with no sunlight ever entering it, slim fixtures giving inadequate light; beds which take up the main space of the room and whose bedding and blankets should be burned and destroyed.

I turn away and go to other places which bear the sign of "furnished rooms" hoping that there must be a place in this big city suitable and reasonable enough to fit the purse of a working man.

The Manager's Corner

THE FUTURE OF THE NEWSPAPERS

"Unless we today think of the generations to come and plant the seeds physically, politically and practical there will be no forests, no lumber, no paper, and without paper, no civilization," says E. T. McBain in The Paper Industry (New York). "Eight million and eight hundred thousand tons in 1925 is a lot of paper, but each year we as a nation are using from 5 to 10 percent more. Where will it all end unless some steps, and strong measured ones, are taken soon not only to perpetuate our pulp timber supply, but to stop this enormous waste of our national natural resources."

Curiously enough the very newspapers, about which experts like Mr. McBain are concerned, are doing everything in their power to perpetuate the system of which waste of natural resources is an integral part. Anarchy in production in the paper industry, as well as the exhaustion of our lumber reserves are part and parcel of the system of capitalist production as a whole.

Mr. McBain's proposed adjustments of the problem are temporary in their nature and fundamentally unsound. We would recommend to him and to the workers generally, the support of a newspaper which is dedicated to the task destroying this system and supplanting it with an order of society, which will insure the conservation of our lumber and newsprint paper supply, and also the reorganization of the entire system of production and distribution for the good of humanity as a whole.—BERT MILLER.

Paterson Bazaar for Strikers' Relief Opens Today, for Full Week

A big seven day bazaar which organized labor is holding in this city to raise funds for the relief of the Passaic strikers will open this evening in Paterson at Carpenters Hall, 54 Van Houten Street.

Many thrills are promised by the committee in charge. William Johnson, president of the Passaic Trades and Labor Council, and John Richardson, president of the Paterson Trades and Labor Council, who are president and manager of the bazaar promise a spectacular program for each day during the week.

The bazaar will be open on the afternoons of Washington's birthday and Saturday Feb. 26th. as well as every night except Sunday night.

Many salable articles have been collected and the booths are reported to be stocked full of the choicest bargoins, varying from assorted groceries to wonderful oriental goods donated by sympathetic merchants.

All workers who have the time should attend this bazaar as its purpose is not only to help the Passaic strikers, but also because a real good time will be had all around.

Russia's Oil Output Shows Marked Gain

Figures for oil production show that the output in 1926 exceeded that of 1925 by 25 million barrels. The leading places were taken by the United States, Mexico and Russia. The prediction made in industrial circles is that if the rate of production of oil in the Soviet Union continues in 1927 like in the preceding year that Russia will take the second place now held by Mexico.

"Breaking Chains"

A number of workers' organizations and unions in New York City will pay homage to their great comrade, Lenin, tomorrow (Sun.), at the second and final showing of "Breaking Chains" at the new Waldorf Theatre, on West 50th street. So great has been the demand for tickets that the International Workers' Aid decided right after the first showing a few weeks ago to make a repeat engagement. It should be born in mind that there is positively no chance for a third showing, as the film has been booked for many key cities out of town.

As previously announced there will be four consecutive performances. Tickets can be purchased at The DAILY WORKER office, Jimmie Higgins book shop on University Place, and at the box office of the Waldorf Theatre today or tomorrow.

The current bill at the Grove Street Theatre, where the Grand Guignol Players are presenting four one-act plays, headed by Oscar Wilde's "A Florentine Tragedy," will extend their program another week. Business must be good at the Greenwich Village playhouse.

The Most Dangerous Weapon of the People's Armies.

Sun Chuang-fang's forces have been found susceptible to the same arguments which left Wu Pei-fu without an army when the propaganda machine of the Peoples Government of China went into action.

The imperialist press holds this method of warfare to be especially damnable and if they had to choose between the use of poison gas and the dissemination of the doctrines of Dr. Sun Yat Sen by the Peoples Armies would undoubtedly choose the latter as less deadly both in its immediate and ultimate effects. Poison gas merely disables or kills while the conversion of enemy troops by the propagandists of Chinese national liberation leaves them in fighting trim but with the direction of their fire reversed.

Since the Russian Revolution it is becoming more and more apparent that the hazards encountered by imperialist armies fighting revolutionary troops are of a kind for which the imperialist general staff has not been able to devise a defense. This is especially true when the imperialist nations are compelled to use soldiers of the same race or nationality as the workers or colonial peoples which they are trying to subjugate.

The disaster which has overtaken the forces of Sun Chuan-fang south of Shanghai is additional proof of the weakness of the political position of Great Britain and the other imperialist powers in China. Similar proof was given by the simultaneous refusal of the Peoples Government and the generals of the reactionary forces to agree to the Coolidge proposal for the "neutralization" of Shanghai.

Great Britain especially has been proceeding on the theory that there is no such thing as a united national sentiment in China and this has led her diplomats into grotesque errors—errors which show that the bankruptcy of British diplomacy is just as far advanced as the decay of the empire.

Even Chang Tso-lin, while he accepts support from the Japanese, is forced to follow a policy which makes some pretense of national independence for the provinces under his control. Unity with Chang Tso-lin, as in the case of Wu Pei-fu, has, because of his orientation to Japan, proved disastrous to every militarist whose troops have faced the People's armies.

The Chinese masses, altho the northern minority is still misled by treacherous militarists, are united against imperialism. This is the one big fact which the imperialist powers will disregard only to make this unity more solid.

We believe it is no exaggeration to state that the bombardment of Shanghai or the actual launching of a land offensive by Britain against the People's Armies will mean the desertion of Chang Tso-lin and Sun Chuang-fang by decisive sections of their forces who will then fight under the banner of the People's Government.

The People's Government (Kuomintang) is the organized and militant expression of Chinese nationalism and its program has a wide popular appeal. In the face of imperialist intervention the militarist leaders will be swamped.

The beginning of the latest phase of this process is the breakup of Sun Chuang-fang's southern army.

The War on Nicaragua Continues

The Coolidge government certainly is giving service to that section of the plunderbund which has investments in Nicaragua and to the general interests of American imperialism in Latin America.

Almost all of the ships of the Atlantic fleet are in Caribbean waters; a number of them are patroling both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of Nicaragua. All available marines are either on their way to Nicaragua or already there.

Admiral Latimer has been kept busy establishing "neutral" zones in order to prevent the popular army from sweeping Diaz into oblivion and establishing the Sacasa government on a firm foundation and now the state department appears to be preparing to declare the whole country a "neutral" zone and outlaw the liberal forces.

The ease with which the poorly organized and equipped popular army has defeated the Diaz forces, in spite of his support by the American state and war departments, exposes the Wall-Street-Coolidge-Kellogg conspiracy against the liberties of the Nicaraguan people in all its nakedness. Diaz, it is evident, could not last 24 hours without the backing of the United States government.

It is fortunate that the logic of events has disproved the lying assertion that the U. S. forces have been sent to Nicaragua to preserve order. This excuse is without weight and in itself is no justification for the role the state department is playing, but it might serve to beguile elements who think that it is the duty of the United States to police Latin-America.

As it is now the fact cannot be concealed that the only elements of disorder in Nicaragua are those sent there by the United States and its puppet Diaz.

The popular forces have shown beyond a shadow of a doubt that they represent the vast majority of the Nicaraguan people. This is precisely the reason why the Wall Street government supports Diaz who, contrary to the desire of the masses, is willing to give Nicaragua to Wall Street for a canal zone and a military and naval base for imperialist operations against Mexico and Latin-America.

There is no longer any doubt that, lacking powerful protest from American labor, Wall Street government intends to continue its aggressions in Central America.

Speeches of middle class representatives in congress and the senate are all very well; they focus attention on the rape of Nicaragua but they do not stop it.

The workers and farmers of America, their organizations, alone have the power to force withdrawal of armed forces from Nicaragua and prevent American imperialism from establishing a base for a future bloody war upon the peoples and republics to the south.

OIL!
A NEW NOVEL
By Upton Sinclair

VII

The upshot of the debate was that ne ene of them was sure the enterprise would be a success, but all the young ones were willing to pitch in and help, if Bunny was determined for a try. And Bunny said that he had already been looking about for a site, with good land and plenty of water, somewhere about fifty miles from Angel City; he was going to make a first payment on land as soon as he could get the cash, and meantime they would work out the details. He would give his own time for three years to getting the institution on its feet, and if it proved possible to develop the right discipline and morale, he would make the institution self-directing, and furnish whatever money could be used effectively. They would need teachers, organizers, and business managers, so there were jobs for all.

And meantime, Bunny must go back to the interviews with lawyers, to try to save as much as possible of the estate. It meant long wrangles with Bertie, for their affairs were in a snarl, and getting worse every day. Verne insisted that Ross Operating must have funds to meet its current expenses; and did they want him to assess the stock, and force the estate to raise the money, or did they want him to buy the lease to the Ross Junior tract, the only asset of Ross Operating, except the claims against the insurance companies? Verne could do what he pleased, because the directors of the concern were himself and his trusted young executives. He was proposing to form another concern, the Paradise Operating Company — with other trusted young executives as directors, and sell himself the lease which had twenty years still to run, and was worth nobody could tell how many millions of dollars, for the sum of six hundred thousand!

All right then, said Verne, let the estate do better. Bertie took up the challenge, and exchanged long cables with her husband in Paris and went out among her rich friends—to make the embarrassing discovery that people who have six hundred thousand dollars in cash do a lot of investigating before they spend it, and then want to bog the whole thing for themselves. Bertie spent much worry and hard work—and what made her most furious was that she couldn't do it for herself alone, but had to do it for the whole estate, giving the incompetent Bunny and the infamous Alyce the benefit of her labors. She got a proposition; and then the lawyers of the infamous Alyce turned up with another proposition; and Bertie declared they were bigger thieves than Verne.

And then Ross Consolidated needed money; and Verne was going to assess that stock—meaning to drive the estate to the wall and plunder it of everything. Presently he made a proposition—there was the Roumainian oil venture, into which Dad had put a million and a quarter in cash. Verne offered to purchase this hack for the same amount, and the necessary papers were prepared—the heirs all had to consent to the sale, and they did so, and then the court must approve the proposal. This meant delay, and meanwhile the estate was delinquent in the assessment on the Ross Consolidated stock, and this stock was to be sold out. The money from the Roumainian deal was to save it, but to the consternation of the lawyers, the court refused its consent to this deal. There were technical points involved— the court questioned the authority of Mrs. Alyse Ross's lawyers, and demanded her personal signature, attested in France. In short, the estate couldn't get money in time for the sale, and it was Vernon Roscoe who bought the Ross Consolidated stock at a bargain.

Oh, how Bertie raved and swore —the veritable daughter of a muledriver! Verne, the filthy swine, had put that trick over on them! Not content with having stolen Dad's papers, he had diddled them along like this, and got one of his crooked judges to hold up the order, so that he might grab another plum! Bertie threatened to take a gun to Verne's office and shoot him down like a dog; but what she really did was to abuse her brother, who had been such a fool as to make a mortal enemy out of te most powerful man they knew.

It taught them a lesson. They would get themselves out of Verne's clutches, get rid of everything that he controlled. Dad had put nearly a million into a concern called Aggio-California, which was to develop the big Mosul concession; and the lawyers of Alyse got an offer for that stock, hnt it included time payments, and Bertie wouldn't agree to that, and the lawyers wouldn't agree to Verne's cash offer, and Bertie was in terror lest Verne would do some more hocus-pocus—organize an Anglo-California Operating Company, and lease the Mosul tract to do it, and swipe all the profits!

Amid which wrangling came a letter from Alyse to Bunny. She was sure that he would not let horrid money troubles come between him and her, and break their sacred bond, the memories of dear Jim. Alyse had gone to consult her favorite medium, immediately upon her arrival in Paris, and at the third seance Jim had "manifested," and ever since then Alyse had had his words taken down by a stenographer, and here was a bulky record, big as the transcript of a legal trial, and tied with blue ribbons of feminine elegance. Alyse hoped that Bunny had not failed to consult a medium, and would send her whatever dear Jim had had to say in his old home.

Bunny went through the record, and it gave him a strange thrill. There were pages and pages of sentimental rubbish about this happy shore and this new state of bliss, with angel's wings and the music of harps, and tell my dear ones that I am with them, but I am wiser now, and dear Bunny must know that I understand and forgive—all stuff that might have come out of the conscious or subconscious mind of a sentimental elderly lady or of a rascally medium. But then came something that made the young man catch his breath: "I want my dear Bunny to know that it is really his father who speaks to him, and he will remember the man who got all the land for us, and that he had two gold teeth in the front of his mouth, and Bunny said that somebody would rob his grave." How in the name of all the arts of magic was a medium in Paris to know about a joke which Bunny had made to his father about Mr. Hardacre, the agent who had bought them options on ranches in Paradise, California?

By golly, it was something to think about! Could it really be that Dad was not gone forever, but had just disappeared somewhere, and could be got hold of again? Bunny would go for a walk to think about it; and through the streets of Angel City he would hear the voice of Eli Watkins booming over the radio. Eli's Tabernacle was packed day and night, with the tens of thousands who crowded to see the prophet who had been floated over the sea by the angels, and had brought back a feather to prove it; all California heard Eli's voice, proclaiming the ancient promise: "Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

Another Student Kills Self.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Despondency was believed today to be the reason for the suicide of Miss Edith M. Stewart, 21, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., a student of Elmira College.

The girl declared she could not face her parents if her suspension from college, which was not even contemplated, was ordered. Almost immediately afterwards she swallowed some strichnine tablets which she had taken from the infirmary office.

Anna Pavlova, Dancer, Now Ready to Return To the Russian Stage

MOSCOW, Feb. 18.—Anna Pavlova will soon visit Russia for the first time since the revolution.

Pavlova was the star ballerina in the old St. Petersburg imperial ballet. She will return home to find that her former colleagues who remained in Russia are taking her place.

In this city Madame Gelser is dancing the leading roles, Madame Kreuger, who also was a star before the revolution, remains in the forefront.

Liberals.—They are fair to everybody and everything. The capitalists, communists, fascisti, politicians, clergy, etc., etc. They have open minds on everything. The fear that sometimes overcomes how they may have judged harshly or even unfairly gives them nightmares. And so they change their views twice daily, hedge on action, do tight-rope stunts, and generally get in the way of just other people's way. It doesn't matter that they are wrong on the whole, so long as they are just and considerate in detail. If only liberals could save themselves of their paralyzing fairness they would be quite tolerable. But then they wouldn't be liberals. They would be useful conservatives or radicals.

Swiss Justice Smells Like Swiss Cheese.—Ivan De Justh, who attacked the Hungarian premier in Geneva, has been sentenced by a Swiss court to 24 days in prison, ten years' exile and 500 francs fine. The court of the same country acquitted the murderer of Vorovsky. De Justh probably realizes that his mistake was in not killing the premier outright.

THE SYSTEM AND ITS COURT CLOWNS.

A Suggestion to the Nation.—The Nation the other day staged a dinner at which Ruth Hale, Lorine Pruette and Freda Kirchwey defended the thesis that woman is superior to man. The girls made a brave argument. They left the only male speaker, John Macy, no more than two legs to stand on. But the men and the audience who had forked over $2.75 for the dinner of some female companion felt that there was something fishy about the argument. In justice to the speakers, a customer of this column suggests that in future meetings to establish the superiority, or even equality, of the female of the species, she be compelled to pay for her own meal. It will make the thesis more convincing.

Judging from the amount of sacramental wine being confiscated by the booze-sleuths, there has been a very decided revival of religion in this land.

How the World Reports a Lenin Meeting.

"Some time ago," A. B. Magil writes, "you may recall there was a Lenin Memorial meeting. Well, what do you think happened? The New York World, which, as every child knows, is the great liberal newspaper of the United States, sent a reporter to Madison Square Garden—or maybe it wasn't a reporter. Anyhow, the next morning, gasing over my favorite family jonrnal, I spied the story trying to sneak around a corner of the second page. It consisted of about two paragraphs. The story recorded the fact that there had been a Lenin Memorial meeting and that more than 20,000 Communists had been present. (This must have been heartening news to the comrades who are trying to huild up a strong party in New York.) It also said that speeches had been made, but it forgot to say who made them and what they were about. And it ended up with a tasty hit of newspaper writing by saying that 50 policemen kept order and listing the names of the sergeants in command of the diffgent cops.

"This struck me as a swell idea, democratic and everything. I would suggest that the World carry the idea into its other departments to be consistent. Why not have Woolcott and Chotzinoff give the names of the head ushers, the man at the box office and the janitor in their dramatic and musical reviews? The program and the performers don't matter."

"Women Hold Most Phone Stock," says the headline to a financial item. We don't know about phone stock, but they certainly hold most phone booths, especially when a fellow needs one badly.

He signs himself "Young Sweeney" and writes to us "as one conductor to another." This is not the pleasant job of conducting a column. He works on a rapid transit line, works on it all night long, cheerfully answers a lot of questions, and is paid next to nothing by a company which made a million dollars more this year than ever before. (The information comes to us in rhymes.) And now he asks a queation in turn:

"Now what I want to know

The answer is too easy. As Young Sweeney grows older he will find out. Or maybe he's only teasing us. Maybe he knew the answer all the time. If it is any consolation to Sweeney and his fellow-workers on the rapid transit, he is welcome to the news that at least one conductor is paid even less than they. Give you one guess.

We lament the decline of pornography. Post-war realism (a lop-sided kind of romanticism) has done for it. That realism finds its popular expression in the picture papers and the nude revues. The world's becoming shock-proof. Crude, thick, vulgar, obvious stuff has dulled the taste for such things. The only way Rabelais could get any attention for his work in New York today would be to have him a go-getting publicity man who in turn would get after Sumner to get after the police. Intimate bedroom stuff—in a novel or a divorce court action or a play—is as conventional as the happy ending and as little satisfying. Of frisness and subtlety there is none.

Maybe that explains our plight. A scribe who shall remain unnamed sends some verses with the assurance that they are pornographic. A diligent search is, between and around the lines fails to disclose the thrill. Nothing short of a picture postcard with accompanying charts will be recognized nowadays, alas, for what it is intended.

Wall Street Plans to Smother Nicaragua

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The American government has decided to smother the Nicaraguan civil war, hoping thereby to prevent a general conflagration in Central America, where the people in general are writhing under the financial tyranny of the United States.

This was the only explanation advanced today for the sudden dispatch of 1,400 additional marines to the little republic. With these reinforcements, the United States will have in Nicaragua, a mobile force of rifles equal in size to the Sacasa revolutionary army, and, of course, enormously superior in equipment.

The smothering process apparently is to involve policing the entire country, from Honduras on the north to Guatemala on the south—no light undertaking in view of the scarcity of good roads and transportation. How long it will be necessary can only be guessed, but the concensus today was that the marines are in Nicaragua to stay for a long time.

For Conquest.

There was not much pretense in Washington today that the marines, bluejackets and airplanes have been concentrated in Nicaragua merely to "protect American lives and property." A handful of marines could do that—as they have done it on divers occasions in the last twenty years.

The force being concentrated in Nicaragua today is different. It is enormously larger, better equipped, and operating directly under the orders of the state department, which now feels it is prepared to cope with any eventualities, irrespective of whether those eventualities are in Nicaragua, in Honduras, Costa Rica, Guatemala—or Mexico.

Other Countries Angry.

Guatemala, to the north, and Costa Rica, to the south, are out of sympathy with the state department's aiding President Diaz. Both countries resisted pressure from Washington, and refused to recognize Diaz. They have maintained an attitude of neutrality by also refusing to recognize Sacasa, but it has been no secret where their sympathy lies. Sacasa has been able to get most of his munitions from abroad through Guatemala and Costa Rica.

Pro-Diaz "Neutrality."

The reinforcements being sent Admiral Latimer, commander of the American occupational forces, will give him enough men to patrol both the northern and southern borders of Nicaragua, after a fashion. Both the Pacific and Atlantic fronts have already been pretty well taken out of the war zone through Latimer's declaring them "neutral zones." Likewise he will have enough men to protect the railroad that links up the principal cities of the country. This railroad is owned by the Nicaraguan government; hence it cannot be said that in protecting this road the marines are "protecting American property."

Airplane Police.

The airplanes being sent to Nicaragua are understood to be for the purpose of patrolling the borders to prevent the liberals from receiving new supplies of arms. This is to be the "smothering" process—to choke the war to death through stoppage of supplies.

Despite the large force of marines now on Nicaraguan soil, there is at close hand most of the scouting fleet,

THE sum of $25,000 was awarded by a jury to a resident of Springfield, Massachusetts, who slipped on a banana peel in the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad station, suffering serious injury. When the accident happened is not stated but by the time he who slipped gets the award he will in all probability have slipped into a grave. The railroad intends to appeal to the United States supreme court.

ANOTHER celebrity who had the satisfaction of reading of his own demise is Elihu Root. The Manchester Guardian carried a New York dispatch announcing the old corporation lawyer's death. A press agency sleuth developed the theory that the correspondent might have cabled that Root dined instead of died. "Damn that 'n,'" muttered our Feature Editor as he passed us the story.

DISTANCE may make the heart grow fonder provided local competition is not too keen, but charity begins at home. Hence I am calling the attention of the multitudes to the L. L. D. bazaar, which will be held in New York on March 10, 11, 12 and 13., the Chicago is also howling for publicity. The International Labor Defense is worthy of the support of all class conscious workers. There are only three weeks left to push the sale of tickets and help make the affair a success. Money is needed to defend victims of capitalist courts and conduct campaigns to halt the bloody hands of the fascist oppressors in Poland, Lithuania, Italy and other countries.

Four days for New York; three for Chicago. That's about fair since we have a subway and other conveniences here that do not exist in the windy city, tho as far as gas is concerned we have our share of it. This is another way of saying that the Chicago bazaar (it's called carnival out there) will last three days. But the man and women from the midwest live fast and furiously and stay up late. So they expect to accomplish as much in three days as we of the effete east will in four. From what we have learned about the preparations for the Chicago bazaar from personal correspondence we can sincerely urge all those who read these lines to patronize the affair, which will be held in the Ashland Auditorium on Feb. 25, 26 and 27.

Fight Fans Are Groggy In Speculation Spree On Garden Pasteboards

Speculators are scoring a knockout on the flight fans by doubling up on the price of pasteboards for the Maloney-Delaney fight which opens tonight at Madison Square Garden.

Aside from the legitimate sale of tickets Tex Rickard, the arch profiteer of sports, is raking in a pile of dough by scalping the scalpers.

And it's the fight fan who will have to pay two and three times the marked price of the tickets. The worker who will be sitting near the dome of Madison Square Garden will have to pay $10.00 for a $3.30 seat.

After its all over Tex Rickard figures he'll rake in some half a million.

BILL TO CREATE RADIO MONOPOLY PASSES IN HOUSE

Can Now Make You Pay For Listening In

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18. — Without a record vote the senate this afternoon passed the Dill-White radio bill. The measure now goes to the president for signature.

The bill creates a commission of five for one year which will be empowered to "clean up the air" and otherwise regulate the radio industry. At the end of twelve months the commission will become a sort of a board of appeal and radio control will be administered by the secretary of commerce.

Monopolizes Ether

The bill creates a monopoly of the best wave lengths, and by amendments made during its passage confirms them in wave lengths as private property of the companies to which they are assigned. It makes possible the renting of the privilege of "listening in."

Coal Mine Wage Negotiations Interrupted

Next Meeting Monday; Lewis Still Boosts Efficiency

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 18.—The joint sub-committee to which were referred the two plans for settlement of the wage controversy between the coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America has adjourned until Monday. No agreement has been reached.

Most of the miners' and operators' representatives have gone to Havana for the week-end.

Discussion in the sub-committee is said to have centered around the proposals made by William C. Haskins for the operators and that of President Lewis on behalf of the union.

Two Proposals.

The Lewis proposal provides for a continuation of the Jacksonville scale of (nominally) $7.50 per day with the organization of a commission composed of technical experts, lawyers, etc., to work out plans for adding to the efficiency of the industry.

The Haskin plan asks a reduction in wages in the central competitive fields—Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania—to the level of the prevailing rate in the non-union districts and provides machinery for constant adjustments of wages and working conditions. Four miners, four

Mexico Gives Kellogg The Lie; American Oil Concerns Yield to Law

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 18. — The statement made by Secretary of State Kellogg on the refusal of Americans in Mexico to comply with the Mexican oil laws was characterized as incorrect today in a formal statement issued by the department of industry, commerce and labor.

The statement which is at great length, claims that only the Atlantic Refining, the Gulf Oil Company and the Mexican Petroleum Company are listed as completely opposed to the laws, while others have either partially or wholly accepted the laws.

The companies which have not submitted to the laws have less than five per cent of the oil land of Mexico, the statement adds, and that these lands produced fifty-three per cent of Mexico's oil in 1926.

FINALLY MAKE TREATY WITH KEMAL PASHA

U. S. Recognizes Turkish Nationalist Power

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—An agreement has been reached between the United States and Turkey, providing for a resumption of diplomatic relations, it was announced at the State Department today.

Joseph C. Grew, now Under-secretary of State, probably will be the new American ambassador.

The agreement provides for an indefinite extension of the existing modus vivendi between the two countries, necessitated because the Senate rejected the Lausanne treaty.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 18.—Three writs of prohibition which Charlie Chaplin's attorneys sought from the appellate court were denied by that tribunal here today.

Kuomintang Army Now Sweeping On Toward Shanghai

Reactionary Forces Fleeing in Disorder as People's Armies Capture Treaty Port

SHANGHAI, Feb. 18.—The drive of the nationalist revolutionary armies on Shanghai continues, and the Chekiang forces appear unable to offer resistance.

The Canton forces today captured Ningpo, a treaty port, and the capital of Chekiang.

In Complete Control.

Authoritative reports to the China Press, English language daily of Shanghai, said the nationalist forces were completely in control of Hangchow although the southern troops had not occupied the city. A Kuomintang government has already supplanted that of the fleeing Chekiang officials.

After defeating the Sun Chuan-Fang troops on three fronts yesterday, the Cantonese continued their drive toward Kashing where Sun is reported entrenching himself in a desperate endeavor to halt the southerners' drive toward Shanghai.

Fall of City Near.

The atmosphere in Shanghai today was extremely tense as it was evident that the deciding struggle for the possession of Shanghai is developing swiftly. Foreign officials here declared the capture of the international city will come with lightning-like suddenness.

Twenty thousand of Sun Chuan-Fang's troops who evacuated Hangchow yesterday were entraining today for Kashing, where the main line of defense is being established, with a second line at Sungkiang. Four thousand Sun troops arrived from Ningpo, and were dispatched to Sungkiang this morning. More troops are expected to arrive from Ningpo shortly.

Attack Chang-Tso-Lin.

Reports from Chengchow, Honan Province, indicate that Marshal Wu Pei-Fu's generals Wei Yi-San, Tien Wei-Chin and Chin Yu-Nao are cooperating in a movement to resist the advance of Chang Tso-Lin's Fengtien troops through Honan to Hupeh Province. Wi Pei-Fu appears powerless to control his subordinates, who, it is expected, will engage the Fengtien troops in an attempt to prevent their crossing the Yellow river.

The Fengtien troops stationed in the north of Kiangsu have been ordered to assist General Sun Chuan Fang in his stand before Shanghai according to a report from Nanking

CHINA'S NATIONALIST GOVERNMENT REPLIES TO WASHINGTON NOTE

Demands Full Freedom.

PEKIN, Feb. 18. — "Recovery of China's full independence"—this is the dominant aim of the Cantonese government as set forth in a statement of policy forwarded to the United States government, through the legation here, by Eugene Chen, nationalist foreign minister.

Chen has bitterly denounced Great Britain in particular in a lengthy document, but declares that the nationalists do not offer any menace to foreigners or any power, and that the powers can not harm themselves by treating with the Canton government.

"The new China is strong and is conscious of its powers and its ability by economic means to enforce its will on Chinese soil against any power," said Chen.

Imperialism Must Go.

Chen denounced the international control in China and declared that it is "on the eve of sharing the fate of all historical systems of political subjection."

"A nation that is not dying can never be at peace with its conquerors," said Chen. "It will strike at the selected moment. . . .

To Set Up Modern State.

"Great Britain or other nations have nothing to fear when China under national leadership and rule, recovers her lost independence. It is not to revert to the methods of barbarism of a Chang Tsung Chang, or to reintroduce the feudalism of a Chang Tso Lin, or to maintain and perpetuate the mediavalism of the mandarinate in Peking, that nationalist China wants independence. . . A modern state must be set up in China if the Chinese people are not to suffer the fate of dead nations. But if such a state is to be built by Chinese hands the new China must be mistress in her own household—this means independence. . . .

To Use Economic Weapon.

"Today the effective protection of foreign life and property in China does not and cannot longer rest on foreign bayonets and foreign gunboats, because the 'arm' of Chinese nationalism, the economic weapon, is more pulssant than any engine of warfare that the foreigner can devise and the British in particular must now understand that the forces of the present revolutionary situation are handing over the protection of foreign life and property to the government that derives the power that can paralyze the economic life of foreign nationals in China."

O'Mally's New Instructions.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The foreign office announced today that it expects an early signature to the local agreement with the nationalist government relative to the administration of Hankow.

Announcement was made today that as the result of last night's cabinet meeting, new instructions were sent to China laying down lines upon which Owen O'Malley, British charge, might continue his negotiations with Chen

Woll Shows True Character of Right Wing in Labor Movement

IF any remnants of working class principle hung in tatters about the shoulders of the leaders of the right wing drive in New York on trade unionism free from capitalist control they were thrown to the winds by Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, Thursday night, in his speech from the throne when the unseating of delegates of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and Furriers' Unions came before the Central Trades and Labor Council.

Woll's speech—and on this reports from all sources are in agreement—was a combination of anti-Semitism, Civic Federation reaction and denunciation of foreign-born workers.

It was the speech of a fascist.

He tried to incite Americans against Jews, Jews and Americans against Greeks and Christians against Jews. He stated that the issue was "Americanism" and urged the council delegates to stand behind the A. F. of L. committee for this reason.

In the face of the conviction of strikers and pickets by the capitalist courts working in cooperation with the right wing and the sentencing of these workers to prison for long terms, Woll accused the Communists and left wing of "terrorizing" members of the needle trades unions. Right wing gangsters with police protection have slugged and stabbed rank and file members of the needle trades unions but there have been no prison sentences handed out to these underworld elements. Woll had nothing to say on this matter.

Communist workers, of course, came in for Woll's most unrestrained abuse. The reason for this is clear.

The Communist press has exposed Woll and it will continue to expose him. He is an agent of the bosses in the labor movement. He is acting president of the Civic Federation, the organization with which the capitalist class penetrates the labor movement. Communist workers expose Woll in their unions.

Woll is also the agent of an international organization—the Roman Catholic Church. In the labor movement he carries out the policy of both the Civic Federation and the instructions of the political wing of the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

It was Woll, who at the Detroit convention of the A. F. of L. in spite of the drive of the open shoppers, tried to prevent the trade unions coming to the assistance of the Passaic strike although the workers were members of the United Textile Workers affiliated to the American Federation of Labor.

It is Woll who fought the hardest against any assistance being given to the Mexican labor movement in its struggle against feudal catholicism and American imperialism.

We say that the right wing is welcome to the leadership of Matthew Woll and that this leadership whose policy, under the guidance of labor's most powerful enemies, is becoming more reactionary day by day, will produce, as the rank and file of the labor movement comes to understand its full implications, a revolt that will send Woll and his ilk whimpering back to their capitalist masters.

The right wing is wrecking the labor movement by open destruction of unions as in New York, by a deliberate conspiracy against the rank and file as in the United Mine Workers and by open co-operation with the bosses as in the machinists and railway shop unions.

In the United Mine Workers of America the denunciation of Communists and the Communist Party was followed by destruction of all rank and file democracy. This same policy will be carried out in every union where Woll and other agents of the bosses gain the upper hand.

The unseating of Communist and left wing delegates in the Central Trades and Labor Council will be a signal for a further extension of the powers of the Tammany Hall bureaucracy at the expense of the rank and file and a still closer alliance of officialdom with the enemies of the labor movement.

REVEAL ORGANIZED CONSPIRACY TO INVADE UNION OF SOVIET REPUBLICS

MOSCOW, Feb. 18.—Charges that the German General, Hoffman, maker of the Brest-Litovsk treaty, has offered to lead an army against the Soviet Union were made today in the newspaper Isvestia.

The Isvestia reveals that General Hoffman made the offer to Lockar-Lampson, British, M. P., on condition that the M. P. raise a fund of $200,000,000.

The Isvestia publishes correspondence between the former czarist ambassador Giers, now in Paris, and M. Sablin, former Kerensky charge in London. This correspondence states that Lockar-Thompson couldn't raise the funds for the expedition due to the impoverished conditions in Great Britain.

Sablin a Jew Killer.

Eugene Sablin was an organiser of Black Hundreds under the Czar, and transferred his allegiance readily to Kerensky after the fall of Nicholas II. The Menshevik minister sent him abroad to raise money, and Sablin remained to organize invasions of Bolshevik Russia after Kerensky fell.

The first letter published over Sablin's signature is from London and is dated shortly after the calling off of the British general strike and thanks Minister of the Interior Sir William Joynson-Hicks for the enlistment of White Russians as emergency police and strike breakers. But the Pravada declares it will later publish other facsimilies up to the end of last year.

Planning Discord.

M. Sablin claims he is already "recognised" by the British as the representative of the Russian emigres and expresses the hope that this recognition

U. S. MAY HIT FRANCE FINANCIALLY FOR DECLINING DEMAND TO DISARM

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—A movement started today in the House of Representatives to put the financial screws down on France, as punishment for her refusal to cast aside her submarine weapon and present a naked threat to a world full of Wall Street imperialists.

Not a Dollar for France.

Acrid criticism of France for her refusal to ratify the French debt agreement and for refusing to accept President Coolidge's invitation to a disarmament conference broke out on the floor during debate on the $75,000 appropriation bill to defray the expenses of American delegates to the Geneva conference.

"I would not loan a dollar to a country that refuses even to consider disarming," said Representative Begg (R) of Ohio, assistant floor leader.

Representative Britten (R) of Illinois, attacked the insincerity of European nations toward disarmament and predicted the Geneva conference would be "a fizzle and a farce."

LONDON, Feb. 18.—An alternative to President Coolidge's disarmament proposals will be suggested in the House of Commons on Monday by Rear Admiral Sueter, as follows:

Abolition of battleships by general consent;

Ten thousand ton cruisers to be the largest unit of modern navies, each

NEGROES ASKED TO JOIN UNIONS; A. F. L. INACTIVE

Study Shows Internationals Are Inactive

While the American Federation of Labor still fails to interest itself actively in the plight of the Negro worker, many local unions and district councils continue to enlist Negro members.

T. Arnold Hill, research worker in the industrial relations department of the National Urban League, reaches this conclusion after an intensive study of the field. He declares sentiment favoring Negro membership in trade unions is growing.

In Atlanta, Ga., labor union officials have recorded their opinion that "The labor movement in Atlanta does not feel safe with Negroes out of the union," writes Hill. They have expressed a desire to organize Negroes in auxiliary unions in certain trades.

Building Laborers Loyal.

"In Philadelphia where 2,500 tobacco workers are employed, efforts are being made to secure their membership in the union. "Ninety per cent of the hod carriers and building laborers in Kansas, City, are Negroes. They remained loyal to the union during a carpenters' strike in July."

Hill mentions that colored motion picture operators have been admitted to the union in New York City; relates the progress of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; tells of colored workers in the New York cloakmakers' and paper box strikes; and of colored women date workers striking in Chicago.

"In Columbia, S. C. the number of colored plumbers and electricians increased, these trades being those in which very rigid restrictions prevail against colored membership," he recounts. In Chicago an electrical workers' union made concessions to colored electricians . . . . In Philadelphia and Harrisburg efforts were made to organize building trades workers and in Atlantic City colored waiters were sought for union membership."

A. F. of L. Refuses to Act.

"Against these favorable conditions there are a number of instances which show that considerable prejudice still exists against Negro membership in trade unions," states Hill.

"An attempt to get the American Federation of Labor, through its executive council, to appoint a colored advisor and organizer failed. The metal lathers' union denied a charter to colored men in Chicago. None of the international trade unions, which refused membership to Negroes at the beginning of the year changed its policy."

The National Urban League is a Negro social welfare organization largely interested in helping Negro workers get into new and more skilled kinds of work.

Tex Guinan's Hangout For Rich Loafers Is Placed Under Padlock

As the result of the most sensational liquor raid staged on Broadway, the "300" Club, of which the famous "Texas" Gninan is the hostess, was ordered padlocked for a period of six months by Federal Judge Bondy here yesterday.

The joint was closed on charges of violating the prohibition law.

Texas herself will be haled into court today, to face charges of possession and sale of liquor. United States Attorney Lowell Wadman announced that contempt proceedings also would be brought against the jovial hostess, charging that she violated a previous injunction restraining her from selling liquor

THE vatican has accepted the fascist corporate laws, so the much touted breach between the pope and mussolini appears to have fizzled out. The pope did not like the idea of seeing his catholic fledglelings coming completely under the influence of mussolini's propaganda. The pope would have their swallow his opposition, as we said many times, thieves all out when they can best afford it, exceptions to the rule regardless. The pope and Mussolini cannot afford to indulge in the luxury of a drastic rupture. The alleged breach between the vatican and the fascist dictatorship was mainly a clever piece of acting under cover of which mussolini was able to effect a satisfactory compromise with the pope.

FORTUNATELY our warning to readers to be prepared for a fresh load of militarist victory in China did not be lived. The prediction was almost perfect. In fact, if Sun managed to stay put for a few more days the imperialist despondency would have done their share. But Snn fell down on the job. He took to his heels and the Cantonese took to snow. As it is now, our warning must be put in cold storage for future use.

Judge Landis's job has to do with exposing players who bet on the opposite team's chances of winning. Will Hays is busy trying to soft pedal the amorous affairs of screen stars. Tex's job would be to see that senators and congressmen stopped lowering the standards of pugilism, by pulling off no-hit fights.

But let us suppose that Charley Dawes hurled his hipflask at Sam Reed of Missouri, what a hurricane of eloquence would disturb the atmosphere?

MILLBURN, N. J., Feb. 18.—Police and workmen who cleaned the ramshackle home of Mrs. Annie McMonigal on Elm street here today found $200 in coins, some of which were dated 1865, and a bankbook showing deposits of $474.41 in 1880 which with interest now amounts to more than $2,500.

CAL'S VETO OF FARM BILL WILL ASSIST LOWDEN

President's Action to Affect 1928 Race.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—A foundling has appeared on President Coolidge's doorstep, and no one knows whether he will adopt and nurture it, or kick the embarrassing brat into the nearest snow bank. Congress has laid on him the task of either signing or vetoing the McNary-Haugen Farm "Relief" Bill, offspring of some of the weirdest political miscegenation of modern times.

Where Split Cal Is.

Administration supporters were sharply divided in their predictions. The majority opinion is that he will veto the bill. Those who believe in the old dictum that the bill are a price-fixing measure and a dangerous experiment which would put the government in the farming business.

Sponsors of the bill, on the other hand, declared that Mr. Coolidge had left the problem to Congress and Congress was virtually pledged to sign it.

Political observers saw in Mr. Coolidge's action an answer to the riddle of 1928. Approval of the bill, they asserted, would be tantamount to a declaration of his candidacy for the next Republican presidential nomination.

Veto Aids Lowden.

With the middle west aroused over the farm relief problem, a veto would boom the stock of two other presidential aspirants, Ex-Governor Frank A. Lowden of Illinois, and Vice-President Charles G. Dawes, it was predicted.

An alternate course open to the president is to permit the bill to become a law without his signature, but few believe that he will adopt so negative a course.

Party Lines Melt.

The bill was passed last night by the House, 214 to 176, after a spectacular fight of nine hours, in which the farm bloc rode down all opposition. The margin of victory, 36 votes, was about what had been anticipated, and it is too small to permit of hope of re-passage over a veto.

Party lines were badly split. The leaders in both parties voted against the farm bill, but were found by agricultural middle west and west in support, and the industrial east against it. The south has divided, with a majority of the southerners supported it.

Vote Trade Passes It.

"The bill came to the House from a fight in the Senate, in which the so-called "farmer" senators made a deal with the Morgan group to trade support for the farm bill for votes against the Mellon-Pinchot-McFadden-Pepper branch banking act, controlling the banking business as much as Marx ever predicted, and against the Mellon plan for international Wall Street owned money trust.

Bankers Cheated Hloc.

After they did it, apparently some of them regretted it. A few "insurgents" fought the branch banking act, in vain, and the bankers double-crossed the "farm bloc" by having Mellon write a last-minute counterblast against it. However, both bills have passed.

Creates Board.

The McNary-Haugen act is briefly as follows:

It creates a Federal Farm Board, appointed by the president from nominees selected by cooperatives, banks and state departments of agriculture.

Loans $250,000,000 to the Board from the Federal treasury.

Permits the Board to declare an emergency exists in wheat, cotton, corn, rice, tobacco or any of the commodity to receive a surplus from the market.

Creates a stabilization fund for this purpose, provided by the levying of an equalization fee upon each bale of cotton, each bushel of wheat, etc., which is sold.

By removing the surplus from the market, it is contemplated that the domestic price of the product shall be higher than the world price.

Permits the Board to insure producers against price fluctuations and loan money to cooperatives to establish terminal marketing facilities.

President Coolidge has not yet decided whether to veto or sign the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, he told callers at the White House today.

The bill was discussed at today's cabinet meeting, and will take the usual course of being referred to the various departments for consideration before either signature or veto.

Plan Catskill Bridge.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Three sketches of a proposed toll bridge over the Hudson River at Catskill have been submitted to the legislature by Col. tion will" automatically become official once we succeed in bringing about a rupture in the diplomatic relations of Russia and the Soviet."

A White Guard Hoc.

Sablin tells gleefully of relations he has established with leading Britishers, "conservatives," including Lord Birkenhead, Winston Churchill, Leslie Wilson-Hicks, and Commander Leslie-Lampson, etc., together with the assistance of Sir Basil Zaharoff. It is said, with the British association of Russian creditors, form the backbone of an organization of which Lesley Lampson is president, called "Out With the Reds" which is devoted to a rupture in Anglo-Soviet relations. Sablin permits himself free criticism of the British mission in Moscow.

Proposes Forgery.

He relates the trickery he had to use to introduce Russian monarchist propaganda into British newspapers "which might suspect 'white' propaganda if we gave it to them direct through the good offices of our parliamentary and other friends." He adds the cynical suggestions that M. De Giers prepare anti-Bolshevist documents "which we can get published here as intercepted letters from leaders of the Russian Communist Party opposition."

Churchill Wants Rupture.

LONDON, Feb. 18. — Coincident with the revelations that Winston Churchill was part of the White Guard Russian intriguer Sablin's conspiracy to rupture trade relations between the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and Great Britain, comes confirmation through a speech made last night by Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill, in which he said: "Well, nothing could be less alarming from the government's point of view than a gesture to sweep the Russian delegation, trading associations and diplomatic representatives out of the country," but stated that though the government shared the opinions of the critics of the Bolsheviki, certain considerations hindered this action just at present.

which carries thousands of bluejackets. They could be landed at any spot in Central America in a short time, and there are Quantico, Paris Island and San Diego, another force of 1,000 marines available for duty and "awaiting orders."

To Bully Latins.

It was developments outside Nicaragua, rather than inside, that prompted the administration to make this new and greater display of armed strength in the Caribbean, it was said today.

Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, the Nicaraguan revolutionary leader, has refused to be intimidated by the marines sent to impress him many weeks ago. Despite their presence, Sacasa has regularly purchased arms and ammunition from other countries which recognize him, as well as peso loans, and so marked has been his military successes over the American-supported President Diaz that anti-American revolutionists throughout Central America have been encouraged to "start things." There have been rumblings of a new revolution in Honduras for several weeks.

The great days of Diaz of Mexico, Latins Resist Plundering.

Chamorro of Nicaragua, and such like highwaymen, who ruthlessly plundered their own countrymen of land and mineral rights, to sell to their secret allies, the industrialists of the United States, are gone.

Formerly American banks could make deals with the reigning freebooters in the contemptuously named "banana republics" of Central America, and by giving them loans at ruinous interest, could get half the country in pledge, the local tyrant using what of the loan he did not squander on himself to maintain an army of "marines" or quasi-armed forces to whip his countrymen into the American yoke.

Use Own Forces.

Since the series of rebellions started in Mexico in 1911, however, these tactics have failed. More and more it has been necessary for the oil, copper and cattle and fruit interests of America to call the state department to their aid. This process reaches a culmination now, in the brutal invasion of Nicaragua, so open a war of conquest that a wave of indignation is sweeping all Latin America, and anything may happen, from a boycott of American goods to open declarations of war.

Presbyterian Minister Swindles His Six Wives

Aimee Wasts More Coin.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—This was sheaf-gathering day for Aimee Semple McPherson, however, at the afternoon meeting. Mrs. McPherson stated that expenses had not yet been met by the free will offerings, in spite of the size of the pans that have made the rounds.

Reckoning Day Coming For Fake Progressives Who Betray the Workers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

VICTOR L. Berger, the lone socialist congressman, voted in favor of the McNary-Haugen Farm Relief Bill and thus gave what aid he could in its passage.

The socialist program is supposed to be one separate from and against the capitalist program. Since the war, however, it has become the practice of socialists, in all countries, to get their leadership from the capitalists, the socialist parliamentarians trailing along in the wake of their bourgeois compatriots. This was the tendency under the development of the second (Socialist) International, acclaiming by the events following the world war, when the capitalists needed the socialists more than ever to combat labor's struggle for victory.

It is not necessary to array any testimony against Berger to show that he follows this course, that in other countries makes socialists members of anti-labor governments and even premiers of the capitalist state. Berger admits it. He confessed it in his speech on the McNary-Haugen Bill before the assembled members of the house of representatives and they applauded him.

Berger voted against the McNary-Haugen legislation in the last congress. He has now changed his mind, which is always the privilege of the socialist position when refuses to stand on the firm basis of the class struggle. But listen to Berger speaking:

"Mr. Chairman, I admit that when the McNary-Haugen Bill was up last year I voted against it. I was not quite sure at the time that I did right. I am going to vote for it now, and I am not any more certain that I am right now."

Thus Berger says he finds himself in the position of the "Pennsylvania Dutch" justice of the peace who listened to the lawyers in a damage case. "He agreed at first with one of them and then with the other," according to the story. "And finally he said that they were both right, and decided that the constable had to pay the costs." Which brought laughter from Berger's fellow congressmen, laughter at the expense, however, not of Berger, but of the working farmers of the nation.

Berger's decision to vote for the McNary-Haugen bill was then reached thru this line of reasoning:

"Thinking the matter over, however," said Berger, "I thought that the same principle before us it might be wise to choose the smallest. And I believe that the McNary-Haugen bill in its present shape is the least dangerous," which brought more applause.

Thus Berger bridges the way to support of old party legislation, with the same argument that great mass of workers use in casting the old party tickets, supporting the "best man", or, where there is no good man in the field, giving aid to the least dangerous, claiming that this is the only way to "get something new".

That was the basis on which the Nonpartisan League was organized for functioning with the old parties, rather than develop the independent action of the workers and farmers.

Speaking of the declaration of one of the chief organizers of the Nonpartisan League, Laurence Todd, the Federated Press correspondent at Washington, writes:

"That a day of reckoning is coming, for senators and members of the house who voted for the re-chartering of the federal reserve system and for loosening the reins on branch banking, was the warning given by Senator Frazier of North Dakota, Nonpartisan Leaguer before the senate adopted the session leading bill."

It seems, however, that the day of reckoning is not coming for the legislators who have always remained loyal to their class interests, who did so in supporting the McNary-Haugen bill and the Mellon-Morgan bank bill, thru the building of the farm-bank bloc, and who will continue battling for their masters. They will be well taken care of. Take a look at "servant-in-Nellie" Kellogg, who was made ambassador to Great Britain and then secretary of state after he had been repudiated by the voters of Minnesota in his attempt to be re-elected to the United States senate.

The reckoning is due instead for those who have been parading as the champions of labor, loudly proclaiming it in election campaign speeches, and then following the farm-bank bloc in aiding Wall Street achieve one of the biggest legislative victories it has ever won, which even Senator Frazier, in weeping for his little banker friends, declares will "sound the death knell to independent banking in the United States within ten years".

The only glorious victory was only made possible by the aid given this Morgan-Mellon bill by supporters of the McNary-Haugen Relief Bill.

Berger, Frazier, Nye, LaFollette and the rest may not know where they are at congress. Very evidently they don't.

But the workers and farmers, as a result of these bitter experiences with "know-nothing", members of congress, will awaken to the fact that they must build an independent political power of their own. The support of the peasantry, drifting to the labor party as the false friends of the working class confess their treason in Washington.

Labor needs spokesmen in congress who know why they fight, now to fight and when to fight. Labor will get them.

High-Priced Lawyers Save Heir to Baker's Millions in Lawsuit

Backed by a high-priced legal staff, Walter S. Ward, wastrel son of the baking trust magnate, escaped judgment yesterday of $75,000, asked by the parents of the boy he slew five years ago.

The jury disagreed, but Judge Anderson immediately ordered a new trial.

Young Ward claimed in the White Plains trial in 1922 that he shot in self-defense. In this case he refused to testify. The wealthy slayer fled the United States and was discovered only a month ago living in the lap of luxury at Country Club Park, a suburb of Havana, where his father's home is located.

The old millionaire has stayed in the background, lavishly financing his son's trial but refusing to come out in the open.

FRESNO, Cal., Feb. 18.—Edison's efforts to resume the bodies of the construction workers killed in the snow slide that buried the camp of the Southern California Edison Co. at Big Creek, 75 miles from here, had ceased, reports that some of the men were still alive caused public sentiment to force the company to renew them.

The Southern California Edison Co. is the power trust which has control of all available water power sites in the southern part of the Sierra Nevadas. It not only provides light and power for the cities, but due to the fact that most of San Joaquin Valley farms are irrigated with ground water, pumped by electric pumps, it grips the agricultural life of the community, and levies enormous toll, on dairymen and fruit growers.

The company is continually expanding its system, opening up new power plants back in almost inaccessible parts of the mountains. Its construction gang camps have many times been shut down by strikes organized by the I. W. W. General Construction Workers Industrial Union No. 310.

The fighting point on which the I. W. W. was able to organize the walk-outs was dangerous work, poor food, and mistreatment of the men.

The hastest disaster is nothing more than could be expected, say the workers familiar with Edison Co. work, for the location of the camps is made without reference to the convenience or safety of the men.

Disrupters in Trade Unions Expel Leaders of Militants

Ben Gold and Militant Leaders of Furriers and Ladies Garment Workers Read Out of Council

Union disrupters, acting under direct orders of the reactionary officials of the American Federation of Labor, expelled 23 militant delegates of the Ladies' Garment Workers' and Furriers' Unions at the Thursday evening meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Council.

The expulsions mark another step in the campaign of reactionary elements in the A. F. of L., headed by Matthew Woll and local followers, led by Hugh Frayne, to "purge" the labor movement of all militant workers.

Woll, Frayne and Edward O'Grady, A. F. of L. representative, were seated on the Central Labor Union platform yesterday evening when the session came to order at Beethoven Hall. Without wasting time, the machine steamroller got under way immediately.

Green Orders It.

Letters from President William Green ordering the expulsion were read. President Joseph P. Ryan of the central body then read the executive committee's report, carrying out the orders.

Samuel Liebowitz, assistant manager of the Furriers' Joint Board, and Emma Yenetaki of Ladies' Garment Workers' Local 22 were on their feet immediately.

"Why am I unseated," Liebowitz asked.

"You are not a delegate," replied Ryan.

"Are we to be unseated without even a trial," Yenetaki fired at the chairman.

"Sit down, sit down," Ryan roared.

Sergeant At Arms Moves.

The sergeant at arms moved unceasingly toward the expelled delegates as they stuck to their ground, demanding reasons for the unwarranted action.

Ryan passed on to the "next order of business," completely ignoring left wing protests. Replying to a demand for an executive session, Ryan countered that "this body is chartered by the American Federation of Labor and must carry out its instructions."

The expelled delegates are:

Ladies' Garment Workers' Unions.

Local 2—H. Kroger, J. Goldman and H. Furman.

Local 9—S. Miller, Rose Kaplan and Molly Perlman.

Local 22—Emma Yenetaki, Charles Hartman and Celia Samorodin.

Local 35—Joseph Goretsky and Max Kudrenetzky.

Unions Unions.

Local 1—Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board, L. Birger and Samuel Liebowitz, assistant manager.

Local 10—Mark Spivak, B. Garf and J. Fleiss.

Local 15—L. Greenberg, J. Winogradski and Fannie Warshawski.

The Ladies' Garment Workers' delegates represented unions which had been "suspended" by the right wing international officials while the furrier delegates represented locals now under charges by the A. F. of L. for their militant policy.

Sifman's Delegates In.

Delegates representing "reorganized" locals of the I. L. G. W. were seated directly after the seating of the delegates had been expelled.

The opening was a letter from Green, dated February 16 ordering the Central Labor Union to drive out the militants. Parts of Green's letters, charging "Communist influence", follows:

"The attempt of certain Communist leaders to substitute Communist principles and policies for trade union principles and polices in the administration of the affairs of these two organizations cannot be tolerated. It is imperative that organizations chartered by the American Federation of Labor be maintained and administered upon a sound and constructive trade union basis."

Salesson Is Judgment.

"It has been brought to my attention that Locals 1, 5, 10 and 15 of the International Fur Workers' Union, a new constituted, have forfeited the right to representation in your central body, and that the delegates representing Locals 2, 9, 22 and 35 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, who have been recognized as duly accredited representatives to your central body, to likewise forfeited the right to continue as delegates to the New York Central Trades Council."

Matthew Woll, vice president of The American Federation of Labor and chairman of the special committee selected by the executive council of the A. F. of L, in a hot tirade, declared:

"New York is the strong hold of Communism. In this city is the only organization where they still have control in the furriers' union."

Communism Grows.

He then referred to the growth of the Communist movement in this country saying that it started in Chicago then spread to Minneapolis and ultimately reached Winnipeg. "Now it is carrying out its activities in New York."

According to Woll, in the needle trades, "the Communists have set up a reign of terror." "We must save the needle workers from the Greek mobs of the Communists."

Hates Daily.

"Why has The DAILY WORKER moved to New York." This smudge sheet in which Foster, Ruthenberg and Gold carry out their fight? It is because they realize that the center of struggle is in this city."

He closed his speech of accusing the Communists of using violence and suggesting that the Central Trades and Labor Council call a delegate conference of local unions to carry on their fight.

With the left wing delegates already deprived of their vote, and the center groups confused by the vehemence of the attack by the highest officers of the A. F. of L. the reactionaries were outstanding enough to concur with their action in expelling the garment workers delegates.

No right wing credentials were handed in for the furriers' union.

Local 2: B. Moser, M. Wagman, Saul Stieglitz; Local 9: H. Willenberg, J. Halprin and F. Rein; Local 22: Mollie Friedman, Julius Hochman, B. Wollinsky; Local 35: I. Friend, H. Dorfman and Louis Rief.

Statement of the Delegates Expelled From the N. Y. Central Trades and Labor Council

We, the undersigned, duly elected delegates to the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York City, on behalf of over sixty thousand workers whom we represent, herewith voice our emphatic protest by our unwarranted and arbitrary expulsion tonight, which was carried through by Joseph Ryan, president of the Central Trades and Labor Council on instructions of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

This wholesale expulsion is flatly in violation of the constitution of the A. F. of L., of our respective Internationals, and of our rights generally as workers. It is contradictory to the traditions of the American labor movement and is an outrage upon the workers of this community and the trade union movement at large.

We have been expelled, not because we have violated any real principles of unionism but because we have ventured to make a real struggle against the employers, and have advocated progressive policies in the unions. The program of Green, Woll, Ryan, Sigman and the others responsible for our expulsion, is to retreat before the attacks of the employers, to cooperate with them in speeding up the workers, and to permit the gradual re-introduction of the sweating system into the needle industry. Our membership in the historic strikes of the fur workers and cloakmakers have valiantly resisted the encroachments of the employers, in spite of the reactionary advice of Green, Sigman, et al., who throughout our strikes found themselves on the side of the employers, against the strikers. Our expulsion is in line with their general reactionary attitude in our struggles.

We have been expelled without the establishment of a single charge, by proper testimony and evidence, and without the semblance of a trial. This is autocratic and disruptive action against militant workers, which can only serve the bosses and disrupt the labor movement.

We call upon the workers of this city to protest against this expulsion and against which we call upon the labor movement of New York and the country as a whole to protest. Such practices strike a blow at the very heart of trade unionism.

4. Harold F. Webster, former Florida "realtor", killed his mother-in-law, he testified after she had told him "he was not man enough to do it."

Witnesses Testify Couzens Cheated On Tax Report

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Support for the government's contention that in 1913 stock in Henry Ford's motor enterprise was worth only about half the treasury valuation was furnished today by Arthur M. Anderson, of the J. P. Morgan Co., testifying in the $30,000,000 federal tax suit against the former Ford stockholders.

The treasury valuation was fixed at $5,600 a share, and now the government contends the shares were worth only $3,500. The difference, for tax purposes, is $80,000,000.

Dual Unionism, Not Scabbing, Is Crime In Case of Cleveland

In the issue of Feb. 12, referring to an article from Cleveland relative to the dispute between the carpenters and laborers. Owing to an error, the laborers were called scabs. They are not scabs. The struggle is over who shall have the right to remove the wooden forms after the concrete molds are put up. The carpenters claim this as their work, while the carpenters say it is theirs. The origin of the fight is the fact that the carpenters are in the building trades council, while the laborers are in another.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 18.—A claim against Mexico totaling $1,800,000 was filed by the National Oil Company of New York tonight just prior to the expiration of the final six month period when the special claims commission may accept cases growing out of revolutionary disturbances.

Two smaller claims were also filed in accordance with cabled instructions from the state department at Washington. The regular period for filing expired six months ago but a majority of the commission may admit claims filed by tonight.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18. — The government-owned steamer Ambridge is "immune" from punishment by prohibition officials, despite the fact that $49,000 worth of liquor was seized on board the vessel at Hoboken, it was learned today.

Officials pointed out that a privately owned ship, under similar circumstances might be seized and sold.

TOKIO, Feb. 18.—Japan will make an unconditional acceptance of President Coolidge's invitation to participate in an armament parley, it is understood in Tokio today. The cabinet, according to reports, has approved the reply to President Coolidge and the Emperor's sanction will be obtainable Saturday.

The reply will probably point out the difficulty of solving the armament question unless France and Italy agree to participate in the arms conference.

Previously Premier Wakaseda had stated to the Diet that Japan would not reduce her naval building program, but was willing to talk about it.

ARREST SPEAKER, QUESTION MINERS NEAR PITTSBURGH

Two Held for Deporting —I.L.D. Sends Lawyer

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 18.—The Whitesetting police arrested J. Zaldokas, a Lithuanian speaker scheduled to address an audience of workers in that city February 15, and thus prevented him from speaking.

Zaldokas was charged with violating the Penn Anti-Sedition act, and was at first held under $10,000 bond. Efforts of Attorney George J. Shaffer, representing the International Labor Defense, reduced the amount of bonds to $6,000 and Zaldokas was released on that amount, after spending two days in the county jail.

Held By U. S. of A.

This is the second exhibition of "Democracy" in this vicinity within the last few days. The other was when Department of Justice agents swooped down on Hermarville, a little mining town near here, and questioned miners as to whether they read The DAILY WORKER, or Radnik, a Workers' Party language paper.

All who admitted such an interest in the class struggle were then quizzed as to the length of time they had been in America, and the particulars of their entry. Two miners were held under $500 bond, charged with illegal entry, and threatened with deportation, one to Italy, and the other to Czecho-Slovakia.

The inquisition took place in the mining company office when the men came to get their pay.

Both plans have a more efficient organization of the industry as their basis.

Expect Agreement Rumors.

There is much gossip here relative to the probability of separate agreements with the union in the four states comprising the central competitive field.

While there are statements that Illinois will sign a separate agreement the opposite appears to be more probable—that the operators of the other competitive fields will insist on separate agreements whether Illinois does or not.

It will be remembered that before the exposure of Frank Farrington, former president of district 12 Illinois, as an employe of the Peabody coal interests, he advocated a separate agreement for the Illinois sections of the union.

The statements that separate agreements will be signed in the central competitive field are probably based on the belief that the liquidation of Farrington did not mean the liquidation of his policy.

Expect Turkish Relations.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Resumption of diplomatic relations with Turkey, despite refusal of the senate to ratify the Lausanne treaty, was envisioned by state department officials today as a result of negotiations now in progress between Admiral Bristol, American high commissioner, and Turkish officials at Angora.

THE FUTURE OF THE NEWSPAPERS

"Unless we today think of the generations to come and plant the seeds physically, politically and practically there will be no forests, no lumber, no paper, and without paper, no civilization," says B. T. McBain in The Paper Industry (New York). "Eight million and eight hundred thousand tons in 1925 is a lot of paper, but each year we as a nation are using from 5 to 10 percent more. Where will it all end unless some steps, and strong measured ones, are taken soon not only to perpetuate our pulp timber supply, but to stop this enormous waste of our national natural resources."

Curiously enough the very newspapers, about which experts like Mr. McBain are concerned, are doing everything in their power to perpetuate the system of which waste of natural resources is an integral part. Anarchy in production in the paper industry, as well as the exhaustion of our lumber reserves are part and parcel of the system of capitalist production as a whole.

Mr. McBain's proposed adjustments of the problem are temporary in their nature and fundamentally unsound. We would recommend to him and to the workers generally, the support of a newspaper which is dedicated to the task destroying this system and supplanting it with an order of society, which will insure the conservation of our lumber and newsprint paper supply, and also the reorganization of the entire system of production and distribution for the good of humanity as a whole.—BERT MILLER.

GREAT WORKERS CARNIVAL BAZAAR PREPARATIONS ABOUT READY; CHICAGO WILL CELEBRATE

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—Preparations for the big $10,000 workers' carnival bazaar which is to be held in the Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren on February 25, 26 and 27, are now being completed by the committee.

Numbers of booths will be distributed all over the hall. A group of German organizations will conduct one of the booths. The Workmen's Circle 519 and the Ladies' Auxiliary will have another of the booths.

Other organizations conducting booths at the bazaar will be the International Labor Defense, the Freiheit Youth Club, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the Freiheit Singing Society, the progressive group of the Millinery and Cap Makers' Union, the Young Workers' League, the Independent Workmen's Circle, No. 96, the North West Branch of the I. L. D., the progressive group of the Mothers' League, and others.

Sunday evening will see the winding-up of the bazaar. The Russian orchestra will render selections from 4 to 9 p. m.

The net proceeds will go to The DAILY WORKER and the Jewish Daily Freiheit, and the committee in charge has decided to donate 30 per cent of the profits to International Labor Defense. The committee calls upon the workers of all active bazaar workers to take place February 20, Sunday, at 10:30 a. m. at the Workers Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Boulevard.

Workers Party Boston District Approves CEC On Russian Discussion

District 1 of the Workers (Communist) Party, Boston, one of the largest districts in the party, held a discussion on the recent situation in the Russian Party on Sunday, February 13. After listening to a report from Comrade D. Benjamin, Assistant Agitprop Director of the New York District of the Workers Party, the following resolution was adopted by a vote of 144 for, 0 against, 8 abstaining:

Resolution Passes.

"The membership meeting of the Boston District of the Workers Party approves the action of the C. E. C. of the Workers Party of America, in endorsing and upholding the position and action of the C. P. S. U. against the opposition in the party of the Soviet Union.

"It expresses condemnation of the latest action of the opposition in attempting to create a platform for an opposition in the Comintern, and

"Pledges itself to carry on a campaign among workers of the district to increase their understanding of the fact that Russian workers can build socialism in that country."

State Spending Spree Exceeds Record of 1926; No Cut in Income Tax

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 18. — Showing an increase of $10,000,000 over last year, the annual appropriation bill totalling $147,000,000 was passed in the assembly yesterday.

The total cost of the state government for the next fiscal year is expected to reach $220,000,000 and legislative leaders are wondering where the state will get the money. The total estimated receipts have been placed at $204,000,000. The cost of the state government last year was about $137,000,000.

Governor Smith and the republican leaders have forsaken their promise to reduce the income tax 25 per cent this year.

Republican leaders have virtually decided to pass a bill imposing a tax of two cents a gallon on gasoline. This would bring upwards of $18,000,000 into the state treasury.

While the appropriation bill was under discussion in the assembly today, Assemblyman Cuvillie, New York republican, suggested that one state impose a tax of 25 cents per day on hotel guests and also a tax on tobacco.

Pioneers Prepare for Philadelphia Jubilee On 3rd Anniversary

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 18.—Pioneers (Communists too young for the Young Workers' League) are bending all energies to the task of preparing a jubilee to celebrate their third anniversary here. A chorus of about 60 is studying their new song, "We Are The Builders", and a harmonica band of 20 is being put into training. A new play is being rehearsed, and the international dances are being "practised." Pioneer training classes are studying the "A. B. C. of Communism", and will graduate at the jubilee. The celebration will take place at Tyron Hall, Broad and Oxford Sts., Feb. 25.

The Most Dangerous Weapon of the People's Armies.

Sun Chuang-fang's forces have been found susceptible to the same arguments which left Wu Pei-fu without an army when the propaganda machine of the Peoples Government of China went into action.

The imperialist press holds this method of warfare to be especially damnable and if they had to choose between the use of poison gas and the dissemination of the doctrines of Dr. Sun Yat Sen by the Peoples Armies would undoubtedly choose the latter as less deadly both in its immediate and ultimate effects. Poison gas merely disables or kills while the conversion of enemy troops by the propagandists of Chinese national liberation leaves them in fighting trim but with the direction of their fire reversed.

Since the Russian Revolution it is becoming more and more apparent that the hazards encountered by imperialist armies fighting revolutionary troops are of a kind for which the imperialist general staff has not been able to devise a defense. This is especially true when the imperialist nations are compelled to use soldiers of the same race or nationality as the workers or colonial peoples which they are trying to subjugate.

The disaster which has overtaken the forces of Sun Chuan-fang south of Shanghai is additional proof of the weakness of the political position of Great Britain and the other imperialist powers in China. Similar proof was given by the simultaneous refusal of the Peoples Government and the generals of the reactionary forces to agree to the Coolidge proposal for the "neutralization" of Shanghai.

Great Britain especially has been proceeding on the theory that there is no such thing as a united national sentiment in China and this has led her diplomats into grotesque errors—errors which show that the bankruptcy of British diplomacy is just as far advanced as the decay of the empire.

Even Chang Tso-lin, while he accepts support from the Japanese, is forced to follow a policy which makes some pretense of national independence for the provinces under his control. Unity with Chang Tso-lin, as in the case of Wu Pei-fu, has, because of his orientation to Japan, proved disastrous to every militarist whose troops have faced the People's armies.

The Chinese masses, altho the northern minority is still misled by treacherous militarists, are united against imperialism. This is the one big fact which the imperialist powers will disregard only to make this unity more solid.

We believe it is no exaggeration to state that the bombardment of Shanghai or the actual launching of a land offensive by Britain against the People's Armies will mean the desertion of Chang Tso-lin and Sun Chuang-fang by decisive sections of their forces who will then fight under the banner of the People's Government.

The People's Government (Kuomintang) is the organized and militant expression of Chinese nationalism and its program has a wide popular appeal. In the face of imperialist intervention the militarist leaders will be swamped.

The beginning of the latest phase of this process is the break-up of Sun Chuang-fang's southern army.

The War on Nicaragua Continues

The Coolidge government certainly is giving service to that section of the plunderbund which has investments in Nicaragua and to the general interests of American imperialism in Latin America.

Almost all of the ships of the Atlantic fleet are in Caribbean waters; a number of them are patroling both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of Nicaragua. All available marines are either on their way to Nicaragua or already there.

Admiral Latimer has been kept busy establishing "neutral" zones in order to prevent the popular army from sweeping Diaz into oblivion and establishing the Sacasa government on a firm foundation and now the state department appears to be preparing to declare the whole country a "neutral" zone and outlaw the liberal forces.

The case with which the poorly organized and equipped popular army has defeated the Diaz forces, in spite of his support by the American state and war departments, exposes the Wall-Street-Coolidge-Kellogg conspiracy against the liberties of the Nicaraguan people in all its nakedness. Diaz, it is evident, could not last 24 hours without the backing of the United States government.

It is fortunate that the logic of events has disproved the lying assertion that the U. S. forces have been sent to Nicaragua to preserve order. This excuse is without weight and in itself is no justification for the role the state department is playing, but it might serve to beguile elements who think that it is the duty of the United States to police Latin-America.

As it is now the fact cannot be concealed that the only elements of disorder in Nicaragua are those sent there by the United States and its puppet Diaz.

The popular forces have shown beyond a shadow of a doubt that they represent the vast majority of the Nicaraguan people. This is precisely the reason why the Wall Street government supports Diaz who, contrary to the desire of the masses, is willing to give Nicaragua to Wall Street for a canal zone and a military and naval base for imperialist operations against Mexico and Latin-America.

There is no longer any doubt that, lacking powerful protest from American labor, Wall Street government intends to continue its aggressions in Central America.

Speeches of middle class representatives in congress and the senate are all very well; they focus attention on the rape of Nicaragua but they do not stop it.

The workers and farmers of America, their organizations, alone have the power to force withdrawal of armed forces from Nicaragua and prevent American imperialism from establishing a base for a future bloody war upon the peoples and republics to the south.

OIL! A NEW NOVEL By Upton Sinclair

The upshot of the debate was that no one of them was sure the enterprise would be a success, but all the young ones were willing to pitch in and help, if Bunny was determined for a try. And Bunny said that he had already been looking about for a site, with good land and plenty of water, somewhere about fifty miles from Angel City; he was going to make a first payment on land as soon as he could get the cash, and meantime they would work out the details. He would give his own time for three years to getting the institution on its feet, and if it proved possible to develop the right discipline and morale, he would make the institution self-directing, and furnish whatever money could be used effectively. They would need teachers, organizers, and business managers, so there were jobs for all.

And meantime, Bunny must go back to the interviews with lawyers, to try to save as much as possible of the estate. It meant long wrangles with Bertie, for their affairs were in a snarl, and getting worse every day. Verne insisted that Ross Operating must have funds to meet its current expenses; and did they want him to assess the stock, and force the estate to raise the money, or did they want him to buy the lease to the Ross Junior tract, the only asset of Ross Operating, except the claims against the insurance companies? Verne could do what he pleased, because the directors of the concern were himself and his trusted young executives. He was proposing to form another concern, the Paradise Operating Company, with other trusted young executives as directors, and sell himself the lease which had twenty years still to run, and was worth nobody could tell how many millions of dollars, for the sum of six hundred thousand!

All right then, said Verne, let the estate do better. Bertie took up the challenge, and exchanged long cables with her husband in Paris and went out among her rich friends—to make the embarrassing discovery that people who have six hundred thousand dollars in cash do a lot of investigating before they spend it, and then want to hog the whole thing for themselves. Bertie spent much worry and hard work—and what made her most furious was that she couldn't do it for herself alone, but had to do it for the whole estate, giving the incompetent Bunny and the infamous Alys the benefit of her labors. She got a proposition; and then the lawyers of the infamous Alyse turned up with another proposition; and Bertie declared they were bigger thieves than Verne.

And then Ross Consolidated needed money, and Verne was going to assess that stock—meaning to drive the estate to the wall and plunder it of everything. Presently he made a proposition—there was the Roumainian oil venture, into which Dad had put a million and a quarter in cash. Verne offered to purchase this back for the same amount, and the necessary papers were prepared—the heirs all had to consent to the sale, and they did so, and then the court must approve the proposal. This meant delay, and meanwhile the estate was delinquent in the assessment on the Ross Consolidated stock, and this stock was to be sold out. The money from the Roumainian deal was to save it, but to the consternation of the lawyers, the court refused its consent to this deal. There were technical points involved— the court questioned the authority of Mrs. Alyse Ross's lawyers, and demanded her personal signature, attested in France. In short, the estate couldn't get money in time for the sale, and it was Vernon Roscoe who bought the Ross Consolidated stock at a bargain.

Oh, how Bertie raved and swore —the veritable daughter of a mule-driver! Verne, the filthy swine, had put that trick over on them! Not content with having stolen Dad's papers, he had diddled them along like this, and got one of his crooked judges to hold up the order, so that he might grab another plum! Bertie threatened to take a gun to Verne's office and shoot him down like a dog; but what she really did was to abuse her brother, who had been such a fool as to make a mortal enemy out of te most powerful man they knew.

It taught them a lesson. They would get themselves out of Verne's clutches, get rid of everything that he controlled. Dad had put nearly a million into a concern called Anglo-California, which was to develop the big Mosul concession; and the lawyers of Alyse got an offer for that stock, but it included time payments, and Bertie wouldn't agree to that, and the lawyers wouldn't agree to Verne's cash 'offer, and Bertie was in terror lest Verne would do some more hocus-pocus—organize an Anglo-California Operating Company, and lease the Mosul tract to do it, and swipe all the profits!

Amid which wrangling came a letter from Alyse to Bunny. She was sure that he would not let horrid money troubles come between him and her, and break their sacred bond, the memories of dear Jim. Alyse had gone to consult her favorite medium, immediately upon her arrival in Paris, and at the third seance Jim had "manifested," and ever since then Alyse had had his words taken down by a stenographer, and here was a bulky bound, big as the transcript of a legal trial, and tied with blue ribbons of feminine elegance. Alyse hoped that Bunny had not failed to consult a medium, and would send her whatever dear Jim had had to say in his old home.

Bunny went through the record, and it gave him a strange thrill. There were pages and pages of sentimental rubbish about this happy shore and this new state of bliss, with angel's wings and the music of harps, and tell my dear ones that I am with them, but I am wiser now, and dear Bunny must know that I understand and forgive—all stuff that might have come out of the conscious or subconscious mind of a sentimental eldarly lady or of a rascally medium. But then came something that made the young man catch his breath: "I want my dear Bunny to know that it is really his father who speaks to him, and he will remember the man who got all the land for us, and that he had two gold teeth in the front of his mouth, and Bunny said that somebody would rob his grave." How in the name of all the arts of magic was a medium in Paris to know about a joke which Bunny had made to his father about Mr. Hardacre, the agent who had bought them options on ranches in Paradise, California?

By golly it was something to think about! Could it really be that Dad was not gone forever, but had just disappeared somewhere, and could be got hold of again? Bunny would go for a walk to think about it; and through the streets of Angel City he would hear the voice of Eli Watkins booming over the radio. Eli's Tabernacle was packed day and night, with the tens of thousands who crowded to see the prophet who had been floated over the sea by the angels, and had brought back a feather to prove it; all California heard Eli's voice, proclaiming the ancient promise: "Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

Another Student Kills Self.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Despondency was believed today to be the reason for the suicide of Miss Edith M. Stewart, 21, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., a student of Elmira College.

The girl declared she could not face her parents if her suspension from college, which was not even contemplated, was ordered. Almost immediately afterwards she swallowed some strichnine tablets which she had taken from the infirmary office.

Anna Pavlova, Dancer, Now Ready to Return To the Russian Stage

MOSCOW, Feb. 18.—Anna Pavlova will soon visit Russia for the first time since the revolution.

Pavlova was the star ballerina in the old St. Petersburg imperial ballet. She will return home to find that her former colleagues who remained in Russia are taking her place.

In this city Madame Geiser is dancing the leading roles. Madame Krasner, who also was a star before the revolution, remains in the forefront.

Liberals.—They are fair to everybody and everything. The capitalists, communists, fascisti, politicians, clergy, etc., etc. They have open minds on everything. The fear that sometimes seizes how they may have judged harshly or spoken sharply gives them nightmares. And so they change their views twice daily, impede action, do tight-rope stunts, and generally get in their own and ether people's way. It doesn't matter that they are wrong on the whole, so long as they are just and considerate in detail. If only liberals could cure themselves of their paralyzing fairness they would be quite tolerable. But then they wouldn't be liberals. They would be useful conservatives or radicals.

Swiss Justice Smells Like Swiss Cheese.—Ivan De Justh, who attacked the Hungarian premier in Geneva, has been sentenced by a Swiss court to 24 days in prison, ten years' exile and 500 francs fine. The court of the same country acquitted the murderer of Vorovsky. De Justh probably realizes that his mistake was in not killing the premier outright.

THE SYSTEM AND ITS COURT CLOWNS.

A Suggestion to the Nation.—The Nation the other day staged a dinner at which Ruth Hale, Lorine Pruette and Freda Kirchwey defended the thesis that woman is superior to man. The girls made a brave argument. They left the only male speaker, John Macy, no more than two legs to stand on. But the man and the audience who had forked over $2.75 for the dinner of some female companion felt that there was something fishy about the argument. In justice to the speakers, a customer of this column suggests that in future meetings to establish the superiority, or even equality, of the female of the species, she be compelled to pay for her own meal. It will make the thesis more convincing.

Judging from the amount of sacramental wine being confiscated by the booze-sleuths, there has been a very decided revival of religion in this land.

How the World Reports a Lenin Meeting.

"Some time ago," A. B. Magil writes, "you may recall there was a Lenin Memorial meeting. Well, what do you think happened? The New York World, which, as every child knows, is the great liberal newspaper of the United States, sent a reporter to Madison Square Garden—or maybe it wasn't a reporter. Anyhow, the next morning, gazing over my favorite family journal, I spied the story trying to sneak around a corner of the second page. It consisted of about two paragraphs. The story recorded the fact that there had been a Lenin Memorial meeting and that more than 20,000 Communists had been present. (This must have been heartening news to the comrades who are trying to build up a strong party in New York.) It also said that speeches had been made, but it forgot to say who made them and what they were about. And it ended up with a tasty bit of newspaper writing by saying that 50 policemen kept order and listing the names of the sergeants in command of the diligent cops.

"This struck me as a swell idea, democratic and everything. I would suggest that the World carry the idea into its other departments to be consistent. Why not have Woolcott and Chotzinoff give the names of the head usher, the man at the box office and the janitor in their dramatic and musical reviews? The program and the performers don't matter."

"Women Hold Most Phone Stock," says the headline to a financial item. We don't know about phone stock, but they certainly hold most phone booths, especially when a fellow needs one badly.

He signs himself "Young Sweeney" and writes to us "as one conductor to another." But his is not the pleasant job of conducting a column. He works on a rapid transit line, works on it all night long, cheerfully answers a lot of questions, and is paid next to nothing by a company which made a million dollars more this year than ever before. (The information comes to us in rhymes.) And now he asks a question in turn:

"Now what I want to know

The answer is too easy. As Young Sweeney grows older he will find out. Or maybe he's only teasing us. Maybe he knew the answer all the time. If it is any consolation to Sweeney and his fellow-workers on the rapid transit, he is welcome to the news that at least one conductor is paid even less than they. Give you one guess.

We lament the decline of pornography. Post-war realism (a lop-sided kind of romanticism) has done for it. That realism finds its popular expression in the picture papers and the nude revues. The world's becoming shock-proof. Crude, thick, vulgar, lecherous stuff has dulled the taste for such things. The only way Rabelais could get any attention for his work in New York today would be to hire a go-getting publicity man who in turn would get after Sumner to get after the police. Intimate bedroom stuff—in a novel or a divorce court action or a play—is as conventional as the happy ending and as little satisfying. Of finesse and subtlety there is none.

Maybe that explains our plight. A scribe who shall remain unnamed sends some verses with the assurance that they are pornographic. A diligent search in, between and around the lines fails to disclose the thrill. Nothing short of a picture postcard with accompanying charts will be recognized newsboys, alas, for what it is intended.

DRAMA

The Makings of a Play

"In Abraham's Bosom," With Soft Surface, Falls Short of Greatness.

Reviewed by HARBOR ALLEN.

PAUL Green's first long play, presented by the Provincetown Playhouse, under the direction of Jasper Deeter, at the Garrick Theatre, has at last arrived. It has two good scenes, but it drags into polemic lifts quotations from Booker T. Washington's "Up From Slavery," and stands like a shrine for "Emperor Jones."

But "In Abraham's Bosom" has virtues. It deals with real Negroes. It has a feeling for their language, an understanding for their associations, even if somewhat condescending, and an apologetic affection for their masters. In the hands of an experienced playwright this stuff might have been whipped into a respectable, endearing play.

Put into Paul Green is yet too much. In my colleague Barrett H. Clark is all off when he says: "Paul Green never poetizes his characters; he is as concrete as Hardy." Never positive! He fairly swaddles them in poetry. Their suggestions is dropped in words. He constantly thrusts on them his own "I hear" stray into long prayers and longer sermons. He plays on their loyalties. You can hear my idea stand aside, mutter: "Listen, boy, that gambit!" At times this material is simple, elementary, strong. But the surface rags.

And for all his sympathy, I suspect that Paul Green is at bottom a genteel and Southern Eighteenth-century. Enlightened, of course—"the new Southerner"—but professional sense the loss. Sure, the Negro is musical. Sure, he has superstitions. Sure, he is oppressed. Give him a bath, teach him to read, to plow his land, to shovel coal. Next thing you know he'll be president. Next thing you know he'll be on top. "I do not say we are equal to the whites," cries Abraham before his fall, "we are not ready for that yet." This is no Negro playwright. This is Paul Green of North Carolina.

The Paul Green has the makings of a great playwright. His people are human. His action is uncluttered, direct. He controls "plot." He makes his dialogue with the allegorical formulae which equal Broadway drama. But he has yet to learn that words are knives, not baby-ribbons. And before he can write a great Negro play, he has yet to become something less of a professional Southerner.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1927 — ALEX BITTELMAN, Editor

EDITOR'S NOTES

By ALEX BITTELMAN

WHAT was it that made the Soviet Union the most trusted and influential country among the Chinese masses? Was it only clever diplomacy or a new, revolutionary principle?

Capitalists and supporters of capitalism prefer to explain Soviet influence in China by effective diplomacy alone which is being variously qualified as clever, vicious, false, ulterior, etc., but—and on this all agree—which in the end had proved very effective in winning the active sympathy of millions of Chinese to the Soviet Union.

Says Dr. Clarence H. Robertson, Purdue University educational missionary to China for the last 25 years:

"Russia has outgeneralled the other western nations in its diplomacy in China."

Well, it did. Results prove it. But how? One must remember that it was Soviet Russia and not Czarist Russia that did the outgeneralling. The Czar could not do it. The Russian capitalists could not do it, either. The ones who did it were the toiling masses of Russia led by the working class through its Communist Party. And why?

Because in their relations to China and to all oppressed nations they had applied a new principle to which they are giving active and unqualified support by deeds. It is the principle of revolutionary struggle against imperialist oppression. It is the Communist principle of complete independence for all oppressed nations guaranteed by a firm alliance between the workers and farmers struggling for the abolition of all forms of oppression and the establishment of workers' and farmers' governments.

Herein lies the secret of Soviet Russia's influence in China.

YOU want to get the meaning of Coolidge's latest manoeuvre for so-called further limitation of naval armaments.

First, it is hypocritical. Coolidge knew when he made his recent offer that most of the European imperialist powers will reject it. And so it happened. Now Wall street, through Coolidge, is "free" to push ahead with all its might the program of more naval armaments for the United States blaming for it France and Italy.

Second, the United States is in a better position to stand "limitation" at least in the matter of submarines than the other capitalist powers, as is seen from the following table.

Submarines already built:

United States	120
Great Britain	56
Japan	53
France	45
Italy	42

"I'll Say He Can't See"

IN his new book on American Communism, James Oneal comments with satisfaction on the fact that the Communist movement in the United States has declined in membership from 35,000 in 1919 to 7,000 in 1927. We suspect that this expression of satisfaction is not wholly genuine.

While it is true that the membership of the Workers (Communist) Party is considerably smaller than was the combined membership of the two Communist parties in 1919, the party as such, i. e., as the fighting and leading organ of the most advanced section of the American working class is today much more effective and influential than eight years ago.

It is more truly working class and proletarian in its composition. It is more deeply rooted in the shops and factories and in working class organizations generally. Its prestige as a workers' political party and the only genuine champion of the class interests of the workers is incomparably higher today than it was in 1919, and is steadily growing.

It is a better Bolshevik party, meaning by this that it has a clearer conception of its purposes and tactics, better organization and a firmer grasp of its role in the labor movement.

In a word, the organized Communists of America, notwithstanding the smaller membership in the party, are today in a position to render greater positive service to the American working class and to exert better and more effective leadership in workers' struggles than was the case in 1919. Which, after all, is the important thing.

Numbers too are important, of course. And nobody realizes that better than the Communist. Hence, the chief aim of the Workers (Communist) Party is to come still closer to the masses, enter their struggles against the capitalists to render assistance and leadership. The relevant question to us is this: Is the party progressing or not in the realization of this chief aim? To this question there can be only one answer; the party is continually and steadily extending its influence among the masses and winning recognition from them. This James Oneal knows as well as we do.

Would Oneal care to analyze from the same angle his own, the socialist party?

THE representatives of the United Mine Workers' Union are at present negotiating with the coal operators a new wage scale agreement for the bituminous industry. These may prove to be historic negotiations which will play a decisive part in the immediate future of the miners and their union.

Chamberlain, angel of peace, winner of the Nobel prize, bringing "gifts" to China.

Lewis and his henchmen have thus far done all in their power to disarm the miners and weaken their resistance to the encroachments of the coal operators. Lewis's game is quite simple. Whatever motions he may choose to go through, his policy spells betrayal and disaster.

The hope of the miners and their union lies in the progressive and left wing elements. The more consciousness these elements will possess, the better organization they will perfect and the more determination they can demonstrate, the fewer the chances for the success of the ruinous policies of Lewis and his reactionary machine.

WITH respect to the Soviet Union the capitalist world is animated by two impulses. These are the desire for trade and the fear of revolution. On this matter the capitalists are, so to speak, possessed by two souls both struggling within one breast. "Trade interests and the fear of revolution have always opposed one another in the capitalist estimate of the Soviet Union," this is the way Comrade Buchar.n puts it.

We were moved to these reflections by a news item in the press that exports from the United States to the Soviet Union during the first quarter of the current operating year amounted to the sum of $17,000,000. This places the United States in the first rank among exporters to the Soviet Union, with Germany as a close second, England third, and Poland fourth.

In the present period of desperate struggles for markets among the capitalists of various countries, the markets of the Soviet Union are becoming ever more tempting and alluring. On the other hand, the powerful swing upward of the Chinese revolution, which is shaking the very foundations of world capitalism, together with the growing strength and consolidation of the socialist economy of the Soviet Union, which revolutionizes the minds of millions of workers throughout the world, is making the capitalists ever more fearful of the Soviet Union and all it stands for. With the result that the struggle within the capitalist breast between the soul longing for markets and trade and the soul shrinking from the ghost of revolution is becoming more violent every day.

The question is which of the two impulses will eventually gain the upper hand, or will capitalism continue to be torn by the two contradictory impulses until capitalism finally bursts to pieces and a new world comes into existence?

Dawn—
And the steel-voiced trumpets of industry
Stab the sleeping workers to consciousness.

Breakfast—
Gulpings of indigestible foods and liquids
In the stolid atmosphere of hasty words.

Factories—
Gates, and the ting, ting, ting, of time-clocks
Interspersed with sharp contentions of time-keepers.

Work—
The avaricious jaws of machinery, growling, snarling;
Masticating raw materials, souls, flesh,
With the avidity of stunted monsters.

The weary drag of heavy muscles homeward.

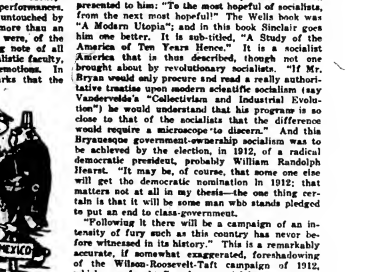
The Aftermath of "The Jungle"



By FLOYD DELL

"Metropolis" and "The Moneychangers," though having no propaganda than as art, are not at all what to us for what they reveal about society previously at this period. The author has his observations to found his characters, and my eloquence would not persuade you to read them; I might as well try to persuade you to read Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." At the present moment, however, appears nevertheless to me worth while to make a few observations about his new novel, "The Money-changers" (the author has a weakness for hyphens). It is a kind of historical trilogy of the Civil War period, the first two of which I have not read. The first, "Metropolis," dealt with the Wall Street financiers; the second, "The Moneychangers," with the Chicago packers; and the third, "Samuel the Seventh," with the railroads. I have not read them because, when I was told that they were dull, I believed it, and no one would persuade me to waste my time upon them. I have since learned that I was wrong, and that they are not dull, but just as many books that I have read are dull—and so one would have to be a newspaper reviewer to have the opportunity, which I have not, of reading everything that appears nevertheless to be worth while to make a few observations about his new novel. Mr. Sinclair has always been a favorite with New York and Chicago critics, and I suppose that the author of "The Jungle" is the most interesting figure in literature—he had to be, and only he, who was unable to know the Mammon of Unrighteousness. Yes, the author of "The Money-changers" is a wealthy and refreshing young aristocrat in literature. . . . It will be immediately perceived that it is not surprising to find the author of "The Jungle" a master of the muckraker, the effective writer of a politically ethical tract, but not a master of the novel. He has been known, in his own words, to turn an honest penny by writing novels; he has written novels to order, for publishers—he had to write "The Jungle"; he has written novels to order, for publishers—he had to write "The Money-changers"—and he was unable to know the difference between these kinds of literature. Yes, the author of "The Money-changers" is a wealthy and refreshing young aristocrat in literature. . . . "The Metropolis" was a novel of manners, and a novel of manners is a novel in which the manners are treated as an ephemeral matter; but it was viewed in too narrow and factual a way, through the eyes of this aristocratic young moralist-hero, who, as the total upshot of these events, is merely surprised and shocked that people can be so bad—and refuses to dine at the house of one of the scoundrels. There was to have been a third volume; it was written as a play, "The Machine," an instructive piece in which the hero finally marries the rich scoundrel's daughter, who has become interested in settlement work and socialism, and has repudiated her father's riches. It was this grand event toward which that whole creation moved!

Jack London had written of "The Jungle": "It is alive and warm. It is brutal with life." No one would say that of "The Metropolis" or "The Money-changers." They are emotionally thin performances. In both, the hero remains essentially untouched by all that goes on about him, scarcely more than an observer—a disembodied ghost, as it were, of the author himself, looking on and taking note of all that happens with an admirable journalistic faculty, but incapable of an depth of human emotions. In "The Brass Check" the author remarks that the critics were cross with his hero, saying that he was "a prig," and that he "ought to have been really tempted by the charms of the lovely 'Mrs. Winnie Duval,'" and he goes on to say: "It has happened to me, not once, but several times, to meet with an experience such as I have portrayed in the 'Mrs. Winnie' scenes, and I never found it any particular temptation. The real temptation of the metropolis is not the exquisite ladies with unsatisfied emotions; it is that if you refuse to bow the knee to the Mammon of Unrighteousness you become an outcast in the public mind. You are excluded from all influence and power, you are denied all opportunity to express yourself, to exercise your talents, to bring your gifts to fruition. One of the reasons "The Metropolis" had a small sale was because I refused to do the conventional thing—to show a noble young hero struggling in the net of an elegant siren. The temptation I showed was that of the man's world, not of the woman's: the temptation of Wall street offices, not of Fifth avenue boudoirs. It was a kind of temptation of which the critics were ignorant, and in which the public, alas, was uninterested." Indeed, an interesting theme. And a pity it is that these novels did not actually deal with it, that we are now perhaps in a position to make at least a guess at the psychic conflict which held the author's emotions so tight-locked during the composition of those two books; it might well have been, no vulgar conflict of worldly ambition with his high ideals, but a conflict involving his old aristocratic emotions for he had been offered, Tantalus-like, the opportunities of public leadership, only to have them snatched out of his grasp—between the poet-prophet, the Shelleyan "unacknowledged legislator of mankind," and the newer humbler role of the imaginative novelist who identifies himself with weak, suffering, stumbling, pitiful humanity itself. For a moment he had taken the latter role, and produced a masterpiece of prose fiction. But the poet in him demanded another destiny; and in that conflict he became neither poet nor quite novelist, but journalist-agitator.

In the meantime, in 1907, he had published a book entitled "The Industrial Republic." Its dedication, "To H. G. Wells, the next most hopeful," is an allusion to an inscription written by Wells in a book presented to him: "To the most hopeful of socialists, from the next most hopeful!" The Wells book was "A Modern Utopia"; and in this book Sinclair goes him one better. It is sub-titled, "A Study of the America of Ten Years Hence." It is a socialist America that is thus described, though not one but capable of no depth of human emotions. In "If Mr. Bryan would only procure and read a really authoritative treatise upon modern scientific socialism (say Vandervelde's "Collectivism and Industrial Evolution") he would understand that his program is so close to that of the socialists that the difference would require a microscope to discern." And this Bryanesque government-ownership socialism was to be achieved by the election, in 1912, of a radical democratic president, probably William Randolph Hearst. "It may be, of course, that some one else will get the democratic nomination in 1912; that matters not at all in my thesis—the one thing certain is that it will be some man who stands pledged to put an end to class-government.

"Following it there will be a campaign of an intensity of fury such as this country has never before witnessed in its history." This is a remarkably accurate, if somewhat exaggerated, foreshadowing of the Wilson-Roosevelt-Taft campaign of 1912, which was fought fiercely on social issues. But he goes on to predict an industrial crisis, a new "Coxey's army" marching on Washington, a panic, and then the revolution; needless to say a peaceful one. The captains of industry will have been told by the president that, "since they can no longer run their business, they must allow the government to take possession and run it—the price to be paid for their stock being a matter for future negotiation, and a matter of no great importance to them in any case, because of the income and inheritance laws just then being rushed through congress." The revolution, thus defined, was to take place "within one year after the presidential election of 1912." It was a youthful guess that one need not be ashamed of having made, though one may smile at the rashness of putting it on record in print; it was based on some quite widespread social revolutionary expectations of the period, and its immediacy seemed natural enough to a young Utopian in a great hurry.

But, with a revolution coming so easily in six years, there might have seemed the less reason for him to discipline his imagination to the more difficult and humble task of representing human nature. If this young writer was to be henceforth of distinguished use to American literature, he had to suffer more hurts and disillusionments.

(From Neighborhood Jan. 16, 1927).

Liebknecht, represented around 1910 in a criminal case by his attorney Karl Liebknecht, gunner-son of Wilhelm. It is a matter to see the Relationship of Karl Liebknecht, personally.

Liebknecht seemed perpetually to end his between the Emperor and the Reichstag. In court, he often prevented him from working through the Reichstag to the Kaiser. He found it impossible to get the proper skills because he had to read political documents, rushed back and forth between the two fountain-heads of authority.

"Now look here, Karl," I caught him exhaustedly one day in the antechamber, client entered who had come to see him personally, to present his case. "Why don't you let me handle it? I was when I was in the army, and I'm used to getting off the mark; I'll tell them what you're pay down!" And he would have done so, too, but Liebknecht, shelled his head, and pushed it to the client. He was lonely and objectively in the office manager.

"I would say anything Liebknecht added as he made to other change in an envelope, rang up the manager subway to take him instantly to a certain hotel.

And Liebknecht, who had very well no-[illegible] books, "I just needed the ten [illegible] Russian fugitive who is waiting for the necessary funds to proceed."

Then we became immersed in the documents pertaining to my case, and he pointed, with his peculiar fervor, how good the prospects were for us to get off splendidly in court.

But when the trial took place I was confronted by a great imperial animal, Graf von ——, officer of the cavalry, over whom I was supposed to have insulted. The Graf was aided by the greatest legal guns. Thus the party of the second part was fully represented; but, the party of the first part was not, for deputy Karl Liebknecht was not there.

The trial began. I was fiercely set upon by the presiding judge, the prosecuting attorney, and those legal celebrities. I defended myself as best I could, staring in between times everlastingly toward the door.

But the man who did not appear, that was deputy Karl Liebknecht.

It began to look as if I would be smoked out. The Graf, with his glittering monocle, was already smiling triumphantly. The presiding judge spoke about my only salvation—an ignominious compromise—when the door opened and into the courtroom stormed, with flutter of robe, swinging his brief-case—the attorney Karl Liebknecht, very apparently uninformed, but with ingenious instinct immediately sizing up the situation. And upright, standing with stilted pose, his head thrown back audaciously like Luther's in the parliament at Worms, he thundered with a cutting voice toward the confused prosecutor, the astounded legal guns, and the dumbfounded court: "We don't even dream of compromise—we invite presentation of proofs!"

And indeed, things turned out well this time. The opposing party permitted itself to be bluffed. There was not enough on the skirts to fear its probably contemptible material. The court was adjourned. A second trial never was called. The Graf and besides he had to pocket his defeat.

A punctilious lawyer, in all probability, would have landed this case on the rocks.

But not so the deputy.

had to cough up handsomely for his legal celebrities,

TO A CERTAIN CHURCHMAN

A placid face your seething soul belies
Glistened over by veneer of holy learning,
Fanatic flames are leaping in your eyes—
I hear the screams of many witches burning.

You rumble threats of brimstone as you raise
Your jeweled hands to exorcise the devil,
Contriving such a God as you would praise,
Devising your own laws of good and evil

WASHINGTON—NOT OUR HERO

February 22nd in Washington's birthday which is a national holiday and is celebrated throughout the United States. Unlike Abraham Lincoln who was the hero of only the northern bosses, George Washington was the hero of both the northern and southern bosses. It was Washington who led the fight against the British government for the independence of the American bosses. But George Washington is not OUR HERO, because he never cared for the workers and did not even try to help them.

After the war, the workers and poor farmers who fought in the revolution found that they were hopelessly in debt. George Washington and the bosses' government that he stood for, did not even try to help them. So there workers, revolted against the government. (Shay's Rebellion). Washington sent soldiers against these workers and crushed their revolution.

That's why OUR HERO is not George Washington, but the workers and poor farmers who fought and died in the Revolutionary War against the British, and also those who fought and died in fighting the American bosses' government.

In the Revolutionary War we said that we wanted to be independant from the foreign government of Great Britain. Today is altogether different. The American bosses' government sends battleships, and marines to China and Nicaragua to crush the workers who are fighting for freedom just as we once did. We say if the revolution was good for Uncle Sam, then it is good for the Chinese and Nicaraguans, so

HANDS OFF CHINA AND NICARAGUA!

Who Are We?

By DENA ROTH.

We are the Pioneers
We always will be,
Trying for the workers,
As you can see.

Tho we are ruled by the bosses,
We'll rule ourselves some day,
We'll make a Soviet Union,
And keep all the pay.

THE LITTLE GREY DOG

From Fairy Tales for Workers' Children.

HE was an ugly grey dog with long silken-soft ears and a bushy tail. He was born in a splendid stable that belonged to a rich man. This rich man lived on a large estate in which were fields and meadows. And in these fields grew sugar-cane, in great quantities, great, round, smooth canes that contained the sweet sugar. On the sugar plantations worked hundreds of Negroes, men and women, and the Negroes belonged to the rich man who had bought them in the market as he would buy cattle, for this story happened long ago, in those days when slavery existed in America. The rich man could do anything he wished with his slaves. If he was in a bad mood he would permit them to be whipped; if they dared to protest against this cruel treatment they were more cruelly punished—they were stripped naked, smeared with honey, and tied to a tree. The smell of the honey attracted the bees that came in large swarms, settled on the body of the slave, sucked the honey and stung the unfortunate till he collapsed with pain. Also, the master could sell his slave, did this frequently, without the least consideration, tearing mother from child, separating man and wife, sister and brother. The poor Negroes were completely helpless, they had to work all day long in the hot sun, received very poor food, lived in wretched huts, separated from the homes of the rich man by a mighty fence. Here lived the Negroes, crowded together; the children played about in front of these huts; played happily, because they did not yet know that they were slaves, and that a hard, difficult life awaited them.

He was still pondering one warm Monday in September, a month later. (Now, however, he proudly confessed to reading Ingersoll and some guy "Bookherts," he called him. His former teachers and his preacher had already learned to cover their ears when he started on his bland, sincere heresies; they were sure that it was only a passing stage, to be suffered along with the other little idiosyncrasies of youth). Today, he reflected, he was going to paint the steeple of the company church wherein, every Sunday, a company-paid preacher held forth on the blessings of heaven to a few herded, bovine "Polacks" whose life on this earth was a sordid hell.

Reflecting thus, he made his way to the church, found his way up the new pine stairs to the belfry, and laboriously clambered through the trap-door to the roof, which sloped upward sharply to the steeple. He arranged his "basket" with deliberate care, so that it might face the purple mountains instead of the smudgy district in which most of Diamond toiled, and set to work.

Morning brightened into an acute whiteness, sharply intensified by the rolling grayness of the mines and its environs; and still Jimmy swung gently in his basket, plying his brush with the absent air of one who is thinking. With the coming of mid-afternoon came an abating in his efforts, akin to the diminishing of the strength of a pendulum of a grandfather clock that has not been wound for many days. Now he merely sat with the brush in his lap, staring dreamily at purple and green hills, oscillating gently in the light autumn breeze. His basket making the least bit of a musical creak as it swayed back and forth. . .swayed. . .making him feel his drowsiness. . .God, but he was sleepy. . .and this gentle swaying was so nice . . .so nice. . .

Suddenly he was jerked to full consciousness by the music of picks and shovels. Steeples were dancing, florid men in black frocks brandished little black books. . .and ever the miners were digging, digging, digging with the relentless fury of men possessed, their picks and drills beating a strange tattoo which kept remarkable time with the demoniac thumping that was threatening to pound his breast-bone to pieces. . .

"Ah, those godamn fool Polacks going to that church. Don't they know it's all false, false, the whole rotten thing. . .

It is the next Sunday. The preacher has just completed a terrifying sermon on retribution as exemplified by the death of Jimmy Williams. A few men listen and dimly doubt; others do not listen and do not care. . .But everywhere among the, rough-skinned, dull-eyed audience there is a sort of powerful restlessness, like the nodding of tall grasses in the breeze, or the motion of a cattle herd when the clouds become a stormy black.

ODE TO CHINA

By ADOLF WOLFF

China
You have arisen
From the slumber of centuries.
You stand up straight
Stretching your mighty limbs
Like an awakened giant.

China
You are emerging
From the slough of feudalism
You are breaking the chains of tradition
You are shaking off
The alien vultures
Who have been feeding
Upon your prostrate body.

China
Your towering form
Rising against the sky
Of the red dawn
Casts a long shadow
Warning of doom
To all despoilers.

China
You are sounding the death-knell
Of imperialism's sway.
Your Victory
Is the promise of liberation
Of all oppressed peoples.

"Theory of human will in action and of value and economy as a relation of man to man."

His definitions of value, property and liberty are made in the light of bourgeois democratic class-collaboration. "Property means anything that can be bought or sold and since one's liberty can be bought and sold, liberty is needs, and therefore property." Commons, by defining labor power as property, does away in one blow with the propertyless class in the United States and makes everyone a property holder including children of the tender age of five or six. "Everybody has labor power to sell and the good capitalist is there to buy it.

"Value lies not in the visible things a person bot in the will to acquire, to use, to control, to enjoy and so to get an expected benefit of profit out of things, or persons. What we buy and sell is not things but our good will over things, and when we say that liberty is valuable and liberty is therefore property, what we mean is that the free and beneficial exercise of the will in dealings with nature and other people is economically valuable and therefore is property." Thus the exchange value of the labor power of the worker depends on the good will of the boss who pays for it because he wants to control its use it and is based on the employer's "anticipation for the present value not of physical things, but of the hopes of the future aroused through confidence in the now invisible but expected transactions of the future."

In attempting to bring out the stability of the capitalistic order, he points out that whereas under the feudal system differences between the king and the barons were settled by war, in bourgeois democracy, "the subject person is not permitted to choose any alternative when once the superior person has decided . . . when the decision of the competent official whether executive, legislative, or judicial is once made, the subject or official must obey of course." Professor Commons seems to forget the American revolution or the Civil War when, in spite of the decision of King George in one case, the ballot box in another case, the "subjects" resorted to arms to decide existing differences on the economic field. Just as the physiocrats based their economic theory on the divine order, so does the author in this case base his theory on the democratic state.

"The state is what the officials do, and what they do is to proportion the behavior of citizens by offering inducements in the directions which they consider important and away from directions which they reprobate." The question is, where do these officials come from, who puts them into power, how come they approve high tariffs to protect the steel trust, the sugar trust, and other trusts, and that they reprobate measures to protect the farmers who constitute a large portion of the U. S population.

The state, according to Commons, is a tool in the hands of each citizen. "To the extent that the individual is clothed with the sovereign power of the state, does he pass from the nakedness of slave . . . into the armament of citizen, and his growing concern rises from a conspiracy into a corporation. It is these substantive powers and remedial powers that modern capitalism owes its power of expansion, for it is they that enable the businessman who is citizen of a great enduring nation to extend his sway from the arctic to the anartic from occident to orient."

There you are—Imperialism in a nut-shell—merely due, according to Commons to the "State" which is a "group of officials," that give every citizen a chance to exploit the rest of the world. To sum up, the capitalistic system is stable and permanent, the supreme court balances the relations between the social forces of society, that exchange value is nothing definite but based on the speculative anticipation of the businessman, and that everybody in U. S. is a property holder because every individual has labor power to sell.

Workers Holiday (A Mass Story)

By ALEX JACKINSON

THE weather was ideal. Overhead rolling skies broke through a mass of crimson-colored vapor and floated on into oblivion, disappearing like a giant balloon that has lost its way. The changing blue skies, threatening occasionally to break into a storm, made the day clear. And, it was yet warm, though summer was already stripped of its virgin warmth by approaching fall.

That day was a holiday. A most sacred one in the calendar of Capital. It was Labor Day—workers' holiday. The one day in the year when big business and reactionary labor fakers shake hands in common cause. There was no work that day. Department store windows were curtained. Public buildings were bedecked in flags. Brokers' news ticklers gave forth no news. The Stock Exchange did not open. Wall Street was deserted. Even the factories were closed. In short nobody worked. You couldn't work even if you wanted to. The A. F of L. wouldn't let you. The tabloids wouldn't let you. The state department wouldn't let you. No one would let you, for it was Labor Day—workers' holiday. A day devoted to the glorification of "peace in industry" and workers don't work on that day, they celebrate it.

A gay spirit of frivolity was suffused in the air, which passers-by readily inhaled. It was the hour when "taking a walk" was most popular, and everywhere, people hurried along as though they were on their way to some huge carnival. Around the terminals, Negro porters clad in grey uniforms were sweating under the weight of heavy valises belonging to outgoing vacationists. They pocketed silver coins and smiled proudly as they lost their way in the crowded stations.

On Fifth Avenue promenaded the bourgeoisie, also celebrating Labor Day. Here high-heeled women moved adroitly about, under brightly tinted hats, while their lithe bodies swayed voluptuously in silks. Neatly dressed puppets of dividends with brightly colored cravats protruding from under the points of white collars shuffled besides them. Blue ribboned dogs and tailored manikins along—girls whose faces were lost in the traffic of their destinations.

This is the avenue where The Envied make ostentatious display of their profits. And where the less fortunate children of commerce come to compete with them in the melo-dramic exhibit of wealth. The latter wear garments of less expensive texture, which serve as excellent stuffings for mercenchanisms of men trying to look like their bosses sons. The procession continues as more and more civilized morons stroll by leaving behind them an odor of a refined monotony which sends strong whiffs of hate through your nostrils.

Along Broadway, theatres gave special Labor Day matinees at advanced rates and willing theatregoers clogged the congested thoroughfare as they darted from lobby to lobby in search of amusement. Fools, all of them, searching for amusement in stuffy theatres when there is plenty of it all around them. Stop someday when your on that street and watch the never ending parade in caricature sweep by. That should give any man with guts a laugh.

You see adolescent youths hurrying out of automats as though the contents of her were eaten there. And giggling stenographers stop in front of mirrored windows to dab another layer of powder over their stenciled faces. It's a wonder that some red blooded poet doesn't, and run down here and watch those well groomed civilizees spend their way through the streets. Such a man could write a masterpiece about those cold, disconsolate humans, pushing each other with barbaric gusto. All social beings, peering into each other's face, yet strangers swarming the sidewalks of unsociable New York. Where one human being cannot speak to another unless they ask for a match or the time. A thought worthy of attention!

The crowds continued to swell, swirl, and move on in a wild rhythm up and down the pavements, in the gutters automobile horns honked their screech ing noise as garishly painted cars dashed out of each other's way. Enigmatic smiles broke through the lips of freshly barbered faces as their eyes oglea to passing girls, sweetly perfumed in lust. Morfaces, all animated with a blank nonchalance whizz by. Sensual eyes followed the outline of women's buttocks swaying under imitation fur coats, while noses unflinchingly pick up the scent of a lascivious odor which they leave behind. Gaiety fees sounded from their midst. They are happy. It is their holiday. What holiday? Oh, yes, Labor Day—workers' holiday.

In Union Square some twenty thousand garment workers rallied that never to be forgotten day, again we repeat. It was Labor Day—workers' holiday to protest against the injunctions issued to the greedy cloak manufacturers on the fifteenth week of the strike, which prohibited them from picketing the shops. In protest against the attempt to break their solidarity, a constant stream of determined strikers kept pouring into the peaceful square. Here they met friends, smiled, talked and sought to find a clear place to stand. The crowd was shiftless, and everywhere workers crowded each other out of place in an attempt to find a range of view.

Mounted police astride well groomed horses kept the interchanging crowd within restricted lines, other police, not mounted, walked in jerky strides, swinging their clubs in threatening motion. The crowd continued to swell hourly as more and more sympathizers came to sound their voice in the great protest. They kept coming in ever increasing numbers until the entire area was soon congested by tightly barded together bodies. Outside of the groups listening to the speakers, were other workers, observing the vista of moving workers running into each other like water colors on a landscape. Here too a poet could justify his existence.

Faces of workers rose above the sea of heads in continuous waves. Their necks craned, and eyes focussed upon an improvised platform, standing in the midst of the huge throng upon which speaker after speaker mounted to address the multitudes. Words, drifting from rebellious mouths echoed through the crisp air and found harbor in the applause of the listeners.

Upon the small platform stepped a gaunt figure, attired in light top-coat. A prolonged outburst of cheers greeted his appearance. The strikers instantly surged forward continuing to cheer until the speaker waved his hand. It was the revolutionary leader of the striking cloakmakers.

"Fellow workers," he concluded. "Today we show our bosses the solidarity of labor." Cheers accentuating approval greeted his words. "We will form a line and march to the picket lines," he continued. "Down with the injunction," cried one of the crowd and "Down with the injunctions," echoed in thousands of husky throats. Placards bearing "Long live the left wing unions" shook the air. It wasn't long before "March to the picket lines—To the picket lines," sounded everywhere. Without ado the compact mass deanimated into swarming groups. Soon narrow sidewalks running from the square became crowded with moving people wading into one solid column of humanity. They kept sig-zagging continuously in and out of each other's way, no body after body appeared and disappeared in a continuous chain which stretched for many blocks. Two abreast they walked, heads up and feet moving in a tireless shuffling.

Old men, their china hidden in snow-white beards, sought to keep pace with younger ones, whose feet rose and pressed-back against the grey sidewalks in staccato movements. Gamuza be men, crowds of men. Men, not yet grown old some with faces grimaced by want, others attired in misfitting clothes rubbed elbows with comrades whose shoulders were beginning to stoop from bending over sewing machines. All were instilled with that innate of called rebellion.

Their livelihood was menaced by the hated injunction which they denounced in vehement terms. Some stopped to exchange greetings with passing friends, instantly becoming lost in the nearshore throngs.

Intermingled in the procession walked young and old women. Women with bodies enfeebled by years of toil in stuffy sweatshops. Others, young, some whose legs moved about under brilliant dresses. Still others, young girls proud of their manicured fingers which have not yet become callioused from needle work. All pressed steadily onward and all lost their individual indentity as they marched up the winding streets to the garment district.

From another street echoed the clatter of hoofs treading. Soon a squad of police mounted rounded a corner. They were on their way to the garment district, where word reached the station house of demonstrations of cloakmakers would take place. The distance between the station house and garment district was short. They had hardly finished the conversations, some of them carried on when they reached their destination.

Silently they formed a barrier of shining night sticks across the street. It was an oft repeated performance for them, which they performed automatically. They had all received their orders previous to the day, not to allow a public demonstration on a holiday and automaton-like prepared to exercise their instructions. As the lines of marchers drew closer, one of the police approached the strikers and ordered them to disperse.

The strikers paused, as they listened to their leader reply in a defiant tone: "Today we show up the fake of Labor Day. Fall in line with us brothers, you two are victims of oppression."

The words echoed in the ears of the police like the babble of a strange tongue, profane grunts and a popping of night sticks was their silent answer.

The impetuous strikers were not to be thus quelled, cheated of their desire to march through the picket lines. As one, they suddenly broke ranks. Men and women advanced in quick strides, breaking through the tight police lines.

Overhead skies grew suddenly cloudy. The threatening storm broke loose as thuds of varnished night sticks echoed softly in the air.

Railwaymen's Union In Japan

By G. ATCHKANOW

...ost of the railway lines in Japan are owned ...by the state. It was partly on account of this ...and owing to the police regime in general, ...until quite recently it was difficult to or... trade unions on the railways.

...For a great many years the Japanese govern... ...to keep its agents, and been impressing the ...minds of the railway officials, as well as of the ...men and file, that they were state employees and ...should faithfully serve their country and govern... ...loyally carrying out all the commands of ...superior officers, so as to make faithful ...servants of the government.

...In this manner the proletarian spirit was stul... ...and the workers were practically forced to ...form any idea of organizing themselves into ...class unions.

...As a result, the regime on the Japanese railways ...remained on of the pre-revolutionary re... ...on the Russian railways.

...There were attempts to form a union on the ...railways by more class-conscious elements among ...the workers, but they were defeated by the ...open opposition on the part of the agents of ...the government.

...The first strike of engine drivers broke ...out in 1919 on a private railway line owned by ...the Osaka Railway Company, and the first union ...of railwaymen in Japan was formed on the ...same line, under the name of "Hitetsukio... ...Kai"; but this union was soon forced out of ...existence.

...It was only in 1920 that another attempt was ...made to form a union of railwaymen under the ...name of "Tetsudo Kikaishi Domeikai" (Japan... ...Engineer's Association). With headquarters ...in Tokyo and with a membership of 2,100, the ...union included only the engineermen on the fol... ...railway lines: Tokaido, Tiyo, Sinetsu, and ...Ou-Tetsu. One year later, however, the new union ...was subjected to repressive measures by the Minis... ...of Traffic and Communications, and compelled ...to disband.

...The formation of the Enginemen's Union in 1920 ...was but a strong outburst of the labor move... ...There was a spontaneous wave of a move... ...for organization among the masses of the ...workers, bitter conditions of labor; but ...the union, having neither the leaders nor ...workers had a sufficient understanding of the ...situation.

...In 1922 the railwaymen took up once again the ...question of forming a trade union. A series of ...conferences of railwaymen was called for this pur... ...in June. More than one-half of the delegates ...present at those conferences consisted of former ...members of the Enginemen's Union. The result ...was the formation of the Japanese Railwaymen's ...Union (Nihon Tetsudogogiein Domei).

...The union afterwards a section of the railway... ...which was in sympathy with the league's position, formed ...a union composed exclusively of the lower grades ...of workers. These two organizations represented ...respectively the right and a left wing. The first ...of these organizations soon began to decline, having ...miserably failed to gain the support of the masses. On ...the other hand, the second union was successful in ...this respect.

...In 1925, in connection with the general revival ...of the labor movement in Japan, the question was ...raised by the more progressive elements of the ...workers on the state railways concerning the need ...for organizing an all-Japanese Railwaymen's ...Union, and a campaign in this sense was con... ...ducted among the members of the two railway... ...men's unions, leading to negotiations between these ...unions, which were held from November 25, 1925, ...until February 11, 1926, and resulted in the forma... ...tion of the All-Japanese Railwaymen's Union.

...The organizational movement among the rail... ...workers has been carried out with great success. ...Since the formation of the Railwaymen's Union in ...March, 1926, the organizing activity on the state ...railways has been carried on with the united sup... ...port of the right and the left organizations.

...From the very outset the union has concentrated ...its attention upon organizational and educa... ...tional work.

...At the time when it was formed, the union had ...a membership of 1,500; now it has over 5,000 mem... ...bers. Organizational activities are in full swing ...throughout the country; on the Kiu-Siu, in the ...southern province of the island of Konsiu, in Kanto, ...and in the North East. Three branches are soon ...to be opened on the eastern railways; at Iskouska, ...and at Sinkwei (Tokyo).

...Nevertheless the workers are considerably hin... ...dered by the specific spirit of chauvinism and title... ...which has been inculcated among the Jap... ...railway workers in the course of many years. ...It will need for them to get rid of the idea that they ...are state servants working in the interests of the ...state and therefore obliged to put up with any ...misery for the sake of the Japanese people, where... ...as in reality they are suffering in the interests of ...a handful of big capitalists, and of the aristocratic ...governmental clique.

...This constitutes the chief hindrance to the or... ...ganization of the railwaymen, sowing confusion in ...the minds of the workers, whose class instinct ...prompts them to form class organizations and to ...engage in the class struggle, while the lingering ...traditions call them back to bureaucratic official... ...ism and chauvinism.

As an instance, we quote below the following declaration by the founders of the All-Japanese Railwaymen's Union:

The All-Japanese Railwaymen's Union does not differ from the other unions, and like all other unions, it has for its object the amelioration of working conditions. Nevertheless in its leading principles and in its activity, it is firmly resolved to take into consideration the specife character of the state railway anterprises which are of such colossal importance to all the public industries in Japan. We, the railwaymen, while endeavoring to improve our social status by means of our own legal organization and activity, are at the same time prepared to make all sacrifices for the sake of the further prosperity of the public enterprises that are needful to the whole population. Thus, the All-Japanese Railwaymen's Union, formed upon the principle of trade unionism, will endeavor to make progress while following the practical tactics of honest fulfillment of duties assumed."

In adopting this platform, the All-Japanese Railwaymen's Union declares that: "(1) for the purpose of mutual support of the railwaymen in the struggle for existence, it will exert all efforts to stimulate the growth of co-operation among the members. (2) In order to raise the cultural level of the workers and employees, the union proposes to take up the necessary cultural and educational activity on a large scale. (3) Standing for the system of workers' committees, the union intends to encourage the formation of such committees in all the districts where it has branches, and to render these committees really useful to the masses of the workers in their everyday interests. (4) Our union favors the existence of international workers' organizations. Although we do not believe them capable of bringing amancipation to the working class, nevertheless we intend taking an activa part in them in so far as they serve our interests. (5) Our union intends to make the most advantageous use—from the working class standpoint—of the political rights extanded to the union, and to take part in political life." Furthermore, the All-Japanese Railwaymen's Union, believing in the principle of industrial unionism, solemnly declares that it will at once exert all its efforts to organize the mass of 19,000 laborers on the state railways that are still unorganized.

TO THE BRITISH EMPIRE

England, the "mob" that dares your right
By Shanghai's gate, a torch has lit
Of flaming hate, and all your might
Shall yet go down, consumed by it.

Too long your three-crossed flag has reared
Its folds above the tolling slaves;
Pause and behold how hate prepared
There waits for you a yawning grave.

With bloody feet and bleeding hands,
In India and Egypt far,
Where rolls the Niger thru its sands,
Where beat the angry drums of war.

'Neath blazing sun and burning stars,
On freezing peak and sultry plain,
See how they stand the avatars
To fall upon the slayer slain!

Of what avail the pomp of power,
The boast of strength, the iron show,
When deep within your sea-girt tower
The ones who made you work your woe.

Nor lies nor force avail you now
In this the hour your slaves arise.
Upon your cold, imperial brow
The mark of dissolution lies.

—HENRY GEORGE WEISS.

THE DYNAMITER

I perforate the stone with biting drill,
Then place the dynamite where it will do
Most good in making ready for the crew
To wreck some ancient building, rocky hill;
Or in some excavation deep and chill
I send my mighty shots to pierce through
The city's bed, and still I never rue
My role of dynamiter and its thrill.

The thunder of the blast that shakes the town
Is but a quiet music in my head,
The rain of rocks is but a fall of dew;
Yet as I move my drill now up, now down,
I think of all the souls who are quite dead
Because they fear to wreck—and build anew!

—HENRY REICH, JR.

Worthy of attention is the part of the declaration dealing with the organization of the unorganized, and with raising the cultural level of the railwaymen; but there is complete absence of any aspiration towards raising the class consciousness of the railwaymen. Nevertheless, in spite of all these defects, the formation of the All-Japanese Railwaymen's Union should be considered a great achievement for the Japanese railwaymen. The healthy principle of industrial unionism forms the foundation of this organization.

Thus, the supreme organ of the union is the congress which is to be convened twice annually. The delegates to the congress are elected by the branches at the rate of 1 delegate per 50 members.

But the Central Committee, elected at the congress, has a fairly complex structure, and is composed of the following sections: Publishing, cultural and educational, organizational, political, international, juridical, co-operativa, research on the workers' committees, and records and bookkeeping. There are also professional sections: Railway telegraphists, water workers, watchmen and road maintenance men, electricians, train crews, yard workers, chauffeurs, tramway workers, train fitters, railway station workers, controllers, and railway yard employes.

This form of organization reminds us of the unions with guild sections, which constituted the first organizations on the Russian railways in 1917-18. This seems to be characteristic of all beginning trade unons while building up their forms of organization.

The railway authorities have officially declared their non-interference in the work of the newly formed All-Japanese Railwaymen's Union; but hardly have a few months passed since its formation, and the railway authorities have begun an agitation against the union among the railway workers, and began openly to interfere with the activities of the union.

In June, 1926, the first plenary meeting of its central committee was held, with the assistance of delegates from all the branches. The plenary meeting discussed all the questions which had arisen during the time of the union's existence, and the fundamental course of policy was outlined until the next congress. Of great importance to the Japanese Railwaymen's Union are two questions which were discussed by the central committee. The first one related to the union's tactics on the railways and generally in public life, which reaffirmed the previously stated standpoint of the union. The second one dealt with the methodical plans for the further organizational work of the union. A draft was submitted for a resolution by the C. C. of the union on the question of regulating the apparatus of the organizational section, and of nnification of the work. Another draft was submitted of a resolution dealing with the organization of district branches.

The plenary meeting reaffirmed its previous declaration, laying particular stress upon the moderation of the All-Japanese Union, appealing to public sentiments, and asking for the support of the Japanese bourgeoisie.

Not a word about the class struggle and the class interests was contained in this declaration, just as in the preceding one.

It should be noted that the All-Japanese Railwaymen's Union, by its strategy and tactics, does not diffar from the other trade unions of Japan, which partly emulate the British, and partly the American trade unionism, and are aspiring towards class cooperation with the bourgeolsia. But among the Japanese railwaymen there is already a left wing in evidence, even if consisting of a small group, that is striving towards the proletarian class struggle in the trade union movement of Japan.

The Employer's Nightmare.

COARSE IS OUR SONG

By EUGENE KREININ.

Coarse is existence,
And rugged the struggle of life.
Brutal, the hold of oppression,
And forceful the steps of revolt.

Poets of proletarian thinking,
Lives of privation and want,
Release the song of the masses,
Summoning all unto strife.

Spreading the voice of thunder
Rolling for eras and ages,
Sending a curse to all tyrants,
And lifting the veil off tomorrow.

Strong as granite, our action
The word as keen as a blade,
Digging a grave for the master,
Building the world for slaves.

[illegible] is our song,
The words unvarnished,
[illegible] so crude
And struggles, unpolished.

IN ANSWER TO CERTAIN PLAUSIBLE YOUNG MEN

Monuments all about me:
That big dirty factory on the Jersey shore.
Warner's sugar in electric letters.
Grant's Tomb—paunchy, imposing, an epitaph to another
Damfool in the palm of Wall Street.
So-an-so's twinkling roadhouse
Where the wines aren't light,
And neither are the "mommas."
Sky shot with chilly blue stars, the color
Of Sheffield's lower grade milk—monuments to what?

This ribbon of a Riverside Drive,
That floating barge of a ferry-boat—monuments?
That dirty factory, that gray, looming, stenchy gas tank—Monuments?
That chugging train and those snaky rails—monuments?

Yes; these be monumenta.
Monments to what is greater than the system which Encompasses them—to men,
To men and work, to sweat and blood and thought.
Which are far greater than your glib philosophies,
Your puny individualism, your hypocritic transcendentalism,
Far, far greater than the class lies of the system
That breeds your stamp.

Golden West Aimee To Clean Up Gotham In Three-Day Stay

Aimee Semple McPherson, notorious evangelist, was in New York today confident that in three days time she can do more to reform New York's great white way than all the other censuring elements put together.

Mrs. McPherson says she isn't worried over the fact that five radio broadcasting stations have closed their doors to her because of "unpleasant notoriety she received on the Pacific coast."

The evangelist is here, she said, to conduct a series of revivals which will lase three days, and will transmit her lectures from the Glad Tidings Temple here over WODA at Paterson, N. J.

"I am trusting to divine power to broadcast my message to New York," Aimee said.

IT is sometimes cheaper to spend a little money than lose a lot. (It always is). This sagacious observation is prompted by reading about a person who felt he was too poor to buy a ticket for the Delaney-Maloney fight, but was sepdirated from $1,500 by a burglar who did not agree with him. In all probability the burglar took a box seat and gave a hundred bucks to some worthy charity. It's a way burglars have.

JAPAN accepts Coolidge's proposal for an arms parley. There is nothing that can beat the generosity of those imperialist powers when they have nothing to give away. Japan knows quite well that this arms parley is a big fake and the Mikado's government wants to be in on every fake that is worthy of its steel. While the "peace" conference is in session the chemists can be busy on the poison and the pacifists will not bother them; they will be watching the "peace" conference.

SHANGHAI is tied up by a big strike. The nationalist revolutionary armies are chasing Sun's defeated troops over the landscape. There are ten thousand foreign troops in Shanghai and on board the warships in the harbor. In our opinion they are almost as useless as ten thousand lice. There has been no development during our time that is more conducive to mental satisfaction than seeing millions of Chinese, trodden under the tyrant's heel for centuries, feeding the foe on cold steel and making him like it.

The part played by the working class in the present Chinese revolution is worthy of note. In the past the workers have been used by other classes to fight their battles. But when the battles were over the workers were told to stick their necks into the yoke and return to the job of producing profits for the bosses. But we doubt very much if the Chinese workers are going to do anything of the sort. They know that but for their efforts foreign imperialism, and its native tools would be secure.

MATTHEW Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor and acting-president of the National Civic Federation, delivered a speech last Friday night before the Central Trades and Labor Council that would damn a labor leader in any country. Communists are accustomed to being the target for the abuse of the capitalists and their agents. Clever capitalist propagandists confine their attacks to the Communists regardless of race, creed or color. But this gink Woll, besides himself with rage, turned the vials of his wrath loose on the Jews and attributed the conflict between the fakers and the left wing to the alleged fact that all the militants in the needle trades are Jews.

Matthew Woll is a catholic, tho not Irish. It may be "news" for many that not all the craw-thumpers come from the emerald isle. Woll belongs to that section of the A. F. of L. that prodneed the infamous Militia of Christ, as opposed to the equally Masonic wing of the federation. It is no accident that Woll is taking the lead in Fighting Communism. It is no accident that he is acting president of the Civic Federation. He is serving imperialism and the church in both capacities. It is a powerful combination, but not as powerful as the organized power of the millions of American wage earners organized and unorganized.

At a recent bnfquet given by the Civic Federation, Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Oblo railroad, delivered a lecture on the benefits derived from the B. & O. plan formulated by William M. Johnston, formor president of the International Association of Machinists, or rather by an industrial expert by the name of Boyer. The railroad magnate declared that the plan proved its worth. One shop that was considered a dead loss by the road began to show a profit after the B. & O. plan went into operation. Who benefitted by the increased efficiency was not made clear by Willard, but he did not show that the workers gained anything. Neither did they.

Lewis Making New Bid to Coal Barons

Raps Communists While Sessions Halt

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 20.— John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, has informed press representatives here that any offers of aid by the Communist International to the union in the event of a strike on April 1, will be refused.

The statement is undoubtedly made by Lewis at this time as part of the general campaign of the U. M. W. A. officials to give the union leadership a clearly "100 per cent American" character, avoid any charges of radicalism and convince the coal-operators that the U. M. W. A. officials are in wholehearted accord with them in waging war on all militant tendencies in the union.

Assessment Needed.

The U. M. W. A. has about $600,000 in its treasury and if a strike occurs when the present contract expires it will be necessary to levy assessments on the membership with which to provide relief and finance organization work in the important non-union fields now producing about 65 per cent of the total tonnage.

The dues-paying membership would probably welcome financial aid from the all-Russian trade unions who contributed over $5,000,000 to the relief fund of the British miners.

It is admitted in a story carried by the New York World, signed by John J. Leary in its Sunday edition, that the Lewis machine instigated the unseating of William F. Dunno at the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor in 1923. Dunno, now co-editor of The DAILY WORKER, was at that time editor of the Butte Bulletin, the official organ of the Montana State Federation of Labor and the Butte Trades and Labor Council.

Leary makes a number of errors in his story—placing the convention

ROCHESTER SCAB CAB DRIVERS USE IRON BARS, GUNS

But One Loses Weapon; Lands in Hospital

ROCHESTER, Feb. 20.—Once again the Yellow Cab drivers have been forced out on strike for the recognition of their union and against the yellow-dog company union with its concomitant—low wages. The strike followed repeated efforts towards settlement by a committee of 26, representing organized labor of Rochester.

Each time the committee called at the office of the company they were duly informed that the president was out and could not be rvached. This finally exasperated the A. F. of L. committee, who were promised that they would receive a call from Mr. Fred Zorn at eight o'clock, Feb. 16. The committee waited till 8.45. It then became clear that the Yellow Cab company did not desire peace. The strike order was issued and is in full effect.

State Power Appears.

More than twenty policemen were placed at the New York Central station for strike breaking duty. They chased the hundred pickets who were on duty the first day of the strike, and interfered with their work.

A gangster driver in the employ of the company shot Leon Brockett, a striker, in the right leg, just about a block from the New York Central station. The scab, Russell Sciolino, was arrested.

Scab Loses Bar.

Joseph Gazett, who, according to police report, made an attack on strikers with an iron bar, lost the bar and is in the hospital suffering severe contusions.

Yellow Cab drivers make little money. The pay envelopes of a dozen men for a 77-hour week averaged around $15 each. All organized labor in Rochester is lined up with the striking cab drivers.

Mr. W. Z. Foster

Chicago Illinois.

Dear Friend Bill:

"I was pleased to hear from you, and learn that you are still in the land of the livings. I surely appreciate your interest in the battle I am engaged in for industrial freedom in the Connelsville Region where industrial slavery has been in existence for so long.

Bill it looks as though you have the right dope on this situation. And as the only international organizer in the field. National Board Member O'Leary, and district Board Member Hynes along with two of the Pittsburg district organizers, make up the crew that are fighting this battle against the most powerful coal companies in the country. Our battle against the most powerful coal companies in the country. Our men are holding out remarkable. We are fighting with our backs to the wall. Without sufficient funds or help. I have appealed time and again for assistance, but to no avail. Five thousand miners and their families have been evicted from their homes, and fifteen thousand others have been served with eviction notices. Ten colonies are erected all over the region, and twenty-five hundred hired thugs and gunmen have been deputized by the Sheriff of Fayette County. Two-hundred State Police are scattered over the field. The jails are filled with strikers. Police are scattered over the field. The jails are filled with strikers. ing miners. Six striking miners have been brutally murdered, and twenty-five others have been wounded. Hundreds have been beaten up many of them crippled for life. Wholesale evictions are taking place daily. We need funds, and need them bad. Appeals have been sent all over the country for assistance by us, and upon this, depends the very existence of the struggling men and women of the Connelsville Coke Region.

The recent settlement, by the district Officials of District #5 was a staggering blow to the miners of the Coke Region, when they signed for the large Kilman interests, in the old Pittsburg District and left out the twelve mines of that company that we have organized solidly in the Connelsville field. This was the dirtiest blunder of the age. O'Leary and Hynes fought against this settlement, but the two scabs overruled them. We are demanding a special convention, and it will be some Convention. There will be Hell to pay. I find both International and District organizers throwing cold water on this very important situation. International Secretary William Green is the only National Official that has paid us a visit, notwithstanding that Vice-President Murray, who lives but forty miles from the seat of War cannot find time to visit the field. Bill, I expect to be a candidate for district President, and believe me, there will be some fun. We have recieved three gallery fun of three thousand dollars from district 5 to help carry on the strike, with forty-five thousand men involved.

I must now draw to a close, for Gods sake if you can help us, do so, we need shelter food and clothing, children are without shoes, and unable to go to school. Wishing you every success, I remain,

Yours respectfully,

William Feeney

P.S. Bill I hope you are able to keep out of jail and that some of those so called Labor Leaders will take your place behind them Bars with they belong. Bill I am sweny tired and sick[illegible] at the treatment we are receiving & shall invite you to convention when we get it. although we can contest for an Injunction

UNITED STATES TREBLES FORCES IN NICARAGUA

Administration Aims to Overawe Liberals

By LAURENCE TODD.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20 (FP).—Mexico, as well as Nicaragua, is threatened by the sudden trebling of the American armed force in the latter republic.

When the Navy Department announced, on Feb. 17, that it was sending 1,600 additional marines, as well as six more airplanes, to reinforce Admiral Latimer in Nicaragua, the ominous meaning of the Coolidge-Mellon move was clear. Mexico was to be reminded of the ease with which any administration at Washington could make undeclared war on a Latin American republic, regardless of the wishes of congress or the tendency of public opinion.

It was suggested in the State Department that the number of marines and American bluejackets now available in Nicaragua would be sufficient to meet any force which the Sacasa Liberal government might muster. In view of the fact that the liberals have carefully safeguarded all Americans and their property during the revolution, and in view of the fact that Adolfo Diaz was originally placed in power, in 1910, by the active participation of American forces in battle against the liberals, the new move is interpreted by friends of Sacasa's cause as an attempt to overawe the liberals.

Two further suggestions have been made—that the coercion of Nicaragua is to be completed in order to prevent Sacasa from exposing any

Misery and Jobs Follow Wake Of Storm

By HARRY FREEMAN.

Rain, sleet and snow whipped the streets of New York last night. Snow-shovelling contractors got fat contracts, their wives sighed and moved a little closer to open fireplaces—and the jobless walked the streets of the Bowery in frayed overcoats looking for work.

Long lines of men, their coat collars turned up against the whistling wind, waited outside of Bowery missions in the hope of getting a cup of coffee and a chunk of bread. They were oven willing to listen to the religious slop handed out by the Salvation Army to escape the snow and the biting wind.

Hundreds of other men—most of them old—crept out of the basements of missions where they are permitted to stay during the winter. The snow has its virtues: it provides contractors with contracts and the jobless with jobs: so hundreds of old men sambled out of the missions to clear the city streets of snow. They have to work ten hours a day and the pay is only fifty cents an hour. But that's better than staying in a mission basement and living on coffee and the gospel.

"This Ain't No Fun."

"Let me tell you, brother, this ain't no fun," one of the workers told me when I asked him how much he got an hour. He was an old man, and his gnarled hands, which gripped his shovel, were bare. "It's a damned cold day." He pulled his ragged mackinaw closer and began shovelling vigorously. The foreman was standing a few feet away.

20-CENT MILK DUE SEPT. 1; BOOST TO PILE UP PROFITS

Harris Says Shortage Coming This Fall

New York's workers can chalk down two big red-letter dates right now.

June 1, that's the day your rents are scheduled to soar.

September 1 that's the day your milk follows rents.

Twenty cents a quart for ordinary pasteurized stuff, may be the figure reached, in the opinion of Health Commissioner Louis I. Harris.

He knows, according to the republican politicians, who insinuate that Harris knows more than he's willing to admit on milk graft.

Right now Harris is posing as the protector of the "peepul." And here's his dope:

"Due to the passage of the Taber-Lenroot bill barring Canadian milk from the United States and to the normal increase of metropolitan population, New York's going to face an acute milk shortage next fall."

Harris has been holding secret confabs with the milk dealers. What happens is—not divulged to the workers, whose only interest in milk after all is the nourishment of their children. Harris and the milk dealers agreed though that prices are going up unless added sources of supply can be added.

Inasmuch as it is impossible to grow a milk-giving cow between February 20 and September 1, it's a foregone conclusion that today's 15-cent milk will look pretty cheap six months from now.

Tories and Czarist Russians Plot War

Catholics, Anglican Clerics, Government Officials Unite to Rupture Anglo-Soviet Relations

Special To The DAILY WORKER

MOSCOW, Feb. 20.—The press of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics publishes correspondence of the former Czarist diplomat, Eugene Sablin, living in London, with Tsirs "senior Russian diplomatic representative abroad," living in Paris.

These documents show the existence of very influential organizations in England, consisting of members of the British government, conservative members of parliament, bankers, oil interests, and other business men buying up shares of expropriated Russian owners, newspaper editors, such as those of the Daily Mail, and other papers, representatives of various churches in England, mainly Anglican and catholic, the Association of British Owners, and with them all, lastly, Russian, Ukrainian, and Georgian white guardist organizations.

This organization is arranging campaigns in the press and in parliament and meetings under the slogan of strangling the Soviet Union, and "Immediately Out With the Reds."

In England instigators of attempts to rupture Anglo-Soviet relations were patronized by Ministers Churchill Birkenhead, and particularly Home Secretary Johnson Hicks, with whom Czarist Adventurers Sablin is maintaining connection.

In parliament, Locker Lampson and General Knox, Kolchak's closest companions in arms, are principal figures in the campaign.

In the report of August 26, 1926, Sablin pointed out he had achieved considerable success, in his anti-Soviet work, owing to the participation of Russian white guards in the elections, supporting the conservatives, confidential co-operation with Home Secretary Hicks, and lastly, participation in the struggle against the general strike, when the whiteguards were active as a volunteer strikebreaking organization, wherefore Hicks expressed "sincere gratitude."

The defeat of the strike creates, in Sablin's opinion, the most favorable conditions for an anti-Soviet campaign for which English oil business men with Dettterding at their head, advanced money.

On the twenty-second of December, Sablin reported that "the restoration of independent Georgia" was the favorite idea of English and American oil and financial magnates who will assign very big sums for "the separation of Georgia from the Soviet Union."

Sablin supplies information in regard to the Soviet Union to the leader of the anti-Soviet campaign, Locker-Lampson and his other English friends who publish the materials in the English Press. Besides this, the white guards fabricate literature against the Soviet Union, among which is the leaflet "Destruction of the British Empire," by a Valentinoff Lange.

How strong the white guardist influence on the British government really is may be judged from Sablin's report that the Czarist Diplomatic Embassy has been gradually regaining the use of de facto rights, and is meeting de facto recognition from part of the British authorities.

To ensure better contact, representatives of both the Anglician and the catholic churches and the Russian white guardists organized their own Christian young men and women.

The British people, through fascists, conservatives, oil men and business men of England are becoming the plaything in the hands of a miserable handful of Czarist flunkeys, with whom members of the British cabinet are maintaining direct connection.

Expel Furriers This Week; Program

A. F. L. Bosses to Thunder Excommunication

By HELEN BLACK.

Open warfare on the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union is scheduled to begin this week, according to the announcement made by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor following the expulsions of delegates from the Central Trades and Labor Council on Thursday night.

The Fur Workers' Union must get rid of Communists, Green says; and the arbitrary and illegal method of last Thursdays' expulsions, made upon the command of the federation president, indicates that the next move in the attack upon the furriers will be nothing constitutional.

The furriers themselves are "prepared for anything," they state. Bearing in mind the way that President Green and the International union officials used every sort of despicable weapon in their efforts to break the successful fur strike of last spring, they are on guard now against the present attempts to smash the union.

Billed for Wednesday.

From all sources comes the rumor that the battle will begin on Wednesday, after the patriotic leaders of the American Federation of Labor have celebrated the birth of the first American revolutionist, George Washington. Not to be caught napping, the members of the Furriers Joint Board are ready today to meet whatever assailants may arrive with notices of suspension, or expulsion, or discharge, or what not. It is understood that the opening of the battle will be similar to that in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, but it is possible all formalities may be dispensed with.

In spite of the detailed story recently published by the fur merchant, Motty Eitingon, showing that it had been the fur manufacturers who so stubbornly prolonged the fur strike and refused even to discuss terms of settlement, President Green has the audacity in his latest statement to say,

SHANGHAI LABOR IN HUGE STRIKE TO HELP ADVANCING CANTONESE

Labor Strikes at Foe's Base As Koumintang Armies Sweep on in Victorious March

BULLETIN.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20.—Reports have reached this city that Eugene Chen and British Charge Owen O'Malley today signed the agreement on which they have been working for weeks. Negotiations were recently broken off, but the smashing victory of the people's army forced resumption of the parley.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20.—A general strike has been declared in this city ostensibly to celebrate the victory won by the nationalist government troops over the forces of Sun Chuan Fang, but actually to strike a vital blow at the heart of Sun's base of operations.

Approximately 100,000 workers downed tools in answer to the call for a cessation of labor issued by the leaders of the Shanghai labor unions.

Daily Worker Cuts Special Attacking of President Bill Green

"The DAILY WORKER has moved to New York."

This was the alarm sounded by reactionaries at the gathering meeting of the Central Trade Union Thursday night.

Communications from the mighty "Bill" Green himself, beat the tocsins announcing that America's labor daily is now in the nation's chief city, ready to carry on the battle for militant working class activity.

Green's letter, however, was an missive of welcome. "Beware," he is arued, "of the Communists. New York is now the center of their activities."

Green's comments on The DAILY WORKER and the Communists were referred to the executive committee for appropriate action.

PROGRESSIVES FEAR WAR ON LATIN AMERICA

Hearing on Shipstead Resolution

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Before a sub-committee of the senate committee on foreign relations, on Feb. 16, witnesses testified in support of the Shipstead resolution forbidding the federal government to put its sanction on, or influence behind, any foreign concessions or investments of American citizens.

Jose Miguel Bilarmo, of the Mexican Chamber of Commarce, declared that American investors in Mexico pose as members of a superior race, backed by the military power of the United States. He said they make trouble in international relations by claiming fantastic sums to be their "investment" in properties down there, when in fact their actual investments are small and these huge sums represent their inflated hopes of future profits. He testified that all American investments in Mexican oil properties amount to only $224,000,000, contrasted with the $3600,000,000 claimed for them by Moody's Manual. The smaller sum is the official estimate published by the Mexican government department dealing with them.

Secretary Kellogg has sent to the senate a list of these American oil operators in Mexico, demanded a Norris resolution adopted some weeks ago. The progressives hope to use this to show that a handful of lawless interests in this country have been the petted favorites of American foreign policy in this hemisphere. They fear, however, that when congress adjourns on March 4 the Coolidge-Mellon-Kellogg answer to today will turn into ugly attacks on Mexico and Central America.

Fenga Said Ruined in Moscow Walks a Pale of Foreign Missionaries

PEKING, Feb. 20.—There is no hope for General Feng Yu-hsiang, according to two American and two British missionaries who have been in the former "christian general's" vicinity for some time.

The missionaries declare that Feng is now "thoroughly Bolshevized" and seems impervious to the exhortations of the missionaries. In fact the noted army leader is sometimes incensed when he listens to those fellows going through their capers.

"Moscow is a damnable hole",said one of the British missionaries. "Feng was not like that at all before he visited the Red Capital."

Fatal Fire Starts Row; City Attorney Defends Fire Trap Proprietor

By HOWARD HARLAN.
(Worker Correspondent.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal. (By mail).—Official Frisco is greatly worked up over our building ordinances.

The health department, the board of public works and the fire department have been exchanging sharp words all this week over the construction and maintenance of buildings within the city limits. The case has been taken to the board of supervisors and an acrimonious debate has resulted.

Result of Fire.

The whole trouble originatedin a recent fire that broke out in one of the many tenement houses, and which resulted in the death of two Italian workers.

This building, which housed over 150 families, in the Latin quarter, for the past twenty years was found on investigation to be absolutely unfitted for human habitation as well as a menace to the health and safety of the whole neighborhood.

These facts were consequently immediately after the fire condemned and fire department officials, who were cognizant of the conditions, would have prohibited the erection of such a menace to the community.

But civic politics was utilized to obviate the clause pertaining to safety, and one of the worst fire traps in the city made its appearance and remained for all these years.

Many times in the course of this period, civic improvement bodies protested to the supervisors against the maintenance of this building, but nothing definite was done. They considered it to be safe enough until someone was killed.

Committee Investigated.

After the recent blaze a committee was sent to investigate, and this group reported that more than 150 tenants were living in the upper stories of the building, the lower floors being definite was done. They considered it to be safe enough until someone was killed.

There were gas leakages in more than fifty apartments, the fire escapes, where such existed at all,were insufficient to accommodate the occupants of the place. The sanitary conditions were terrible, and a number of cases of disease resulted in recent months.

Building Condemned.

The health department immediately condemned the building, while the public works board tacitly acquiescents. The owner of the place—one of our wealthy lawyer landlords—appeared before the board of supervisors with a letter from the city attorney protesting against the condemnation of his property, and threatening legal reprisal in case the order was executed. So the fat is in the fire right.

It must be interesting to some of our citizens to know why it takes our civic managers over twenty years to find out what hundreds of persons knew all the time—that the tenements were an eye-sore to the community, and not fit for human beings to live in. The death of two common laborers, and the maiming of a score of others, was necessary to awaken an interest in a matter that should have been attended to before the structure was erected.

Bosses' Breach of City Agreement Ties Up Work on Phila. Bldg.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—The new 16-story building at Filbert and Juniper Sts. is deserted since last week when the Building Trades Council of Philadelphia called out on strike all the trades affiliated with this body, on the breaking of the city agreement that calls for all union labor to be employed by municipal works.

Back through pressure of the Freeland-Kendrick - Charlie Hall combine, known as the City Hall Gang, the general contractors, George Fuller Company, was forced to sublet a contract to sub-contractor Connully, who is unfair to labor.

Despite the fact that Mayor Kendrick brought promises at the Labor Day celebration of the A. F. of L. at Sesqui Centennial Stadium, that only union labor will be employed on all municipal work during his administration, he has not done one thing to settle this strike, which is going on for more than one week.

It will be up to the men on strike to really put up a fight and win.

FLAT JANITORS HEAD PASSES AWAY IN CHICAGO

Quesse Reactionary and Extremely Patriotic

CHICAGO (FP).—Wm. F. Quesse, president, Building Service Employes Intl. Union, and president of the Chicago Flat Janitors Union which he had organized, died of cancer Feb. 16. He had been a growing power in the Chicago and Illinois organized labor movements and was more or less closely involved with the political organization of Gov. Len Small. His place at the head of the Chicago flat janitors is taken temporarily by Ald. Oscar Nelson, also member of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Among Quesse's pecu culiarities was an elaborate argument to building owners in Detroit that recognition of his union would be an effective antidote to the growth of Bolshevism in America. He took the position that union conditions bring contentment to workers and that contentment provides a sterile field for theories of social change.

William F. Quesse was an outstanding figure in the "gas pipe" section of the Chicago trade union movement. He was not a frequent attendant at the meetings of the Chicago Federation of Labor: in fact he regarded the federation with more or less contempt. He was an important cog in the Lundin Small state machine and hence took care to attend the annual conventions of the Illinois State Federation of Labor.

Quesse looked with undisguised hostility on all efforts to organize the workers in a Labor Party. His methods were "safe, sane and conservative." He peddled the influence of his union to whatever capitalist political group paid best or had most influence. He could be depended on to cing the changes on the latest "red menace" and though illiterate, broke frequently into the columns of the capitalist press with patriotic exhortations. That a guerilla labor leader like Quesse, at the head of the flat janitors should be asked to serve on dominating influence in Chicago labor circles is an indication of the low level to which the trade union movement has fallen in this city which was able to boast, only recently of having the most progressive trade union leadership in the United States.

Quesse's demise leaves a gap in the "gas pipe" leadership that should draw out the ambitions of several ambitious persons who know a good thing when they see it. Oscar Nelson, democrat politician and vice-president of the C. F. of L., stepped into Quesse's shoes, but his tenure may only be temporary. A possible candidate for Quesse's mantle is Robert Fitchie of the milk wagon drivers, a man of elephantine proportions and infinitesimal brain cavity.

Shanghai Strike Ties Up Foreign Industries

Electrical plants, tramways and the postoffice were tied up tight. Pickets are posted out" the general postoffice.

The imperialists are arming the so-called "volunteer corps" with machine guns.

Fall of City Near.

It is now apparent that the fall of the city to the Kuomintang Army is imminent.

News reached here today that Chang-Tso-Lin, the Manchurian bandit general, is begging Wu Pei Fu to prevent his generals from attacking the Manchurian soldiers. Chang is also urging any agreement in his much advertised drive on Hankow.

Foreign Warships Ready.

More than twenty foreign warships are lying in the Whangpo River off Shanghai. Five of those are American.

The southern forces are now within fifty miles of this city. Sun's men are completely demoralized and it is reported that Sun is making preparations to flee to Japan.

A Japanese cruiser and four destroyers were reported to be on the way here.

The number of soldiers now under the nationalist government's banner is estimated in the vicinity of 1,000,000.

The lecture will be held under the auspices of the Workers School of Newark.

The American Junkers Threaten to Organize Third Party for 1927

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

INTEREST concerning the Mc-Nary-Haugen Farm Relief Bill now centers about the fate it will receive at the hands of President Coolidge.

That interest, however, is pushed somewhat into the background by the claim that Coolidge's veto of this bill, now passed by both houses of congress, will stimulate the organization of a third party for the 1928 election.

The kind of a party that those who make this threat have in mind is not kept in the dark. It is quickly revealed by the statement that the two available candidates for presidents on such a third party ticket are Frank O. Lowden and Charles G. Dawes. Our readers should be thoroly familiar with both of these gentlemen, prized worthies of the ruling class.

The third party threat is supposed to originate with Henry Wallace, of Iowa, owner of the former secretary of agriculture, Coolidge's agricultural accountry paradise, now hails from Iowa.

Wallace states that if President Coolidge vetoes the farm bill for speech at the republican party's house not prepared next year with all a South, of New York running on the democrat ticket, and the farm states of the West would go into the field with a third party ticket headed by one of its two favorite sons.

Such a threat can hardly be taken seriously. It does not require deep seeing brought to bear on coolidge, in an effort to frighten him into signing the bill, or permitting it to become a law by failure to take any action on it either way during the ten days allowed him for deliberation.

It can be taken for granted that Coolidge is too loyal to the great capitalists of the East to pay much attention to what Wallace has to say.

Yet the promise of a farm revolt headed by Lowden or Dawes is depressing to some extent. Lowden is a multi-millionaire, a "gentleman" farmer. He is not only a corn grower in Illinois and a cotton grower in Alabama, but, as head of the Pullman Co., he also farms Pullman porters, exploiting them to the limit. Dawes is no farmer at all, a gentleman of leisure, he is a plain Chicago banker, crooked as they make them, as the Lorimer scandal revealed. What kind of a farm revolt could either one of this worthy pair lead? Surely it's struggle of the rich farmers, the American junkers, against the finance capitalists of the East.

In other countries the junkers play a prominent role in capitalist politics. They are among the most reactionary, if not the ultra-reactionists, clericals and monarchists. Dawes breathed the spirit of this junker conservatism when he organized the "Minute Men of the Constitution," an embryo fascist organization that has been permitted, to lapse as a red-baiting outfit. But it can quickly be revived as occasion demands.

With the industrialization of agriculture and the development of increasingly large farms, this American junker class is bound to grow and to demand expression. There is here developed an identity of interest between the owner of the million dollar wheat farm of the North and the overlord of the restored great cotton plantations of the South. It is the common interest of the big wheat, corn, hog, cotton, rice and tobacco raisers, that greased the way for the passage of the McNary-Haugen Farm Relief Bill, from which the great masses of farm workers and tenant farmers will not benefit.

Such a junker third party may crystallize at some distant date. But the threat of its organization for next year's election can hardly frighten the old guard in the republican party sufficiently to have any effect on the fate of the McNary-Haugen Bill at the white house this week.

Such a junker third party, parading as a party of protest, must not be confused with the struggle for independent political action of the city workers and poor farmers under the standards of the labor party.

The junker landlords will get their allies among such outdone west industrialists and bankers, whose interests run counter to those of Wall Street's great financiers.

The poor farmer, tenant and mortgage, with the municipal workers, workers' parties and find their allies among the workers in industry, in the common struggle of a united working class. The growth of this alliance will send shivers of fear up and down the spines of both the Coolidge-Mellon crowd and the Dawes-Lowden outfit. Against the junker third party and all the other parties of capitalism the united, independent class power of the workers and farmers is the Labor Party.

Taxi Drivers Strike To Renew Agreement Guaranteeing $4 Pay

BOSTON, (FP).—Efforts of business agent Frank J. Gallagher of Taxicab Drivers' Union 126 to secure settlement with the Town Taxi Co., are fruitless to date. John T. Rockett, president of the firm, refuses to deal with the union and insists that the men negotiate individually. Uniformed police accompany strike breakers taking cabs out.

Drivers of Local 126 are striking for renewal of the agreement giving them a guaranteed wage of $4 a day for 8½ hours, and 55 cents an hour overtime. Business agent John J. Fenton of the Teamsters' Local 66 and business agent John J. Kearney of the Cooks and Waiters' Union 34 are aiding the strike committee.

Fenley Plans Tour Of Coal Fields

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Feb. 20.—Mayor C. E. F. Hetrick today sent telegrams to Senator Walter Edge and Congressman Stewart Appleby of New Jersey, suggesting the war veterans legislative committee re-establishment of a 400 bed hospital in Asbury Park for convalescent soldiers.

Lewis Again Offers Aid To Coal Barons to Seattle, during the sweating of Dunne after the 1924 convention of the United Mine Workers, that all the general statements are correct and proves the contention made by Th. DAILY WORKER, i.e., that the officialdom of U. M. W. A. always takes the initiative in the evasion drive against the Communists and other left wing workers.

Every date further that Communists had tried to set up a "dual union" in the Pittsburgh district, a charge made at the recent Indiana convention by the Lewis machine.

His statements on these two points are as follows:

Record Sum.

"In the Seattle convention of the American Federation of Labor the following year, Lewis forced the late Samuel Gompers into agreeing in a resolution assailing Dunne, who sat as a delegate from Montana, on the grounds that as a Communist he was seeking the capture or destruction of the federation. Gompers opposed expulsion on the ground that it would make a martyr of Dunne.

Boring From Within.

"The Communists at that time were trying 'boring from within' tactics in the Pittsburgh district where an attempt was made to set up a dual miners' organization."

In the National Edition of The DAILY WORKER for January 24, we published a facsimile of a letter from William Feeney to William Z. Foster which refutes the charge that Communists were trying to organize a secession movement of coal miners in the Pittsburgh district and proves that the striking miners of this district were deserted by the Lewis machine in 1922.

The facsimile of the Feeney letter is published today in our city edition in connection with the story of the Lewis exposure relative to the Communist International.

FINALLY STOP HEFLIN'S TALK ON CATHOLICS

Senator Accused Them Of Fomenting War

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—For the first time in years, the parliamentary rules of the senate were invoked this afternoon to end a bitter religious controversy between Senators Heflin (D) of Alabama, and Bruce (D) of Maryland, which apparently was widening a breach within the democratic ranks.

A point of order by Senator Dill of Washington sent him to his seat.

Charges Plot Denied.

Yesterday Heflin, in a remarkable tour of oratorical stamina, held the floor for three hours and a half, while piling up evidence in support his charge that the Knights of Columbus and the catholic hierarchy are conspiring to force the United States into an invasion of Mexico after congress adjourns.

Raps Own Party.

The bitter debate that took place during and following Heflin's speech indicated that the Alabama senator's interest was rather a religious than a political one, but the gallery heard with interest his charges of war mongering.

During his speech Heflin rebuked his democratic colleagues.

RED BAITER SEES CHANCE TO CLAIM TRIP EXPENSES

Promised to Pay Fare; Changes His Mind

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20.—The recent expose of the grafting painters' union officials in New York prompts me to send you the following:

In August, 1925, Local Painters' Union 1158 recalled Brother Fred Harris as a delegate to go to the Brotherhood convention at Montreal under the pretense that the funds were on hand to finance such a trip. The real reason for this action was, however, that Harris was a Left Winger and not acceptable to the officialdom. At any rate, this he had been elected by a unanimous vote, the red scare and the pretense of lack of funds kept Harris from attending the convention.

Enter Morris.

However, another member, Gerald Morris, had edged his way to the front and offered to pay his fare to represent the local at the convention and report back to the members without charging Local 1158 a single dime.

Morris had previously pretended support to the left wing, but ever since the attempt to recall Harris as a delegate, had completely turned around and has now become a professional red baiter. He had sought at the initiative the support of the anti-Harris and finally, carrying the credentials for Harris in his pocket, he sneaked off to Montreal.

Attacks Communists.

At the convention he made a rabbit attack against the Communists and gave orders opposed to the resolution introduced by Zausner, now exposed as a traitor, which resolution lines all workers up in mass action in the unemployment. Thus Morris became a hero overnight.

Heads Poverty.

Upon his return to San Francisco he pleaded poverty, quite his fare, which has been paid by the convention expense fund, returned for a fair margin of about $100, this being the difference between the regular train fare to the convention and the excursion rate charged by the railroads. However, Morris was feeling strong and was going to get paid for his service as a red baiter.

Morris In Expense Bill.

Since the treachery at that time was very low, Morris waited his time, but thought it opportune last Fall to start action. He then handed his local union an expense account for $200 for his trip to Montreal of the previous year, which he had boasted "claim" in weekly meetings. He got the dough, anyway.

CORRESPONDENCE FROM CANTON

By T. F. NAI.

Canton, China.

THE incident reported this week from Hankow is viewed here as a repetition of the events at Shanghai on May 30, 1925, and at Shakee on June 23. There are many expressions of regret that the authorities of the Hankow foreign concessions, which adjoin the Chinese city, could not have remained cool.

According to information received here, the regrettable incident resulting from the gathering of several hundred Chinese in front of the customs house in the Chinese city, not far from the entrance of the British concession. This crowd was listening to lecturers, who were probably exulting in the successes of the revolution and encouraging the people to do their utmost for China in order to free her from the subjugation of the unequal treaties. From the reports reaching here, many of which are conflicting, it appears that the British concession authorities decided that the crowd was dangerous and sent an armored car with armed marines to disperse the demonstrators. The coming of the car into the Chinese city infuriated the crowd and a melee resulted in which several Chinese were wounded, some fatally, some slightly, and in which two or three marines are also reported to have been wounded. There evidently was considerable roughness in the tactics used by the marines.

Thanks to the rapid and effective measures taken by the Chinese authorities, the incident stopped at that point. The Chinese authorities did their best to pacify the people and requested them to remain quiet until negotiations, which had been immediately started with the foreign authorities, could be completed. There was, however, a great excitement throughout the city, in large part due to the menacing concentration of warships, mainly British, in the harbor. The case was wondered if the Wanghsien incident was to be repeated. The places of the people were partly calmed by the withdrawal of the marines from the concessions to boats in the harbor and the disarmament of the volunteers.

The consequences of the incident depend on the negotiations between the nationalist and foreign authorities. These negotiations are going on at the time of writing so that no report of their results can be given. There is a general feeling here that the commander at Hankow probably will not use the same ruthless measures employed at Shanghai, because of the presence of the nationalist authorities at Hankow.

Against the British Memorandum.

The nationalist government is following nationalist opinion in its protest against the British memorandum, which was recently handed to the representatives of the powers signatory to the Washington Treaty, by his note to Secretary of State Kellogg. Mr. Eugene Chen, nationalist minister for foreign affairs, warned the United States Government against approval of the proposals contained in the British memorandum regarding the immediate collection of the two and a half per cent surtax.

In the course of this note he says that in spite of the sentiments expressed, "the real meaning of the proposal is that two-thirds of the new revenue will go to our political enemies, who with war chests replenished will be able to continue the civil war that bleeds the nation and delays the liberation of China." Mr. Chen further states that "if the views and sentiments expressed in the British declaration leave the nationalist mind unmoved, it is because they elook a policy of a decisively menace and danger to the speedy advancement of the cause of Chinese nationalism."

The Chinese press is unanimously against the proposals of the memorandum. Even the newspapers in the north have commented unfavorably and it is interesting to note that this unfavorable comment has found an echo in the Hongkong British papera which are exceedingly dubious about the wisdom and morality of the move.

Putting aside the reports which have been confirmed, denied and reaffirmed, regarding disaccord in the ranks of the Fengtien leaders, we note that the arrival of Chang Tso-lin in Peking has not been followed by any important changes. The marshal entered the city with great pomp and ceremony—all of it specifically ordered and exacted by the people—but nothing has happened.

The military expedition, however has started and seems to be divided into two fields of action. Chang Tsung-chang, military governor of Shangtung, is reported to have brought troops to Pukow, Sun Chuanfang, military governor of Chekiang, has apparently been put in charge of the defense of Shanghai and the surrounding districts. There have been no reports of serious engagements with either army. The nationalist forces are concentrating in the vicinity of Hangchow.

According to information received from the Yangtze, formidable nationalist movements are developing everywhere throughout central China. There has been a growing opposition to the coming of Fengtien troops into Chekiang, Kiangsu and Anhui. The people of these three provinces seem to be united in their resistance to any authority within their boundaries by Shantung or Shukien elements. This opposition is an evident deterrent in the uniting of forces for the defense of the lower Yangtze valley.

Nationalist Flag on Customs House.

The Kuomintang nationalist flag was hoisted over the local customs house on January 1. It has been reported that the Canton foreign customs official probably secured the authority for raising the flag from the general inspector of customs in Peking, but this has not been confirmed. Whether it is true or not the fact remains that the flag is flying and that is an indication of the growing realization on the part of foreigners that nationalism is a living force and a political reality. It is a contemptuously small incident but considered of great significance. It was served as a further encouragement to the Chinese in their struggle for independent government.

Throughout the country this week, reports of general conditions are encouraging. Reorganization work is going on everywhere in the territory under the national at control and the influence of the nationalist movement is sweeping irresistably into the provinces not yet flying the Kuomintang banner.

COOLIDGE BOOSTS FIRESTONE MOVE IN WEST AFRICA

Rubber Magnate Expects Big Lean Soon

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The grip of the British rubber monopoly which has roused the ire of American tire manufacturers will be broken in five to ten years, Harvey S. Firestone, tire magnate, predicted tonight after a conference with President Coolidge.

From $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 will be poured into the pioneer firestone plantation in Liberia in ten years, Firestone said. The million-acre development now under way, he estimated, will employ 350,000 men.

Coolidge Interested.

"President Coolidge is very much interested in the rubber situation," said Firestone. "He has given us every assistance possible."

Firestone lunched with the president. Later he outlined his rubber plans to Secretary of Commerce Hoover.

These plans will be amplified when Firestone and his son, Harvey, Jr., who returned recently from the new plantation, meet their Liberian manager at Miami, Fla. Firestone left for that city tonight, planning to meet Thomas A. Edison, inventor, on the train. Henry Ford is to join them in Florida later.

"We are actually shipping to Akron 100,000 pounds of rubber a month from an earlier plantation we took over from a Liberian company," Firestone said. "This comes from a 2,000 acre tract.

"We have 10,000 acres cleared now, and 5,000 acres already planted. We have a 99-year concession for a million acres, under lease.

"Our aim is to get 20,000 acres planted this year, and then to increase this as fast as conditions permit."

"We get about 160 pounds more rubber per acre in Liberia than other plantations produce. We get this at eleven cents a pound, which means that we can put it down in Akron for fourteen cents a pound, against a present price of thirty eight cents and the peak last year of $1.22."

A new private American loan for Liberia, of about $5,000,000, will be floated this year, Firestone predicted. He denied his company was interested in this loan.

School Girl Posing As Russian Countess Kids Uppah Classes

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 20.—"Countess Irene Marie Ladjeff, of Russia," whose sophisticated manner and ability to speak French won attention and respect at the St. Francis Hotel here, where she enjoyed a brief stay, admitted reluctantly that she is Irene Asaka, 13 years old, of 80 Chestnut Street Kearny, N. J., a pupil in the eighth grade examinar school there. Her parents had reported to the police that she disappeared from home on Feb. 9, taking $80 with her.

When she was taken home by her parents today, Irene smiled knowingly, but would say nothing about her experience. She arrived at the hotel several days ago, and registered as the "Countess Irene Marie Ladieff, of Russia."

She met and talked with guests at the hotel, discussing her life in Russia, her flight to Austria to "escape the Bolshevik.," and her final decision to come to the United States.

She expressed compassion for members of the Russian nobility reduced to the necessity of finding jobs in restaurants and night clubs.

The U. S. Navy is always attempting long distance aeroplane flights over to some Latin American or Pacific territories—of course for the friendliest of all possible purposes, merely to get the lay of the land. But the planes, because of governmental incompetence have frequently fallen in the ocean, and left the plane crew stewing in tropic sunlight for days. This little auxiliary radio set has just been invented to call aid in such circumstances.

U. S. IS HEADED FOR VIOLATION OF WASHINGTON PACT

Flaunts Independence Of Chinese Nation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (FP).—Navy department chiefs announce that the 1,300 marines now crossing the Pacific on the transport Chaumont will be sent direct to Shanghai since the Nationalist armies are threatening to take that richest port of China.

If American marines follow the British in landing in Shanghai, under pretext of "protecting American lives and property", they will do an in direct violation of the Washington treaty of February 1922 which was signed by the representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Holland and Portugal, and by the China. It is the so-called guaranty of Chinese territory.

Article I of the treaty reads: "The Contracting Powers, other than China agree—

"(1) To respect the sovereignty, the independence, and the territorial and administrative integrity of China.

"(2) To provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China to develop and maintain for herself an effective and stable government.

"(3) To use their influence for the purpose of effectually establishing and maintaining the principle of equality of opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations throughout the territory of China.

"(4) To refrain from taking advantage of conditions in China in order to seek special rights or privileges which would abridge the rights of subjects or citizens of friendly states, and from countenancing action inimical to the security of such states."

The British have already torn up this treaty by landing troops in Shanghai—thereby violating the pledge to "respect the sovereignty of China at that port. President Coolidge appears on the way to follow their example. Foreseeing this, the Chinese delegation at Geneva has protested to the League of Nations against the British action. It mentions both the Washington treaty and Art. 10 of the League Protocol. That article requires that when one nation brings armed forces into the territory of a League nation against the will of the latter, all other League nations shall, ipso facto, be at war with the invader. In other words, all League nations are now bound to be at war with Great Britain.

What China is showing at Geneva is that the League pledges are as hypocritical and worthless as are the treaty pledges of the United States or Britain, when the big empires want to overawe a revolutionary movement of "buckward" cheap-labor peoples.

COOLIDGE AND KELLOGG MEET WORST DEFEATS

Collapse of Diplomacy Causes Use of Force

WASHINGTON.—Disappointed and annoyed by the failure of all parties to the Chinese civil war to reply to his proposal to exclude them from military occupation of the international settlement in Shanghai, and rejected as savior of Nicaragua, President Coolidge has met a third and crushing rebuff from France. Prestige of his state department is at the lowest ebb in its history. Secretary Kellogg is angry. The administration gives signs that it may try to save its face by seizing the whole of Nicaragua. Refuse to make comment on these rumors of occupation; he pointedly fails to deny them.

Proceed With Guns.

This is the situation as the Coolidge proposals for a naval limitation conference in Geneva are blown up by France, and as the British forces in China again threaten to take Shanghai. The only direction in which Coolidge diplomacy can proceed to make progress is in Nicaragua, under the muzzles of American guns.

Cal Shocked.

That Coolidge was shocked by the French refusal to attend a five-power parley on limitation of light cruisers and submarines, which would have been to the advantage of the Anglo-Fascist combination in the Mediterranean, is not disguised at the White House. The administration is not disappointed at the failure of the Geneva conference and spend half the summer in talking it over. That would have given the administration a lot of advertising as a peace agency at the moment when it might be policing Central America and threatening Mexico. Now the French have coolly told Washington that they stand for the discussion of all world problems through the league of nations. Coolidge realizes that Peru has turned a smart political trick it has taken away from America the Woodrow Wilson phrases, and has put Washington in the role of big political bully as well as that of international Shylock.

THIRD DEGREE TESTIMONY ENTIRELY UNRELIABLE, SAYS SCIENTIST WHO STUDIES SLEEPLESSNESS

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 20.—That the third degree is absolutely a failure as a method of getting confessions of any value from suspected criminals, and that the common form of third degree, keeping the suspect awake with constant nagging is the most unreliable way of obtaining information from him, is the contention of Dr. Johnson, special investigator of the phenomenon of sleep and sleeplessness.

Studies Insomnia.

Johnson is Senior Fellow in the Simmons Foundation for the study of sleep, at the Mellon Institute. At the head of a large staff of assistants, he has been studying for several years the activities and reactions of numerous subjects who permit him to experiment on them.

Part of his work is in relation to the most comfortable sort of bed, the length of time a person should sleep for maximum efficiency, etc. But he has also had to investigate the effects of lack of sleep on the mind processes, and finds that after being deprived of sleep for a certain length of time, the subject becomes as irresponsible as though drunken or insane, and very liable to suggestion. In this condition it is easy to get him to sign confessions of any crime, however, revolting.

"One method of extortion often used in the third degree," says Dr. Johnson, "is the continual nagging of the suspect for many hours and sometimes for days. Threats or personal abuse are not essential; the prisoner is simply not let alone at any time, not given a chance for sleep or rest. By this means he is quickly brought to the verge of physical exhaustion—a state in which delirium, the loss of a sense of responsibility and disregard of consequences are as prominent as they are in a state of alcoholic intoxication or other forms of narcosis.

Loses Character.

"Deprivation of rest is, in fact, one of the most severe forms of torture. If continued long enough the victim will resort to almost any end in order to relieve it. His behavior may become a travesty as that of a dope addict deprived of his drug. He will do anything, sign anything, and say almost anything that promises a chance to sleep. Confessions obtained under such circumstances should be regarded as obtained by torture. During the Middle Ages prisoners who were actually innocent confessed the crimes charged to them to gain removal from the rack, although confession brought death by hanging, burning or breaking on the wheel.

Dread The Test.

"In the recent experiments on deprivation of sleep at the University of Chicago subjects whose scientific and academic honor demanded their co-operation would try to slip away, under subterfuges, and steal a few moments of sleep. A colleague of mine who has undergone many long periods of experimental insomnia testifies that the discomforts he then suffers are almost indescribable and that his dread of future such experiments exceeds his dread of any other form of physical pain. In several battles during the civil war the commanding generals were unable to conduct operations because of their mental impairment resulting from fatigue and loss of sleep.

Become Insane.

"Our own observations indicate that after sufficient deprivation of sleep and rest a person is, at least at times, neither mentally nor morally responsible. Facts and confessions obtained under such circumstances should be given their proper values by the courts before which they are presented."

contributions made by the Wall Street directors of the Nicaragua railroad and bank to political campaign funds in the United States, and that this coercion is expected to lead to a dispute with Mexico which may lead to a pretext for war.

Titles to Land.

American investments in Mexico are not worth such a war of conquest of that country as would be required. But if Mexico were to be invaded, the Calles government, and a puppet government set, as has been done in Nicaragua and Haiti, the American corporations might be granted title to billions in land, minerals, forests, power sites and other wealth of the nation. What Porfirio Diaz did on a small way, when Americans had not discovered the riches of Mexico might be done wholesale by a pliant successor.

That is the stake in the game for overthrow of Calles and the Mexican constitution of 1917. Military occupation of Central America by the United States would encourage every attempt to pull down the Calles regime.

V. F. Calverton and Upton Sinclair are locked in battle over the momentous question: "Is monogamy desirable?" Whether it is or not, it is more or less inevitable as the Sullivan-Dempsey fiasco proved that the debate will attract more attention than an intellectual combat between those two more or less famous writers, let us say, on the question of "Socialism versus Communism." But all that both have to say on the question is not worth a farthing to the American working class. It's "a futile discussion."

The first president of the United States caught cold and fell into a fatal illness while planting thirteen trees, in honor of the thirteen colonies which became states. This is a photo of the last one alive, just after tree surgeons had filled it with a ton and a half of concrete, to preserve it a little longer.

COOLIDGE SAYS NOTHING ABOUT FIVE-DAY WEEK

Hears Green Explain It Doesn't Mean Much

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Coolidge, after talking over with President Green and Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor the question of the five-day week in industry, has decided to evade any statement on that subject.

That is why his mythical spokesman, when asked where he stands, replied that Coolidge has "not studied" it enough to give a worth-while opinion as to its effect on the welfare of working people.

He will, he says, be interested to see how it works out in the Ford plants, although he realizes that the Ford industry is peculiarly circumstanced, and that any results obtained for the shorter work-week in Ford factories may be no guide for other industries.

In short, Coolidge will not commit himself, in a time of industrial calm, to a proposal that may become the crux of a strike six months or a year hence.

Chinese May Declare Boycott on U. S. Goods

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—The Kou Min Tang organization of Philadelphia addressed a telegraphic protest against the dispatch of warships and submarines to China to Senator Borah, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee.

The telegram states that the United States government is dispatching troops and battleships to China as if a state of war existed between the two countries.

"Appreciating that you have made great efforts in the congress in championing a Chinese policy on the basis of equality and reciprocity, the protest continues, "we, on behalf of the Kuomintang at Philadelphia, beg to inform you that we absolutely protest against the action of the U. S. government in sending marines and gunboats to China, and that it will be ultimately resented in the form of boycotting American goods on the part of our people. Therefore we sincerely wish that in order to keep up the friendship between the two nations you will urge your government to immediately withdraw your marines and gunboats from China. Your prompt action to this effect will be highly appreciated.

VANDERBILT, HEIR OF RAIL MILLIONS NOW CHAMPION IDLER OF MANHATTAN

By HARRY FREEMAN.

We've had champ gum-chewers, coffee drinkers, channel swimmers and marathon dancers. We have with us today New York's champion clubman.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., has the dubious distinction of belonging to more classy clubs than any other bird whose income is drawn from rent, interest and profit. Cornelius belongs to seventeen organizations—and the Workers Party isn't one of them.

Vanderbilt's forebears raked in shekels from railroad building and real estate. They robbed and they pillaged—and they sweated, piling up the huge Vanderbilt fortune. Now, Cornelius, Sr., is interested in yachting, tennis and riding.

The interests of Cornelius, Sr., are indicated by the seventeen organizations of which he is a member. The Larchmont Yacht, Racquet and Tennis, New York Yacht, Turf and Field, Yale, Seawanhaka Yacht, and Corinthian Yacht Clubs are some of the organizations to which Vanderbilt belongs.

GREEN LIMITS PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS TALK

To Discuss Only 'Proper' Subjects' at Meet

WASHINGTON.—Answering skeptical inquiries from Latin American labor organizations as to whether the aggressions of the United States against Mexico, Nicaragua and Haiti are to be barred from discussion at its fifth congress in Washington in July next, the Pan-American Federation of Labor has again explained its position.

It quotes the declarations of its president, William Green, and the fundamental principles set forth when the federation was first organized.

"Only Labor Problems."

Green, in the call for the coming meeting, said: "We feel confident that the delegates will concentrate their efforts on questions that properly belong to a labor congress." He later said the dispute with Mexico should be arbitrated.

This may be interpreted as indicating that the Pan-American congress will not be allowed to do or say anything that will interfere with American conquests in Latin America. Such aggressions will be termed "political" as opposed to "questions that properly belong to a labor congress."

Dodged Issue Before.

Under Green's management, the Detroit convention of the American Federation of Labor permitted speakers from Latin American unions, but not federal them around with restrictions that their addresses were largely perfunctory. No solution of the Mexican problem was made there.

Federal Workers Union Ask Coolidge to Pass Bill Abolishing "Pull"

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20 (FP).—In a letter signed by its president Luther C. Steward, and its secretary treasurer, Gertrude M. McNally, the Natl. Federation of Federal Employes has given President Coolidge a clean cut statement of the immediate need for amendment of the civil service classification law.

This law was enacted in 1923 to standardize on the basis of duties performed the payment of federal employes outside the postal service. Postal employes were already classified. The law applied directly to jobs in the District of Columbia, but provided for a survey of positions in the field services in order that fair standard rates of pay for those jobs might later be enacted by congress.

"No Survey."

"Almost four years have elapsed," says the letter, "No survey has been made and no steps are being taken by the administering agency, the Personnel Classification Board, to carry out the will of congress in this respect. The result is that at the present time the different government establishments pay different salaries for the same kind of work performed under like conditions in the same community, often in the same federal building. . . . In the absence of classification, salary standardization and publicity there is no device to check the operation of sinister forces such as improper political, social, or religious influence. Favorites, performing simple duties are advanced in salary above those doing the real work of the government or they are assigned to duties they are not qualified to perform efficiently."

The president is asked to recommend to congress the prompt passage of the pending bill abolishing the Personnel Classification Board and transferring its functions to the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

FINANCIAL HELP IMPERATIVE NEED OF PASSAIC WORKERS—WAGENKNECHT

Relief Leader Gives Authoritative Review of Situation Resulting From Strike Settlements

Due to unfortunate errors in the composing room, statements of leaders of the Passaic Local of the United Textile Workers were omitted in an article in the February 18 issue of The DAILY WORKER concerning the mill situation.

The DAILY WORKER is glad to publish the following letter from Alfred Wagenknecht, relief chairman, explaining carefully the exact situation in Passaic today. Although regrettable errors occur occasionally in the editing of a daily newspaper, The DAILY WORKER is always anxious to make corrections. Here is Wagenknecht's letter:

"Our publicity director, Cyril V. Briggs, has called to the attention of both the union and the relief office your issue of February 18th, in which appears an edited news release regarding strike settlements in Passaic.

"Two very serious errors have been made in blue-penciling the news release we sent you. In the first place, you quote in full the speech by James Starr, vice president of the United Textile Workers, but blue-pencil the speeches made by strike organizers and union officials who have been in this struggle from its very inception, and whose speeches at the meeting here should have been featured by you rather than blue-pencilled.

"In the second place, you eliminated from the article all reference to the continued need for relief of the textile workers.

Many Still Out of Work.

"The exact situation in Passaic is as follows.

"First: strike settlement has taken place in all mills except the United Piece Dye works of Lodi. However, in all the mills, even in the first three that settled, where the most favorable terms were obtained, very few of the strikers have been reemployed, due to various circumstances.

"This means that although the strike is practically all over, we must still face the serious question of unemployment. As long as the textile workers are unemployed, they must be given relief, for we must tide these workers over this unemployed period if we are to be successful in building a union in Passaic.

"Second: there have been nearly one thousand strikers arrested during the struggle. Some of these cases are of a very serious nature, and entail, if conviction takes place, sentences of five to twenty years in prison. These strikers must be given the best defense possible, and their families must receive support while they lie in jail.

Support Needed Now.

"Third: sixteen thousand strikers have struggled one year in order to win a union. The struggle has been against capitalists numbering among the richest in the United States, employers who stand at the forefront as advocates of company unionism. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent for relief and organization purposes with the one object in view of wiping out the sixteen thousand textile workers a union.

"Every worker in the labor movement knows that the most critical moment in a struggle of unorganized workers is the moment immediately after settlement. It is then that all forces must be put to work, in order to secure as large unions as possible, in all the mills.

"The question is, shall this year's struggle and the hundreds of thousands of dollars invested go for naught? Shall all this immense amount of activity and suffering be lost for the want of a few additional thousands of dollar for the purpose of building the union?

"We therefore call upon you to acquaint your readers at once with the situation in Passaic, and ask them to assist us in giving bread and milk to the thousands of unemployed strikers and their families; help us defend the hundreds of arrested strikers; help us build the union.

"Fraternally yours,
Alfred Wagenknecht,
Relief Chairman."

UNEMPLOYMENT ON INCREASE IN ILLINOIS AS 36,000 FACTORY WORKERS LOSE THEIR JOBS; EMPLOYMENT DROPS 8½ PER CENT SINCE 1923

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

Unemployment is the keynote of the review for January issued by the Illinois department of labor. The report shows the most serious situation since January 1922, with unemployment in Chicago approaching critical levels.

"Ranks of the unemployed in Illinois," says the department, "were swelled in January by a further decrease of 1.9% in the number of workers on factory payrolls. This decrease followed declines in the 3 previous months, so that the level of industrial operations is now 5.1% below that of September last year. In only one other year out of the past 5 years has there been a decrease of this size in the December to January figures."

36,000 Since September.

It means that since September more than 36,000 Illinois factory workers have lost their jobs. Illinois factories today offer 8½% less employment than in January 1923, a decline which means loss of jobs in the past 5 years by more than 60,000 industrial workers. The department continues:

"This 4-month's decline means that there were fewer men at work in Illinois factories in January 1927 than in any January in the past 5 years. With the exception of the last 6 months of 1924 the current month's index shows fewer men working in factories than in any month since April 1922."

.3 Workers for 1 Job.

The free employment offices of the state report a large surplus of workers. The ratio of applicants to the number of jobs available has been steadily rising since September. In that month there were 123 applicants for every 100 jobs, in October 127, in November 140, in December 155, while in January there were 214 applicants for every 100 jobs, the highest figure recorded in the last 5 years. In Chicago the ratio was 290 which means nearly 3 applicants for every job.

The applicants per 100 open jobs in various cities in January compared with December were:

Applicants per 100 open jobs	Jan. 1927	Dec. 1926
Aurora	153	149
Moline-Rock Island	139	138
Chicago	290	172
Bloomington	127	116
Cicero	217	181
Danville	154	138
Decatur	127	110
East St. Louis	145	115
Joliet	218	185
Peoria	176	160
Quincy	211	158
Rockford	106	84
Springfield	107	106

These figures indicate roughly the extent of unemployment in the industrial centers of the state. Only in Rockford do there appear to be enough jobs to go round.

Glass Workers Hard Hit.

In January employment declined in 4 major Illinois industrial groups as follows: stone clay and glass products 7.1%, metals machinery and conveyances 2%, wood products 5% and food products 3¾%. There were increases in fur and leather goods, chemicals, oils and paints, printing and paper goods, textiles and clothing.

Outside the manufacturing groups coal mining which had been showing unusual activity started down hill again. The department reports that "one large mine employing over 800 men which was opened in October was again closed in January. Present indications are that other mines may follow this example in the next few weeks."

Clemenceau Sulks in Hidden Village; Hopes His Crimes Forgotten

PARIS, Feb. 20.—Georges Clemenceau, "The Tiger," the war maker, the man responsible for the "cordon sanitaire" by which the allies tried to "starve out the Bolshevik Revolution, is in practical hiding, according to his statement to an American newspaper correspondent.

"Let the world forget me," he said with a sweep of his hand as he recognized the correspondent. "It's all the same to me. Since my letter to President Coolidge on debts I have come out of my retreat only to say a last farewell to my old friend, Gustave Geffrey, and to accompany to their final resting place the remains of Claude Monet. That is enough activity for one season."

A defective gas tube leading to a heater caused the death of Mrs. Margaret Mayer, 47, of 2504 Summerfield St., Ridgewood, Queens.

German Rail Workers Protest Planned Layoff

(FP).—German railway unionists are protesting the plans of the management of the state railway system to lay off 14,000 shopmen, says a message from the International Transport Workers' Federation headquarters. The 1927 operating program would reduce the shopmen's force from 114,000 to 100,000. Latest word says the management is offering to compromise with a reduction of only 5,500.

Accidents on British railways have greatly increased since the number of maintenance of way men have been reduced, the federation learns. And a railroad wreck in Holland where several persons were killed recently is attributed to defective roadbeds—the result of an insufficient maintenance force.

Labor Sports Union Prevents Company's Game of Fooling Men

CHICAGO, (FP).—While trade unions pay almost no attention to sports as a labor function, Chicago employers are everywhere cultivating this activity among their workers, the Labor Sports Union declares.

"Almost every good-sized store, bank or factory has a girls' basketball team," the union says, "while large plants like the Western Electric have quite a number. Wieboldt's department stores have teams which compete not only with each other but with other stores and factories. Even the ushers in the Balaban & Katz movie theatres have their regular athletics. The bosses hope to create the same spirit of loyalty to the firm among the employes as is created for a school by its athletics."

The Labor Sports Union issues a sports press service from its office at 453 W. North Ave., Chicago. It is distributed free to labor papers.

CHICAGO MAYOR CLAIMS CREDIT WITHOUT CAUSE

Workers Party Points To Wretched Schools

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Mayor Dever in opening his campaign as the democratic nominee for mayor spoke on the advance made by the public school system in the last four years. If the facts in the case really determine the election of Chicago's next mayor both the republicans and democrats will have slim chances for victory on this issue.

An authoritative statement tells us that there is a seat shortage of 60,468 in Chicago's public schools. There are 425 tin can portables (tarpine boxes) in use and about 20,000 students are being crowded around double session shifts or half day schools.

In the face of this deplorable situation, Mayor Dever is trying to make political capital out of the addition of eight new schools to the 1927 building program a program which will hardly make a dent in the seat shortage.

While Dever is busy congratulating himself on this issue, the candidates of the three republican factions (tri-tiger) Thompson, Deneen and Dever are busy throwing personal filth at each other, to give a real thought to this vital problem.

The cure that is proposed in some circles, and that is being used in the schools, is roundly condemned by the local reform platform of the Workers (Communist) Party. Platoon is nothing but a high sounding word for standardizing the teaching method, in which the children have to pass around from class room to class room. Under this system, children will be turned out from the schools like sausages from a sausage machine.

The solution to the seat shortage problem is a wholesale program for the building of new schools to take the place of the old "fire-trap" buildings, the "sardine cans," the double session shifts and the platoon system. This can only be realized if the taxation of the millionaire corporations and the capitalists is enforced.

The capitalist parties will never tackle this. Only thru the unity of the labor forces behind a labor election program can the seat shortage be overcome. The Workers (Communist) Party is calling for a united labor ticket in championing this move. In the meantime, it has placed its own candidate in the field, C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party. All workers are urged to sign the Workers Party petitions, to stay away from democratic and republican primaries, to raise the question in the workers' organizations of a united labor ticket, and to register on March 15 for the general elections, April 5.

Discussion will follow the report.

Newark Electricians Ask $2 a Day Increase

NEWARK, N. J. (FP).—Newark electrical workers (Local 52) ask $2 a day increase in pay when their agreement expires May 1. Three months notice has been given the employers. The new scale would be $12 a day minimum.

The Manager's Corner

A STRENGTH-GIVING GET-TOGETHER.

From time to time the United States Steel Corporation calls its directors together to celebrate. Amid much conviviality and bootleg Judge Gary usually recounts to the delight of the assembled stiff-shirts the amount of loot which has been extracted from the toiling slaves in the steel mills. The affair resembles nothing so much as the wild orgies of the Roman conquerors celebrating the cruel despoilation of some peaceful community.

On Monday evening, February 21, the evening before Washington's Birthday, the Daily Worker Builders of New York have arranged a banquet, the first one held since the paper moved to the great metropolis. There will be no stiff shirts at this affair, a proletarian attire and spirit will prevail. There will be no gloating over the ill-gotten gain wrung from the blood and sweat of thousands of toilers. Instead there will be a real get-together of the participants in a vital co-operative enterprise, a get-together of the most loyal and energetic members of the vast family of DAILY WORKER supporters, comprising workers from every walk of life, writers and speakers who have been closely identified with the radical labor movement.

Affairs like these are an important factor in building up that element which is most vital with a working class paper—morale. To the same extent that the Red Army's strongest asset is the conviction in the mind of every soldier that he is engaged in a struggle for a just cause, to the same extent a labor newspaper needs a similar spirit among its readers and supporters. To the same extent that the reactionary Sun Chuan-Fang was summarily defeated owing largely to the complete demoralization of his troops, to the same extent will the influence of the capitalist press be overshadowed by the superior morale and confidence enjoyed by the labor press. Banquets and get-togethers of this nature build the elements which make a working class newspaper. They build morale. They build loyalty and strength. Boston and New York are trying them. Other cities should do likewise.—BERT MILLER.

LITHUANIAN FASCIST ATROCITIES ROUSING WORLD WIDE PROTEST; AUTHORS SEND CABLE

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Aroused by the reports of drum-head court martials and executions of Lithuanian working class leaders by the new fascist government, a group of prominent labor leaders and publicists, including Upton Sinclair, James Maurer, Theodore Debs, Victor Berger have joined in a fiberstorm of protest to the Lithuanian president, A. Smetona, demanding the abolition of the arbitrary punishments and civil trial for all the accused, according to an announcement made today at the national office of International Labor Defense.

Many Names Signed.

The protest message is signed by Upton Sinclair, internationally known novelist; Bishop William Montgomery Brown; James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, Congress-man Victor L. Berger of Milwaukee; Theodore Debs; Dr. John Lapp, of the National Catholic Welfare Council, Scott Nearing, author and lecturer, Duncan McDonald, former president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor; David Starr Jordan, the world famous educator; H. W. L. Dana, of the Boston Trade Union College; Robert Morse Lovett, of the University of Chicago and editor of the New Republic, Carl Haessler, managing editor of the Federated Press; David Rhys Williams of the Unitarian Church of Chicago; Ralph Chaplin, the I. W. W. poet; Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, national chairman International Labor Defense; Robert Dunn, of the A. C. L. U.; Ellen Hayes, of Wellesley College; Edward C. Wentworth, and Alice Stone Blackwell.

Anti-Radical Drive.

The results of the fascist coup in Lithuania have been an intensification of the drive against the radical and labor movement. As soon as the blacksmiths took over the government, four of the leading Communists in the country were summarily executed. These were Karl Pojella, Kasis Gedris, Josef Greifenberger and Rafael Tchorny, one of whom had been active in the Communist movement in the United States a few years ago.

Fascists Torture.

News is now received that in Kovno, eight Communists are being tried by court martial, in Schauleu, enothar eight, in Poneviesh, six Communists and in Memel six more. All of these are in danger of execution. In Kovno, the fascists have begun torturing the political prisoners. One, Glowatski, who had already been tried in 1925 and 1926, had been tortured with especial cruelty and his life is feared for. Scores of others are in a similar position, although they have committed no crime but that of belonging to a political party and holding views in opposition to those of the reigning party.

Universal Protest.

The protest movement against the regime of terror in Lithuania has spread throughout the countries of Europe. In Germany, meetings have taken place in all parts of the country, especially in eastern Prussia near the Lithuanian border. All Lithuanian consulates and the Lithuanian embassy in Berlin have to receive labor delegations day after day. Many protest telegrams have been sent by the Lithuanian government. In some districts all the labor organizations have joined in a common campaign.

Also in U. S.

In Czecho-Slovakia, too, many protest meetings have been held and protest resolutions have been sent to the Lithuanian president. In Austria, Switzerland and other countries the protest movement is growing and protest telegrams have been sent.

In the United States, the International Labor Defense has already sent telegrams and cables of protest to the Lithuanian government, and to the Lithuanian legation at Washington. The latter is being informed of the cablegram of protest sent to Kovno by the American labor and progressive leaders.

When Mind Doesn't Count

"Rags" Is a Jewish Idyll, Rich in Poetry and Character

FOR the third time during the last few years I've seen "Rags," by H. Leivick, now playing at the Yiddish Art Theatre. And for the third time I've succumbed to its graciousness, its charm, its deep and playful veracity. But now that my emotions have proved such easy marks, that portion of me known as my mind or intellect grows a little distrustful and suspicious.

But before I give my mind a chance to strut I want to say, for the edification of the general reader, that "Rags" is an early play by H. Leivick, author of "The Golem," produced by the Habima players, and of "Shop," which recently completed a long run at the Irving Place Theatre. Leivick won his first reputation as a poetry, and both as poet and dramatist he is one of the most important in the Yiddish tongue. The present production of "Rags" is the annual revival, the play having become a permanent part of the repertoire of the Yodfish Art Theatre.

"Rags," my mind tells me, is not a play. It is a story, an idyl. Its dramatic core is the conflict between the older generation and the younger, a conflict which in the case of the Jewish people in America, is given its ultimate tragic twist by the fact that it is also a clash between two alien cultures, two mutually exclusive ways of life.

Mordecai Maaze, admirably played by Maurice Schwartz, is an aristocrat of the spirit, an old-world scholar whose emotions clung to the ancient Jewish traditions. Transplanted to the United States, he becomes a worker in a rag factory. His children have grown up in a spurious, aping Jewish-American bastard culture. One of his daughters has married his own boss' son and become an elegant, vulgar lady, while his only son is a wen-meaning rowdy, a mild sort of Looey dot I ope, whose chief passion is baseball.

All of which seems dreadfully serious. But it isn't that way at all in the play. In fact, much of it is shamelessly funny. And that's just what this sour, obstreperous mind of mine objects to. "Rags" is tender and idyllic rather than searching, and what should be tragic is merely poignant. The central conflict, moreover, undergoes no development. It is practically the same in the last act as it is at first. What is development in the character of Mordecai Maaze and all those rich, odd, intimately Jewish types that sprawl throughout the play.

And having patiently listened to my respectable, pedantic, humorless mind hold forth so ceremoniously, I beg to say that my mind is a colored, long-eared ass-hand is talking through its hat or whatever it is minds wear to preserve their dignity. I laughed very much at Bertha Kalich and the characters in the unforgettable last shop scene, I was too much delighted by the play's fresh, salty humor, its rich and copious wisdom to be able to swallow such super-intellectual hardtack. Is "Rags" a good play." Is it a play at all? I don't know. I don't care. I urge everybody to see it.—A. B. MAGIL.

Sky High Rent Boosts Due Workers Tell Own Stories

Albany politicians backed by landlords, real estate sharks and the vicious forces of private greed, are determined to let the rent laws die June 1. Although the law is pitifully inadequate in protecting New York workers against gouging landlords, even this shred of protection is to be denied.

"No emergency exists," say the landlords, echoed by their bought-and-paid-for legislators. But New York workers know there is a crisis. In interviews with DAILY WORKER reports and in letters they are telling their own personal experiences. Here are three more, to be followed by other letters from DAILY WORKER readers. Send in yours now, detailing your own struggle for a bit of air and roof for your little ones.

Office Girl Baffled by Search for a Room

By AN OFFICE GIRL.

I am an office worker. Each Saturday I find $25 in my pay envelop, and so I'm a good deal better off than most girls in factories and shops.

But that doesn't mean that New York's housing situation is all peaches and cream to me. I've been room hunting now for two weeks and still I can't find a decent room to fit my pocketbook.

I went down in the Village, on the lookout for a small room and some sort of kitchenette. On Barrow St. a wizened old landlady showed me an "elegant" room at $50 a month. "Where's the kitchenette?", I asked. "Here it is", she answers, lifting a piece of gingham hanging over a dirty little gaspiate.

Maybe the Village is too "arty" and high-priced. I thought as I shifted over to Second Ave. A dirty little hole in the wall with an unobstructed view of a back alley was "only $40."

Up to 18th St. across Second Ave. "Sixty bucks", smirked the landlord over a room with a dirty little bath. "And two months in advance because I've gotta have a lease."

"Good night", I shot back as I tripped down the stairs to give the once over to W. 17th St. near the Hudson River. Five flights walkup and there was an evil-smelling little cubical hole with a small window unwashed since Hector was a pup. "$40."

Back to the Times' ads. A "beautiful room overlooking East River" for only $35 a month. I was up there in two seconds. Walkup, toilet used by three families, second floor with the view mostly of dock roofs. The beauty of the rom was adduced by the undoubted fact that the little curtain had just been washed.

A newcomer in New York, without relatives to "gang up" with, I feel pretty small and hopeless tonight. Can DAILY WORKER readers tell me what to do?

Worker Tells Boosts In Rent for Tenement

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.

That the housing situation is still serious can be testified by what a housedweller in the Bronx told The DAILY WORKER today.

"Ten years ago I moved to my present place of residence, an apartment consisting of five rooms for which I paid $33 a month," he said. "Within a short time my rent was raised to $45 monthly. One raise followed another until it reached $60 a month, almost twice as much as what I was paying when I moved in.

"It was only by the state legislature passing the rent laws that the landlord was prevented from continuing to raise my rent. In fact, only four days before the laws were passed I had received a notice from him that beginning the first of the next month, my rent would be $70.

"If the state legislature does not continue the rent laws when they expire on June 1st, it means that my rent as well as every one else's in my house will be raised skyhigh. In fact, I have been informed that every house in the block will face the same situation.

"If this comes to pass, I hardly know wha to do. Undoubtedly every other landlord in the city taking advantage of the defeat of the rent laws will also raise their rents to as high a figure as possible.

"My wages will not permit me to pay anymore for rent than I am paying at present. I suppose I will have to go up to White Plains and live in a tent until some sort of a solution is reached.

LYNN, Mass. (FP).—Every trades unionist living in Lynn is to be visited by a committee from the building trades council and urged to live in a union-made house. The organized building workers are determined to fight off the undermining of the unions by non-union workers in this district.

Saul Steiglitz Has His Name Cleared

Saul Steiglitz, 127 Osborn Street, Brooklyn, has written The DAILY WORKER that he is not one of the delegates seated in the Central Trades and Labor Council last Thursday night after the left wing delegation of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' and Furriers' Unions were expelled on the command of William Green, president of the A. F. of L.

The DAILY WORKER is glad of the opportunity of clearing Steiglitz' name. It was attached to the official list of seated right wing delegates given to the press by Secretary John Coughlin.

Garment Workers Rally To Left Wing

CALL GARMENT WORKERS TO REPORT AFTER PICKETING AT OFFICE OF LOCAL 22

All active members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union are urged to report to the office of Local 22, 16 W. 21st St., at 7 a. m. this morning, after picketing.

It is expected that many dress shops will be stopped this coming week as a protest against the agreement that Sigman signed in the name of the dressmakers.

Sigman's Victims Won't Be Cowed

"Sisters and brothers, we can't be with you tonight, but will be with you Monday morning on the picket line, signed Mollie Cooperstein, Pearl Klineman and Rose Midoff."

This message from three girls who were arrested on Saturday while they were picketing the Brill Dress Shop at 355 West 38th street, was received by telegraph from Jefferson Market jail, where the girls were serving two-day sentences.

Mass Picketing.

The three joined a large mass of pickets Monday morning when sent to picket the fifteen shops now on strike at the call of the Joint Board, either for the discharge of workers who refused to register with the International, or because employers have refused to admit business agents of the Joint Board to the shops.

The International is resorting to every means to discourage picketing the picket leaders. Not only do scabs, and break these strikes, according to furnished by the International receive the protection of gangsters but women provocateurs are being brought to the picket lines each morning to pick a fight with the girls.

Progressives of Locals 89 and 48 Stand Loyal

The progressive Italian workers of Local 48 and 89, Cloak and Dressmakers' Union, I. L. G. W. U. joined in a lively meeting on Friday and reaffirmed their membership in those locals and their loyalty to the Joint Board as the "Central body of our organization in New York." Charges of "dual unionism" that have been flung at them during the past week by President Sigman were made in bad faith, according to the sentiment of the meeting which approved the action of the Joint Board in changing back of members of these locals at the regular period. Sigman had attempted to create confusion in the locals by declaring that the issuing of new books to Italian workers constituted "dual unionism."

Speakers at the meeting included I. Muscillo and J. Miliazzo, shop chairmen, and S. Amico, A. Ramuglia and G. Grassi, of the Joint Board. They pointed out that "the officers of local 48 never dare to call a membership meeting, but in spite of the actions of the officers the Italian workers are determined to play a bigger and bigger part in the fight."

GARMENT UNIONS DON'T RECOGNIZE FAKE 'EXPULSION'

Four garment workers' Locals, 2, 9, 22 and 23 which have been "expelled" by the reactionary right wing crowd temporarily in charge of the International made public today the letter refusing to recognize the expulsion. Here is their letter:

The letter to the International was by the secretaries of the four locals says:

"Replying to yours of February 14, 1927, we wish to register our most emphatic protest against your highhanded and utterly illegal proceedings and at the same time to expose your utter bad faith in the matter.

"1.—In the first place, as far back a. December 14th, you have appointed a committee, as you claimed, to take over the affairs of this local and thereupon proceeded to announce to our membership that we had been suspended and not to pay any further dues or assessments to our duly constituted officers or at our regular office, but instead to pay the same to your so-called committee at your own office, No. 3 West 16th Street. If your own subsequent statements in the press be credited, you must have collected from our members much more than you would be entitled to receive from us in per capita. There cannot possibly be anything due you from us on account of per capita.

"2.—But even if there were actually moneys due you from us on account of per capita, your action in revoking our charter and proceeding to organize a new local would clearly be contrary to the provisions of our constitution and therefore utterly illegal and void. The illegality is so self-evident that you could not possibly be acting in good faith. We must therefore attribute your last act to the same malice and desire to rule the union that you cannot rule arbitrarily that was shown in your action of that date, and we have no doubt that the membership will compel you to repudiate your latest outrage as well.

No G. E. B. Meeting.

"3.—We also desire to call your attention, as well as the attention of all the members of our union, to the fact that there was no legal meeting of the General Executive Board held since December 13, 1926, and that your claim to have held such a meeting on Monday, February 14th, 1927, is in itself a fraud. We are ready to prove to the workers of our union, as well as to the public at large and in any court of justice, that no legally constituted meeting of your General Executive Board has been held on Monday, February 14th, 1927, as you claim."

Sec. Weinstone Foresees Failure for Green

Branding the expulsion of twenty-three progressive delegates from the New York Central Trades and Labor Council as "an outrageous act against the interests of the labor movement," William W. Weinstone, general secretary of District 2 of the Workers' (Communist) Party, prophesies that President Green and Matthew Woll will be defeated in their attempts at union-smashing just as Morris Sigman is now being defeated.

A statement issued to The DAILY WORKER says:

"The expulsion of the progressive trade unionists from the Central Trades and Labor Council Thursday night by order of President Green is another outrageous act against the interests of the labor movement.

Unprecedented Action.

"The expulsion of the furriers' delegates without any charges of trial is unheard of in the labor movement. The unions are affiliated with their Internationals and are part of the A. F. of L. The charge of "Communism" for this arbitrary and high-handed expulsion is a fake reason. The real reason is to be found in the fact that the furriers have been fighting for the organization of the unorganized and for militant trade union policies, and were victors in the recent strike.

"The expulsion of the International delegates is the crowning act in the series of unconstitutional acts committed by the A. F. of L. against the local unions. These locals have likewise been carrying forward the banner for militant struggles against the employers, and have shown in the course of the last year that the policy of militancy means strength to the unions. Class-collaborative policies of Mr. Green and Sigman mean disruption of the unions. These expulsions of Mr. Green are part of the whole campaign of disrupting the needle trades unions.

Stay With the Fight.

"There is only one answer—the continuation of the fight, more vigorously than ever before. The rank and file of labor will only condemn the traitors of disruption. The workers will not long tolerate these crushing policies." Mr. Green will be defeated as Mr. Sigman is being defeated."

Program Is To Expel Furriers This Week

in the course of his denunciation of left wing fur workers:

"An investigation into the internal affairs of the local organization of fur workers, made by a committee representing the American Federation of Labor, revealed a most shocking and deplorable state of affairs.

"A strike unnecessarily prolonged was entered on, and the membership involved in the strike was forced to undergo great suffering, privation and sacrifice."

Green Prolonged Strike.

The fact that it was the employers, and Green himself by his attempted interventions, who prolonged this strike undiscussably, is not mentioned.

President Green refused to state what the procedure would be in the continuation of the attack upon the Furriers' Union; he refused also, to tell what the recommendations of the investigating committee had been. He merely announced that:

"As a result of information and facts developed by the investigating committee, appointed by the American Federation of Labor, the committee made certain recommendations . . . some of which provided for the elimination of Communistic control of local unions chartered by the International Union of Fur Workers."

It is plain from the whole of Green's statements and from the actions of the American Federation of Labor officials in their attack on left wing members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, that all pretense of legality or constitutionality has been thrown to the winds.

This right wing gang is out to grab the Furriers' Union and the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union by hook or by crook. They do not care how. And having been accustomed for so long to a helpless group of workers entirely at their mercy, they do not think it matters how.

Knowing this, the furriers are fully prepared.

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 20.—Russia is the only country in the world that is making an effort to solve the labor and race problems, according to Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, editor of The Crisis, who addressed 1,200 people at the Central Presbyterian Church recently.

Passing from Russia recognition of the equality of races, Dr. DuBois denounced the local attempt to segregate the black and yellow races.

While other nations are keeping their people of "backward countries" enslaved, Russia is aiding them in their fight for freedom, Dr. DuBois declared.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Federated Church Council and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored people.

Young Workers' Club Organized in Middle Village, Long Island

By MAX FRUMKIN.

(Young Worker Correspondent.)

We have in Middle Village, L. I., a club called the "Young Workers' Club." This club exists only one month and we already have twenty members. Our aim is to help better the conditions of the young workers, and fight against American imperialism. This is the main problem in our club now.

We have bought one-head to help the joint board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to fight against Sigman Ukmpany, and we will help more when our club increases financially and in membership.

We had an opening for our club that took place last Feb. 5. There were about 100 young people and some older workers present. Middle Village readers of The DAILY WORKER and outsiders—join the "Young Workers' Club," that fights for better conditions for the young worker and students.

We meet every Sunday, 2 p. m., at 1 Fulton ave., Middle Village.

You must come in mass and join the army of women to help free the cloakmakers and others and to bring them to their wives and children.

is the one night in the year

WHEN—

friends, contributors and editors of The DAILY WORKER all get together just for the fun of it and stage a rebel party with enough life and zip in it to make the usual affair seem like a quilting bee of The Ladies' Aid Society by comparison.

Surely you'll be there. We promise you a wonderful evening. First the banquet with concert music by a fine orchestra while the dinner is being served.

Then there'll be some talk about a subject pretty close to our hearts—The DAILY WORKER. J. Louis Engdahl, Scott Nearing, Ben Gold, Bertram D. Wolfe, William F. Dunne, Verne Smith, Tom O'Flaherty, Robert W. Dunn, Helen Black, Harbor Allen and Mike Gold will contribute more or less to this feature.

Hugo Gellert and William Gropper will then furnish some lively comment on leading figures and trends of our time by drawing satirical sketches. This feature will be followed by song, rendered by a Russian singer.

Afterwards will come dancing in the beautiful Yorkville Casino Ballroom.

Rents and Housing—A Permanent Problem Under Capitalism.

Periodically the capitalist press refers to "the rent crisis" in New York city.

The impression created thereby, that the housing situation becomes bad only occasionally, is 100 per cent wrong. The housing situation is bad for the New York working class year in and year out. But it is only when certain sections of the middle class begin to feel the pinch that the press pays any great amount of attention to it.

Legislation "regulating" rents and housing conditions was enacted during the period when the war-boom increased the city population with great speed and rents shot skyward. But so far as any broad and efficient application of this legislation, in itself hopelessly inadequate, is concerned, no one can say truthfully that the pressure of high rents and the menace of miserable living conditions has been lifted from any considerable section of the working class.

The housing schemes which came into being coincident with the regulative legislation themselves served the purposes of the real estate sharks very well by boosting land prices and consequently rents.

The struggle in Albany, which is to decide whether the regulative legislation is to be allowed to expire, appears as a conflict arising out of conditions peculiar to New York. Actually, housing conditions in New York are no better and no worse than in other congested centers. A tour thru the working class districts of Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Pittsburgh, etc., will convince anyone that the question of decent housing for workers and their families is a national one.

Under capitalism huge sections of the working class are condemned to live in mean and degrading surroundings. Those who do the most necessary work in modern civilized society live under the worst conditions.

But we need not wait for the abolition of capitalism to begin to remedy this evil. Here is a popular issue around which powerful forces can be gathered. It is necessary, however, that there be a common program and that its demand be apportioned among the various sub-divisions of government—municipal, state and national.

It is symptomatic of the anarchy of modern capitalist society that billions of dollars are spent on hard-surfaced roads while great sections of working class live in crowded tenements which are worse than the hovel of a backward peasant.

The housing situation can be handled efficiently only if there is built up a purposeful and well-organized movement whose program and demands the legislators will be afraid to neglect. It must be a united front movement which will spread terror in the ranks of the landlords, real estate speculators and the horde of parasites which prey on the need for shelter of the masses.

In the meantime the demand for decent housing and minimum rents should be a first point on the order of business of all trade unions, working class fraternal societies, co-operatives, etc. But this demand can become effective only when these same organization form the foundation of a powerful labor party.

Only by such methods can the rulers of America—and of New York—be forced to take seriously the demand of the working class that it be relieved of rents which cut down its standard of living and housing conditions which spread disease and degeneration in its ranks.

It is to be noted that in the Soviet Union workers pay only 3½ to 10 per cent of their wages for rent and that the Soviet government and the city and provincial governments are in direct charge of all problems of housing.

FASCISM IN LITHUANIA FOUGHT BY LABOR DEFENSE IN NEW YORK; THIRTY IN DANGER

Fascism in Lithuania continues its bloody persecutions against the working class. After the murder of four Communists, the fascists have marked thirty further victims for murder. According to the latest news 8 persons in Schaelen, 8 persons in Kovna, 6 persons in Memel and 6 persons in Ponewesh were delivered to the field courts. The fascist movement celebrates the conquest of power by forming heaps of dead; streams of workers' blood bless the holy churches of Lithuania.

Cruel Murdering.

The murders are organized in the most cruel manner. It is to annihilate the best fighters of the Lithuanian proletariat.

Thirty human lives appeal to humanity and demand help and support! They are threatened by death! It is our duty to do everything possible in order to save them from their hangman.

With shameful cowardice the government has ordered the murder of four Communists within the last few days. Our appeal to save them has been too late and could not prevent the execution of the death sentences. We must hurry to save those who are still alive. Proletarian solidarity appeals to the workers of the world; the feeling of simplest humanity appeals to all honest people to raise their voices immediately and loudly in order to save thirty people whose lives are threatened.

The International Labor Defense, New York section, appeals to the whole world, on behalf of its members to prevent the crimes and the cold blooded murder against many people by the insane fascist gangs of Lithuania. We must stop the hangmen by joining in the protest of millions of workers the world over. Trade unionists are urged to raise the question in their locals. Resolutions of protest must be sent to the Lithuanian ambassador at Washington.

Come to Bazaar.

The persecution carries in its wake untold misery for the dependents of arrested workers. To help minimize that misery there will be a special Lithuanian booth at the I. L. D. Bazaar in Star Casino, 107th street and Park avenue on March 10 to 13. The proceeds of this booth will be immediately sent to Lithuania for the alleviation of the starvation and misery.

Down with Lithuanian White Terror! Help in the fight by attending the Bazaar.

Benefit Racket

By ROBERT W. DUNN
(Federated Press.)

Nearly a thousand corporations in the United States have experimented with mutual benefit associations which the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. describes as one of the "fifteen roads to good will in industrial relations." The other fifteen include house organs, lunch rooms, pensions, group insurance.

A mutual benefit association is defined by the National Industrial Conference Board as "an organization of employes within an industrial establishment, formed for the purpose of providing protection for its members in case of sickness, accident, or death." Functions similar to those performed by Workmen's Circles among Jewish workers are said to be within the province of a mutual benefit association, only the benefits are confined to the workers in a single industrial establishment.

The mutual benefit association must not be confused with the company union, as it has nothing to do with shop grievances, employe representation or "industrial democracy." It is a welfare device, encouraged by American employers incidentally, to obtain company loyalty, increase production, reduce absenteeism and labor turnover.

Takes Place of Union.

Employers, writing to the National Industrial Conference Board, report that the mutual benefit association "has taken the place with the men of the union;" that it is a "real aid in managing and controlling" the workers; that mutual benefit associations are helpful in conveying ideas to workers which "would be very hard to put over in any other way." Most companies reporting are non-union.

Although most mutual benefit associations have nothing to do with collective bargaining, one of two exceptions may be found. The Employes' Mutual Benefit Association of the West Kentucky Coal Co. may be regarded as a company union, for it holds an "exclusive" labor contract with the company. This non-union coal concern's association is described in a company handbook as "an independent co-operative fraternity," offering "opportunities that no other organization offers," and striving "at all times to promote contentment."

A few mutual benefit associations have been organized to cover workers employed by more than one concern, and specifically for union-breaking. An example is the American Plan Plumbers' and Steamfitters' Mutual Benefit Association of San Francisco, organized recently by the Industrial Association of San Francisco, premier west coast open shop association.

Join Or Out You Go.

Although membership in practically all mutual benefit associations is voluntary, the methods of approaching the new employe are so well polished, that a refusal is almost unknown. Once a practical "closed shop" is obtained the dues are often deducted by means of a checking system.

With such automatic arrangements for members and administration expenses paid by the company, the spirit and interest of the workers must be maintained through various outings, banquets, field days, excursions, dances and other measures for building esprit de corps and the "family spirit."

Some corporations using the mutual benefit association device are the American Book Co., the American Sugar Refining Co., American Telephone and Telegraph, Borden's Farm Products Co., General Chemical Co., Mergenthaler Linotype Co., Autostrop Safety Razor Co., Morse Dry & Suit Co., Edison Co., N. Y. Railways Co., Susquehanna Silk Mills, U. S. Rubber Co., and U. S. Steel Corp.

A few of the corporations using a mutual benefit association, in addition to a company union, are Wheeling Steel Corp., Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Washburn-Crosby Co., Standard Oil of Indiana, Swift & Co., Pullman Co. (The porters' union has found a benefit association and employe representation plan equally enslaving); Proctor & Gamble; Phila. Rapid Transit (Militant); International Harvester Co., Hooker Electro-Chemical Co., Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Hamston Watch Co., General Electric Co., Du Pont de Nemours & Co., Davis Coal & Coke, Colorado Fuel and Iron, Bethlehem Steel.

The mutual benefit association of Pennsylvania R. R. employes, with a membership of 17,000, not only writes insurance for workers, but encourages them to purchase stock in the R. R.

PIECE WORK

LITTLE did Nancy realize that tightening the machine belt would not bring her wages up, but make it more difficult to finish the day peacefully. Tightening belts on power machines makes the thread break more readily, and machines must not be exploited if they are to exist. They are not human beings . . . They go so far and no further.

"Sam, bring me the oil can." "Sam, tighten the lower belt"—"Sam this and Sam that." Nancy was "hollering" the whole day, furiously, to the "all around" boy in the shop. She worked like a fiitting devil the whole day and could not go over the $2.25 point.

This week she had wanted to get new shoes. All the girls are wearing the latest Black Bottom shoes. Had she better not think about such things, she said to herself. Pretty lucky for her to have a home to live in on the wages she is making. My God! What would she do if she had to live out? No, no, not like Margie, who sleeps with men for fifty cents a night.

True, Nancy's home isn't so nice, her old man has been out of work for six months now, he got sick on the last job trying to lift a very heavy shipment of wire cloth and ruptured himself, and now he can't get a job. But then there is her brother, Tom. He works in a union place and makes out pretty good. If it weren't for him they'd all go out begging.

Tom, the Celibate.

Mom is pretty worried about Tom. She says he ought to get married; he has passed 28. Tom won't listen; the support of the family comes first to him.

Tom had liked a girl once and they broke off because she had wanted a diamond engagement ring. Tom said all he could give her was his love and companionship. She left the city and married another guy, who bought her a swell ring on installment, and now she is back at the shop paying it off.

All her friends are sort of classy and dance well, but not so with Tom. He is pretty queer, reads most of the time, dry books about unions. Just the same she likes him. He is so nice to her, lets her do as she wants to, but always tries to talk union to her. What should she worry about; she ain't so bad looking, and she'll get married soon. Just then she snapped the gum between her teeth as if to say, but maybe not . . .

Married Workers.

Only the other day she had taken special notice of most of her friends who were married and now back to the shop again. They had begun to talk the same kind of stuff as her brother Tom. They said there was a meetin' tonight and an organizer is coming. A lot of girls now are complaining about piece-work. They say that in union shops they don't work piece-work.

Nancy couldn't see how they were going to get a union. She thought unions were only for men. But, gee, couldn't they at least work less work. It ain't no cinch to grind away like this day after day, and being afraid to go to the toilet or look at the clock for fear they'd lose time—and even then they ain't making a hell of a lot. She is only seventeen herself and has been stitching away for three years. How much longer can she go on at this rate? She might have to work like Flo after marriage . . .

Ready to Strike.

Going home that night she talked things over with the other girls. They were ready . . . In fact they thought they'd have trouble with Nancy. All night she hardly slept. She lay as if in a cold sweat, awakened every now and then by her own voice. Piece-work.

Four hundred girls picketed the following morning, carrying signs: "We Demand a Union and a Living Wage," "Down with Piece-work."

Upton Sinclair

CHAPTER XXI
THE HONEYMOON
I.

Bunny was looking for a site for the labor college. It was a much pleasanter job than seeking oil lands; you could give some attention to the view, the woods and the hills, and other things you really cared about; also it wasn't such a gamble, because you could really find out about the water supply, and have a chemical analysis of the soil. It meant taking long rides in the country; and since Rachel was to one of the bosses, it was good for her to go along. They had time to talk—and a lot to talk about, since they were going to take charge of a bunch of young radicals, boys and girls of all ages —twenty-four hours a day.

They had looked at a couple of places, and there was another farther from the city, and Bunny remarked, "If we go to that, we'll be late getting home." Rachel answered, "If it's too late, we can go to some hotel, and finish up in the morning." Said Bunny, "That would start the gossips." But Rachel was not afraid of gossips, so she declared.

They drove to the new site. It was near the village called Mount Hope, in a little valley, with the plowed land running up the slopes of half a dozen hills. It was early November, and the rains had fallen and the new grain had sprouted, and there were lovely curving surfaces that might have been the muscles of great giants lying prone —giants with skins of the softest bright green velvet. There were orchards, and artesian water with a pumping plant, and a little ranch-house—the people had apparently gone to town, so the visitors would wander about and look at everything, and make a find—a regular birdrome of a barn, gorgeous with revolutionary red paint! "Oh, Bunny, here's our meeting place, all ready made! We have only to put a floor in and we can have a dance floor opening night!" Imagine Rachel thinking about dancing!

They climbed one of the slopes, and here was a park, with dark live oaks and pale grey sycamores, and a carpet of new grass under foot. The valley opened out to the west, and the sun had just gone down, in a sky of flaming gold; the quail were giving their last calls, and deep down in Bunny's heart was an ache of loneliness—because quail meant Dad, and those beautiful hills of Paradise, and happiness he had dreamed in vain.

"I know it was Rachel dreaming. "Oh, Bunny, this is too lovely! It's exactly what we want! Mount Hope College—we couldn't have made up a better name!"

Bunny laughed. "We don't want to buy a name. We must take samples of the soil."

"How many acres did you say?" "Six hundred and forty, a little over a hundred in cultivation. That's more than we'll be able to take care of for quite a while."

"And only sixty-eight thousand! That's a bargain!" Rachel had learned to think on Bunny's imperial scale, since she had been racing over the state in his fast car, inspecting millionaire playgrounds and real estate promoters' paradises.

"The price is not bad," said Bunny, "if we are sure about the soil and water."

"You could see the state of the growing things, before it got dark."

"Maybe so. We'll come back in the morning, and have a talk with the ranchman. Perhaps he's a tenant, and will tell us the truth." Not for nothing had Bunny spent his boyhood buying lands with his shrewd old father!

Twilight veiled this valley of new dreams, and across the way the hills were purple shadows. Bunny said, "There's just one thing worrying me about our plan now: I'm afraid there's going to be a scandal."

"How do you mean?"

"You and me being together all the time, and going off and being missing at night."

"Oh, Bunny, what nonsense!"

"No, really, I'm worried. I told Peter Naglo we'd have to conform to bourgeois standards, and we're beginning wrong. My Aunt Emma is a bourgeois standard, and she would never approve of this, and neither would your mother. We ought to go and get married."

"Oh, Bunny!" She was staring at him, but it was too dark to reveal any possible twinkle in his eyes. "Are you joking?"

"Rachel," he said, "will you take that much trouble to preserve the good name of our institution?"

He came a step nearer, and she stammered, "Bunny, you don't—you don't mean that!"

"I don't see any other way—really."

"Bunny—!"

"Why not?"

"Because—you don't want to marry a Jewess!"

"Good Lord!"

"Don't misunderstand me, I'm proud of my race. But all your friends would thing it was a mistake."

"My friends, Rachel? Who the devil are my friends—except in the radical movement? And where would the radical movement be without the Jews?"

"But, Bunny—your sister!"

"My sister is not my friend. Neither did she ask me to pick out her husband."

Rachel stood, twisting her fingers together nervously. "Bunny, do you really—you aren't just speaking on an impulse?"

"Well, I suppose it's an impulse. I seem to have to blurt it out. But it's an impulse I've had a good many times."

"And you won't be sorry?"

He laughed. "It depends upon your answer."

"Stop joking, please—you frighten me. I can't afford to let you make a mistake. It's so dreadfully serious."

"But why take it that way?"

"I can't help it, you don't know how a woman feels. I don't want you to do something out of a generous impulse, and then you'd feel bound, and you wouldn't be happy. You ought to marry a girl out of the sweat-shops."

"Good God, Rachel, my father was a mule-driver."

"Yes, but you're Anglo-Saxon; away back somewhere your ancestors were proud of themselves. You ought to marry a tall, fair woman, that will take you

It is no longer considered bad form to speak in Hyde Park, London. Not so long ago, the hardy subject who betook himself to the soap box was looked upon as one who had more bunk than brains in his system. Tall lean men used to talk about the coming evolutionary era when collar buttons would grow automatically on scrawny necks and nothing would be left to human effort except eating, drinking and a few other pleasant diversions. This sounded good but those who carry society on their backs paid little attention to the fancy predictions. They went to the nearest pub, had their 'arf and 'arf, went home and to work the following morning, as Englishmen have been doing for more than two centuries.

The New York Times of February 20 kindly informs us that a knighted Briton took his little stand and expounded the virtues of toryism to the seasoned veterans of Hyde Park. This particular tory evidently believes that people believe what they hear. They don't. The important thing to consider is that the tories feel they must go to the masses with argument. A few hundred years ago they would go to them with shot guns. Perhaps in a few hundred more years they will say it with powder puffs.

A Kipling society has been formed in London. Very likely by the publishers of Kipling's books. It is quite possible that enough crazy people exist in London to form a quorum without being subsidized by a financially interested party. I dropped into a restaurant a few evenings ago and listened to a poet recite his ravings. He made a hit. Everybody in the place laughed except the poet. The fact that such poets are tolerated is a tribute to civilization, though it must be admitted that murders are a nuisance and it is possible that a jury could be secured that would send a fellow to the chair for disposing of a man like Kipling.

Kipling wrote at least one good poem. Most poets should be embalmed after the first effort. They are not; hence their unpopularity. Kipling turns out jingles and he gets paid for them. A poet is not made unless he is paid. I have little use for poets who are content to stay unsung. They should stick to prose. Kipling is an imperialist, therefore he is a bum poet. If a poet is worth anything more than a woolen blanket he must be a rebel.

The heads of the beheaded were exhibited to the populace with the object of striking terror into the hearts of the opposition. Break in Sight at Coal Wage Conference

Companies Ask Union Men to Work for Scab Wage

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 21.—To all intents and purposes the joint wage conference of soft coal miners and operators broke down today.

After a week of negotiations failed to yield a material concession from either side, the sub-committee appointed to draft a new wage scale announced today that it was unable to break the deadlock and will report to this effect tomorrow to the full conference.

The conference is expected promptly to accept the verdict of its committee. The conference probably will be heading home by tomorrow night.

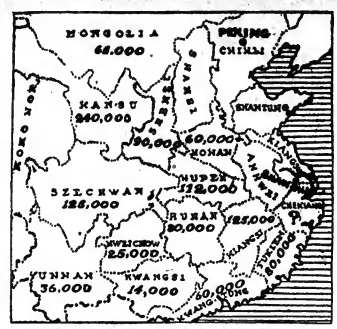
Instructed Against Cut.

The committee representing the United Mine Workers of America, was under instructions from the International Convention held in Indianapolis last month not to sign a contract that provides for a redneton of wages.

The mine owners' representatives demanded a competitive scale of wages, or in other words, wages to be based on those in non-union fields, thus practically negating the effect of collective bargaining on wage rates.

Although International President John L. Lewis of the miners' union, has rejected the offer of strike aid made by the International Miners' Committee for Propaganda and Action, he has made little preparation for the strike which must follow on April 1, if no agreement is made in the meantime. He states he is relying on the result of negotiations he will open within a week or ten days, with the individual mining companies, to make agreements with any operators who will sign up at the old wage, nominally $7.50 a day. He then expects to reopen negotiations with the miners' committee and get some kind of an agreement with all.

Diplomats at Play; Swiss Lady Jealously Throws Them All Out



BERLIN, Feb. 21.—Diplomatic and social circles in Warsaw are all agog today as a result of the reception at the Swiss Ministry when the hostess suddenly rushed in at midnight, and in a loud voice asked the guests to leave her house immediately.

After the general commotion subsided Mrs. Stetson, wife of the American minister, invited all the guests to her home, where the party was continued.

It is whispered that jealousy was the cause for the sudden outbreak of the Swiss hostess.

Lewis Rejects Offer From European Miners To Assist in Strike

John L. Lewis, International President of the United Mine Workers of America has flatly rejected and heaped abuse upon the miners of Europe who called upon their fellows to stand ready to support the strike in the American coal fields which will probably start April 1 of this year. He did not state in his denunciation of the "Reds" what the appeal consisted of. Here is the substance of it, in a special cable from Moscow.

MOSCOW, Feb. 21.—The International Committee for Propaganda and Action has issued an appeal that on the First of April, the collective agreement of the mine-owners and miners of America will expire, and calling on all revolutionary miners of all countries to be prepared for the struggle and in good time consider all possible measures for the support of their American comrades.

Cleveland Building Trades Councils May Confer On Merging

CLEVELAND. It has been announced that the two building trades councils in this city are about to confer, in order to bring about a merging of the two bodies.

The "old" council contains twelve affiliated bodies of different crafts, while the "new" council has but four. In addition, the bricklayers are affiliated to no council. This means chaos in the building trades unions.

Needed Action.

The situation demanded action, particularly since many of the crafts are negotiating new agreements with the contractors. The plasterers and lathers will get $1.62½ an hour from Apr. 1 on, the other crafts expect a raise, while the carpenters are demanding an increase of 25c an hour. The painters and glaziers, who were out on strike last year and returned without an agreement, have put up no new demands.

MINERS PROTEST BREAKING UP OF WEISBORD MEET

Free Speech Repressed; Expect Coal Strike

YORKVILLE, Ohio, Feb. 21.—Early today preparations were in full swing for the protest mass meeting to be held here this evening by workers of this vicinity and from across the state line in West Virginia. The object of protest is the abolishing of free speech in West Virginia, the latest case being the breaking up of the meeting of Albert Weisbord in Wheeling, West Virginia.

Terror Starts.

The meeting was attacked as part of a barrage of terror the coal and steel barons of Pennsylvania and West Virginia are laying down, in anticipation of a coal strike next April.

When Weisbord appeared to speak last Saturday in Wheeling, he found that the non-Communist workers were terrized by police brutality, and were afraid to attend meetings.

Communists Came.

The Communist workers of Wheeling appeared in spite of the sheriff's threat to stop the meeting. The speaker was not allowed to proceed.

The Workers Party in Wheeling has issued the following statement:

"Because of the outrageous conduct of Sheriff Henderson in breaking up the meeting of the Communist Party Saturday evening at which Albert Weisbord, leader of the Passaic textile strike was to have spoken, the workers of Wheeling have decided to hold a protest meeting.

"Since West Virginia has abolished free speech, the meeting will be held in Ohio, in Yorkville, in Miners' Hall at seven-thirty P. M., Monday.

"Let the workers come to Ohio and bring to shame the degenerate officials of Wheeling who are evidently preparing for the miners' strike by crushing free speech once more."

The bail of the Woodlawn prisoners has been raised suddenly from one thousand to five thousand dollars.

Robber Powers Aim to Crush Revolution

Prelude to Attack On Soviet Union

MOSCOW, Feb. 21.—The Communist International sent the following manifesto on the Chinese situation to its affiliated sections in all countries:

To the Workers of all Countries!

The imperialist sword is hanging over China. The bourgeoisie is sending naval and land forces to Shanghai, which is to serve as the basis for the open military intervention in China. The English government, at the head of the international robbers, provokes the proletariat with the shameless declaration that they intend in the next few weeks to throw the whole occupation army into Shanghai. Japanese imperialism declares its love of peace only in order to deliver a more certain blow against the Chinese revolution. America is encouraging the bloody policy of England in return for her benevolent toleration of the American robber campaign in Nicaragua and Panama. The Italian and French forces are supporting the English acts of violence just as they are supporting her counter-revolutionary intentions in Poland and Lithuania and the policy of encircling the Soviet Union.

Workers, do not console yourselves with the thought that the antagonisms among the robbers prevent a common attack upon China; the international robbers are coming to an agreement regarding the division of the spoils. As a preparatory measure for the bloody settlement with the Chinese people, the bourgeois provocateurs are endeavoring to stifle the feeling of solidarity among the workers for the heroic struggle of China. The bourgeois liars are spreading falsehoods that chaos prevails in revolutionary China. The reformists cast aspersions on intervention against the Chinese people and preach complicancy.

Workers, do not believe the liars and the preachers of compliance! The workers of China, headed by the organized proletariat, are conducting the fight against their powerful enemy with all the means necessary for victory. The English government is taking advantage of the victory over the miners in order to settle accounts with the Chinese revolution. The military intervention in China would mean the victory of international fascism and of fresh attacks of capital against the proletariat of all countries. The attack on China is the general rehearsal for the attack upon the Soviet Union. The Chinese people will answer with complete determination and steadfastness against imperialism, and is at the same time defending the liberty and honor of the workers and the suppressed of all countries.

Workers, do not lose a moment! Organize the defense and aid for the Chinese revolution! Unweariedly, and in spite of all hindrances and sacrifices, explain to the sailors, soldiers and working masses the meaning of the fratricidal war into which they are being sent by the bourgeoisie! Mobilize all organizations which are under the sending of forces against the Chinese people! Fight for the recognition of the revolutionary government! Enforce the withdrawal of the armed forces from China! Close the united front of the State of all workers' organizations against the great danger! Compel the reformist leaders to do away with their treacherous double dealing with regard to China! Organize stronger and more resolute for struggle all organizations which are prepared to fight!

Down with "Hands Off China"!

Long live the Chinese revolution!

Long live the fighting solidarity of the proletariat of all countries and of the oppressed peoples of the whole world!

Long live Communism!

Warner Forgives Trust Decree.

New York, Feb. 21.—Purchase of the Warner Sugar Refining company by the National Sugar Refining company, is not in violation of the decree of 1922 dissolving the so-called "Sugar Trust," the United States circuit court of appeals ruled today.

Russell Goes to Prison.

New York, Feb. 21.—Harriett Russell, 37, No. 3706 Dyre avenue, the Bronx, a former teacher in the Scarsdale, N. Y., high school, was today given an intermediate prison sentence for making purchases in Fifth avenue shops and charging them to parents of former pupils.

Girl Gangsters Used to Beat Up Four Pickets At L. Brill Dress Shop

Four girl pickets, attacked by "female gangsters" as they were picketing the Louis Brill Dress Shop, 233 West 38th Street, were recovering today at their homes. These girl thugs have accompanied gangsters to the picket lines for the past two days.

When the pickets tried to defend themselves against their assailants they were arrested and received two day sentences in Jefferson Market Court.

The use of "girl gangsters" to provoke trouble on the picket lines is a new tactic, adopted this week in the attempt to break the lines before shops called on strike by the Joint Board. After the pickets have refused to be drawn into a quarrel they are bodily attacked by the girls, and arrested when they attempt to defend themselves.

The girls who received sentences were Mollia Cooperstein, Rose Meadow and Pearl Goldstein. Ida Shore was allowed to pay a $10 fine in lieu of a fall sentence.

LEFT WING ALIEN TO BE DEPORTED BY U. S. ORDER

"Burden of Proof" Used To Effect Deportation

The policy of deporting selected individuals because of their working class activities is becoming a serious menace to the labor movement of this country. Emanuel Vajtauer, editor of the Czecho workers' paper "Obrana" is the most recent case scheduled for deportation. Vajtauer came to this country legally in 1923, passports, etc. were O. K. He at once became active in the workers struggle among the Czecho-Slovaks and rapidly gained a great influence because of his unflinching loyalty and ability to portray the every day struggle.

On an anonymous complaint he was arrested in April 1924. The amendment to the immigration laws hureau of proof, section 23, which reads in part:

"In any deportation proceeding against any alien, the burden of proof shall be upon such alien to show that he entered the United States legally." was used against him and he was called to show cause why he should not be deported. In spite of the fact that such proof was supplied, Vajtauer was ordered to be deported in August, 1924 and finally sent to Ellis Island in February, 1925. An appeal was responsible for a stay in the deportation. Vajtauer was released on $2,000 bail. After a hard fight he the International Labor Defense the higher court has confirmed the deportation and now after three years he has to leave America.

In fighting this and many other cases the I. L. D. has been playing its part in the struggle of the workers. In order to continue the good work the annual bazaar in Star Casino, 107th Street and Park Avenue on March 10 to 13 must be made a success. Money is needed to prepare legal aid for our militant fighters. As the commemoration of the workers the bazaar this year can be made a huge demonstration of protest and also a means of raising the necessary money.

Chinese Labor To Avenge Murders

Foreign Imperialists Blamed For Executions

HANKOW, Feb. 21.—Intense indignation swept through the city today as news of the barbarities inflicted on the workers of Shanghai by agents of Sun Chang Fang reached here.

Trade union leaders declared that the murder of more than twenty labor organizers would be avenged as soon as the revolutionary forces occupy Shanghai. It is reported here that the executions of the labor leaders were incited by the foreign imperialists.

The nationalist government reports that it has reached an agreement with the British for the joint control of the Hankow and Kiukiang concessions.

The agreement with the British, it is understood, gives practically equal control to the Chinese and British for the future administration of the British concessions. It is believed here that it will be made the basis for administration of the International settlement in Shanghai, as soon as the Cantonese capture that city.

Eugene Chen, nationalist foreign minister, plans to visit Shanghai as soon as the troops of General Chiang Kai Shek have entered it.

Masses Infuriated.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 21.—Instead of halting the strike, the brutal action of the Shanghai authorities incensed the workers with the result that the struggle has taken on revolutionary proportions.

The wharf coolies quit today, holding up the loading and unloading of cargo. As a consequence, the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Asia halted at Hoosung at the month of the Yangtze, sixteen miles down the river, prior to proceeding on to Hong Kong.

The second battalion of the Suffolk Regiment, and a Japanese gunboat and submarine arrived at the Whangpoo docks today.

HONG KONG, Feb. 21.—The seamen's union is agitating for a general strike as a consequence of one of its officials being arrested for distributing anti-British literature aboard the American liner President Taft.

Pass Porter Resolution.

BULLETIN. WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—By a vote of 259 to 44, the house this afternoon passed the Porter resolution calling on the president and the state department to negotiate treaties with China respecting Chinese nationalists and abolishing extra-territoriality and the "unfair customs duties."

The resolution further urges that this move be made, irrespective of what other nations are doing in the Orient.

British Sign Agreement.

LONDON, Feb. 21. — Sir Austen Chagberlain, foreign minister, announced in the house of commons this afternoon that an agreement has been signed between Soviet Valley, British charge in China, and Eugene Chen, nationalist foreign minister, relative to the future administration of Hankow, a British concession.

Facts and Fables About George Washington and Other "Fathers"

Truth is stronger and stranger than fiction. Oliver Carlson in the article published below turns the historical searchlight on the founding fathers and exposes them as a collection of political confidence men and as polished a set of grafters as ever used the language of exalted purpose to cover up an ulterior motive. Today the virtues of George Washington will be heralded near and far. The "father of his country" will be held up as a shining example for the youth of the nation to follow. Carlson's article shows, however, that Washington is not the paragon of revolution, the angelic elitruist and the stainless leader that our Pollyanna historians represent him to be but a calculating business man more concerned with his own personal fortunes than with the freedom of the colonies from British rule.—Editor.

By OLIVER CARLSON

"Who dare say that the framing of the United States Constitution was not the work of God himself! Did not our Almighty Father guide the thoughts and hands of that small immortal band which assembled in Philadelphia during those trying days! Is it not true that only after the assembled delegates had turned to Him above for aid and inspiration that they were able to complete this miraculous document in a surprisingly short period of time!"

I quote the paragraph above as a typical example of the speeches which are delivered in thousands of public high schools all over the country.

The writings of the great Sesquicentennial Exposition in Philadelphia in celebration of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence were made the occasion for foisting more than the average amount of fairy tales upon young and old alike about the American Revolutionary War, the U. S. Constitution, and the "inspired fathers" who framed that document. Certainly there is no occasion better than the present for us to review in brief certain matters which are the common knowledge of historians, but which are completely passed over by the Powers that Be—and for a very good reason, to be sure. For were the truth made known regarding those "inspired fathers" and our "god-given Constitution" it would be a far more difficult matter to rouse the spirit of patriotism and Americanism which is so essential to capitalist class rule.

ORGANIZER OF BLACK HUNDREDS TELLS OF INFLUENCE ON BALDWIN

Anti-Comintern League in Constant Touch With Highest British Officials

(Special to The Daily Worker).

MOSCOW, Feb. 21.—The newspaper Pravda publishes eight new documents of correspondence between Eugene Sablin, in London, former organizer of Black Hundreds in Tsarist Russia, with the former tsarist ambassador Giers, now living in Paris, and styled by emigrees, "Senior Russian Diplomatic Representative Abroad." These letters and reports explain plots to foment an armed invasion of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Another White Hope.

In a report dated September 23, Sablin informs the "Senior Diplomat" that in July, General Hoffman, the kaiser's general who drove through the Brest Litovsk peace, had arrived in London accompanied by two Georgian politicians, and that they met Locker-Lampson's group (Locker-Lampson is a member of parliament). They visited certain prominent financiers with a view of sounding the ground regarding possibility of obtaining finance for an intervention in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The amount they thought would be needed was 200 million pounds sterling. (About o billion dollars).

Didn't "Die-Hard" Enough.

In his communication of November 7, Sablin expresses dissatisfaction with Baldwin and Chamberlain, who were hesitating to carry out the policy of the die-hards.

KELLOGG DEMANDS CONSENT OF DIAZ TO PROTECTORATE OVER NICARAGUA

American Admiral Now Has Huge Force in With Which to Crush Out Independence

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—A formal request has been made by President Diaz of Nicaragua, the United States to establish a protectorate by treaty over his country, it was learned here this afternoon.

The state department admitted that a note from Diaz is enroute to Washington, but declined to discuss it. A statement was issued as follows:

"Minister Eberhardt at Managua has informed the department of state that on Feb. 20 he received a note from the minister of foreign affairs, written by direction of President Diaz. The text of this note has been forwarded by mail and until its receipt it cannot be discussed."

Still More Marines.

Adolfo Diaz, so-called leader of the conservatives, and who was a $1,000-a-year clerk in an American corporation in Nicaragua at the time when he contributed $600,000 to foment the present "revolution," is admittedly very friendly to the proposed treaty with the United States. In conversations with the American minister, Eberhardt, Diaz has repeatedly said that he would "welcome" such an arrangement.

AIMEE CHASES DEVIL IN MANHATTAN; KNOWS HER ONIONS; GETS THE KALE

Personal Feminine Charms Thrown in for Good Measure as Boobs and Sophisticates Gurgle in the Slop

By NAT KAPLAN.

Snow and sleet, influenza and pneumonia may be in the air; thousands may be pondering a choice between the river and the army; the bottom of the steel market may drop to the accompaniment of lamentations—and happiness is just around the corner of Broadway at 235 W. 33rd street where Aimee McPherson is staging return bouts with the Flesh and the Devil.

Happiness, salvation, music, thrills and living proofs of the perennial truth of P. T. Barnum's adage may be found in the pine-board tabernacle where 2,000 gaze at the titian-haired spell-binder, while hundreds listen in via an amplifier in the basement.

Waste Us On a Stretcher.

"Only the four-squared gospel will meet the needs of the people today. This sick old world, like the man with the palsy, needs to be put on a stretcher four square, and carried to God. We need the four cords when we get there to let the people down to Christ."

All this in a husky contralto, in precise, staccato sentences, explaining that the four cords are baptism, salvation, the spirit of the holy ghost and the second coming.

Those seated in the gallery take up the choruses of the elect on the main floor. "Yea, Lord." "Glory be to God." and "Hallelujah." This is swelled by the rumbled response of those who are listening in via the basement amplifier.

Mrs. P. T. Barnum.

A maudlin crowd, except for those who come as students of showmanship to see this lady minister who plays upon the heart-strings of her hearers with the deft sureness of a Duse, Fiske or Bernhardt.

"Jesus will save you. Jesus will save you," cries an old lady, during an interlude.

"Our preachers need the old time power. The church or the minister who tries to get along without the holy ghost is like the automobile which you try to run without gasoline. The chassis is there, the wheels and the fine paint, but what you need to get is a gasoline station."

They swallow this raptly—the metropolitan booboisie as well as their yokel brethren.

Especially when Aimee emotes in her inimitable wistful way, as appealingly as an experienced panhandler or Jackie Coogan in "The Kid."

Gurgle, Gurgle.

"People ask me how I can conduct meeting after meeting. Well, have you ever seen one of those old-fashioned watering carts? The cover is opened up, a tap is turned, it is filled up and goes forth again to water the dusty roads.

"I am like that watering cart. I reach up and turn the tap of faith and gurgle, gurgle, I am full. The Lord fills me up and renews me day by day."

Stuff like that hits the weeping brothers and sisters like a slug of Father John's or Lydia Pinkham's.

Then Aimee calls for hymns like "The Hand That Was Wounded For Me" and "Shall We Gather At The River," and goes downstairs to pray with those who have been listening in. She follows this up with a piano selection of an old hymn, kisses and prays over any youngster that happens to be near and calls it a session.

Legs And Breasts.

Beneath the long white robe she invariably wears, set off by a dark blue or black cape, a generous view of how grey-and neatly-turned ankles is offered. And when she leans far over the reading desk to drive a message home with an all-embracing gesture there is more than a faint suggestion of the outline of her breasts.

A large, mobile mouth, as reclipped as any you will see along Broadway, and amber-colored eyes are her most dominant features. Her marcelled amber head is as aggressively poised as that of any front-row chorine.

Yes, Aimee knows her onions, and jaded city editors are sure of front-page copy as long as Aimee stays around town, which will be just as long as the souls she hopes to save come across substantially.

But we still see the Devil around his old haunts—or was that Adolphe Menjou?

Aimee and Tex Guinan Have Swell Time Kidding Idlers of the Metropolis

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.

One of the figures of fame in little old New York is Texas Guinan. One of the bright lights of the Pacific Coast is Aimee Semper McPherson.

Aimee is now in New York, and among those she visits is Tex. The other night she paid a visit to the 300 Club where Tex relieves the uncomfortably rich of their surplus bankrolls.

She was received with open arms. One of the customs of the 300 Club is to introduce from the floor all the famous people who visit her club. Such folks as Harry K. Thaw, bootleggers, actresses, actors, crooks, and then some, have had that "honor" confirmed on them.

And folks, let it be understood that Aimee is no stepchild! She was introduced to the wicked people who she wants to save from hell (and cop their bankroll, incidentally). When she was leaving the club, Tex shouts: "Give the little woman a hand," and the house bounds stand up and cheer for "lil' Aimee."

Tex reciprocates. She takes her chorus and visits Aimee's tabernacle. And why not? They are both in the same graft only Tex gets one group of suckers and Aimee another group.

Undoubtedly they recognize that they are "sisters under the skin" and therefore feel comfortable in one another's company.

Tex is at least honest. But Aimee—well—

AIMEE SPLURGES SALVATION CASH ALONG FIFTH AVE.

Syracuse Godders Don't Want Her There

Opposition was encountered yesterday by Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, notorious evangelist, to her scheduled revival meetings in Syracuse, N. Y., this week.

A dozen ministers and representatives of several religious organizations have telephoned to her at the Hotel McAlpin asking her to cancel her Syracuse trip and warning that she will receive no cooperation from them, Aimee said.

"Nothing can induce me to remain away from Syracuse," she asserted. "I will be there for three days and will give two sermons each day. And if they try to close the arena which I have engaged, I will speak from the street corners if necessary."

Line of a shopping tour along Fifth Avenue proved too strong for Aimee and she delayed her departure from New York to permit a grand spending spree with money contributed by New York's gullible.

Accustomed by three years' experience, stenographic help, she made the rounds of the shops and often took dictation while trying to attract tourists.

Aimee had all the time she wanted, for the train which will take her to Syracuse, N. Y., for more revival meetings, did not leave until after midnight. She will return to New York in a week to arrange for a trip to Florida. She is leaving for her upstate tour after four days in the city.

Supreme Court Voids Americanization Law For Hawaiian Schools

INSULL REFUSES TO SAY WHO GOT POLITICAL CASH

Took Quarter Million From "The Till"

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Samuel Insull revealed today to the Senatorial Investigating Committee that he had spent out of the tills of the companies he controls, $237,325 in the elections for U. S. senators in Illinois last year, was his personal attorney, and political handy-man, Daniel P. Schuyler. Schuyler was threatened along with Insull with contempt charges.

Insull Power King.

Insull is the super-power and street railway king of the middle west, and according to his own story, has heavily subsidized the "right sort" of candidates for public office there. He and Schuyler admitted that Insull gave Robert E. Crowe $5,000 to support Joseph P. Savage, candidate for county judge in Chicago, and Schuyler admitted handling $14,000 in currency, but neither would say who it went to, except to local candidates. Insull owns up to handing Frank L. Smith's supporters $125,000. Smith is in trouble over it now.

Insull admitted giving Chas. V. Barrett $10,000. Barret had previously testified he received it.

Handed Out Money.

The public utilities magnate also agreed with the committee that his political expenditures included, aside from the above: $125,000 to Col. Frank L. Smith, $25,925 for anti-world court propaganda, $15,000 to George E. Brennan, $10,000 to Roy O. West. Barrett and Savage were local republican leaders in Chicago while Brennan was the democratic nominee for the senate.

Insull startled the committee by answering that the money was just "taken out of the tills of the companies" that he controlled. He swore to drawing from his own account a single check for $100,000. He would not say who the check was made out to, but insisted it was for money thus "borrowed."

Sablin Boasts That He Plots War On Russia

sible amelioration of the internal situation in England, following and as a result of the rupture of relations with Moscow, but adds that at the bottom of his heart he himself does not believe in the possibility of a radical change in the situation in England in the event of an "expulsion of the reds."

Suspected Nickolai.

In the same document Sablin deems it interesting, and points it out, that there are rumors spread in certain quarters that Locker-Lampson's anti-Soviet campaign is financed by Grand Duke Nikolai Nikolaievitch. A member of the Romanoff family!

In his report of the fifth of January, 1927, Sablin produces the contents of a memorandum presented to the British government from the International Anti-Comintern League, headed by Aubert.

Consulate "Diplomats."

From that report it appears that there exists, attached to the league a special Russian center, evidently directed by white guardists and having close relations with "diplomats" of Sablin's kind. In the report Sablin unfolds a scheme of anti-Soviet work for the white immigrants abroad. He points out the necessity of carrying on constant propaganda among Europeans presuming upon them not to grant credits for exports to Russia, nor to contract any long term deals with Soviet organizations.

Charches Agree.

Sablin points out very big achievements in the caus eof approachment and cooperation of the orthodox and anglican churches. Big sums of money have been collected and transferred to Russia.

Sablin emphasizes that though at the given moment there is no hope of a rupture of Anglo-Soviet relations, the anti-Soviet campaign in England will be continued with unremitting energy.

MONT. FARMERS IN CONVENTION VOTE PROGRESS

Demand Reduction of Interest Rates

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

PLENTYWOOD, Mont.—The first state convention of the Progressive Farmers of Montana was attended by about 40 delegates from all over the state, largely from the eastern and central counties. The delegates drew up a state constitution, passed several resolutions on progressive subjects and elected officers for the coming year.

Wallace Opens Convention.

The meeting was opened by P. J. Wallace of Plentywood, chairman of the National Executive Board, followed by William Bouck, former master of the Washington State Grange and now national director of the Progressive Farmers of America, who told of the work in recently establishing a national office at Minneapolis and of the strides the movement is making throughout the whole United States. Organization work was proceeding especially rapidly thruout Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota and neighboring states.

Several significant resolutions were passed by tha convention. It was resolved that the Progressive Farmers of Montana demand the Montana legislature work for the passage and enactment into law of a bill that will reduce the maximum rate of legal interest from ten to eight per cent on all moneys and credits. Other resolutions were passed on the proposed merger of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific systems in Montana, a resolution favoring the Farmer-Labor Party, another favoring the retention by the state of all natural resources and the taxing of all existing water power corporations on a Hydro-Electric Tax Plan, the revenue therefrom to be placed in a general school fund.

Oppose Imperialism.

The Progressive Farmers of Montana also stated they were not in sympathy with the administration's attempted military dictatorship in Nicaragua, Mexico and China, and demanded that the United States armies be withdrawn from Nicaragua and China. Copies of this resolution were mailed to the senators and representatives in the United States Congress and to Secretary of State Kellogg.

State officers that were chosen at the convention are as follows: State director, Chas. Jones, Daniels County; Field Manager, Harry Wilson; Archer; Secretary, Hans Rassmussen, Plentywood; Educational Director, A. N. Wankel, Dooley; Treasurer, Nels Mosbey, Dagmar; Chaplain, Lorene Hamilton, Musselshell County; Guard, C. M. Joslyn, Avondale; Shepherd U. G. Bainhouse, Comstown; Shepherdess, Ella Adams Bonesteel; Purchasing Agent, J. A. Blodgett; Matron of Junior Councils, Mrs. J. Oathy, McCabe; Representative on the National Directory, P. J. Wallace.

The Plentywood Council of the organization gave a big banquet for the delegates and visitors, after which they all marched down the street singing songs of the Progressive Farmers.

National Job Swindle Discovered; But the Crooks Are Protected

CLEVELAND. A national job swindle gang has been unearthed in Cleveland. This gang includes a Cleveland, a Los Angeles and a third man in Chicago. It appears that the group had a big suite of offices in Cleveland, and advertised for sales distributors and branch managers for the sale of an anti-auto theft lock. $25,000 is said to have been cleaned up on this deal.

Had Protection.

But it appears also that the men had protection, so much so, that Common Pleas Judge Weygandt has told Prosecuting Attorney Stanton: "What the judges want to know is whether there are two kinds of justice in Cleveland and Cuyahoga County, one for the wealthy and influential and another for the destitute and friendless." It has been said that bribes as large as $5,000 were offered to "whitewash the leaders of the swindle ring."

That is the way "justice" goes today. You must have at least $5,000 before you can talk to "official protectors." As there is talk of appointing a special prosecutor, it would appear as if the District Attorney is close to the "official protectors" of this swindle gang.

Propagandists Against the Revolution in China Have Hard Time of It

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE New York Sun concludes an editorial with the observation that, "In China the pen is still far more deadly than the sword".

It does not say whether it expects that power to be overcome by the growing invasion of the armed forces of the imperialist robber nations. It does not measure the might of hundreds of battleships, thousands of marines and tens of thousands of soldiers being rushed to oriental waters by the governments at Washington, London, Paris, Rome and elsewhere. That is no doubt an editorial reservation.

It is true that the Chinese government, that has now established itself at Hankow, is using the printed word as a powerful propaganda medium. Whole newspapers of large and national circulation are utterly lacking, where the Chinese workers, like those in Mexico, are too poverty stricken under foreign exploitation to buy a daily paper if they are able to read, the small leaflet, or the wall poster becomes the medium of communication that wreaks havoc with the armed forces of the enemy.

The New York capitalist daily says that:

"In the great Cantonese drive of last summer, which cleared out all opposition south of the Yellow River, letters, proclamations and promises were showered upon enemy troops with the intention of shaking their allegiance to the northern alliance, in this the paper bombardment succeeded to such an extent that there were defections when the time came for battle, and occasionally whole commands are known to have gone over to the southerners".

Commenting on the present appearance of the Kuomintang armies before Shanghai, this same publication declares:

"Something of the kind appears to have been tried with equal success in the drive upon Shanghai. It is reported that for a long time Sun Chang Fang, defender of Shanghai, had been paying $600,000 per month to Chang Tsung-Chang, war lord of Shantung, with the understanding that Shantung troops would undertake the defense of Shanghai whenever the time came. In the recent fighting these reinforcements were urgently needed, but they were not for hoeing.

"Another and even more striking illustration of the skill of Cantonese propagandists was disclosed within the seaport city itself. Searcely had the news of the defeat of Kiangsu forces in the south reached there when the red badge of Canton appeared as by magic on the streets. Operators of streets cars, of the water works and of other utilities at once went on strike. Members of the seamen's union quickly joined the demonstration.

"Hands at the local factories and even clerks in department stores quit their jobs and began parading the streets, cheering for the Cantonese. Thus, so far as Internal defenses of the city were concerned —save only for European, Japanese and American defenders of foreign concession areas—notice was served upon the invaders they could expect not opposition but support".

Then the Sun reaches this conclusion:

"Unless the northern allies are able to find some good propagandists of their own it would not be surprising to see them emerge from the struggle with decidedly the worst of it."

But triumph rests on the standards of the propagandists who speak the will of the masses. The Russian people were ready for the ovarthrow of czarism, which contributed to the success of the Bolshevik propagandists, who have no doubt passed on many of their ideas and methods to the Chinese. In China the masses everywhere have shown that they are ready and eager to struggle in support of the revolution. It has not been difficult to infuse great multitudes of the followers of the subsidized northern war lords with this spirit. The result has been the Hessian armies sent in by the foreign imperialists have met with little native support, and whatever of this existing is fast dwindling.

Workers in the United States might well take an example from the Chinese. Labor in this country has a war of its own with a battle front in every shop, mine and factory, and on every railroad in the land.

The DAILY WORKER exists today as the only English-language, national daily in the land. But it is not possible to reach millions of workers with "The Daily", at least not immediately. But it is possible thru the spread of leaflets, thru wall newspapers, thru shop papers, thru living newspapers, and similar propaganda mediums to reach immediately great masses of workers with explanations of the issues in strike. Labor is vitally interested and to which the workers will respond. One does not need to be a member of the Workers (Communist) Party to thus function as a labor propagandist and develop the appetite among workers for the great propaganda organ and organizer of the working class, The DAILY WORKER. Take this lesson from the Chinese.

NEW MASSES IS TABOOED IN N. J.; TO DEFY ARREST

Ruth Stout Courts Jail At Meeting

The business manager of the New Masses, Ruth Stout will be arrested at Newark Wednesday evening.

Her arrest will follow her violation of a ukase issued by District Attorney Smith which bars the New Masses from the fair city of Newark. District Attorney Smith has decided that the New Masses is lewd, lecherous, lascivious, obscene and sacrilegious. Besides he doesn't like its political views.

The pure-minded Smith, and his ukases hold no terrors for Ruth Stout, who will appear at Scott Nearing's lecture Wednesday evening with a bundle of New Masses under one arm and her attorney, Morris Ernst, under the other.

Ruth Stout is a Quaker—at least her family is—but Smith has stirred her fighting blood.

"I hope he brings a big squad of cops," she said in the course of The DAILY WORKER in an exclusive interview. "These pious souls get my cost." (Ruth Stout is a frail little woman and she calls everyone she'ate.).

The battle between Newark's defender of sweetness without light and Ruth Stout promises to overshadow Scott Nearing's lecture on "America Today." The bout will start at 8 sharp at the Newark Labor Lyceum, 14th St., and Springfield Ave.

Born In America, She Finds Herself Alien Unable to Re-enter

Because you were born and bred in New York doesn't mean that you are an American citizen, entitled to return to America, if you should leave according to our immigration laws.

Mrs. Louis Savio Riva was born at 67 Park Street. She attended Public School 23, and lived in New York City until seven years ago when she went to Italy with her husband an unnaturalized Italian.

Deserted by her husband, Mrs. Riva attempted to return to this country. She faces deportation on the ground that she "lost her citizenship" when she married her husband.

The fact that she has on friends or relatives in Italy and that she has two brothers and sisters in New York City doesn't cut any ice with the immigration officials.

ATLANTIC STORM TAKES 25 LIVES; RESCUERS DROWN

Millions Damage Along Sea Coast

At least 25 persons had lost their lives today and many millions of dollars in property damage had been done by the terrific storm which swept the Atlantic coast from the Delaware capes to northern Maine over the week-end, accompanied by the highest tide in 50 years and by mountainous seas which wrecked small craft and carried away docks, breakwaters and hundreds of bungalows and houses.

The death list was headed by the names of eight coast guardsmen who lost their lives when the CG-238 was pounded to pieces on Outer Pearled Hill Bar, off Provincetown, Mass. After pulling its anchors in the gale, the small vessel broke up in sight of hundreds of helpless watchers on the beach, who were unable to launch a boat in the raging surf.

Three persons died in New England of exposure, and one due to an accident caused by the blinding snow storm. Five deaths were reported from Pittsburgh and one from Philadelphia, while in New York City two persons were killed when they slipped and fell on icy streets.

50 Are Injured.

Another sea death occurred when the second officer of the barge Talboy was washed overboard outside Ambrose Light. More than fifty persons were reported seriously injured.

Thrilling rescues were reported from various sections where coast guardsmen and volunteers put out in small craft to take off persons aboard stranded vessels being pounded to pieces in the surf.

The heaviest property damage was along the New Jersey and Long Island coasts, where several towns estimated losses of $1,000,000 each.

Leviathan Afraid.

The gale and its accompanying angry seas delayed almost every vessel due to arrive in this port. The giant liner Leviathan, due to leave Boston this morning, will not venture out on the stormy sea until tomorrow, it was learned.

The most pitiful scenes were enacted in Long Beach and Staten Island, where marooned persons, hundreds of them, waited in the biting cold.

Beaches Littered.

Dawn today found the beaches all along the coast littered with the wreckage of homes and the battered hulk af small vessels, that were picked up when the seas swept the shores.

At the Battery the waves rose five feet higher than they had ever before, and it was only due to a sudden change in temperature that lower New York was not flooded more seriously.

Eighty-one fires kept the fire department in the five boroughs busy. Engines were driven over slippery streets with ingenious skill. In a blaze at 1821 Second Avenue, Patrick O'Keefe, 50, was burned to death, and his mother, Mrs. Julia O'Keefe, 80, seriously injured. An exploded kitchen stove caused the fire.

Phone Service Disrupted.

Telephone service in the Metropolitan district was more severely disrupted by the elements yesterday and last night than at any other time since 1914.

Buffeted for three days by the hurricane off the Atlantic coast, the Ward Liner Siboney arrived from Havana 24 hours late, with an injured list of 14 passengers and crew.

INJURE MANY OHIO CHILDREN WORKING UNDER LEGAL AGE IN FACTORIES; GOVERNMENT REPORT

CLEVELAND, Feb. 21.—It is constantly being reiterated that there are no children working in American industry. The reports about the sweatshops in New Jersey, which have just been published, are amplified by reports on children in industry in Ohio.

The Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, Washington, D. C., has just issued a report dealing with child labor in the United States. And far as Ohio is concerned, it notes that 2763 children were injured in 1926, working in industry, suffering a loss of 74,943 days. Three children were killed, 27 suffered permanent disability and 20 had some member amputated. This study covered a period of only 9 months of 1926.

Of the 2763 accidents, "1891 occurred in manufacturing establishments, 400 in nonmanufacturing occupations, 31 in mining, 17 in agriculture. Of the total number of accidents, 618 were caused by machinery." 13 children under the legal age were injured while using emery wheels or abrasive or polishing machinery; 3 under the legal age were running elevators; and 2 under the legal age were working at night. Nearly half of the injured children had no work certificates."

ITALY SAYS "NO" TO ARMS PARLEY; JAPAN ACCEPTS

Preparation for Balkan War Causes Rejection

ROME, Feb. 21.—Italy has flatly rejected President Coolidge's proposal for a conference to limit naval armaments. While her official reply, which was handed to Ambassador Fletcher today, is couched in soft diplomatic verbiage it decisively refuses to participate in a disarmament conference.

Is Preparing For War.

Italy's note, coupled with the French rejection of the Coolidge proposal, puts a crimp in the move to limit cruisers, submarines, destroyers and other type of naval craft. The hoary argument that Italy cannot limit her armaments while other nations are increasing theirs was again advanced by Italian diplomats. That Italy is building up a large army and navy in preparation for a Balkan war and as part of her imperialist policy is the real explanation of Italy's move, according to those who know the situation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Japan's acceptance of the Coolidge proposal to limit naval armaments tickled Secretary Kellogg's peace-loving soul today.

Kellogg Rejoices.

In a formal statement issued tonight he declared, "I am highly gratified at the reply of the Japanese government, which reflects the spirit of friendly cooperation in which the principal naval powers must approach the problem of competitive building if a real solution is to be found.

Conference Date in Dim Future.

That the conference will not take place before June 1st, it it takes place at all, was indicated by Secretary Kellogg's acceptance of the Japanese suggestion that the conference be held a few months after March, when the Preparatory Disarmament Commission will meet.

Not To Disturb Ratio.

The hollowness of the proposed conference was made plain today with the publication of the Japanese note, which declares that "the Japanese government is further gratified to learn that it is not the intention of the American government at this time to put forward rigid proposals on the ratios of naval strength to be maintained by the several powers in the classes of vessels not covered by the Washington treaty."

The rejection of the Coolidge proposal by France and Italy make the conference a hollow pasture.

Daugherty's Graft Trial Is Postponed

The trial of Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general of the United States, and Thomas W. Miller, post-war alien property custodian, charged with conspiracy against the government, has been adjourned until Thursday because of the death of the son of Juror Number 12, Arthur Zinn.

Both the government and the defense have completed their cases, and summing will begin Thursday, prior to giving the case to the jury. The men are charged with conspiracy in connection with the return of $7,000,000 in war seized German assets, for which they are alleged to have shared in a $391,000 "fee."

Daugherty was "ill" with a high fever. He said in court that he had suffered an attack of ptomaine poisoning over the weekend.

High Society Romance Couples Idler's Name With Suzanne Lenglen

Baldwin M. Baldwin, of California, son of "Lucky" Baldwin and heir to his millions, looked surprised today when asked if he were engaged to marry Suzanne Lenglen, noted professional tennis star and former world champion. Suzanne looked surprised also.

"No," they said. "No, indeed."

Baldwin even went so far as to point out that he has a wife and a pair of twin daughters in the west. He admitted however that he and Suzanne are sailing on the liner France for the temperamental star's own country, on Saturday.

He is not sure yet whether he will be the man to supersede "cold cash" Pyle as Lenglen's manager, but admitted that he had talked the matter over with Mademoiselle, and that perhaps there would be an interesting announcement on Saturday just before they leave for Paris.

Baldwin, who has been following Suzanne around on her tennis tour, said he had not been living with his wife for some time, but that no action toward a divorce had been started.

KU KLUX KLAN CITY OFFICIAL IS GREAT DON JUAN

Turns Nurses Quarters Into Harem

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Feb. 21.—Commissioner G. W. Hendershott, elected to the city council less than one year ago, on a ticket supported by the Ku Klux Klan, stands liable to be impeached, if charges brought against him for official misconduct, is sustained at a meeting of the city council to be held Feb. 29th to hear the case.

A bitterly contested election was held last April from which the more intelligent voters held aloof, the hooded cult fighting it out with the corrupt political machine.

Hendershott, one of the favorites of the klan, was made superintendent of public safety and under this head he was senior officer of the city hospital, with the staff of nurses subordinate to his dictatinn.

From charges brought against him now by the mayor and chief-of-police one would conclude that Mr. Hendershott thought it was a harem he was taking charge of. In the seventeen charges brought against him by the nurses, he is alleged to have been guilty of undue familiarity, indecent proposals and 3vert acts.

The city papers are handling this case fully and the charges of the nurses, which are spicy in the worst sense of the word has been given full publicity in one paper and while deleted in part in the other, was raw enough.

Commissioner Hendershott is a married man and member of the Baptist church of which he is a constant attendant. Mayor Stout is also a member of this church and is being much blamed for exposing the names of the nurses to the public by his frame-up when many think the fight is being waged for purposes outside of the councilman's misconduct.

Facts and Fables About Washington and the Father

the three million part in and for the revolution. Large sections remained passive thruout all the years of struggle, or sided with whichever group had the upper hand for the moment. Fully 25,000 colonists were enlisted and fought against the revolution under the banner of King George.

John Adams, one of the outstanding figures from the very start on the side of those fighting for independence, wrote that "New York and Pennsylvania were so nearly divided, if their propensity was not against us, that if New England on the one side and Virginia on the other had not kept them in awe, they would have joined the British." On another occasion he wrote, "On mature deliberation I conclude . . . that more than one-third of the influential characters were against it (the revolution)."

Large numbers of colonists were forced into the war scorn against their own desires. Our intrepid "fathers" of the revolution knew how to apply pressure and resort to forceful means in order to get such supporters for their cause when oral and written arguments and persuasion failed. Fisher, in his "True History of the American Revolution" says: "Men were ridden and tossed on fence rails; were gagged and bound for days at a time; pelted with stones; fastened in houses where there was a fire with the chimney stopped on top advertised as public enemies, so that they would be cut off from all dealing with their neighbors. They had bullets shot into their bedrooms; money or valuable plate extorted to save them from violence . . . Their houses and ships were burned; they were compelled to pay the guards who watched them in their houses; and when carted about for the mob to stare at and abuse they were compelled to pay something at every town."

Truly, the Ku Kluxers and 100%ers of today, with their methods of violence and intimidation live true to the forms exhibited by their forefathers of 150 years ago.

The revolutionary army was a motley crew. They did rank and file fought and suffered with dauntless courage, but many of them became discouraged with the corruption and intimidation rife, as well as the shopkeeping elements which supplied them with the necessities for carrying on the struggle. Desertions grew at an alarming pace. Hart, the well known historian, tells us that one of the methods used to keep discipline among the troops was to give the deserters more than 100 lashes, not on the naked back. The whip, which was usually formed of several knotted cords, cut thru the skin at every stroke. Desertions were often punished at several different times, a certain number of stripes repeated at intervals of two or three days, in which case the sufferer was in a state of inflammation, and the skin rendered more sensibly tender; and the terror of the punished is greatly aggravated."

The chief enterprises in Puritanical New England of pre-revolutionary days were smuggling, the trade in rum, and ringing slaves from Africa for the West Indies to the Colonies. Business never feared adverse comment from religion. Even the preachers who were loudest in their damnation of sinners would invest their savings in these lucrative undertakings whenever they could do so.

We need not wonder that smugglers, rum and slave traders, were strong for independence from the mother country, which sought to stamp out the smuggling, and imposed heavy taxes upon the rum and slave traders. McMaster, one of the ablest of American historians, says, "If the infamy of holding slaves belongs to the South, the greater infamy of supplying slaves must be shared by England and the North. While the states were yet colonies, to buy Negroes and, sell them into slavery became the highway to profit to the inhabitants of many New England towns . . . . Molasses brought from Jamaica was turned to rum; the rum dispatched to Africa bought Negroes; the Negroes, carried to Jamaica or the Southern ports, were exchanged for molasses, which, in turn, taken back to New England, was quickly made into rum."

That the business was profitable cannot be doubted. "The distilleries of Boston and other ports," we are told, "especially Newport, Rhode Island, became great in number. There are 22 stills in this town alone, and Massachusetts distilled 15,000 hogsheads annually. Rhode Island had 150 vessels engaged in the trade."

Smuggling developed to a fine art during those days. From the accounts of Lecky and Fisher we learn that smuggling became so popular with merchants and shippers that they lost all sense of gratitude toward the mother country when France was trying to annex the colonies to Canada. The New England colonies were systematically supplying the French fleets, garrisons and the French West India islands with provisions at the time when British arms against them were being financed by them for the reason "that it was a good policy to make as much money out of the enemy as possible." The North was the head of this mercantile interests which brought the large plantation owners and slave-holders to the support of the war for independence. Along with their fellow colleagues, the merchant smugglers. Large numbers of Southerners were heavily in debt to British merchants and saw in the revolution an opportunity to repudiate their debts." As early as 1732 the British Parliament had passed a law to protect their merchants. It provided that debts due to British merchants by Colonists "might be proved by testimony taken in England" while colonial real estate was made liable to seizure for payment.

"It is not always," said Wendell Phillipe in 1861, "ideas or moral principles that push the world forward. Selfish interests play a large part in the work. Our revolution of 1776 succeeded because trade and wealth joined hands with principle and enthusiasm—a union rare in the history of revolutions. Northern merchants fretted at England's refusal to allow them direct trade with Holland and the West Indies. Virginia planters, heavily mortgaged, welcomed anything that would postpone payment of their debts . . . So merchant and planter joined heartily to win independence. To merchant independence meant only direct trade—to planter cheating his creditors."

That the revolution was successful is due, not so much to the Continental army under Washington's command but rather, as A. M. Simons says, "because it was an American phase of an English civil war. It was not so much a conflict between colonies and English government, as it was one aspect of a war between different divisions of the English people on both sides of the Atlantic. indeed, it was, in reality but one battle in a great world-wide struggle between contending social classes. It was part of the violent upheaval of society by which the capitalist class overthrew feudalism and came into power." This struggle in England was the struggle between the Tories (supporters of the old order) and the Whigs representatives of capitalism, free trade, etc. Thus the American revolutionists had powerful allies right in England who did as much to aid the cause of the colonists as did the colonists themselves.

It is important to remember that General Howe, who was in command of the British forces in the colonies during the greater part of the war, "was a most intensely partisan Whig, and had been one of the strongest defenders of the colonies in the British Parliament. He was absolutely opposed to any use of force against them; believed them to be in the right and entitled to victory." Certainly the American rebels could not have hoped for a better opponent. Time after time delayed, retreated and feasted so as to give the ragged and poorly equipped forces of Washington every advantage. Time and again he could have annihilated the colonial forces had he but desired to do so. Howe was finally recalled to England, Parliament investigated his peculiar conduct and it was only thru the pleas of influential friends that he was saved from punishment.

Thus do we discover that the real facts in the case are quite at odds with the "made-to-order" histories which are dished out to us in the public schools and Fourth of July celebrations. Of course, we can understand why the real facts are not taught. If they were, the false glory which has been built up around the revolutionary "fathers" and the institutions they created would be destroyed—and with that would go the profits and unreasonable parasitism which is so necessary to perpetuate the present system.

Who Were the Revolutionary Fathers?

John Hancock was known as the Prince of Smugglers and was to stand trial in Boston for smuggling the very day when the Battle of Lexington was fought, which marked the beginning of open conflict. Simons remarks, that "like all smugglers, Hancock cared little for the forms of law and longer for the profits of lawlessness to secure his ends. When his sloop, Liberty, was endeavoring to run the customs he first tried to bribe the officials, and, failing, locked up the guard in a cabin and unloaded the sloop under the protection of a gang of thugs secured for the occasion."

Another authority speaking of New England says, "Nine-tenths of their merchants were smugglers. One quarter of all the signers of the Declaration of Independence were bred to commerce, the command of ships, and contraband trade. Hancock, Dunbull and Hamilton were well known to be cognizant of contraband transactions and approved of them."

Randolph, Madison, Monroe, Marshall and Washington and many leaders of the leading "fathers" were men of great wealth and power, the owners of vast plantations and large numbers of slaves.

Washington, in his position as royal surveyor a number of years prior to the revolution, "had used his position to locate land for himself within the limits which he was supposed to preserve from settlement."

Simons writes about him, "He had helped to maintain what would now be called a "land lobby" in London to push his schemes. When Parliament, by the Quebec Act, extended the jurisdiction of Canada over the western country, his interests were directly threatened, and had the revolution not occurred, he would have lost some 30,000 acres of land."

In short, "honest Georgie" was a large scale land speculator of his day. How anyone who knows even the slightest about the means and methods of land speculators can swallow the tale about George and the cherry tree, is quite beyond the bounds of ordinary imagination. And still that silly story is regeated with clock-like regularity to school children every year.

Professor Beard has made a remarkable study of the "fathers," their wealth, business interests, etc., in his Economic Interpretation of the United States Constitution, which deserves a wide circle of readers. Let us once more remind our readers that the Sons of 1926 (with their graft and corruption and greed) are worthy descendants of the Fathers of 1776.

The Constitution—A Class Weapon.

It may be true that the American people do not worship kings (tho one would not admit that judging by the receptions given to foreign princes who visit these shores) but the ruling class has carried on a consistent policy ever since the Constitution was framed and adopted to make it appear as a divinely inspired document. They have made a fetish out of it—and woe to him who dares speak of it in critical or unrespectful terms.

The years immediately following the Revolutionary War were the most critical in the history of the republic. The poor farmers, workers and petty traders who had fought and bled for the cause of freedom were in "getting the bag."

"The last shot had scarcely been fired," says O'Neal, "when these veterans, retracing their weary steps homeward, were confronted by a terrible situation. It is doubtful whether history affords another such example of the shameless ingratitude displayed by a ruling class toward its benefactors that the "fathers" displayed toward the poor veterans of the war.

"Many farmers and laborers found that while they were at the front risking their lives in the struggle the wealthy classes were confiscating their little farms and household goods for debts contracted during the war and imprisoning thousands for debt."

The depths of poverty to which the large masses were reduced during that period can never be adequately described. And while the masses starved and hungered, the new ruling class, with the "fathers" at their head, revelled themselves at the expense of these masses. The prisons were jammed to capacity with debtors, the while speculation, graft and corruption grew and flourished.

It is not to be wondered at that those who had given years of their life to fight against feudalist autocracy should now begin to question where the "equality and democracy" for which they had fought was to be found. The discontent grew by leaps and bounds. Soon the men who had fought at Lexington and Concord, who had tramped borefoot thru the snows at Valley Forge, were up in arms against their new oppressors. In state after state rebellion grew—only to be ruthlessly crushed by brute force and strategy.

During the happenings a resolution was passed by the Virginia House urging all states to send representatives to a convention in Philadelphia "to provide effectually for the commercial interests of the United States." The holding of the convention was endorsed by congress in 1787, but the resolution specifically limited the convention business to "the sole and express purpose of revising the Articles of Confederation."

When the delegates assembled in May, 1787, they closed the doors to the public. No member present was permitted to take notes at the session not to let anyone outside know what was going on. James Madison, however, did take notes, but these were made public only after his death and fifty years after the Constitutional Convention had become history. For four months the secret conclave continued in session. Secrecy was indeed necessary for the "fathers," for had the impoverished and debt-ridden masses heard their debates, matters would have terminated otherwise that they did.

Only 12 states were represented at the convention, and one of these dropped out from the proceedings later on. Of the 65 delegates elected only 55 were ever present (all men of great wealth and power) and but 39 of these signed the final report.

From Madison's notes we learn of the supreme contempt expressed by all of the delegates for the toiling masses. Ben Franklin was the only one ever to speak in their favor. Ellsworth of Connecticut expressed the sentiment of the majority when he said during a debate of slavery, "Let us not intermeddle. As population increases poor laborers will be so plenty as to render slaves useless."

It was the unanimous opinion of the gathering that the right to rule lay in the hands of the "landed, commercial and manufacturing" elements, while the masses were to be excluded to the greatest degree. Madison expresses himself thus on one occasion, "In future time, a great majority of the people will not only be without land but any other sort of property."

The Constitution was so framed as to centralize government to the greatest degree, giving a semblance of democracy. Alexander Hamilton and many others urged the president be elected for life, should also one branch of congress. That Constitution has been made almost impossible of amendment can be realized when we consider that after 138 years only a score of amendments have been made possible. Professor Smith in his book on the American Constitution says that more than one fortieth of the population of the country, properly distributed, can prevent any amendment from being made to the Constitution.

Political Depravity of the Fathers.

Rum running, smuggling, and slave trading had schooled the "Fathers" in all manner of fraud, tricks, and chicanery. They were therefore well fitted for the task of drawing up a new constitution for the country. "The delegates," says McLaughlin, "believed that society existed for the preservation of private property" even as their descendants of wealth and power believe today.

Woodrow Wilson, in one of his books characterizes the "Fathers" in this fashion, "The government had been originated and organized upon the initiative and primarily in the interest of the mercantile and wealthy classes. Originally conceived as an effort to accomodate commercial disputes between states, it had been urged to adoption by a minority, under the concerted leadership of able men representing a ruling class."

Perhaps McMaster gives us an even better picture of them. He says, "A very little study of long-forgotten politics will suffice to show that in filibustering and gerrymandering, in stealing governorships and legislatures, in stuffing ballot, in the polls, in colonizing and distributing patronage . . . in all the frauds and tricks that go to make up the worst form of politics, the men who founded our state and national governments were always our equals, and often our masters."

When the constitution was finally presented to the various states for acceptance, the "Fathers" resorted to every means at their command to secure its ratification by them. Money, force, fraud and demagogy were all resorted to. The men who in the convention had sneered at and abused the masses now appeared as their spokesmen and champions.

It was finally adopted—but by a minority vote. Only six of the states adopted it without some opposition. The remaining seven in adopting it recommended amendments ranging from four by South Carolina to thirty-two by New York. Another point worthy of consideration in its adoption is the restricted number of voters who had any say whatsoever in the new republic which had declared that "all men are created free and equal," each with the same chance to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. "Of the mass of unskilled laborers" to again quote McMaster, "the men who dug ditches, carried loads, or in harvest time helped the farmer get in the hay and grain—it is safe to say that very few, if any, ever in the course of their lives cast a vote." Of the white population of the first census had a population of four millions, but of these, "probably not more than 120,000 men ever had the right to vote." Once freemen at that time constituted about one fifteenth of the total population.

The sacred character of the constitution and of the revolutionary "Fathers" has been thoroly exploded. But the ruling class will continue to spread false information regarding them as long it can possibly do so. If the celebration of the Sesquicentennial means anything to the workers, it should mean a campaign of enlightenment regarding the early history of this country.

In summing up some of the points which have been dealt with in the space of this article we cannot do better than quote the words of A. M. Simons:

"The organic law of this nation was formulated in secret session by a body of men in existence then in a conspiratory trick, and was forced upon a disfranchised people by means of dishonest apportionment in order that the interests of a small body of wealthy rulers might be served."

BOWERY SWAYING MEN WAIT HOURS FOR BOWERY MISSION DOORS TO OPEN

"We Can't Have the Place Dirtied Up by Those Fellows;" Feed Only on Saturdays at 7 P. M.

On the Bowery near First St., a block and a half from the office of The DAILY WORKER, the Hadley-Wesley Mission does its business for the cold.

Last night when New Yorkers felt chilly from the snow and hail storm that has kept the metropolis in its grip for the last 24 hours, several hundred homeless and hungry men, old, young, white and black, stood in double file outside of its door.

It was half-past five. The line was constantly growing as more men came. Two DAILY WORKER reporters went to the mission and knocked for admission. The door was unlocked.

After several minutes' wait they were ushered into the presence of the assistant superintendent, a small cranky fellow in a bathrobe.

Be Hungry Only Once a Week.

"What provisions do you make for those men waiting outside? Do you feed them," asked The DAILY WORKER reporters.

"Not every night," answered the "A. S." with a little touch of anger in his voice. "Only on Saturday nights."

"The rest of the week we allow them to enter at 7 p. m. and sleep on the cellar floor. They cover themselves with newspapers."

"It's pretty cold out tonight. Don't you think they should be admitted now," The DAILY WORKER men asked.

"I should say not! And have the place all dirtied up? No!

"The place has to be kept in good shape. We have many respectable visitors from time to time and the place must be kept clean."

Vain Efforts To Keep Warm.

Outside in the bitter cold, the hungry men swayed from side to side in unison. They stamped the hard pavement and from time to time slung their arms back and forth.

Threadbare summer coats were drawn up around emaciated throats. Sunken cheeks and a dry, hacking cough betrayed tuberculosis busy at its work among them.

Inside the mission were rows and rows of empty seats. It was warm and as cheery as a mission can be. The assistant superintendent was visibly well satisfied with himself and his work.

Well Established Joint.

"Yes, sir, we've been here for 24 years," he added. "I've been here 18 years, and assistant superintendent was here the last four years. John Callahan, he's chaplain down at the Tombs, is superintendent."

From his platform above the empty mission seats, we could see the swaying, shivering line of hungry men.

They were there 24 years ago when the mission started.

There they were now, waiting long 90 minutes until the Yale lock on the mission door would be released and they could be marshalled in, two by two.

And 24 years from now?

SUPREME COURT USED TO EXCUSE RENT LAW LAPSE

Legislators to Hide Behind Judge's Robes

Enter the big wigs of the state supreme court into the city housing situation. They are ready to declare the housing law unconstitutional.

Hiding behind the black skirts of that august body, the legislature is going to let the rent law expire June 1st.

Neither republican nor Tammany representatives from New York City dare to allow the rent law to lapse, as it would mean political suicide at the next election. But they can more or less gracefully back out of the embarrassing predicament by saying that as the supreme court would rule out any extension of the makeshift rent law, there's no use of extending it.

Rent Lobby Active.

This is the lowdown from Albany where worried assemblymen are trying to serve their landlord friends while saving their faces with the voters. The real estate lobby is using the argument as a trump card in their plea for unrestrained profits.

Some democrats favor extending the laws, but lowering the limit from $20 a room to $12 a room. At present tenements renting at more than $20 are not subject to rent control.

Last week republican machine leaders came to New York City as the guests of the landlord and real estate interests. They were personally conducted through the workers' districts and shown a dozen or so empty places—empty because the rents were too high.

Visibly impressed, they returned and obligingly paid off their debt for the pleasant jaunt by issuing statements declaring that the "emergency be over." Assemblyman Edmund Jenks led the chorus.

At Quiet On Housing.

Governor Al Smith is not pressing his housing bank bill. Under this statute, the state would furnish money to build workers' tenements if private capital does not come to the rescue. The alleged philanthropists who were to "prime" the pump hundred millions at 6 per cent interest having failed to dig up, the buck has been slipped back to Al, but he's too busy with his presidential politics to do anything about the state housing bank.

Bob Rust, publicity agent for August Heckaber, who operated in vain recently for $500,000,000 from millionaires—at 6 per cent—to erect workers' tenements, declares the only municipal housing is the only solution.

What Heckaber's Agent Says.

"The entry of the city into the housing field may be decried, but how can the problem be otherwise solved," Rust asks. "There are builders who are willing to undertake construction of apartments renting from $15 to $20 a room per month if they can secure tax exemption, but there is no eagerness on the part of capital to undertake the erection of tenements to rent at $12 a month even with the aid of the present housing laws.

"Kilpatrick says that tenants can pick and choose today, which may be true with high and medium priced apartments, but it is not the fact where low-priced tenements are concerned, and it is this class of buildings which it is proposed to construct.

"Those who have developments like the Metropolitan Life group at Long Island City and similar structures in Manhattan are confronted by a tremendous demand for rooms and have long waiting lists. The present demand is one that must be supplied by city and state."

Kilpatrick, the real estate shark's representative, calls Rust crazy in his proposal for municipal housing at $8 a room. Nothing less than $12 a room will put up warrens for the workers, he claims. At this figure, private capital cannot be obtained, as there is more money in apartment hotels for the wealthy. Kilpatrick decides the entire city housing scheme as "silly and impractical."

The only conclusion for workers is that New York's housing is a hopeless mess in which capitalism has failed miserably and can do nothing to retrieve its failure.

Would Bar Grade Crossings.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 21.—A bill requiring the Long Island Railroad to eliminate grade crossings in Rockaway Beach and Far Rockaway was introduced in the legislature by Assemblyman Brunner, democrat, of Queens. The expense would be shared by the railroad, New York City and the State. The bill carries an appropriation of $3,000,000 to pay the state's share.

75-Year Old Man, Tired Of Poverty, Tries Gas; Fails Again; What Now?

A world indeed on the eliing of the cash register had no place for old David Guckman, 75. All day Sunday he sat in his wretched little room at 11 Audubon Avenue, wondering what he could do.

No job, no relatives, no hope. Tenards evening hunger spoke to him in unmistakable terms. He wanted something to eat, and wanted it badly, but in the barren little room he called home there was not a bite to eat.

But there was a gas jet. At 6.15 he went over to the grease-spattered little plate. He fingered nervously with the jets, debating. . .

An hour after neighbors smelled the fumes. They called police. The police called Dr. Johnson. Dr. Johnson called the gas company's pulmotor crew.

After laboring over the inert form of the old man for 55 minutes, they succeeded in bringing back the flickering light of life.

Old David Guckman finally sat up on his wretched cot.

Still alive. And now the same old problem again. . .something to eat, something to do.

PAPER BOX UNION GIVES THANKS TO HOUSEWIFE UNION

Working Women Great Aid to Strikers

Lauding the United Council of Working Class Housewives for their aid in the struggle of the paper box workers for a decent wage, Fred Cailon, strike leader, made public today the following letter to Kate Gitlow, secretary of the council.

Dear Madames and Sisters: There few lines can only serve as a very poor acknowledgement of what your council did for the striking box makers.

The Kitchen, which came in the nick of time and made possible a nineteen-week glorious battle, will be enshrined on the minds of the workers for the rest of their time. Your ability to render aid without the usual routine and formalities which everyone hamper the essentials is something to be admired and to be followed by all workers' organizations. Your spirit should be fostered so that it may be emulated more and more as the struggle becomes keener and keener that we may be able to function efficiently and unselfishly in the interest of the workers.

With deep appreciation, expressing as I do, the feelings of the box workers through their general strike committee and executive board, I am happy to remain, Fraternally yours, (signed) FRED CAILON, manager, Paper Box Makers' Union of Greater New York.

The United Council of Working-class Housewives is an organization of wives of workers, and working women for the protection of the workers' interest. It is headed by Kate Gitlow, secretary, with offices at 237-880 East 11th Street, New York City.

Among the recent activities of the organization is their active participation in the Passaic strike, where the women have opened up and operated four kitchens in conjunction with the International Workers Aid, feeding thousands of workers and children by the thirteen months' struggle against the embittered mill barons for a union and a decent living wage. This, however, did not limit the council's task in other working class fields, and as soon as the paper box workers needed help, the United Council of Workingclass Housewives was on the scene immediately operating the relief work there.

At the present time the council is busily involved in the cloak-makers situation, organizing the women, raising relief for the needy cloakmakers, and arranging country-wide mass demonstrations for the unconditional freedom of the arrested cloak-makers.

Sixth Organizer Under Arrest in Philadelphia

(By Worker Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 21.– As I was coming up to a shop at 141 N. 12th St., a few days ago, to speak to some of the girls for the purpose of getting them into the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, a big 400 pound gorilla grapped me by the arm and put me under arrest. He grabbed me so hard he almost broke my arm.

I told him not to handle me roughly, and to cut out the rough language he was using, as I intended to come along peacefully. But he held me until we got around a corner because the boss was watching him.

Then we walked peacefully into the station house.

When I arrived there all the "bulls" said, "Aha!" just as tho a desperate criminal had been caught. They then put me down in a cell with the rest of the girls.

Later a matron came down and asked me the reason for my being there. I told her that I was arrested for merely speaking to my girl friends in the shop, and that because we wanted to have a union they arrested us. I told the matron that we have just as much right to have our union as the bosses have to have their association. She admitted this was right.

She then took me up to were the women were kept—which was a room with about three inches of dust on the walls, no water, and no provisions for habitation by human beings. About three hours later we were bailed out by the union representatives and we were released for a hearing tomorrow. This makes the sixth member of the organization committee who has been arrested in this organization drive.

The rest of the prisoners. There the worst of language was used and the stench was awful.

FOUR COPS NOT ON LAW'S SIDE, Order KICK NEGRO NEWSIE OUT OF HIS JOB

Subway News Monopoly Brings Minions of Law Into Action Against Lone Boy

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.

11.30 p. m. The 116th Street subway station platform. A Negro newsboy about twelve years of age selling a Sunday paper.

A sleepy and tired crowd anxiously waiting for the downtown train. The Negro newsboy occasionally sells a paper.

On the street in front of the entrance to the subway is a newsstand. Also selling a newspaper every once in a while. But the little Negro sold a paper, that meant one less customer for the newsstand.

A tall thin young man comes down to the subway from the newsstand and scowls on the Negro boy. He then beckons to him. "Didn't I tell you before to get the hell out of here?"

"I'se just as much right to sell my papers down here as you have to sell them up stairs," answered the youth.

"Get the hell off this platform on the next train or I'll kick you out of here. Do'y'e here me, beat it!"

Soon the train comes, takes on its passengers and leaves the station. The Negro newsie is still there.

Dealer Thinks Again.

The time for argument was past. Jumping over the turnstile the newsdealer grabs the newsboy by the scruff of the neck, dragging him under the turnstile and halfway up the stairs. Then the Negro boy shows fight. He puts his head towards his locket as if he was after something and immediately his attacker let's him go.

The boy hurries back under the turnstile and then suppressed tears began to flow. "Just because I am black is no reason for you trying to pick on me. I am going to sell my papers here and you ain't going to stop me!"

The newsdealer was now hurrying up the stairs muttering about going to "get a cop."

The Cops Come.

Five minutes pass. The Negro newsie is again shouting, "Buy yer Sunday paper!" The newsdealer reappears on the scene. On his trail are four guardians of the law. Four cops to protect the newsdealer from the terrible little Negro newsboy.

The five jump over the turnstile. The four big and brave policemen surround the boy. One of them says: "I hear that you have a knife. Hand it over!"

"I ain't got no knife!"

Without any further ado two "New Yurk's finest" search the boy—and find no knife!

A Taste of Czarism.

The policeman speaks again: "Take the next train off this platform and don't return!" (Very much the same words used a little earlier by the newsdealer.)

Another train enters the platform. The Negro newsie enters it. The cops can see from his face goes newsdealer a smile on his face goes to the street followed by the four protectors of law and order. A good night's work done!

EFFICIENT WORKERS ADD MILLIONS TO PROFIT OF RAILROADS BUT NOT MUCH TO PAY ENVELOPE

(By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press)

Railroad wage increases are spreading too slowly to give the 1,850,000 American railroad employes a share in the record prosperity of the industry. Railroad profits for 1926, according to the bureau of railway economics, totaled $1,231,494,000, exceeding 1925 by $92,798,000. This gives the owners a return of 5.81 per cent on the exorbitant valuation placed on the carriers by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The $92,798,000 increase in profits of expense to revenues from 74.1 per expense alone, if it had been diverted to wages, cent in 1925 to 78.1 per cent in 1926. would have added $50 to the annual The gross revenue of the roads increpay of every worker in railroad service. creased 4.2 per cent, from $8,189,268,An increase of $100 a year could 000 to $6,451,148,000, but operating have been granted all rail employes expense increased only 2.9 per cent, and still leave 5 per cent profit to from $4,584,600,000 in 1925 to $4,717,the railroad owners on their $21,175,- 590,000 in 1926. The part played by employe efficiency in producing the record profits as railroad profits, the owners would is shown in the reduction of the ratio have found $63,000,000 less in the profit bag.

The wide distribution of record 1926 profits among the railroads is shown in the following table:

Profits	$17,585,808	$20,184,546

Considerable profit gains are shown by 20 of the 24 roads in the tables. Especially noteworthy are the coal carrying roads and roads serving the southwest. Norfolk & Western leads in increase of more than $9,000,000, about 30 per cent, in its profits. Delaware, Lackawanna & Western increased its profits $3,396,000 or 14-5 per cent. Erie & Ohio shows an increase of nearly $7,000,000 or 22 per cent. The Baltimore & Ohio's gain of $7,771,000 is an increase of 18 per cent over 1925. Pennsylvania's gain of more than $6,000,000 is also important although the size of its 1925 profit makes the percentage gain smaller.

Among the western carriers Rock Island leads with a gain of 22 1-2 per cent, adding nearly $4,000,000 to profits. Santa Fe reports $9,888,000 more profits than in 1925, a gain of 21 1-2 per cent, while Southern Pacific's $6,666,000 gain is an increase of 13 1-2 per cent.

Citizens Union Chief Repeats His Demands For Milk Investigation

The milk scandal was simmering today as the grand jury prepared to hear William Schleffelin, head of the Citizens Union, again on Wednesday on his charges of widespread graft.

Schleffelin told the grand jury that Health Commissioner Harris should be halted before them to tell what he knows about the meets. Harris however showed no haste to divulge his information.

The Citizens Union chief made no direct charges, but declares the situation merited a thorough investigation by the district attorney's office.

Senatorial Lame Duck Wishes Polite Excuse To Pacify the Jobless

WASHINGTON (FP).—Sen. Pepper of Pennsylvania, republican lame duck, has offered a resolution calling for investigation by a special committee of the senate, "of the problem of cyclical recurrence of periods of business depression and unemployment, with a view to determining the relation of the construction of public works to the stabilization of employment and industry."

The committee would be ordered to report a scheme for stabilizing employment through the advance planning of public works such as river improvements, roads and buildings.

Pepper is a Mellon senator, well-informed on deflation and the other causes of cycles of depression, as well as being quite familiar with the fact that goods accumulate when labor is so little it cannot buy them. But he wants other reasons.

Deportation of Arabs Working in Steel Mill; Not Needed Longer

(Special to The Daily Worker).

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio., Feb. 21.– Wholesale arrests and deportation of Arabian workers at the Campbell plant of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company is being engineered by the immigration department of the United States.

When the steel plants were operating at capacity the steel barons paid no attention to alien workers, but now that unemployment stalks in the steel towns, the steel barons, aided by the government, are making arrests and deportations of foreign born workers charged with illegal entry into the country.

Picket Law Fails to Protect N. J. Workers

NEWARK, N. J. (FP).—Despite the New Jersey picketing law that went into effect last July, giving labor the legal right to picket in strikes, organized labor continues to be harrassed by injunctions. The latest is an order from vice-chancellor Backes forbidding truck drivers to picket the plant of the New Jersey Warehouse Co.

The dispute began when the company issued an order that workers must report on Sundays and clean, wash and oil the trucks they drive during the week. The men protested through their shop steward and demanded time and a half pay for the Sunday work. The shop steward was fired and the truck drivers struck. Business agent Carlin will appear in court to show cause why the order shall not be made permanent.

Waukegan Workers Unite For Political Action

WAUKEGAN, Ill.—(F.P.)—Political fruit blossomed almost immediately for labor in Waukegan after a large mass meeting of the Lake County Labor League had said its say. Having been practically powerless for many years as the victims of old-party politicians who tore up their promises the day after election, the unions and worker cooperatives recently organized the league with the purpose of endorsing dependable candidates for the city primary March 8 or putting up their own slate. The mass meeting was the first public step. The result was almost miraculous.

When the city council, consisting of the mayor and 4 commissioners, met a day or so after the league's mass meeting, a couple of measures were rushed through for which labor had been vainly begging for years. One was an ordinance forbidding erection of tent colonies by contractors on public work. The colonies had been used to house imported labor. The other was that in future contracts for public work must contain a clause requiring the employment of resident workers when available. This means in practice union labor, as the building trades are well organized.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers are in the thick of a long contest to reunionize the clothing shop of Grenert & Rothschild, which ran away from union conditions in Chicago, was brought to terms in Waukegan and then broke its agreement. It is rumored that the firm will surrender but for general political reasons is holding out until after the primary. The chief open enemy of union progress, Secretary Fowler of the chamber of commerce, recently left town suddenly for unexplained reasons. He is not expected back for some time.

Some Chance to Pass Longshoremen Accident Bill, Seamen Excluded

WASHINGTON, (FP).—In a final attempt to secure the aid of the rules committee in getting a rollcall on the Longshoremen's Accident Compensation bill, the House judiciary committee has recalled that measure and has dropped from it the clause which brought seamen under the compensation provisions. The Intl. Seamen's Union was bitterly and actively hostile to the including of seamen in the bill. Since they have been eliminated, the measure may yet pass the House as it has already passed the Senate, and may be signed before this session

Workers' Protection Laws Develop Sharp Class Lines in D. C.

WASHINGTON, (FP).—At a public hearing on the Fitzgerald and Underhill workmen's compensation bills for the District of Columbia, staged before the Citizens' Advisory Council, speakers for organized labor were in direct collision with speakers for the employers' associations, chamber of commerce, merchants, realtors and other groups of local capitalists. The affair proved that in Washington the class line is sharply drawn when the A. F. of L. seeks to get workers' protection laws.

John B. Andrews of the American Assn. for Labor Legislation assisted the trade union speakers. No decision was voted.

Gary Steel Mills Full Of Petty Graft; Negro Pays Boss to Keep Job

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

GARY, Ind.—A Negro worker in the transportation department of the Illinois Steel Co. reports cases of graft, which sap the meager pay envelopes of the workers in this department.

The colored workers are the greatest sufferers in this instance. They are the first ones to be laid off during the slack. They are compelled to pay graft amounting from five to eight dollars at a time in order to keep their job. The cash is paid to the head boss.

The colored worker who told this story was unable to name this head boss, except to indicate that he was a foreigner. The steel company is thus playing a clever game. The Negro workers are naturally aroused against the foreign-born workers generally, because they suffer discrimination at the hands of some of them. It is not so easy for the workers to see back of these foreign-born bosses and foremen the hand of the steel trust playing the age old game of divide and rule.

The same system of petty graft is in existence in other departments of the steel works. It is being complained against by the steel workers. This system extends beyond the steel mill gates. There are a number of petty politicians, of boarding house keepers and stool pigeons of the steel company, who have a pull with the steel mill officials and make money by securing jobs to those who are willing to pay for them.

Not Enough Schools.

BOSTON (FP).—Twenty thousand unemployed teachers have been discovered in the United States by a Boston university survey, reports Jesse B. Davis, professor of education and the survey. Davis told the New England Vocational Guidance Association that the acute shortage of teachers includes many poorly prepared and inexperienced. He asserted that 60% of the prospective teachers in training at Boston university were not satisfied that they were making the right work. He advocated better vocational guidance in education and raising of teaching standards.

BILL TO CREATE WHISKEY TRUST READY TO PASS

Distiller Mellon Will Set Selling Price

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21. — Priefledged status was voted for the revised medicinal liquor control bill by the house rules committee today. An effort will be made to pass the bill next week.

The bill, which is a complete departure from the plan first proposed by General L. C. Andrews, dry "czar," would limit issuance of permits to manufacture medicinal liquor to six private distilleries and provide for concentration of existing stock in six warehouses.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon would be given vast powers over medicinal liquor manufacture, including price control through the granting of permits.

The provision permitting six distilleries to operate a monopoly creates a medicinal liquor trust, whereas the original bill provided for government ownership of the factories that produce drug store whiskey.

Two Gary Workers Fired Because They Fought for Labor

(By a Worker Correspondent).

GARY, Ind., Feb. 21.—The discharge of a worker from the American Sheet and Tin Plate Co.; a subsidiary of the steel trust for distributing circulars announcing an anti-war meeting, caused a mass meeting to be called in order to protest the infringement by the steel trust upon the constitutional right of the steel workers to the freedom of their political opinions.

Told to Leave Party.

Albert Salario, the worker who was discharged, was told by the superintendent of the plant, Mr. Gray, that he would be restored to his job, if he dropped his membership in the Workers' (Communist) Party of America and joined an "American" organization, the Young Men's Christian Association.

The policy of this "American" and "Christian" organization is not to permit the Negro residents of Gary the use of the swimming pool and other facilities. This is the kind of organization that the steel workers are being coerced to support financially and by becoming members.

The meeting was attended by the spies of the steel corporation. There was Mr. Kilpatrick, of the employment office of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Co., Mr. Fletcher, colored, of the employment office of the Illinois Steel. Mr. Fletcher is a proud father of the Industrial Workmen's Association, organized in order to keep the Negro workers from getting busy organizing a real union. There was also present "Frank," the Mexican spy, to see how the Mexican workers feel about the injustice committed against a worker of the mills.

Tell of Their Discharge.

Milan Maleseveich and Albert Salario, two of the three workers fired from the steel mills told the story of their discharge, and related that he was active helping to make a success of the meeting called to fight together to win together.

Then Albert Salario spoke. He told how he distributed leaflets calling upon workers to protest against war on Nicaragua, China and Mexico. Like Maleseveich, he was reported to the tin mill officials, was called in by the superintendent and questioned.

Speeches Enjoyed.

The speeches of both Milan Maleseveich and Albert Salario were very much appreciated by the workers who were present.

Herbert Zam of the Young Workers' League exposed the sham democracy existing in the Garyland.

J. Ford explained that there is no other solution for the racial problem of the Negro worker as well as his economic problem than the fight to abolish the capitalist system responsible for all forms of oppression.

Slave Driving Traction Deal by Pangalos Meets Detroit Greeks' Protest

CLEVELAND.—Word has reached the Greek workers of this city that the Greek government has entered into an agreement with "The Power and Traction Co." of England, whereby the British company is in a position to enslave the workers and the entire people. The contract is for a 60 year period, and cannot be revoked by any succeeding government. In case of strike or other trouble, the British company is allowed to import scab workers or material that it desires or requires.

This means enslavement for the entire Greek nation, and the Greek workers in America will do their share to prevent the carrying out of the agreement. A mass protest meeting is being called by a Cleveland committee and will be held at 2372 Ontario Street, second floor, on Wednesday, Feb. 23 at 7:30 p. m. Among the speakers will be Comrades Evarcheus, Mosboriaues and I. Ginitzer, District Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party. Admission will be free.

700 Workers Striking Tapestry Carpet Mills Of Kensington, Phila.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 21.—For 23 weeks now the Tapestry Carpet Workers of Kensington, Philadelphia have been striking against a 15 per cent reduction in wages and against open shop conditions. On Feb. 14th another mill, the Hirst Roger Carpet Co., consisting of about 200 workers, came out on strike against a 15 per cent reduction in wages and open shop conditions. The strike now involves about 700 workers and their families confronted with one of the bitterest struggles that the textile workers of Kensington have ever experienced.

The bosses are very anxious to break this union because these workers have always taken an active part in any struggle of their fellow workers, especially strikes of unorganized textile workers. The workers of Kensington, a great textile center, depend upon this union to keep the standard of wages and conditions higher. In many mills the bosses give the workers a few more dollars in their pay envelopes to keep the unorganized from organizing.

The Tapestry Carpet Workers realize that their picket line is the battlefield for hundreds of thousands of textile workers and they are determined to win.

For 22 weeks the strikers have been walking the picket line. About 80 pickets have been arrested on false charges of assault and battery. Two injunctions have been issued against them to have not more than 10 pickets on the line.

These strikers are doing their share by being on the battle front. It is up to all other organized workers to keep the fight going by sending ammunition. Send all funds to: Tapestry Carpet Workers' Union, 2012 E. Stella Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

Lovett Fort Whiteman Speech Results in New Negro Congress Branch

PASSAIC, Feb. 21.—The American Negro Labor Congress opened a campaign in this city with a mass meeting at Workers' Home, 27 Dayton Avenue, at which Lovett Fort Whiteman, national organizer of the congress, defined the organization as "a movement to bring the Negro masses into the American labor movement."

"The Negro's condition arises," he told a comfortably crowded hall "from the fact that he is a worker, that he is a worker of cheap labor, that he is a victim of exploitation, and the color of his skin simply serves as a badge of his condition. To the white exploiter, his color denotes that he is unorganized and easily exploited, that he is practically disfranchised, jim-crowed and generally weak, that he does not enjoy all the rights and privileges that go with citizenship under the present form of government.

Boss for Prejudice.

"The prejudice against the Negro is fostered and kept alive by the white employing class in order to keep the workers divided, the better to exploit them.

"We maintain that the future of the race in this country is wrapt up with the working class. The American Negro Labor Congress appeals for co-operation between the working class of both races, inside the American labor movement."

Branch Started.

The floor was thrown open to discussion after Mr. Fort-Whiteman's address, and a lively discussion followed of plans to promote the organization of a branch of the congress in this city. Most of those present enrolled and the following provisional officers were appointed: James Jackson of Lodi, organizer; Harold Foster of Passaic, secretary; Alex Bennett of Lodi, treasurer.

WASHINGTON, (FP).— Rail labor executives are now convinced that the Baltimore & Ohio will not try to operate the Western Maryland Railroad, control of which it recently bought from John D. Why Does Not President Lewis of the United Mine Workers Denounce the Coal Barons?

President Lewis, in a public statement in Miami, has spurned all aid from the Communist International which he says has been offered in case the United Mine Workers has to strike to enforce a wage agreement with the coal barons on April 1.

This heroic repudiation of assistance from any Communist source is a gesture designed to convince all and sundry that the UMWA officialdom would rather see the miners' union suffer a disastrous defeat rather than take one ruble from revolutionary workers for strike relief.

Just why any further proof of this is thought to be needed by President Lewis is a mystery to us. He has, in addition to insisting on beginning the expulsion campaign against Communists by the unseating of William F. Dunne at the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor in 1923, made war upon the rank and file of his own union.

Starting the drive ostensibly as an effort to expel and disbar Communist miners from the union, the Lewis machine ended by stripping the union constitution of all provisions for rank and file expression, giving the officials unlimited power to levy and collect assessments and prohibiting foreign-born workers who are not yet citizens from holding office in the union.

The union, while the Lewis machine has been persecuting and expelling the best elements in the union, has dropped from over 400,000 to 273,000 members. In the last six months, when all records for coal production have been broken as a result of American coal owners grabbing British markets, the UMWA LOST 19,000 MEMBERS.

Important districts like West Virginia have been lost to the union as a result of the corruption and incompetency of the Lewis machine. Other important districts have shrunk to half their former strength.

In yesterday's issue of The DAILY WORKER we published a complete refutation of one of the main charges made by the Lewis machine in connection with its war on the Communists. The letter of William Feeney, an organizer of the union at the time the letter was written and still on the Lewis payroll, shows only one example of the practical application of the Lewis policy.

The Communist International never fails to call on the workers of all countries for support of struggles like that which the UMWA may be called upon to fight. But it does not give financial aid to these struggles. The trade unions of the Soviet Union do, however. Lewis may say that he will accept no support from the 9,000,000 trade unionists of the Soviet Union but if, as appears probable, the UMWA has to fight for its life, the union membership will show that Lewis does not speak for them by accepting gratefully such support as the Russian workers can give them in a struggle against the American coal barons to save the union.

Lewis may have added to his prestige among coal operators and wider capitalist circles by his recent statement but he has not helped the coal diggers who pay his salary of $12,000 per year.

We would like to remind President Lewis that the enemies of the United Mine Workers are the coal barons who are here in America. The Communist International is the most powerful friend any organization of workers can have. What the UMWA needs is a few statements from Lewis denouncing the operators in terms at least as vigorous as those he uses in slandering the Communist International.

This would serve to put the union in a fighting mood for the struggle which, in one form or another, it will have to wage after April 1. But this is too much to expect from an ardent supporter of President Coolidge.

Drive Spies and Informers Out of the Labor Movement.

The frame-up of two members of the Furriers' Union in Boston, evidently an extension of simiar methods used in New York to other centers, should call attention again to the viciousness of the attack on the needle trades unions and the co-operation which can be denied no longer between government agencies—police, courts, etc.,—and the right wing in these unions backed by the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor.

On the scale which the drive on honest, fighting trade unionism is being conducted, the united front of bosses, government and reactionary trade union officials is without precedent in the labor movement.

Heretofore it has been the rule that all differences of opinion as to internal policies have been subordinated to the main question of defending workers and union leaders who are arrested and indicted as a result of strikes and boycotts. This rule no longer applies. It is clear that the right wing leaders are playing the role of informers and in some cases that of prosecutors.

Expulsions of left wingers from the unions are followed systematically by prosecutions in the capitalist courts. The right wing officialdom marks the victims for the police agents.

The members of the American labor movement will not support this black reaction once they are informed of it. The right wing leaders cannot defend their actions in this respect before any body of American workers.

There is needed a broad mass movement for which a base already exists in the traditions of American labor. There should be organized at once a drive for the defense of the workers who have been deserted and betrayed by officialdom and there is no doubt that it will become one of the most effective weapons for checking the drive against militant trade unionism and militant trade unionists and finally smashing it completely.

No worker who feels the pressure of American capitalism but who will support a movement with the slogans of "Support all framed-up strikers" and "Drive spies and informers out of the labor movement."

The Committee for the Preservation of the Trade Unions is reported to be in the market for an undertaker. When last seen the committee was suffering from shortness of breath, a sluggish liver and moral leprosy.

The Rand School: A Memory

S. A. Gerlin.

In 1906, when the Rand School of Social Science was founded, it had a couple of little rooms in one of the decayed brown-stone mills in lower 19th Street, near Third Avenue. There weren't many students, but they were earnest, hard-working, and eager. The faculty consisted of one or three men, one of whom also acted as executive secretary of the school. The students came from the shops, the factories, or the mills to learn the facts about the capitalist system so they could return to their "hometowns" and spread the message.

These were the "full-time" students, who spent a period of six months studying the history of the working class, economics, history, and sociology. Many of them later became organizers, speakers and writers for the Socialist movement.

Some of the students slept in the little rooms on the top floor of the building. Joints on Third Avenue were constantly being discovered where a big meal could be had for 25 or 30 cents. Some of them washed dishes in neighborhood restaurants for their meals; others brought a little money with them and were able to spend all their time in study.

There existed then a spirit of comradeliness, co-operation, eagerness. This was before the World War and the Russian Revolution and America was to gain the Co-operative Commonwealth by electing the lawyers of the party to the State Legislatures.

The school was founded with a few thousand dollars bequeathed by Mrs. Carrie Rand, a lady with liberal and humanitarian instincts. The money she left didn't amount to a great deal, but it was sufficient to start the school going.

In the spring of 1917 the building at 7 East 15th Street was the headquarters of one of the branches of the Young Women's Christian Association.

In that year the Socialist Party was very numerous in the United States, and particularly in New York City. Its academic opposition to the war; Morris Hillquit's mayoralty campaign on the issue of cheaper milk; and a general program of petty reform attracted thousands of middle-class tradesmen and professional men to the party.

That's how the People's House was obtained.

(They also got the New York Call, a large building, and the fine printing presses).

Between 1917 and 1919 was the "Golden Age" of the Rand School. Thousands of men and women attended the lectures given at the school. A cafeteria was established on 15th Street, with a Irish and enterprising manager.

Courses were given by some of the best radical thinkers in America. This was a period of expulsions of unorthodox professors from the Universities. There was one from Pennsylvania, another from Columbia, and one from Clark.

At this time the Rand School was in a true sense the intellectual center of the American radical movement.

Then came the left wing split in the Socialist Party in 1919. The Rand School became the citadel for the right wing forces. Several of the instructors were "let go." One of them a teacher of history and political science was made uncomfortable, because of his dangerous doctrines, and he parted company with the school. He had previously lost his job in a Brooklyn high school for a similar reason.

It was at this time that courses were introduced in interpretative dancing, psycho-analysis, and "The Ring of the Nibelung."

It was natural, in this atmosphere of culture and refinement, that there should be soft jobs, administrative twaddle, fat salaries. There was an Educational Director, an Executive Secretary, an Assistant Educational Director, a House Manager, a Publicity Director.

And once, the three typists and office clerks had their pay cut two dollars each, because the "comrades ought to co-operate."

One winter Morris Hillquit gave a series of talks on "From Marx to Lenin." East Fifteenth Street between Fifth Avenue and Union Square was lined with limousines. The crowded, auditorium the Executive Secretary, who resembled a Dean of Women in a Middle-western University, beamed. The Socialist movement was making definite progress. It was gaining recognition.

Today the Rand School is a tomb. In spite of attractive courses on Psychoanalysis, Appreciation of Music, and Current Poetry, few come. Even its gym classes have been liquidated. The library is usually empty. The large clock on the wall of the library stopped a few months ago. Nobody has taken the trouble to wind it up again.

The Passaic Spirit

By CYRIL BRIGGS.
(Strike Publicity Director)

"We would go to work in hell if there's a union there, but we would not go to work in heaven without a union."

That's the way one of the Forstmann-Huffmann strikers put it the other night at a meeting of Forstmann-Huffmann strikers, Ukrainian Hall to consider whether it would be advisable to call off the strike and attempt to build a union upon the basis of the concessions offered from the stubborn and reactionary Julius Forstmann, president of the company and die-hard leader of the Employers' Union which is refusing to concede their workers the right to organize and do collective bargaining.

"Union or Nothing!" came another voice from the crowd and the demonstration that followed proved that both speakers had properly interpreted the sentiment of the packed gathering.

"Union or Nothing!"

"Union or Nothing!" It was the Passaic spirit speaking. The courageous Passaic spirit which in its flame-up in January, 1926, lighted up one of the darkest periods of labor history in this country and served as a beacon light to the workers in every trade throughout the country. The Passaic spirit, which held out month after month against the bosses' starvation offensives, against the poison gas propaganda of the kept press, against all sorts of underhand attacks upon their leaders, against the clubs of the police cossacks and the fines and jail sentences of judicial tools of the millionaire mill bosses. The Passaic spirit, which rallied the workers in the most exploited trades to resist the wage-slashing, union-smashing campaign of the bosses, which was in full swing at the time. The Passaic spirit, which by its tenacity and steady courage, finally forced four of the nine original struck mills to back down and concede to their workers the right to organize in a union of their own choice, and not in the hated company union.

"Rather Starve Than Surrender"

Faced with diminished relief contributions, with food stores that are almost empty, and for months now living on a monotonous diet of cabbage, potatoes, beans and bread, the Passaic spirit declared it was as impossible to starve than surrender. "We would rather starve than surrender," a tall, angular woman, who carried a baby in her arms, called out after hearing the report of Relief Chairman Wagenknecht.

The Forstmann letter, while putting the company out record as dispensing with the silly fiction that there was no strike in its plants, does not concede recognition of the right of workers to organize in a union of their own choice or to do collective bargaining. It merely declares, against all evidence to the contrary, that the company had never and does not now object to membership of its employes in outside organizations (whether religious, social or otherwise."

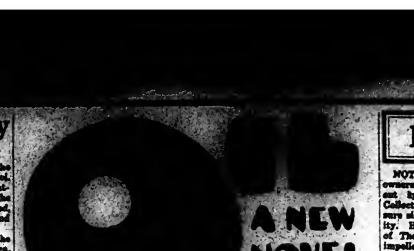
Meeting Two Weeks Ago.

The letter was first presented to the strikers on January 19. The crowd cheered wildly as their local leaders spoke in favor of the resolution to treat the letter as a basis for negotiations, not a basis of settlement. General Organizer Coco, Relief Chairman Wagenknecht, Gustave Deak, Ellen Dawson, financial secretary Local 1603, U. T. W., Thomas Tirzzo and Joseph Magliacano, Italian organizers; Emil Gardes and Ben Lawinski, Hungarian and Polish organizer, respectively, Feliz Torres and the members of the F. & H. committee, were elected some weeks ago to negotiate with the bosses as occasion presented.

Two weeks later, however, on February 2, another meeting was called and Vice-president Starr reported that every effort at further negotiations with the labor-hating Julius Forstmann had failed.

This time the local leaders, faced with a most serious relief situation, still opposed acceptance of the Forstmann letter as a basis for a settlement, but offered a resolution to call off the strike and let the workers return to work and strive to build up a union inside the mills.

The resolution had been passed earlier in the day by the strike executive committee and the delegate body. It declared that while the Forstmann letter was unsatisfactory, nevertheless it was a distinct retreat on the part of the mill owners and might be made the basis for building a real union within the F. & H. plants.



In addition to the two F. & H. plants, there are three other mills, New Jersey Spinning, the Gera, and the United Piece Dye Works, employing some 4,500 workers, who, with 2,000 from the four settled mills, who have not yet been returned to their mills, make a total of about 7,500 still out. Of these some two thousand have temporary jobs outside the mills, and contribute weekly to help give relief to their fellows. In spite of this the strain on the relief machinery is very severe.

Must Rush Relief.

No one can tell what the outcome will be, but such a determination as these strikers show should rouse a response among workers elsewhere. They must have relief at once. The organized labor movement must hurry them food, clothing, or money to buy this. And organized labor must act quickly, if the situation is to be saved, and the splendid spirit of the Passaic strikers utilized to make the victory complete.

Just Another Corpse.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Feb. 21.—The identity of the bullet riddled body of a well dressed man in Ridgewood Hills near here on Feb. 16, had mystified the Hackensack police.

"Bunny, I don't care about the other women—they will always be after you, of course. I was heartsick about Miss Tracy, because I knew she was a selfish woman, and I was afraid you'd find it out too late, and be wrecked. At least, I told myself that was it—I suppose the truth is I was just green with jealousy."

"Why, Rachel; You mean that you love me?"

"As if any woman could help loving you! The question is, do you love me?"

"I do—yes, truly!"

"But Bunny—" there was a little catch in her voice. "You don't show it!"

So then he realized that he had been wasting a lot of time! He had to take only one more step, and put his arms about her, and there she was, sobbing on his shoulder, as if her heart would break. "Oh, Bunny, Bunny! Can I believe it?"

So to make her believe it, he began to kiss her. She had been such a sedate and proper little lady, such a manager in the office and all that, he had been in awe of her; but now he made the discovery that she was exactly like the other women who had been in love with him; as soon as she was sure that she might let herself go, that it was not some blunder, or some crazy dream—why, there she was, clinging to him in a sort of daze of happiness, half laughing, half weeping, as he kissed her, there was mingled in his emotion the memory of how brave she had been, and how loyal, and how honest; yes, it was worth while making a girl like that happy! To mingle love with those other emotions, that appeared to be safer! And she was just as passionate as either Eunice or Vee had been, not a particle more sedate or reticent! "Oh, Bunny, I love you so! I love you so!" She whispered it in the darkness, and her embraces said more than her words.

"Dear Rachel!" he said, with a happy little laugh. "If you feel that way, let's go find a preacher or a justice of the peace."

She answered, "Foolish Bunny! I want you to know that you love me, and that I'm free to love you. What do I care about preachers or justices?"

So then he caught her tighter, and their lips met in a long kiss. If she tried to voice any more doubts, he would stop the sounds, he would find a way to convince her! And what better place for their love than this mysterious grove, the scene of their future happiness, they would have to buy this ranch now, regardless of soil deficiencies! It would be a haunted place; in after years, while the young folks had their games and pageants in this grove, Bunny and Rachel would look on with a secret thrill. Had it not been in ancient oak-groves that mystic rites had been celebrated, and pledges made, and holy powers invoked!

III

They found the justice of the peace next morning; and then they finished the inspection of the ranch, and drove back to Angel City and made arrangements for a first payment on the purchase price. After which they had the thrills of telling all their friends about having got married—strictly in the interest of the college, of course, and to avoid scandals in the bourgeois press.

Bunny went to see Ruth, and tell her; and strange to say, this embarrassed him. Bertie and Vee had planted in his mind the idea that Ruth had been in love with him for the past ten years; and now Rachel was certain of it; and these women had all proved to be right about each other every time! Also, there was a fact which he had not mentioned to Rachel; there had been a while on the way back from Paris, when he was debating in his mind whether it was Rachel or Ruth he was going to invite to become his wife! He had a deep affection for Ruth, the same still quiet feeling that she herself manifested. But the trouble was, there was Paul. Ruth was bound by steel chains to her brother—and that meant the Communist movement, and so Bunny had to wrestle over that problem some more.

Sooner or later you had to decide, and take your place with one party or the other. Were you going to defend capitalism by the ballot or by "direct action"? This much had become clear to Bunny—the final decision rested with the capitalist class. They were getting ready for the next war; and that meant Solaberism in all the warring nations, at the end of the war, if not at the beginning. The socialists would try to prevent this war; and if they failed, then the job would be done in Paul's way, by the Third International. But meantime, Bunny was drawn to the socialists by his temperament. He could not call for violence. If there was to be any the other side must begin it!

Whatever Ruth may have thought or felt about the news of his marriage, she gave no sign hut of pleasure. She had expected it, she said; Rachel was a fine girl, who agreed with his ideas, and that was the main thing. Then she told him that Paul was expected back tomorrow, and was to speak at a meeting—his supporters had got him into the Labor Temple by much diplomacy, and he would have a chance to tell the workingmen about what he had seen in Russia. Bunny and Rachel must come and hear him; and Bunny said they would.

This was the Sunday before election day, the end of a long political campaign. The workers had heard no end of appeals for their votes—but here was something different, more important than any election issues. However hostile the leaders of labor might be, it was impossible for the rank and file to resist the contagion of this miracle that was happening on the other side of the world—a vast empire where the workers ruled, and were making their own laws and their own culture. Paul was fresh from these scenes; his words were vivid, he brought the things before your eyes; the red army, and the red schools, and the red papers, the white terror, and the resistance to capitalist siege on ten thousand miles of front.

Oh, the fury of the capitalist press next day! They didn't report the meeting, but they published protests about it, and stormed in editorials. The LaFollette "reds" were bad enough, but this was an intolerable outrage — an avowed Moscow agent, who had been expelled from France, permitted to hold a meeting in Angel City and incite union labor to red riot and insurrection! What was our police department for? Where were our patriotic societies and our American Legion and our other forces of law and order?

Bunny called up Ruth next morning; he wanted to see Paul, to talk about the proposed college. Ruth said that Paul had gone down to the harbor, to see about addressing meetings of the longshoremen. These men had had a big strike while Bunny was abroad, and had taken their full course in capitalist government. Six hundred of them had been swept up off the street, for the crime of marching and singing, and had been packed into tanks with all ventilation shut off, to reduce them to silence. A score of the leaders had been sent to state's prison for ten or twenty years for "criminal syndicalism"; so the rest ought to be ready to listen to the Communist doctrine, that the workers had to master the capitalist state. There was to be an entertainment that night in the I. W. W. hall at the harbor; there would be music and refreshments, and Paul thought it would be a good chance to get acquainted with the leaders.

Bunny said that he and Rachel were going down to Beach City, and they might run over and bring Paul back with them.

BOOKS

NOTE:—Generally speaking, the ownership of property under the present system involves exploitation. Collecting books and literature is a sure sign either of juvenility or senility. However, if any of the readers of The DAILY WORKER ever get impelled to buy books we suggest an excellent way of disposing of them after they have been read.

(1) There are more than 50 class-war prisoners in the jails and penitentiaries of the United States who are there at the present time for violating ruling-class legislation. They are constantly asking for reading matter.

(2) The DAILY WORKER needs reference books.

THE AWAKENING OF CHINA, by James H. Dolsen, Daily Worker Publishing Co., New York. $.60.

The headlines about China are meaningless unless you know something about the forces behind the nationalist movement.

Dolsen's book is an attempt to get at the guts of the Chinese revolution —to get at the basic factors which brought it about and which therefore shape its character.

Dolsen uses the Marxist method. He does not bother with the east-west - and-never-the-twain-shall-meet-claptrap which is the usual explanation for China's attempt to clean out the foreigner. He digs into the fundamental economic forces and shows you how they produced classes with conflicting sets of interests.

The industrialization of China created two new classes—a native bourgeoisie and a native working class. These two classes are supplying the fireworks in China today. They are the backbone of the nationalist movement.

The native bourgeoisie wants to get rid of the foreign imperialists because it wants to be free to exploit its working class; the working class wants to get rid of the foreign imperialists because it is being savagely exploited. (Boys of twelve work eighteen hours a day for about 15 cents in the rug factories at Peking.)

Dolsen analyses the forces which have brought these new classes into being. He describes the growing strength and the consciousness of the working class which is taking the lead in the fight for China's liberation. He describes the murder of Chinese students and workers at Shanghai and Shameen in 1925 which gave impetus to the nationalist movement.

There is one powerful class in China that Dolsen neglects in his analysis—that is the peasantry. The peasants who have been burdened with excessive taxes and rents that sometimes amount to four-fifths of their total crop, are becoming restless and forming organizations that are bound to play an important role in the Chinese revolution. The role of the bourgeoisie is also underestimated by Dolsen.

Despite his failure to take these forces into consideration, "The Awakening of China" is by all odds the best book in the English language on the Chinese revolution. It's the only attempt that's been made at a scientific analysis of the forces underlying the nationalist movement, a movement which directly involves the destiny of 456,000,000 people.

CHILDREN OF THE SUN, by James Rorty. Macmillan Co., New York. $1.75.

The dominant note of James Rorty's first book of verse is meditative nature. At its best this rapture is transmuted into a strong, burnished eloquence. At its worst it is mere prosiness or rhetoric.

Rorty is aware of a large world. It is a world in which his senses, his intelligence, his loves, hates and angers all play their part. Here is no fragile poetaster grieving a delicate, moldy grief. He does not know the tasks and large articulateness of the major poet. There is strength and daring and sunlight for the flesh of his verse. Yet too often he thinks his vision outleaps his powere of expression, and what is evidantly a deeply felt emotion emerges as a flat landscape of tolerable lines. He does not find new words boldly and definitively enough.

Being a poet who knows the difference between hunk and reality, Rorty reveals a measure of his contempt for the ideals of capitalist America. This appears directly in his satires, which contain some of his best work, and indirectly in his glamour of birds and beasts and rivere and mountains. Perhaps this is what is called 'escape.' But in his positive philosophic approach to nature, an approach hidden at times under a mock simplicity, there is too much that is direct and unwavering to be called escape.

Rorty's most recent work is his strongest and he has continued to improve. Ha is a poet who fuses sensitiveness to personal experience with a feeling for social values.

CHARLES G. Dawes is a candidate for the presidency of the United States. "Charlie" is the fellow who made "Hell and Maria" famous and also wrote his name in German history. Dawes is angling for the farmer vote. Hence his espousal of the McNary-Haugen bill, which passed thru congress but is doomed to a Coolidge veto. The main difference between Coolidge and Dawes is that the former listens more attentively to the voice of Wall Street than to the siren call from the wide open spaces where every vote that is counted is a vote gained.

Note how the lads pull off the trick! Charles G. Dawes is as faithful a servant of capitalism as Calvin Coolidge. Dawes caters to the 100 per cent Americans that live west of the Mississippi. He wants to be president. Coolidge wants to succeed himself. He is tied up with the eastern wing of the republican party. Whoever is nominated and elected, if elected, on the republican or democratic ticket will not make a particle of difference to the American workers. On the day after the election Mr. Morgan's emissary will call the successful candidate on the long distance phone and say: "What do you say to a little cup of coffee?"

When Bryan was secretary of state in the Wilson cabinet he sent marines to Haiti. Yet Bryan was a pacifist! What a farce? Pacifists, militarists, or whatever they brand themselves must do whatever the dominant ruling class demands of them. How futile it is to talk about electing "good" men? No matter how slow the process may be there is only one solution for the ills that afflict society; organization of the workers to take into their own hands the power to run society in the interests of the producers.

A young lad favored The DAILY WORKER with a review of Joseph Wood Krutch's "Edgar Allan Poe." It will not be published because there is too much nonsense in it. Yet the lad served a useful purpose. He makes the mistake of suggesting the kind of a Poe that he thinks Poe should be. Poe has a niche in the gallery of literature because he was Poe, because he expressed himself. What of it if he was unhappy, a spendthrift and addicted to spells of melancholy. Poe wrote himself into literature and thus rendered a service to the human race, the rendering service was the last thing Poe thought about, or anybody else, for that matter. Yet here comes a young lad fired with a holy ardor and instead of blessing the stars for keeping Poe immortally on the bum, miserable and semi-crazy, regrets that he did not have a regular salary because "We have no doubt that had Poe lived under happier circumstances and under a different social system his works would not have been so morold." Of course Poe might have gotten more salami out of life were he not the kind of a fellow he was, but had he lived an ordinary life his name would not be mentioned even at a Y. M. C. A conference.

Fifty years ago the statue of liberty was accepted from France. What Uncle Sam wants now from France is not statuary but money. The lady who holds aloft the flaming torch in New York harbor may have meant what she conveyed fifty years ago but she is certainly a false alarm today. Fifty years is quite a long time to keep good.

Coal Mine Wage Conference Collapses

Progressives Call On All to Prepare for Strike

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 22.—The bituminous wage conference collapsed today. The miners' union negotiations committee and the coal operators' representatives jointly reported to the agreement report of the sub-committee on wage scales which has been consulting in secret over the two plans proposed.

The miners' union committee, headed by International President John L. Lewis, had made during the course of the negotiations sweeping concessions, even to the point where a thinly disguised arbitration committee was offered, in spite of the bitter opposition to compulsory arbitration which coal miners have always shown.

Demanded Wage Cut.

The only point at which the union committee did not yield, was in the matter of a formal reduction of wages. It was instructed by the Indianapolis convention last month not to sign any contract involving a wage cut.

Altho the "committee of experts" which Lewis proposed to "apply the agreement" would probably cut wages in effect by increasing the amount of unpaid work the miner would have to perform, the operators held out for a reduction, open and apparent, to the level of "competition" with the non-union wages of Kentucky, West Virginia and Alabama.

Convention Forbids Cut.

This concession Lewis hesitated to grant, and the negotiations ended. It is reported that Lewis plans to make contracts with any individual companies that will sign on the basis of the Jacksonville scale, and then try for another joint conference, just before the ending of the present contract, March 31.

Expect to Fight.

Progressive miners who fought the Lewis regime during the miners' union election campaign, and whose candidate for international president, John Brophy, was "counted out" by the Lewis machine after he had actually won the election, are convinced that the brunt of the strike will fall upon them, if a strike comes on April 1.

They are urging the miners everywhere to prepare for the conflict, and not to trust to Lewis' methods of merely bargaining, which have just met a further defeat in the collapse of the Miami conference.

Program for More Cruisers Wins New Victory in Senate

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The big navy bloc won another victory this afternoon when the senate reaffirmed its demand for the immediate construction of three new cruisers over the opposition of President Coolidge.

This action was taken by adoption of the conference report on the naval appropriations bill with specific authorization for construction of the three cruisers.

The report meanwhile went to the house which rejected the three cruisers plan, for another vote. The big navy bloc hoped to reverse their decision.

North Carolina Klan Is About Wrecked; Last Big Official Resigns

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 22.—The Ku Klux Klan as an active, organized force in North Carolina, virtually blew up today.

Evans, and simultaneously there was introduced in both branches of the legislature today bills outlawing the use of masks and concealing robes by members of secret organizations.

Sixty-six of the 86 local Klan chapters in the state are said to have surrendered their charters today.

Washington Day Dedicated To Big Business

Wall Street and Coolidge Call Him Imperialist

A deliberate attempt was evident in the Washington's birthday exercises yesterday to couple up the name of our first president with the genesis of big business in America, and to claim him as a patron saint of Wall Street.

The New York City members of the Sons and Daughters of Washington assembled at Frances Tavern and marched up Broad Street to the Washington statue at the sub-treasury. More than 1,000 boys were given a dinner of turkey, vegetables, pie and ice-cream at Bruce Memorial Newsboys Home on William Street by Mrs. Eliza Guggenheimer, in memory of Randolph Guggenheimer.

The Capitalist Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—"First in war, first in peace"—and to that should be added "first American business man."

So adduced President Coolidge today in a eulogy of George Washington, delivered before a joint session of Congress.

Departing from the usual custom of hearing solely on Washington's exploits as commander of the revolutionary forces end as first president, Mr. Coolidge devoted the greater part of a 4,500-word speech to a discussion of the business acumen of the great Virginian.

"First commercial American," "first expensionist," "builder," "creator," "men of affairs"—these were but a few of the nominations conferred upon the father of his country by Mr. Coolidge.

Kellogg Claims Diaz Asks for Protectorate

First Story Was That U. S. Demanded He Consent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Washington's birthday was signalized in the capital by the first definite announcement that the United States has embarked upon another deliberate conquest of a friendly nation, the defenseless little republic of Nicaragua, and has adopted for that purpose the European imperialistic trick of declaring a protectorate through connivance with puppet rulers of the invaded country, and was "saturating" it with marines.

The state department first unofficially gave out that a treaty was being negotiated with "President" Diaz, of Nicaragua, the lay figure which American marines defend from the attacks of the Liberal party led by Juan Sacasa, the regular constitutional president. The state department intimated that it would be demanded of Diaz that he consent to a protectorate over Nicaragua by the United States.

A Better Story.

This report having met with a mixed reception by the public at large, was immediately corrected, officially, by the state department, in this manner: Announcement was made that "Minister Eberhardt at Managua has informed the department of state that on Feb. 20 he received from the minister of foreign affairs a note written by direction of President Diaz. The text of this note will be forwarded to the department of state by mail and until its receipt it cannot be discussed."

Then, officially, it was given out here that though the state department did not know what was in the note, still it would contain the following main points.

1. An "alliance" between little Nicaragua and the powerful United States of America, similar to that which the Republic of Panama has just rejected on the grounds that it is a "slave pact."

2. An American police control in Nicaragua probably along the lines of the American receivership of customs in the Dominican Republic and the American-officered Haitian constabulary.

3. American supervisory authority in certain Nicaraguan governmental affairs similar to the supervision exercised by this Government in Cuba under the provisions of the so-called Platt amendment, which is a provision of the United States senate embodied in the Cuban constitution. The Platt amendment gives the United States government the right to intervene upon certain foreign loans proposed to be contracted by the Cuban government and permits American intervention in the event of political disorders, including disturbances at the time of political elections.

Hate "Colossus."

Latin America has always regarded with suspicion the steady encroachment of North American domination of the little countries to the south. The press of Latin America is filled with polemic against the "Colossus of the North." When the terms of the proposed Panama treaty were announced recently, the outburst of criticism in the Latin-American press went far beyond anything seen before.

The consummation of a Nicaraguan treaty now would be calculated to revive and increase that critiesism, it is conceded.

Hoodwink Senate.

The details of the American protectorate over Nicaragua are expected to be worked out during the summer, while congress is in recess. From the state department's viewpoint, the time is propitious, as the negotiations will not be interfered with nor complicated by critical outbursts in the senate.

The Haitian treaty provides for a constabulary officered and directed by the American government, together with civil supervision of the native government. American "advisers" are appointed by the state department to direct affairs of the Haitian government.

Borah Asks Investigation.

A personal first-hand senatorial investigation of conditions in Mexico and Central America was proposed in the senate this afternoon by Senator Borah (R) of Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Soviet Union In Spite Of War Threat Keeps Down Army Budget

MOSCOW, Feb. 22.—Each of the red army's 562,000 soldiers will cost $416 to maintain this year. Although the Soviet government has given the population the impression that war was not far distant, Russia's new budget, which was discussed at Monday's session of the Soviet parliament, assigns $346,000,000 for national defense, which is only $44,000,000 more than in 1925, and only 14 per cent of the entire budget.

Even this increase, officials explained, will not be used for additional arms and munitions, but for improving the conditions of the soldiers.

Chicago Votes Machine Guns, Gangs, Clubs

Saturnalia of Violence in the Struggle of Old Parties

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—More than 50 men under arrest, one mortally wounded, half a dozen slugged and kidnaped and a general fear of gang lawlessness marked the mayoralty primaries in Chicago today.

F. E. Butherley, Workers' (Communist) Party candidate for mayor, will run for his place on the ballot by petition active members of the party have been busy circulating the petitions for some time now. He has, of course, no opposition, since the Workers' Party settles its nominations within itself, and not through the free for all that Chicago primaries have become.

The present incumbent, Mayor Dever, has no opposition of any moment in his race for democratic nomination. Big business is satisfied with him, and Chicago's vast catholic population remembers the published photographs of Dever kneeling in the dirt to kiss the prelate's ring when Cardinal Mundelein's train pulled in Chicago for job.

The supporters of William Hale Thompson and Edward R. Litsinger, candidates for republican nomination, can be fighting. Workers out in the streets as well as the polling places, with the Thompson gunmen a little ahead, if anything.

Twenty-seven men, a machine gun and a large number of small arms, including a shotgun, were seized by police in a raid on the headquarters of Michael S. Winek, candidate for alderman.

Fatally Wounded.

Camille Dhooge, an election challenger, was shot four times and probably wounded late today while on duty in Chicago's mayoralty primary. The shooting occurred in a polling place.

Dhooge was a challenger for Edward R. Litsinger, republican candidate for mayor, and was shot by Frank Glondeo, also a challenger.

Two election judges, John Ingalle and Bruno Serra, were kidnaped by gangsters in a powerful automobile while waiting in front of the polling place. Police were unable to locate them.

The same gang was also believed responsible for the abduction of Daniel Valenti, precinct worker, who was forced into a car by four men armed with shot-guns.

Police automobiles armed with machine guns patrolled many of the "tough" precincts.

Run Men Away.

Three Litsinger workers were badly mauled by gunmen and warned to leave the vicinity of a precinct or they would be "taken for a ride."

The assailants drove up in full view of passerbys and after slugging the workers tore off their badges.

One shot was fired in a riot outside a polling place when a gang of gunmen tried to steal ballots, according to reports to Litsinger headquarters.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Appropriation of $1,086,000 for construction of new barracks for soldiers at Governor's Island, New York, was authorized in a conference report adopted by the house today.

Battle to Capture Shanghai Is On

Beheading of Labor Leaders Arouses Ire of Chinese Masses

SHANGHAI, Feb. 22.—The battle for Shanghai—the richest port of China—is in progress.

Firing is heard without the city walls, heavy shells have fallen within the city limits, and there is every evidence that the Cantonese have started their drive for possession of the city.

Excitement ran high and the foreign defense units were assembling at 7:30 this evening, as the sound of the guns in the outskirts was intensified.

The French concession was the first to suffer, as heavy shells began falling within its limits late in the afternoon. One shell dropped on the Sporting Club.

As soon as the shelling began there were disorders of a serious nature in the native quarters, adjoining the French concession.

One report stated that the constabulary and soldiers in the Chinese quarters were mutinying and joining the Chinese populace. The many executions which the Chinese authorities have carried out have angered the population and it now appears that the "defenders" of Shanghai are menaced by the Cantonese before the city end hy a rebellious population within the city.

The French population of Shanghai was kept within the international settlement, and as this dispatch is filed, there has been no disorder within the settlement. Except for shells falling in the French concession there is no evidence of the battle which seems to be raging virtually at the city gates.

The Cantonese have hosts of supporters in the city who are aronsing the populace and are rather effectively impeding any defense by the forces within the city.

The soldiers of Sun Chuan Fang are reported to be wavering in their allegiance and there are many who believe that they will lay down their arms rather than give protection to resistance to the Cautonese advance.

Revenge for the decapitation of Cantonese sympathizers and agitators by the minions of General Li Pao-Chang, Shanghai's defense commissioner, was sworn today by the Cantonese to be exacted when the southerners capture Shanghai.

Local Cantonese swore that they will "strip two pieces of flesh from Li Pao-Chang's living body" for each person beheaded during the present disturbances.

The military authorities continue the strictest vigilience against disorders, also directing their efforts toward crushing the strike through threats of drastic punishment to strikers.

Nevertheless, 110,000 workers remain idle, new walk-outs balancing the numbers of those who have returned to work.

The post office is closed and mails have not been delivered for four days. Mail from the United States is being stored in warehouses, due to the defacement of some mail by the strikers.

MINUTES SHOW FORD DIRECTORS VERY PIG-LIKE

Squabbled Continually While Hogging Profit

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—An intimate picture of the bickerlep and quarreling that accompanied the Ford Motor Company's climb to automotive preeminence was written today into the records of the government's suit to collect $30,000,000 in back taxes from Ford's former partners. Even profits of 700 per cent in ten years did not bring peace to a divided directorate.

Quarreling Greed.

Culled from the secret minutes of the Ford directors' meetings for the period 1906-1912, the inside story of the Ford epic reduces to this—that although every year's operations made a shareholder's copper equal in purchasing power to the farmer's dollar, directors' meetings never ceased to be a cross between a Hang Chow peace conference and a Senate session on the banking bill.

The minutes went into the Court of Tax Appeals record over repeated objections of defense counsel.

Avoiding Solid Tire.

One of the most interesting things for the future student of transportation or get-rich-quick problems is the fact that the stubborn determination of Treasurer Alex. Y. Malcombson was largely responsible for the use of pneumatic tires on the Ford car. He held doggedly to the view, too, that any car worthy of the name should be equipped with pneumatic tires. In this question the tension of the situation was relieved by the raucous laughter of the board as masse.

Potash-Perlmutter Staff.

Maleombson undertook in 1905 to organize an automobile company of his own, dedicated to the proposition that hard rubber rims were of four score and seven years ago.

The Ford directorate said that was treason—or something akin—and denounced Maleombson's resignation forthwith, to which he demurred most vigorously.

Malcombson's letter to the board, December 7, 1905, attained in spots the literary grade of inter-departmental correspondence in the pants and vest trade; but he didn't resign and so we have today rubber tires.

$2,000 a Year for "The Average Person"

By SCOTT NEARING.

"Current income," says the National Bureau of Economic Research, "was 90 billion dollars for the whole United States in 1926." That meant "for every person gainfully occupied an income of slightly over $2,000." Making allowance for price increases, "we find that the average person working for a money lucome received about one-fourth more for his service in 1926 than he obtained in 1917 and about 44 per cent more than in 1909."

"The Average Person."

Who is this "average person?"

Surely not the Passaic textile worker. His purchasing power in 1926 was less than in 1909.

How about the Illinois corn grower?. In 1917 his land was selling for $150 an acre. Today the same land goes at $50 to $60. And in 1926 no one farmer put it, "I give away a quarter with every bushel of corn I sell."

Like the corn grower in Illinois, the Oklahoma cotton raiser produced this year at a great deficit. So did the grower of grapes and prunes in California and the apple rancher of Oregon.

But there are 4,000 families on Park Avenue between 44th Street and 92nd Street which spent in 1926 $280,000,000—an average of $75,000 per family. There are no figures to show what these same families spent in 1909 or 1917, but, in any case, they helped to make up that $2,000 income of the "average person" in 1926.

The Old Bank.

Statisticians like Wesley Mitchell and W. I. King should be ashamed to trot out this old "statistical average" fake. If you "average" an income of $10 per week and one of $100 per week, you get $55, but how silly to claim that the "average person" gets $55 per week. One man gets ten; the other a hundred. Neither pays the grocer bills of the other.

Lower Than in 1909.

Among great masses of American workers, the purchasing power of an hour of labor is less than it was in 1909.

The same is true of hundreds of thousands of farmers. On the other hand, the incomes of the well-to-do—rants, interests, dividends and profits—have increased enormously. Hence the "average."

The Fat Incomes.

The total income of the U. S. A. has increased greatly in the past twenty years. A fringe of the workers has gained some advantage from this increase.

Owners of land and capital have benefitted hugely. Their fat incomes "averaged" with those of the masses of workers and working farmers, makes It possible for the Bureau of Economic Research to sell "average" prosperity to the rest of the country.

A Labor Press.

Incidentally, It might be mentioned that the Bureau of Economic Research secures its income from the "interest and dividend" class.

What better argument could be advanced lu favor of a Bureau of Labor Research and a vigorous labor press, competent to collect and distribute economic information that will keep the mass of workers correctly informed as to the volume of national income and as to who gets it.

BRITAIN SENDS NOTE THREATENING SOVIETS; RELATIONS ENDANGERED

Litvinoff in Moscow Speech Declares Trade Agreement Menaced by Oil Interests

LONDON, Feb. 22. — The British cabinet today finished the draft of a note which it has been discussing for some time, and which threatens a rupture of Anglo-Soviet relations because of alleged propaganda against British imperial interests. The Soviet government is "warned" that "such propaganda constitutes a breach of the Russo-British trade agreement."

It is known that Winston Churchill is one of the prime movers for this first step towards a breach of relations.

Sahlin Letters Confirmed.

Today's action confirms reports of letters and reports exchanged during the last six months between the Czarist agents, Eugene Sablin, and "Senior Diplomat" Gaiva, in which Sablin boasted that he and his organization of White-guard Russians had great influence over Churchill and other cabinet ministers, and would break down friendly relations between the two

Blazing Rum Schooner Floating on Atlantic After Rescue of Crew

BOSTON, Feb. 22.—the schooner reported, on fire 70 miles off Boston light by the Dutch steamship Blydedyk, was found today to be the Kathleen Conrad, Leahaw, N. S., to St. Pierre Miquelon, carrying 1,400 drums fo alcohol.

The schooner's captain and a crew of nine were brought to port aboard the schooner Grant Marshall.

The Marshall came upon the Conrad at dawn and after taking off the crew set the latter boat on fire, believing it to be a menace to shipping.

Explosions heard aboard the Conrad by the Blydendyk crew were from the bursting alcohol drums. Capt. Randall said the loss would come to about $50,000.

REED COMMITTEE TO GIVE INSULL UNTIL SATURDAY

Check May Show Graft Paid for Companies

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—While still threatening to prosecute Samuel Insull, the "super-angel" of Illinois politics, and two other recalcitrant witnesses for contempt, the Reed campaign fund committee turned away from slush funds today to ask the senate for additional authority to recount the 360,000 ballots seized in Pennsylvania, that were cast in last November's senatorial election.

Need More Power.

The Pennsylvania recount cannot be started, it was explained, until the senate authorizes the committee to "open the ballot boxes."

It already has 2,904 boxes in its possession, 1,404 seized in Pittsburgh and 1,500 seized in Philadelphia. Even with this additional authority, it was said, the committee may decide to postpone the recount until after the seventieth congress convenes next December.

What About Check?

The contempt proceedings against Insull, Daniel F. Schuyler, his personal attorney, and Thomas W. Cunningham, a Philadelphia republican leader, will be delayed until after the utility magnate returns here next Saturday to testify about a $100,000 check he drew to cover with cash advances he made to Illinois politicians last summer. In all, Insull testified, he spent $237,935 in that campaign, of which $125,000 went in cash in one lump sum to Col. Frank L. Smith, new senator-elect from Illinois.

The same total included $40,000—two gifts of $20,000 each—which both Insull and Schuyler refused to reveal. They admitted making the donations but declined to say who got the money. Insull protesting that "his conscience" would not permit him to "violate the confidence" imposed upon him by the men who got the money.

An After-thought.

The $100,000 check assumed tremendous importance in the eyes of members of the committee because of a belief that Insull had spent the $237,935 on behalf of the $500,000,000 worth of utility corporations which he controls. Insull explained that he drew the check to repay cash advances, which he took out of the "bills" of his various companies while making contributions to Chicago politicians. The committee felt that the advances were actually made by Insull on behalf of his corporations and that the check, refunding them, was an after-thought, which followed opening of the senatorial inquiry.

Aside from the check, members of the committee were determined upon citing Insull, Schuyler and Cunningham for contempt. Senator Reed (R) of Missouri, chairman, said that the contempt citations would be handled by the committee after next Saturday's session.

TOLEDO, O., Feb. 22.—Mr. and Mrs. Alex Schuster were found shot and beaten to death in their home here today. A revolver was found on the floor near the bed together with several small bags of coin. Jersey Tories Plan Election Switch to Favor Republicans

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 22.—The state senate, by a vote of 13 to 7, passed a proposed constitutional amendment today which provides for an increase in the terms of governor and state senators from three to four years, from one to two years for assemblyman, and for biennial sessions of the legislature.

The amendment, sponsored by the reactionary majority, is designed to throw into presidential years the gubernatorial elections in New Jersey. The republicans normally have a majority of the vote in presidential years in this state.

The amendment must now be submitted to the people in a referendum four months from the date of adjournment of the legislature. Progressives are expected to wage a vigorous campaign against it.

Senator Abell of Morris County introduced a bill reducing the franchise taxes on street railways from five to two per cent on gross receipts. The traction lobby backs the bill.

N. Y. COAL MEN PLAN HARVEST IN MINE STRIKE

Will Gouge Public to Fare-You-Well

Not anticipating, but praying for a strike in the bituminous coal fields in April, those New York brokers who deal in soft coal are already laying plans to reap a harvest when the union mines are closed down for the bitter struggle.

One brokerage office in this city, cheered by word from one of the operators that he expected negotiations in Florida to be broken off in a couple of days, is signing as many contracts as possible for the total output of non-union mines in various parts of the country. As soon as the union mines are not working, the price of coal will begin to soar, and those who control a supply of coal will be able to demand higher and higher prices and reap a fortune.

It is understood that the owners now operating under the Jacksonville agreement have leased mines in non-union fields, and as soon as the strike is called their union mines will be closed tight and they will open up the non-union mines in Kentucky or West Virginia and continue piling up the cash. They should worry how long the strike lasts.

No Sex Profit as Workers Suffer.

This is the sort of situation which has been created by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America. For two years the Jacksonville agreement has been violated by one operator after another and the bituminous fields have gone increasingly non-union.

AIMEE HOPES TO GET CASH QUICK IN GARDEN BOUT

To Eclipse Tex Rickard On Return Here

Aimee Semple McPherson, notorious California evangelist, will attempt to throw Satan over the skyline of New York some time next summer or even sooner.

She hopes to hold revival meetings in the new Madison Square Garden, where she hopes for tremendous collections and a quick clean-up of cash registers.

"There is the night life in New York where conditions are terrible. I visited three night clubs to get my information first-hand. I saw one place crowded with children, boys and girls from the ages of 16 and 17 to 21, collegians and high school students, all drunk."

So said Aimee at Syracuse, N. Y., shortly after her arrival to conduct a three-day series of revival meetings.

Confined to Parasites.

"This night life condition is deplorable, but it can be stopped whenever the country wants to stop it," said Aimee.

"This type of night life is open to only the rich, the people who have money to squander. It is not general. I believe those who indulge in it will see the error of their ways and will remedy the situation themselves."

While she talked of the evils of New York, Aimee's smile and the light in her eyes almost belied the fact that she thought them evil. She laughed heartily as she told how one of the dancing girls in a night club had kissed one of her escorts.

Does She Like It?

She described her embarrassment and then again became merry as she described how the girl had then jumped on a chair to dance for them and tried to get them to join a gay party at another table. For a minute it seemed as if Aimee was going to stand up and give an interpretation of the dance.

"I came fresh from the evils of New York City," Aimee continued. "I saw there things that seem almost unbelievable to you Syracusans, but they exist there."

countries by the use of forged letters, and offers of concessions to oil and business interests.

Litvinoff Denies Charge.

MOSCOW, Feb. 22.—Acting People's Commissar for foreign affairs, Litvinoff, appearing before a group of members of the Central Executive Committee of the All Union Congress of Soviets and many a noble statement of British relations with the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Tells of Plot.

He received a great ovation, and then began to speak of the strain on international relations caused by the plots of reactionary Russian emigres in England, and the intrigues of oil company owners who desired to exploit the workers of Soviet Russia in the oil fields she is developing. He regretted that concerned in these intrigues were even members of the British cabinet.

Kept the Bargain.

Litvinoff pointed out that though the government of Soviet Russia had never concealed the interest and friendly feeling it has for the British people, struggling for independence against the brutal inroads of foreign imperialism, the government has studiously kept the strict letter of the trade agreement, as is evinced by the fact that no single specific case of violation is mentioned in the general charges of "propaganda" which the British cabinet has frequently hurled at the government of the USSR.

In this connection the speaker particularly emphasized the recent speeches of the Japanese premier and foreign minister, who "appeared to have a more just and liberal comprehension of the true state of affairs than certain other countries."

Wall St. Attorney Rounder, Wife Says; He Tells Tales Too

Supreme Court Justice Charles J. Dodson in Brooklyn yesterday reserved decision on the application of Mrs. Martha Chapman Blatchford, of Stillings Manor, Tarrytown, N. Y., for $8,000 counsel fee and $100 weekly alimony pending trial of her suit for separation form William W. Blatchford, Jr., a Wall Street lawyer.

Mrs. Blatchford said that her husband lives in a $30,000 home at 118 Willow Street, Brooklyn, and that he pays her nearly to receive $50,000 as a fee for his legal services from Mrs. Edward R. Thomas, owner of the New York Telegraph. She said he also has a large income as attorney for other interests.

Mrs. Blatchford said her husband was in the habit of becoming intoxicated "four or five times a week," that he was abusive, and that he was cruel to her and to their daughter, Betty, 7 years old. On one occasion she blamed her when their daughter contracted pneumonia, pursued her through their home and finally broke down a door to get to her, and then struck her, she alleged.

COURT DECREE ON VALUATION NOT DECISIVE

Commerce Commission Expects New Case

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Physical valuation of all railroads in the United States will be pushed steadily ahead as a result of the supreme court decision in the "fifteen billion dollar valuation case," Interstate Commerce Commission officials said today.

The true measure of the value of a road for rate-making purposes, however, remained an open question.

Negative Victory.

The case was that of the Los Angeles and Salt Lake valuation, and was not decided upon its merits, but on a legal technicality which gave the decision to the government.

This constitutes a negative victory for the Interstate Commerce Commission, as decision for the companies would have stopped their attempts to value the roads at all. But at some future date, the point of the right of the commission to value the roads will again be raised.

New Fight Coming.

There is no prospect of an early determination of the question, according to P. J. Farrell, counsel for the Interstate Commerce Commission. He pointed out that the first big test would come when the commission attempts to apply the recapture clause of the Esch-Cummins Act, under which profits of the stronger railroads are to be divided with the weaker lines.

Experts have estimated that there is a difference of fifteen billion dollars in the railroad and commission interpretations of the true value of all the roads in the country.

U. S. Mail Clerks Appeal to Coolidge

Flaherty said 75 per cent of the mail is distributed in the postal service is handled at night. This night work brings added hardship to the clerks and should be compensated accordingly by higher pay or shorter hours. Even the Postmaster General has recommended the higher pay rate of 10 per cent proposed in the pending bill.

Coolidge made no promise to cease his opposition.

Daily Worker Builders in New York and Boston Point Way to Victory

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TWO gatherings, historic in the development of The DAILY WORKER into a mass Communist daily, have just been held at Boston and here in New York City.

In the words of M. J. Olgin, speaking at the Yorkville Casino, New York, assemblage of DAILY WORKER Builders in the metropolis and vicinity, "The coming of The DAILY WORKER to New York marks another page in the progress of the working class movement in this country."

It is because The DAILY WORKER is in New York City, striving with might and main to develop as a powerful propaganda weapon and organizing instrument of labor, that great significance was given to these meetings, pledged to aid in this task.

The DAILY WORKER has been in existence for more than three years. Yet it still faces the task of enlisting an irresistible army of Builders, covering the nation, but especially active in the great industrial centers.

New York has been leading in organizing The Builders. One year ago a much smaller banquet hall at the Yorkville Casino afforded comfortable accommodations for the Builders' first gathering. The numbers had grown at The DAILY WORKER Builders' Encampment last summer on Long Island Sound. The affair on the eve of this year's anniversary of Washington's Birthday marked new progress, increased numbers realizing the tremendous task that lies ahead in winning a growing support from labor for Labor's Daily.

It was Joseph Brodsky, the workers' lawyer, who fights their battles in the courts, who came to the Builders' Celebration direct from the prison house that walls in the militant fighters of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, victims of the capitalist class justice of the infamous Judge Otto Rosalsky.

"Tell the Builders at The DAILY WORKER Celebration that our imprisonment will not have been in vain if, when we are released, we find that progress has been made in the building of our party and our press."

These prisoners of the class struggle have been sent away, not for a few days or weeks, but some of them for years, having incurred upon the picket line the vicious wrath of their employers. The assembled builders cheered the greeting, a pledge to fulfill all expectations of those leashed in master class bastiles.

It is here in New York City where the reigning officialdom of the American Federation of Labor uses the uninformed members of the so-called trade unions of the native-born as weapons against the foreign-born section of organized labor. The exploitation is to be found on every hand, whether in Boston or New York, that The DAILY WORKER is a ready weapon; the Daily News in Ukrainian; the Laisve and Vilnis, in Lithuanian; the Novy Mir, in Russian; the Eteenpain and Tyomies in Finnish; the Il Lavoratore, in Italian; the Ny Tid, in Swedish, and other publications. Thus workers of all nationalities gathered at the Yorkville Casino, in New York, as they did at the International Hall, in Boston, to help build The DAILY WORKER.

It is in Boston, the hub of New England industry, with its vast, almost totally unorganized army of textile and shoe workers, that the need is felt for The DAILY WORKER; and Boston, one of the leading cities of the east, point the way to all the nation's centers of population, east and west. Philadelphia, Baltimore and Pittsburgh, as well as Cleveland and the cities beyond must be heard from. Detroit is ever active, but it can and will an better in the struggle within the industry of the world's Crosesus, Henry Ford.

No time can be lost in strengthening The DAILY WORKER as one of labor's weapons most feared and hated by the ruling class. The editorial and business office staffs pledge themselves to do their utmost in the struggle toward this goal. The DAILY WORKER builders, organized everywhere, so they are now being organized in New York City and Boston, will be a tower of strength in the march against the capitalist foe, well armed with its own horde of subsidized publications, but not unconquerable.

MONTANA INDIANS APPEAL AGAINST BUREAU'S PLAN TO STEAL WATER AND FLOOD WITH DEBT

WASHINGTON (FP).—In despair at the stupidity of the Indian Bureau of the interior department, which is burdening them with debt while destroying their chief commercial asset—a 100,000 horsepower hydro-electric site—the 2,000 members of the Flathead Indian tribe in Montana have appealed, through the American Indian Defense Assn. to President Coolidge.

Piled Up Big Bill.

When the Flathead tribe bought and paid for their reservation of 1,250,000 acres in 1855 they saved for themselves the falls of the Flathead River where the stream leaves Flathead Lake. Since 1910 the Indian Bureau has expended $5,000,000 on an irrigation project on the reservation, bringing water to 113,000 acres of land, of which the Indians have brought under the plow only 33,000 acres. When the work was begun congress declared by law that the costs would not be chargeable against the Indian allotments. Later congress, at the instance of the bureau, made the $5,000,000 charge against the Flathead lands.

Bum Engineering.

Recently the bureau decided—in the face of adverse reports by the Montana state engineer and the Montana Railroad and Public Service Commission, who have wired protests to Washington—to expend $2,133,000 more on a project of boring 1,400 feet through rock to take away this water-power, use some of the power to pump the water 325 feet into the air, and develop a new irrigation project on a higher level. The cost will a, in be charged against the Indians, and congress, by granting the bureau authority to take away the water, has in effect confiscated the 100,000 horsepower asset of the tribe.

The Montana Power Co. is watching and smiling. It will logically sit quietly until, a dozen years hence, the pumping project has been admitted a fiasco. Then it will buy the property, scrap the pumping plant, build the power dam where the Indians want it, and take away their wealth over its cables.

Russian Public Health Posters on Exhibition

Workers of New York who may be interested in Russian public health posters have an opportunity to see a collection on display at the East Hall, Russell Sage Foundation Bldg., 130 East 22d St., Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

"The collection is interesting for the application of Russian art to the production of inexpensive posters for educational purposes," says the Russell Sage Foundation. "Those concerned with education and publicity for social work will be interested in the less simple poster common in social work in this country. The health work will find the simplicity and highly practical nature of the instruction of particular interest."

The collection was brought to the United States by the Russian Public Health Service. A representative of that service will be present at one showing to meet social and health workers to whom the Russell Sage Foundation caters. The exhibit is open to the general public as well.

TORY ASSEMBLY KILLS BILLS FOR HONEST ELECTION

Plans to Delay Action On Water Power

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 22.—Reactionaries in the Assembly today had killed two progressive bills. One provided for the restoration of direct primaries for state and judicial offices. The other would have compelled candidates to file a list of their expenditures and contributors with the secretary of state ten days before election.

The Legislature will adjourn March 18 or March 25. Only a few major problems, such as water power, the proposed tax of two cents a gallon on gasoline, and the $300,000,000 New York City subway bond issue remain to be disposed of.

Wealthy Don't Get Tax Cut.

With the total cost of the state government for the next fiscal year well above the $200,000,000 mark, reactionaries have abandoned all thoughts of reducing the income tax this year. For the last two years the income tax has been reduced 25 per cent, saving approximately $10,000,000 to wealthy tax payers.

The six year old deadlock between Smith and Republican leaders of the Legislature over water power may be broken at a conference today. Al vants a "power authority" to plan for state development of hydro-electric power sites. Republicans favor private exploitation by the power trust. Republicans are willing to create a commission to investigate water power to kill time and postpone any action.

More Time On Bonus.

The bill which would give golden wedding couples a pension of $100 a month was killed today. The bill extending from January 1 to April 1 the time in which veterans of the World War may apply for the state bonus, was sent to Governor Smith today. It was passed unanimously in both houses of the Legislature. Punishment for arson, first degree, would be death instead of imprisonment for forty years, under a bill introduced today.

The student suicide toll of the past few weeks reached nearly a score today when Leo Meisel, a philosophy and music student, took his life by locking himself in his room and turning on the gas. The youth had been dead several hours when discovered by his father.

ARMS PARLEY TO BE CALLED OFF; POWERS REJECT

Britain Talks About "Idealistic Proposals"

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—According to all indications President Coolidge's call for a second world disarmament conference is not going to get any response except from Japan. France and Italy have definitely rejected any plans for modification of their strength of arms, Italy stating quite frankly that she needs a bigger army and navy for her program of expansion, while France is putting up the same old plea of self defense.

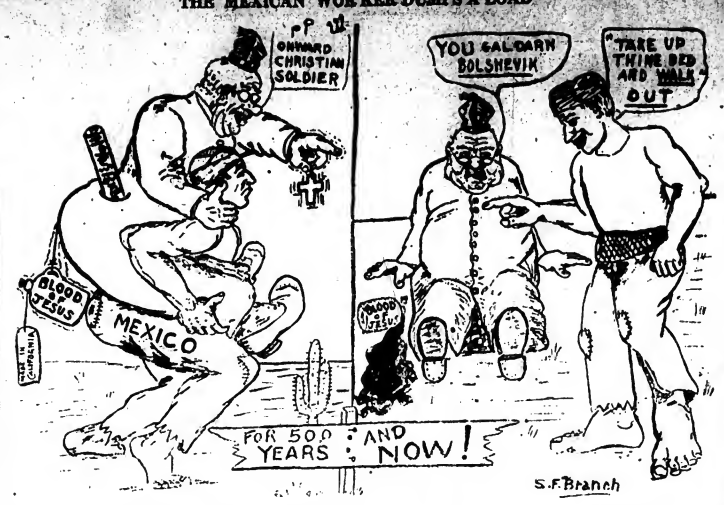
Japan has a willingness to enter into a new discussion, since such a reopening could only be to her advantage. The Washington Treaty left Japan in a weakened position thru the 5-5-3 ratio, and it is understood that Japan's anxiety for another arms parley is with the hope to have her own ratio of construction be raised from its present quota.

The negative attitude of these three countries on limitation of armament is not said to have encouraged Great Britain to advocate reduction of her own fleet. On the contrary, even tho the British government is trying to have it appear as if she really favors such reduction, the admiralty openly opposes the move.

The note which has been drafted by the admiralty as an answer to the Coolidge proposal openly states that Great Britain doesn't think of reducing her naval strength.

It accuses Washington of having only recently elevated the gun range on its battleships so that these same guns have now an added range of 12,000 yards.

This was done in spite of a vigorous protest from the admiralty in London. The note also states that 19 of Britain's cruisers are in Chinese waters, which has left only 5 cruisers for the Mediterranian service. A plea is made that with its enormous trade routes Great Britain has an obligation to give protection to the ships travelling these routes and that Britain can not therefore think of any reduction.



Reports also state that altho much good might come out of such an arms limitation conference that nevertheless British statesmen are not ready to "jeopardize the safety of the British empire for the sake, at its best, of idealistic proposals."

Japan's original proposal to hold the conference in June has now been altered with a proposal to hold it probably some time during next year. This move is said to indicate that the whole conference as such will be called off.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22. — Immediate strengthening of the national defense was recommended by the house appropriations committee today in reporting the second deficiency bill to congress carrying a total of $65,400,957. More than $17,000,000 was proposed for the army, navy and marine corps.

Funds are provided to bring the strength of the army from 110,800 to 115,000 enlisted men, ration allowance is boosted and funds are provided for air service reserve activities.

NEW YORK STATE INDUSTRIAL SURVEY REPORT PROVIDES FOR NINE-HOUR DAY CALLED EIGHT

The industrial survey commission, appointed last year by the state legislature to investigate the industrial conditions pertaining to employment of labor, has rendered its report. The mountain labored and brought forth a mouse.

While every member of the commission admits that he is in favor of a 48-hour work bill for women workers, yet it is pointed out that not enough material has been accumulated to show the feasibility of such a law. It therefore recommends that the commission be instructed to continue its work and make definite recommendations by next year.

For this year the commission recommends to the legislature to regulate the working hours for women as follows: 49½ hours shall constitute one week's work; these hours to be divided so that one half day will be free. In other words the report calls for 9 hours work for five days o week and 4½ hours for the remaining day.

It is to be observed, however, that the report does not specify on what day the short hours shall be worked, whether on Mondays or Saturdays. Evidently any day suitable to the employers would be acceptable. In fact the recommandations os a whole are drawn up to "provide the necessary elasticity for certain industries." In order to give this "elasticity," the 9-hour law is shelved, and to make sure that the employers are not hampered in any way, provision is made that within the period of one year the employer may work his employees 78 extra hours as overtime, these hours to be worked whenever the boss calls upon the workers to do so. No mention is made for extra payment for such overtime

Really Nine-hour Day.

On the whole thon the commission's report is not for a 49½-hour week, but for a 51-hour week, and leaves it to the employer to grant the half-day rest either for Monday, Thursday, Saturday, or any other day. It also legalizes the overtime employment at straight wage-rate payments. Be it said here to the credit of assemblyman Hackenburg, that he voted against the 48-hour bill as drawn up, and stated that his concept of the 48-hour bill would be one without any provision for extra work.

Mervin K. Hart, representative of the employers, emphatically opposed any restriction of working hours; which shows how backward some industrialists still are. At the same time it is hoped that such statements will force conservative labor leaders to fight more aggressively for the passage of a 48-hour law.

Hovelski Rather Timid.

Labor was represented on this commission by Emanuel Hovelski, vice-president of the State Federation of Labor. While his fight for the 48-hour bill was weak, nevertheless he did make an aggressive attempt to have payments under the state compensation insurance increased from $20 to $30 per week He opposed the commission's recommendation not to bring about any changes in labor laws for the next five years and also attacked certain building trades unions for closing their books and thus to prevent admission of new members to their organizations.

The report reaffirmed the present system of bi-monthly wage payments, and also allowed such payments to be made in checks.

On the whole the commission's report is as reactionary as any report dealing with employment regulation could be. The commission at all times had the employer's interest in view, and actually leaves it to their discretion to regulate the working hours as it will best serve their interest.

Altho, as stated above, Hackenburg and Koveleski made objections to a few points, yet it is significant that the report was signed by the entire membership of the commission.

CARMI THOMPSON, PROF. MOON, SIR HERBERT AMES, AT CONFERENCE, APPROVE IMPERIALISM

By I. AMTER.

CLEVELAND.—To "inform the public" on all foreign and domestic policies and to help to mold public opinion, the chamber of commerce of this city arranged a foreign policy conference for Feb. 14-15.

None other than the treasurer of the league of nations, Sir Herbert Ames, opened the conference with a carefully prepared address on the function of the league of nations, and why the United States should be inside. When questioned as to whether the league should not step in the struggle of the Chinese people against Great Britain, he declared that the Chinese affair was a domestic affair, and therefore the league has no jurisdiction. He said the league knows only of the Pekin government.

The next day, Prof. Moon of Columbia University, delivered an address on our relations with Nicaragua. Moon believes that it is one of the functions of industrialized countries to take their civilization to the less developed countries. "The Monroe Doctrine meant keep your hands off, imperialism means keep your hands on," he explained. He condemned the manner in which the U. S. government has interfered in Nicaragua, and declared that force must be kept out of the field of development. Imperialism is correct, but violence must be avoided.

Dislikes Hypocrisy.

Moon said that "we advocate arbitration over armed force—then go ahead and use armed force. And 'hypocrite' is being hurled at us from all sides. I believe that America has acted imperialistically, but really is unconscious of it. Mexico is back of Facasa. Hence we support Diaz. This is a poor reason. We fear a Bolshevist wedge between Mexico and the Panama Canal. This seems to me rather far-fetched. We wished to 'protect lives and property.' No lives were in danger, but some property was. We own canal rights through Nicaragua. Nicaragua would make a fine naval base for any nation controlling it. It is difficult for me to make much of any of these reasons as advanced through official channels. The real basis for such actions must be sought in the economic interests involved."

As a matter of fact, we never get the real truth for such actions until years after. And then, we discover that financial interests were back of such actions more than we were led to believe at the time. Such intervention looks like imperialism."

Carmi Thompson also came to town to expatiate on his views regarding the Philippines before the chamber of commerce, the foreign policy conference having in the meantime adjourned to a hotel. "Filipino independence should be deferred until the islands have proved themselves economically independent, with the added warning that, if such is to be, the present militaristic government as inaugurated by Governor General Wood must be succeeded by a real co-operation between the executive and legislative branches of the Philippine government."

Thompson admits that there are two outstanding political parties in the islands, and although they differ on internal policies, they are unanimous on independence. "I believe that virtually the entire voting population is for independence. Every child in the school is taught the cry for independence." Thompson declared that the "Philippines can raise sufficient rubber, camphor and coffee to break the monopolies in these necessary commodities which foreign nations now maintain to the disadvantage of the Americans and also the Filipinos."

Washington Day Is Dedicated to Big Biz

The crowded chamber of the house presented a brilliant picture as the president delivered his address. Floor and galleries were crowded. Present were the membership of both houses, the members of the Supreme Court in their robes, cabinet officers and other officials of the government. The color was supplied by members of the diplomatic corps and officers of the army, navy and marine corps, in dress uniforms.

While awaiting the president's appearance, to make the speech in which Washington was to be branded the first business man of America and the first American imperialist, the crowd discussed the exciting news of the declaration of a protectorate over Nicaragua, and the overwhelming of that country with U. S. marines, news of which has just been given out by the state department.

The LaFollette Discord.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Senator LaFollette (R) of Wisconsin commemorated Washington's birthday today by introducing a resolution in the senate against a third term for presidents.

The resolution declared it would be "unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions for any president to disregard the precedent of Washington."

Letters From Our Readers

To The DAILY WORKER,
New York City.

I receive your Daily every day, and I am very much pleased to read it. I only regret that I am not very good at English, and I cannot read and understand it very clearly, but I translate some of the articles into Chinese once in a while.

It is rather hard to translate some of the articles into Chinese (from your paper), and I wish I knew English as much as I know Spanish, then I could translate them better and more of them.

I hope that the DAILY WORKER will be stronger and stronger, and that the anti-imperialism movement, which is also my idea, will be a great success.

Hoping your constant endeavor against imperialism and fearless advancement,

And also hoping for the endless progress of your Daily.

With my heartiest congratulations to our DAILY WORKER,

SUI YAN (Snow Man),

Mass Arrests in Poland Show Need of a Strong International Defense

Reports received from Poland show that 400 arrests were made recently, including four White Russian members of parliament and many leading functionaries of the minority movement. In Warsaw alone about 120 to 130 arrests have taken place and over 500 houses ware searched.

The wildest rumors about Russian money and Soviet agents are being spread for the undoubted purpose of supplying an excuse for a continuation of the terror. Mass executions are likely to become the order of the day unless a sufficiently strong international protest is made.

The International Labor Defense, New York Section, calls upon all workers to rally to the support of the oppressed workers of Poland. Our organization is fighting in all countries. New York must not lag behind, but should be in the forefront of the struggle.

Manager On the Make Indifference of Rank And File, Wreck Co-op.

MINNEAPOLIS — (FP). — The bonkruptcy of the great cooperative Associated Textile of Minneapolis, with a probable loss to the cooperative stock-holders of $250,000 is a severe blow, says the Northern States Cooperative League, but not attributable to cooperation itself.

Analyzing the disaster, the league shows that it was due to a neglect of cooperative principles that is ordinarily avoided in even the smallest cooperative unit. Among the causes of the failure the league lists:

1. A board of directors of labor men that were little more than figureheads. "A good labor man is not automatically a good co-operator", it remarks.

Bad Manager.

2. A manager, H. Naphtalin, who was heavily on the make and "who either was dishonest or utterly devoid of an understanding of the aims and principles of cooperation." He inventoried the stock at $800,000 when an independent appraisal placed it at only $80,000. Though stockholders were led to believe that the cooperative had made over $60,000, an independent audit showed a loss of $270,000. The first proper audit was made in December 1926 after the co-op had been in existence 3 years. But then it was too late.

Indiffedence.

3. Indifference of the cooperative members. "Most of them", the league rather bitterly reflects, "were just investors, expecting only to get regularly a good interest on their money but never expecting to be bothered with the worries of supervising the affairs of the organization."

4. Greater vigilance should have been exercised by the league itself with which the Associated Textile was affiliated. "From now on we are going to keep our eyes open in this respect," the league asserts. "We do not wish to be stung again".

Although a reorganization committee is on the job it is generally thought that the $200,000 paid up capital is a total loss.

SHANGHAI LABOR TO TAKE POWER, SAYS N. Y. EDITOR

Chinese Writer Tells of Soviet Aim

By HARRY FREEMAN.

Chinese workers will sweep out foreign imperialists from Shanghai just as they swept them out from Hankow, H. Linson, editor of the Chinese Nationalist Daily, asserted today in a special statement to The DAILY WORKER.

"The general strike in Shanghai will clear the way for the nationalist army," he declared. "The terrorist tactics of General Sun, the so-called 'defender of Shanghai,' will not prevent the workers of Shanghai from sweeping out the foreign imperialists as well as their lackeys, the warlords."

Comparing the Shanghai strike to the great Leningrad strike that preceded the October revolution in Russia, Linson said: "There are many reasons for believing that the Shanghai workers will take over the factories just as their Russian comrades did in 1917."

Oust Native Capitalists Too.

The working class constitutes the backbone of the revolutionary movement and with the proper leadership they will succeed in ending the exploitation of the workers and peasants by native as well as foreign capitalists."

Linson praised the students for their staunch support of the nationalist movement.

Memorial To Sun Yat-sen.

Five thousand Chinese of this city will meet March 12 to pay tribute to Sun Yat-sen and to express their sympathy for the struggle of their countrymen for emancipation.

Scott Nearing, Harry F. Ward, John Dewey, William Weinstone, J. Louis Engdahl and William F. Dunne are among those who have been invited to address the meeting.

A committee consisting of H. Linson, editor of the Chinese Nationalist Daily, Dr. Sui Peng, associate editor of the Chinese Nationalist Daily, T. K. Chao, Kuomintang official and others, will meet tonight to make arrangements for the demonstration.

France Asks Payment Of 30 Million Pending Mellon-Berenger Pact

PARIS, Feb 22.—Pending the ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt payment agreement the French finance commission has proposed a temporary payment of $30,000,000 to the United States and to Great Britain. This action is to be reported to the Chamber of Deputies, and hope is expressed in financial circles that this plan will be acceptable to both Britain and America.

Fight Scandal Probe Due if Reactionaries At Albany Consent

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 22.—An investigation of the sale of tickets for boxing bouts would be made by the judiciary committee of the assembly under a resolution offered by Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier.

The probe would be especially directed, Cuvillier said, into the alleged scandal of the sale of tickets for the recent Delaney-Maloney fight in New York City.

"If reports about the sale of tickets for the Delaney-Maloney fight are true, it amounted to a public scandal and should be investigated by the legislature," Cuvillier said.

NATION'S WOMEN WILL CELEBRATE THEIR OWN DAY

International Women's Day will be celebrated with a mass meeting at Central Opera House, 67th Street and Third Avenue, Tuesday evening, March 8 at 8 p. m.

On this day proletarian women in every country raise their voices in protest against the hypocrisy of equality for all. There is no equality and liberty for all while there exists an oppressed sex; while there is a class of oppressors enslaving the hungry. In this country the proletarian women are raising their voices against the threat of war by the imperialists against China, Nicaragua and Mexico.

There will be a good musical program. Speakers will include Louis J. Engdahl, Kate Gitlow, W. Weinstone Rose Wortis, Fanny Warshafsky, M. J. Olgin, Young Workers' League and Pioneer and other speakers.

The admission is 25 cents. The meeting is under the auspices of the Workers' Party, District 2.

WORKERS' SCHOOL STUDENTS HAVE MAGAZINE; INTERESTING ARTICLE IN FIRST ISSUE

The "Student Worker," the first issue of a magazine published by the students of the Workers' School, 108 E. 14th St., has made its appearance. It contains a number of vital articles on activities in the school and also several "feature articles" on workers' education.

Students Edit It.

The magazine is being edited by members of the Students' Council, which consists of representatives of all the classes of the school. Its aims are explained in an article by Jack Glass, secretary of the council.

"Carnegie Corporation and Workers' Education," by Bertram Wolfe, director of the school, is a vivid expose of the attempts of the various capitalist "philanthropic educational funds" to emasculate workers' schools.

"The fate of workers' education is hanging in the balance," says Wolfe. "If the philanthropists succeed in dominating the workers' education movement, they will be poisoning it, consciously or unconsciously, with master-class viewpoints, and robbing the working class of its natural leaders."

Beatrice A. Myers, a student of the Workers' School, in an article entitled, "The First Time in History," tells of the methods by which students and teachers cooperate in the selection of courses, methods of teaching, etc.

New Courses.

In a resumé of the activity of the Workers' School, the editors explain that 51 new courses will begin during the present month and during March. This announcement comes after the completion of the most successful term in the history of the school. Last term, some 50-odd courses were given and over 1,200 students registered for one or more of these. Between 80 and 90 per cent of those taking courses in the school were members of the New York trade unions.

During the coming term courses will be given by Scott Nearing, Robert D. Dunn, Arthur W. Calhoan, Benjamin Gitlow, William W. Weinstone, Alexander Trachtenberg, Bertram D. Wolfe, and others.

ANNOUNCING THE BUILDER'S COLUMN.

WITH the coming of The DAILY WORKER to New York City, with the addition of a number of new and attractive features, there has grown up throughout the country a strong interest in the paper, and a strong desire to participate actively in building up its circulation. This has found expression in the establishment of a number of important cities of groups of DAILY WORKER builders, who devote their time and energy to the strengthening of the paper. This movement has taken on so insistent a character that there has grown up at the same time the need for the development of a real technique for this promotion work and the need also for the exchange of experiences between DAILY WORKER builders.

For this reason we are establishing a DAILY WORKER Builders' Column. Readers of The DAILY WORKER are asked to send their experiences and suggestions addressed to The DAILY WORKER Builders' Column. In this column should appear the suggestions of the comrades who are on the front line trenches to build The DAILY WORKER. This column should be a means of exchanging ideas, of presenting difficulties for solution, of building through an exchange of opinions and experiences, the most perfect methods for spreading The DAILY WORKER. This material will be printed as fast an it is sent in. The future of The DAILY WORKER will depend upon the amount of thinking our readers are doing along this line. A very accurate gauge of how much thinking is being done will be the number of letters which are sent to The DAILY WORKER Builders' Column.

—BERT MILLER.

SANITARY LABELS NOW CIRCULATE IN SCAB SHOPS

Sigman Agitation On Question All Bluff.

The Sanitary Labels of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and also the fifty-cent registration books of the reactionary officialdom of the International, are being freely circulated in scab shops, it is charged in a leaflet issued yesterday by the Shop Chairmen's Council to all cloak and dressmakers who have been forced to register with the International.

It is pointed out that Sigman raised the issues of the sanitary label and unemployment insurance just to divert attention from the fact that his union-splitting policies are resulting in the destroying of the most basic union conditions in the shops.

"Now that the official registration of Sigman and his associates has been ended, all cloak and dressmakers who were terrorized into registering with the International for fear of losing their jobs, are urged to join with their fellow-workers "to fight against those who have needlessly thrown our union into a ruinous civil war." All workers are asked by the Shop Chairmen's Council to join with the Joint Board in building a union controlled by the rank and file.

"We cannot permit the present situation to go on much longer," says the Council. "The conditions which we have gained thru our bitter strike are fast being undermined as a result of the present war forced upon us by Sigman. The bosses are taking full advantage of the situation; wages are being cut down, hours prolonged and piece work, against which we fought for many years, is beginning to spread thruout our industry."

Members of the union are asked to ignore the orders of Sigman and his supporters, regardless of whether you were forced to register; to come to the Joint Board and take out duplicate books; and not to pay any dues to Sigman "because the money is being used to split the union and to pay the hired gangsters who are terrorizing the membership of our union."

This statement is signed by I. Brauner, chairman, and A. Kleinman, secretary of the Shop Chairmen's Council.

Communists Invite Bohemian Socialist To Debate Programs

CLEVELAND, Feb. 22.—The District Executive Committee, Workers' (Communist) Party, District Six, has sent a letter to Joseph Martinek, leader of the Bohemian socialists of Cleveland, challenging him to a debate. Martinek pretends to be a revolutionist, but his writings, and his actions contradict his words. In order that the masses of Bohemian workers of Cleveland may hear an exposition of revolutionary principles, this debate, it is hoped, may be held, and unquestionably will attract a big crowd.

The letter follows:

Joseph Martinek, Cleveland, O.

Dear Comrade: There is a gulf between the philosophy which you stand for and that which the Workers (Communist) Party advocates. The workers in the two camps—and the workers generally—are seldom given an opportunity of deciding which is correct, owing to the fact that they do not hear arguments pro and con at the same time.

The letter follows:

In order that the Bohemian workers of Cleveland may be given an opportunity of judging which position is correct—the "reformism" of the socialist—the Workers (Communist) Party, District Executive Committee, District Six, proposes the following:

That Joseph Martinek debate with a representative of the Workers (Communist) Party on the subject: "Resolved that the Workers (Communist) Party has the only program for the working class."

The time, place and conditions of the debate shall be determined by a conference of three of your side, and three representing the Workers (Communist) Party—the conference to be held within a week. The debate is to be conducted in English.

On Saturday, March 5, the bazaar will be opened—in the evening—and there will be a dance. On Sunday, March 6, at 3 p. m., there will be a grand concert and Comrade Jay Lovestone will speak. At 6 p. m. supper will be served, and the bazaar will close with a dance. The committee in charge will make this one of the most enjoyable affairs that have been held in the district.

Tickets may be obtained at the District Office, 5027 Euclid Ave.; Freiheit Singing Society, 3514 E. 116th; Freiheit Office, 12509 Kinsman Rd.; South Slavic Hall, 5607 St. Clair Ave.; Hungarian Hall, 4309 Lorain Ave.

Young Worker Rouses His Fellows by Giving Out Appropriate Paper

The distribution of the Young Worker in front of one shop containing four articles on the National Cloak and Suit Company, met with a wonderful response on the part of our young fellow workers. The remarks and actions of some of those who passed by without receiving any paper, showed that it is popular.

These sections of our remarks uphold our articles telling the truth about the conditions of the young workers in the shop in which we are employed.

We are asking fellow workers to expose more in detail every little act on the part of the bosses. Do not be fooled by their attempt to give little things temporarily. Write to us about their next move.

PASSAIC BAZAAR GOES OVER BIG; ALL UNIONS JOIN

United Support Given By Organized Labor

PATERSON, Feb. 22.—The big seven-day bazaar staged by organized labor in this city for the benefit of the Passaic textile strikers, several thousands of whom are still unemployed although their strike is now over in all but one mill, opened last night in Carpenter's Hall, 54 Van Houten St., in a blaze of color and enthusiasm.

Not even the severely inclement weather had any apparent effect on the size of the gathering.

The bazaar has the endorsement of the Paterson Trades and Labor Council and of the Building Trades Council, which, with other labor organizations and fraternal, civic and religious bodies, have given full co-operation. John Richardson, president of the Paterson Trades and Labor Council, is manager of the bazaar.

Booths Well Stocked.

The large crowd found the booths well stocked with colorful and useful articles, ranging all the way from staples like flour, sugar and coffee to oriental objects donated by local merchants and other sympathizers with the textile strikers' struggle. Booths were operated by United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Local 525, (staples, featured by made-up baskets of foodstuffs, ready to carry home).

Ice Signals Death.

NYACK, N. Y., Feb. 22.—Attracted by the steady tooting of an automobile horn, William J. Hasse, a milk wagon driver of New Milford, N. J., early today found the bodies of two men who had lost their lives when their car plunged from the road near here, and became submerged in the water of Sparkhill Creek. A piece of ice which became wedged against the press-button of the horn when the tide went out, gave the eerie alarm that led Hasse to his tragic find.

Workers Come to Meet Called By Fascisti; Take Over the Forum

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

CLEVELAND.—Recently, in this city, there was to have been a meeting of all fascists and profascists, for the purpose of raising funds to support Mussolini's newspapers in Italy.

The secretary of the Fascist organization announced at this time that Consul Valeriani of Cleveland, the principal speaker of the afternoon, had been delayed and would arrive in half-hour. After the interval had passed, the group was impatient, and the large body of anti-fascists, summoned by the Anti-Fascist Alliance, determined to use the opportunity to hold a demonstration against Mussolini, right there in the hall.

Doctor Speaks.

Dr. Biagiotti, one of these, rose to speak, and the crowd closed in to hear him. Five hard-boiled police, well armed with sawed-off shot-guns and black-jacks, etc., entered the place, took possession, and walked Biagiotti out of the hall, locking the doors behind them until he might be safely out the way. Two others, Tony Rosa and Louis Divito, who followed the police to demand what they were going to do with Biagiotti, were also arrested.

Police for Benito.

Meanwhile the temperature of the audience, of whom there were at least 11 Anti-Fascists to each of the fascists, was rising ominously, as the fascist side of the hall obvious detectives and armed police entered, until there must have been at least 50 in all of these scavengers.

Shouting, jostling, discussions, threatening, singing, all of these things; while the consul came and had not known there was so much excitement against Mussolini in Cleveland."

Two and one-half hours after the time set for the meeting, the audience was put out of the hall, with the statement that the meeting was called off.

Dr. Biagiotti has been held for disturbance, the others for the same and for resisting an officer. The International Labor Defense will take up the defense.

Passaic Workers Are Fighting Scab Daily

PASSAIC, N. J.—Organized labor here is fighting a non-union newspaper—the Passaic Daily Eagle.

Formal protests have been made by the typographical and plumbers local unions against the use of a scab publication by the city administration as an official newspaper. The city of Passaic has been publishing official proceedings and legal notices of the board of city commissioners through the columns of the Eagle.

The Passaic Daily Eagle is a flyby-night political sheet that came into existence several years ago to whoop things up for certain politicians among the textile workers and building and printing tradesmen and other mechanics who make up the city's population. It is owned by Max Simon and published in the neighboring textile town of Garfield under non-union conditions.

Hope to Ban Convict-Made Goods.

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Hopes for the passage by the house and senate, before March 4, of the Cooper bill providing that states may compel the importation of prison-made goods, have raised when the house rules committee took under consideration the appeal for a special rule to get a vote on the measure in the house.

Chairman Kopp of the house committee on labor argued that the bill is constitutional, and that it is needed to stop the flooding of the market with convict-made articles at "outlaw" prices. Labor organizations and many other groups are behind the measure. Textile contractors are opposing it.

BILL RAISES SUM OF PAYMENTS ON COMPENSATION

Manufacturers Threat Called "Idle"

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 22.—Representatives of organized labor in New Jersey clashed with representatives of the New Jersey manufacturers' association here today at the public hearing on the bill sponsored by Senator Emerson L. Richards of Atlantic county and intended to increase from between $17 to $20 the maximum weekly payments for workingmen's compensation.

A. Dayton Oliphant of the manufacturers' association, stated that if the New Jersey Federatio nof Labor, ers would be compelled to leave the state. Arthur Quinn, president of the New Jersey federation of labor, called this an "idle threat."

Parents Will Meet to Protest Transfer of Pupils in Chi. School

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—An indignation meeting of parents to protest against the transfer of seventh and eighth grade pupils from the Blaine croft public school to the Sabia junior high school will be held Thursday, February 24, at 8 p. m., at the North Western Hall, corner North and Western Aves.

The transfers were made by the school authorities without the knowledge of the parents. The children have to walk many blocks and have to pass two car tracks in going to the new school. When the parents heard about these transfers a preliminary meeting was held and a provisional committee elected to call a mass meeting of all the parents of the school.

This committee, together with the North-West Side Parents' League, is calling the meeting Thursday. All the parents of the north west side are invited to attend the meeting. There will be good speakers, who will explain the situation in the public schools in general. Come yourself and bring your neighbors. Come for the sake of the children!

Anti-Imperialist Meet Arranged in Cleveland

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 22.—The Cleveland Young Workers' League, Branch No. 1, will hold a protest meeting against the action of the United States in sending to China and Nicaragua marines and battleships.

J. Y. Jeong, graduate of the Case School of Applied Science and an authority on Chinese affairs, will be the main speaker. This meeting will be held Sunday, Feb. 27, 3:30 p. m., at the Freiheit Hall, 3514 East 116th St.

Comrades and Fellow Workers:

After a years' heroic struggle of the Passaic textile workers, the mill barons were forced to submit to a union in the textile industry of Passaic. They are however putting obstacles in the way of maintaining such an organization. Although the strike is almost over, they are taking the workers back very slowly, with the result that thousands of families are without means of existence. Their children are hungry.

There are many families whose sole supporters were sent to jail for long periods because of their activities in the strike. You must come to their rescue. Relief must go on with full speed!

The General Relief Committee, who is maintaining a few food stores in Passaic, appeals to all those who have milk coupons to send in their money as soon as possible, no matter how much you have collected. Send the money immediately to the General Relief Committee, 799 Broadway, Room 225, also ask for more coupons to sell.

The office is open from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. daily.

Worst Housing in Ohio Is at State Hospital; Too Many Patients

CLEVELAND. Some people think it would be a good thing to get sick and go to a hospital. There you are supposed to get food and good treatment. Many a fellow goes to jail for the same reason—at least he gets a flop and something to eat.

But no man should choose the Newburg State Hospital for the Insane. This is the Ohio state institution. According to a report made by the superintendent of the institution, the "worst housing conditions in the state of Ohio prevail at the hospital".

The maximum capacity here has been placed at 1,400. We now have 2,200 patients, and hundreds of others are waiting for admittance". One ward intended for 50 patients houses 130. Some of the floors are 70 years old.

So it's a good thing if you're not a lunatic—in Ohio.

No books are necessary, and only a small fee will be charged to cover a very low rent.

SUPREME COURT REFUSES "WRIT" AGAINST UNION

Contractors Unfair Plea Not Recognized

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22. — The supreme court of the United States today denied the petition of the Barber Painting Company of New York for an injunction against painters' unions, which it alleged caused a strike because the company would not pay the New York wage scale in Philadelphia. The action of the labor unions, the company contended, was designed to aid the Philadelphia contractors, who had a union wage agreement lower than the New York scale.

The government won today in the supreme court an anti-trust suit against 23 pottery manufacturing concerns and 20 individuals, alleged to control 82 per cent of the business in the country.

Decision was rendered upon the government's appeal, after the circuit court of appeals in New York had refused to declare that the Trenton Potteries Company, Thomas Maddock's Sons Company and other defendants had entered into an illegal combination to unreasonably maintain prices.

Dissolution of the sanitary potters' association, which the government alleged dictated a price fixing and sales agreement, was demanded by the governments.

The federal government today won the "fifteen billion dollar" railroad valuation case on jurisdictional grounds.

The supreme court, which did not decide the case on its merits, held that the question of railroad valuation was still a matter of investigation by the interstate commerce commission.

Justice Brandeis who read the opinion said the lower court should have dismissed the case of the Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad which appealed from the tentative valuation made by the interstate commerce commission.

Queen Marie Pays Her Respects to American People: "Flock of Swine"

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—"My son was right when he said Americans were a flock of swine."

This statement is attributed to Queen Marie of Roumania in a copyrighted article said to have been written by one of her attendants, appearing today in the Chicago Herald Examiner.

The queen also complained that during her visit to America she was insulted daily on the streets with such remarks as "hey, queen, how's the old man?"

"What can you expect from a people who always refer to their president by his first name," the queen is also credited in the article with saying.

It is known that queen was shocked at the crowd which gathered to greet her here by shouting, "Catzenfanell," the name of a village in which during the war, the queen and her court engaged in a naked, drunken orgy, leaving soldiers in their care to bleed to death.

COMMUNISM NEXT IN EUROPE SAYS 'NATION'S' WRITER

Louis Fisher, European correspondent of "The Nation" and author of the recent book "Oil Imperialism" spoke Sunday evening at the open forum held at the Community Church Park Ave. and 43rd St.

Fischer, who has spent four and a half of the last five years in Europe, stressed his belief that European capitalism is in the last throes of its existence and that within the next decade or two, a European war will demolish the last of the tottering imperialistic nations in Europe. When asked from the floor what form of government would take the places of capitalism, he answered "undoubtedly Communism."

Fischer was careful to state that he does not include Soviet Russia when he speaks of Europe's decline. He reiterated several times that with every slip of the rest of Europe, Russia's power is increasing and that when the trade of the United States in Europe has been demolished, the America government will turn to Russia, China, India and South America for her trade.

His speech threw a horrible scare into the minds of the Park Ave. intellegentsia church-goers that made up the bulk of the audience.

Plan County Park.

The Westchester county board of supervisors within the next two weeks will be requested to appropriate an initial sum of $1,250,000 for the construction of a model, county-owned, amusement park at Rye Beach, on property recently acquired by the county at a cost of $2,250,000.

How Landlordism Has Gripped New York Workers By Throat Told in Daily Worker Series

The DAILY WORKER begins publication today of a series of articles surveying New York's housing problem. Will de Kalb, who as reporter and research worker knows intimately every district of the city, will conduct the survey. Lower east side, upper east side, west side, Yorkville, Harlem, Brownsville, the Bronx and Brooklyn will be reviewed district by district. Today's story presents a general summary of the problem.

Tomorrow The DAILY WORKER continues its pen pictures of wretched, insanitary and disease-breeding housing for New York's workers, contributed by readers of the paper. Send in your letter, telling your own personal experiences. Name not used, if requested.

By WILL DE KALB

Food, shelter and clothing—the three essentials to existence.

According to what I learned and read between the lines when I studied the theory of economics in my college days, they at least were guaranteed to the workers under the capitalist system of exploitation.

And yet, upon completing an intensive survey of wages, rentals, prices and living standards in the various nooks and corners of greater New York, I have come to the conclusion that even that guarantee is considered by the ruling class like all other of their agreements—they are so many words.

In the series of articles that will begin tomorrow, I will give a detailed report of an investigation that has extended over many years. Every community, every residential section in the five boroughs will be analyzed along the lines of average wages received by workers, the amount of rent paid, and the standards of living prevalent.

Rents Go Up.

During the war, America's hundred percenters were educated into exacting high prices for food, clothing and shelter through unendless flag-waving and trumpet-tooting by the "men behind the men behind the guns"—the war grafters. Millions were turned over by the manufacturers; shortage after shortage was artificially created to keep prices up.

After the armistice, the price of food and clothing dropped a little. Since there were no armies to be supplied, and European nations were rapidly beginning to resume their old places in the industrial world, a surplus of food and clothing was manifesting itself to the price-fixers.

The sky-high prices of the war period could no longer be maintained. Gradually, but with many a heartache, the war-profiteers were forced to acknowledge this.

But rents began to soar in 1918.

The huge armies of the A. E. F. were being demobilized in New York and the vicinity. Many ex-soldiers remained here. Immigration, breaking all past records, was resumed. Thousands of families had to find a'elter. The result—the creation of a demand.

The Housing Shortage.

The landlord, long willing to accept 12 and 15 per cent interest and a good living from his investment, rubbed his hands in glee. The demand exceeded the supply. He controlled a monopoly, due to high building costs. Rent began to climb higher than Halley's comet. But the landlord was merely obeying the laws of capitalist economics, when you have an advantage, make the most of it, the public be damned. It was—and how?

I remember, seven years ago when I was the editor of several local community newspapers, attending a meeting platform before a meetjng of the city parliament of community councils, in the aldermanic chamber of the City Hall, when a resolution of protest was drafted to be sent to the United Real Estate Owners' Association of Greater New York. It urged the reduction of rentals, and included figures, calculations and statistics proving that rents could be appreciably reduced throughout the city while landlords would still receive at least 50 per cent more than their pre-war income in spite of any future increase taxes.

Tossed Into Wastebasket.

One week later I was present at the meeting of the executive committee of the Real Estate Owners' Association in the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria. The resolution was read. Then the secretary filed it in a convenient wastebasket. Immediately afterward, with a precision that was unconsciously sarcastic, a committee was appointed to co-operate with an expert accountant to determine to just what extent it would be safe to further increase rentals.

The acting chairmen frankly instructed the delegates from the numerous locals of the organization to advise the members they represented to "jack up rents to the top-notch—so that the individual landlord will have made enough to be able to afford empty apartments, rather than lower the rents, when the depression in real estate comes." The depression was forecasted for this year—it has been put off now for five years.

The Landlord's Role.

Meanwhile the housing situation is becoming worse every day. Who are guilty?

First, there is the individual landlord. Well organized into real estate associations, he has taken advantage of every opportunity to raise the rents without making any repairs or improvements. No sooner did the housing shortage arise, than "waiting lists" came into vogue. Landlords kept lists of people who desired rooms. From these lists he selected only those whom he knew would be willing to do without repairs, and who would accept raises without making any complaint. If a tenant caused any trouble, he could easily dispossess him, and the rooms re-rented the same day by consulting the "waiting lists."

Tenants were blacklisted. Powerful lobbies were maintained at the legislature to frustrate the passage of relief measures. The courts felt the influence of the undercover operations of the real estate owners.

Mergers In Landlordism.

Then, there are the corporations, owning strings of houses throughout the city. These have a separate organization of their own, co-operating with the other, having as a sole purpose the scalping of the rent-payer.

Finally, I would include the profiteering building contractors, and the scarcity of moderately priced new buildings. Only a negligible few of the new buildings erected in Manhattan have unfurnished rooms for less than twenty dollars a month per room. Only in Queens and Richmond are there any, and even these are few.

The New York worker is becoming desperate. He is caught in the center of the vicious circle, and he cannot even go around with it. And the major cause is the housing situation. This series of articles will analyze that situation.

Choose Nevada for Naval Munitions Depot.

WASHINGTON. (FPI.—Favorable report has been made by the senate committee on naval affairs on the bill providing for a $3,500,000 depot at Hawthorne, Nevada, to receive naval munitions. Lands for the building site will cost $50,000.

Storing of naval munitions for the Pacific fleet and Pacific coast defenses at a point in the desert, far across the Sierras from any Pacific port, has never before been seriously suggested. That the promoters have used the Japanese war bogey with telling effect was evident in the committee's decision.

8 GIRL PICKETS ARE RELEASED IN JEFFERSON COURT

Cases Against Them Are Thrown Out

Eight girl pickets were arrested on Monday morning as they were picketing the shop of B. Gershel, 496 7th Avenue, but were released in Jefferson Market Court when the officers failed to present sufficient evidence to the judge that they had been "disorderly."

The shop was called on strike Monday by the Joint Board after seven workers were discharged for refusing to register with the International. The chairman of this shop, J. Kushner, was an "executive board member" appointed by Sigman to take the place of the regularly elected board member of Local 22, after he had expelled the officers of Local 22 and "taken over" its business.

The girls who were arrested for picketing the shop were Anna Liebowits, Dorothy Goechberg, Sarah Begun, Paulin Farber, Ida Lifsky, Rebecca Gerst and two other workers. Rosalsky at it Again.

Sentence was pronounced upon Max Bernstein and Oscar Newman by Judge Rosalsky on Monday, after they had been in jail for over two weeks, awaiting sentence, which was postponed four times. Max Bernstein, who was charged with malicious mischief by Irving Vloch, an employer who was said to be doing scab work during the strike, was sentenced to the penitentiary for an indeterminate sentence.

Oscar Newman, twenty-year old striker, charged with assault in the third degree was placed on parole for two years. The Judge has not decided whether the two weeks and three days Bernstein has spent in the Tombs awaiting sentence will be counted on his sentence.

Frenchy's Gangsters Up.

Four gangsters who were identified by several witnesses as the men who shot and wounded Samuel Cohen at 57th Street and Broadway as he was leaving the picket line at Reisman, Rothman and Beaver, were bound over to the grand jury at a hearing before Judge Simpson in 54th Street Court on Saturday. They gave their names as Harry Goldman, salesman; Samuel Ober, chauffeur; Max Richter, loan broker and Samuel Friedman, garment worker, but they are well known to the pickets as members of Frenchy's gang, which has been terrorizing the garment district for the past eight weeks.

The gangsters were released on $8,000 bail apiece, excepting in the case of the chauffeur, who was released or $1,000 bail, all of which was furnished by the International. The men were defended by attorney of the International, who withdrew from the cases of cloakmakers, members of the union for 15 years, and arrested for the first time, on the picket lines, on the grounds that they "did not wish to defend gangsters."

Shop Chairmen to Meet.

Shop chairmen of cloak and dress industry have been called to a meeting on Thursday evening in Manhattan Lyceum by the Council of Shop Chairmen, for the discussion of the defense of the prisoners.

The Women's Defense Committee will meet on Wednesday evening at Manhattan Lyceum to perfect plans for a general campaign for the release of the prisoners and the relief of their wives and children. Women of many organizations have been invited to attend and a general call sent out to all working women.

Lewis' "Sound Basis" For Agreement Seems To Be Less Employment

CLEVELAND, John L. Lewis stated at the conference of the coal miners and operators that the former would be willing to agree to a continuation of the Jacksonville agreement with the provision that the miners and operators then work out a "sound basis" for the industry.

Samuel S. Wyer, consulting engineer and chairman of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce Coal Committee, in the current issue of the "Clevelander," predicts that the "present seasonal employment of laborers will be increased by many factors which caused decreased demand for coal. Among them are centralization of power plants, development of water power, education of consumers to conserve coal, and development of labor-saving equipment which will replace the miners themselves."

Govt Press Concern Demands Physical Examination for Jobs.

CHICAGO, (FP).—Physical examinations of applicants for jobs are now demanded by the Goss Printing Press Co., producers of union-made printing presses. The machinists union pointed out that such examination is not permitted of its members by the union. The concern, which employs about 600 men, declares it will exact bi-yearly of new applicants.

Organized labor looks upon physical examinations by the employer as easily used elemen's in a national blacklist system against union men.

Filth in Cities and Papers Reflection of Decadence — Holmes

"This is the "dirty decade". That was the term used today by Rev. Hayden Holmes of the Community Church.

"As I walk the streets of the city," said Holmes, "I find them filled with dirt. I ride in the subways and find them filthy. I stroll through the public parks and find them litter-d and neglected and unclean.

But the dirt of the streets is no worse than the dirt in certain of our magazines and newspapers; the filth of our subways is no worse than the filth in our theatres, and the ugliness and disorder of our public parks is no worse than the chaos of our social life.

"We find ourselves in an environment of decadence and social degeneracy."

The Responsibility for British Imperialist Plots

The Soviet Union press, acting on information so authentic that the British home and foreign offices have not dared to dispute it, has lifted the lid from the rotten mess which has been mixed by the tories of government, church and business and czarist refugees.

But it is not with the stench arising from this combination of reactionary forces that we are concerned, bad as it is.

What is important in this latest conspiracy is the role played by these czarist refugees in the general strike and the coal strike and the fact that following the defeat of the British workers in these two actions, a new war on the workers' and peasants' government of the Soviet Union is being planned.

Withdrawal of recognition of the Soviet Union undoubtedly is the first step in this scheme. Some of these czarist lackeys would then be recognized as representatives of a mythical reactionary government of Russia, or some section of it, Georgia probably, as a preliminary step toward war.

There is a steady sequence of betrayals of the British working class leading up to this latest development—in itself a part of the general campaign of British imperialism against the Soviet Union, the workers and the colonial peoples partly or wholly under British rule.

First came the "Zinoviev letter"—the forgery which gave a basis for a deal between Ramsay MacDonald and the imperialists. In the most cowardly manner, the right wing labor party leader allowed the enemies of labor to capitalize this coarse fraud.

Second, came the refusal of the right wing leaders to accept financial aid for strikers from the Russian trade unions.

Third, was the desertion of the coal miners and the betrayal of the general strike—called off before it had gathered its maximum strength and ending in a shameful surrender.

Fourth, was the refusal of the right wing leaders to establish an embargo on scab coal and the failure to adequately support the miners financially.

Fifth, there has been the steady attack by the right wing on the Communists and the most conscious section of the trade unions organized in the National Minority movement.

Sixth, there has been the hobnobbing of right wing labor leaders with leaders of the British ruling class for the purpose of introducing "American efficiency" into industry—speeding up the workers.

Seventh, there has been the recent denunciation by MacDonald of the exposure of monstrous conditions in Polish prisons as a "Communist plot." (Poland is Britain's chief instrument in the offensive against the Soviet Union).

Eighth, there has been the blessing given to troops departing for China by J. H. Thomas, leader of the trade union right wing.

Not czarist refugees but labor agents of British imperialism have made possible the critical situation for the masses of the Soviet Union, Western Europe, China, Great Britain—and the rest of the world's workers.

The fingers of Independent Labor Party leaders, British labor officials and reactionary trade union officials have helped to mix the mess now smelling to high heaven.

Had these leaders cared or dared to rally the whole British working class for uncompromising struggle against British imperialism during the general strike they might not have smashed it entirely but the labor movement would now be in a position to stop much more easily the bloody conspiracies of which there is clear evidence.

The main task of the British workers now, organized around the Communist party and the National Minority movement, is to prevent war on the Soviet Union, force withdrawal of British forces from China, expose the agents of British imperialism and replace them with courageous and honest leaders who recognize and base their policy on the fact that their duty is not to save British imperialism but to destroy it.

American workers will learn much of value to them in their struggles by watching closely and drawing the lessons from the process by which the British working class is freeing itself from the influence of British imperialism.

"Proof of the Conciliatory Policy."

For the present the most important aspect of the Chen-O'Malley agreement is the fact that it is further proof of the conciliatory policy of Great Britain announced last December.

—Editorial in New York Times, Feb. 22.

This proof of a conciliatory policy was given after Sun Chuang Fang's troops had been completely defeated south of Shanghai. Britain then was willing to turn over the foreign concession in Hankow to Chinese control.

In the Shanghai area Britain is not so conciliatory but when another smashing defeat is administered to Sun Chuang Fang and British intervention unites the Chinese masses still more solidly behind the people's government, Britain will again "give further proof of the conciliatory policy."

We suppose that when the last British soldier has been driven from Chinese soil that The Times will announce that this is simply "further proof" of Britain's peaceful policy.

This is the interpretation given to a mass movement which is shaking imperialism to its foundations by the leading organ of American imperialism.

Bunny had yielded to the importunities of his sister; wouldn't he have the decency to help out the estate in at least one way—look into those reports which Vernon Roscoe had rendered concerning the Prospect Hill field? Varne asserted that more than half the wells were off production, and Bertie suspected ons more trick to rob them. Bertie wouldn't know an oil well of production from a hen-coop, but Bunny would know, and couldn't he go down there, and snoop around a bit, and find out what other oil men thought about Varne and the prospects? Bunny took Rachel with him—she went everywhere with her new husband, of course. They had got one of the oldest of the Ysaels to run the magazine office, and Rachel was just manager and editor, very high and mighty. Bunny was a one-arm driver again, and the automobila was lopsided, and Rachel was nervous when he drove fast, because the gods are jealous of such rapture as hers.

Rachel had never seen an oil field at close range. So Bunny took her to the "discovery well," and told how Mr. Calver had lit the carbon-drums destroyed, trying to stop the flow with his head. He showed her the first well that Dad had drilled, and on which Bunny had helped to keep the mud flowing. That had been the beginning of Dad's big wealth; he and perhaps a score of others had got rich, and to balance it, there were in Beach City many thousands of people who had their homes plastered with mortgages, representing losses from the buying of "units." That was the way most of the money had been made in Prospect Hill—selling paper instead of oil. It was a fact, as Paul had cited, that more money had been put into the ground than had been taken out of it. Here was all the treasure of oil that, wisely drilled, would have lasted thirty years; but now the whole field was "on the pump," and hundreds of wells producing so little that it no longer paid to pump them. One sixth of the oil had been wasted, and five-sixths had been wasted!

That was your blessed "competition," which they taught you to love and honor in the economics classes! Another aspect of it was those frightful statistics, that of all the thousands of men who had worked here, seventy-three out of every hundred had been killed or seriously injured during the few years of the field's life! It was literally true that capitalist warfare in the world war going on all the time, unheeded by the newspapers.

Bunny did his checking up of the Ross wells, he couldn't do any "snooping," because some of the old hands knew him, and came up to greet him. He talked with a number of men, and found their reports about the wells as Verne's. Then, towards evenings, as he and Rachel were getting ready to leave, they came to a bungalow, dingy and forlorn, black with soot and dust and grey with dust, with a storage-tank in the back yard, and a derrick within ten feet on the next lot, and on the other side a shed which had housed the engine of another derrick. Bunny stopped, and read the number on the front of the bungalow, 5746 Los Robles Blvd. "Here's where Mrs. Groarty lives! Paul's aunt—it was in that house we had the meeting about the lease, and I first heard Paul's voice through the window there!"

He told the story of that night, describing the characters and how they had behaved. Paul said it was a little oil fight, and the world war had been a big oil fight, and they were exactly the same, and they were talking, the door opened, and there emerged a stout, red-faced woman in a dirty wrapper, and Bunny exclaimed, "Why, it's Mrs. Groarty!" How many years it had been since she had seen him; he had to tell her who he was, that little boy grown up, and with a wife—well, well, would you believe it, how time does fly! And so Mr. Ross was dead—Mrs. Groarty's husband had read the sad news out of the paper. She knew that he had got to be very rich, so she was thrilled by this visit, and invited them in, but nll in a flutter because her house wasn't in order.

They went in, because Bunny wanted Rachel to see that staircase, and to have a laugh on her afterwards, because she wouldn't notice anything, but would think the staircase led to a second story—in a one-story bungalow! There was the room—not a thing changed, except that it seemed to have shrunk in size, and the shine was all gone. There was the window where Bunny had stood while he listened to Paul's whispered voice. And by golly, there was "The Ladies' Guide, a Practical Handbook of Gentility," still on the centre table, faded and fly-specked gold and blue! Along side was a stack of what appeared to be legal papers, a pile at least eight inches high, and fastened with ribbons and a seal. Mrs. Groarty caught his glance at it; or perhaps it was just that she was longing for someone to tell her troubles to. "That's the papers about our lot," she said, "I just took them away from the lawyer, he takes our money and he don't do nothing."

So then she was started, and Rachel continued her education in oil history. The Groarty's had entered a community agreement, had then withdrawn from it and entered a smaller one: then they had leased to Sliper and Wilkins, and been sold by those "lease hounds" to a syndicate; and this syndicate had been plundered and thrown into bankruptcy; after which the lease had been bought by a man whom Mrs. Groarty described as the worst skunk of them all, and he had and got a lot of claims and liens against the property, and actually, people were trying to take some money away from the Groartys now, though they had never got one cent out of the well—and look at the way they had had to live all these years!

Here was the record of these transactions, community agreements and leases and quit claim deeds and notices of forfeiture and notices of cancellation of lease, and mortgages, and sales of "perrents," and mechanic's liens and tax receipts and notices of expiration of agreement—not less than four hundred pages of typewritten material something like a million and a half of words, mostly legal jargon—"the undersigned hereby agrees" and "in consideration of the premises herein set forth," and "in view of the failure of the party of the first part to carry out the said operations by the aforesaid date," and so on—it made you dizzy just to turn the pages. And all this to settle the ownership of what was expected to be ten thousand barrels of oil, and had turned out to be less than one thousand! Here you saw where the money had gone—pale typists shut up in offices all day transcribing copies of this verbiage, and pale clerks checking and rechecking them, or looking them up, or recording them—there were men up in Angel City who had become mighty magnates by employing thousands of man and women slaves, to transcribe and check and record and look up and record literally millions of documents like these!

"Should Be Hanged by Neck and Left Hanging"

IN far-off places patriots uphold with sturdy arms the starry banner of the republic. They stand ready to denounce with tongue and pen those who seek to undermine the foundations of the government of Washington and Jefferson by advocating such foul measures as a labor party.

Even in the little city of Mountain View, California, there is at least one partisan of the sacred cow portal of American capitalist democracy — the editor of the local weekly.

He arose one morning recently to find that the blighting hand of Communism had placed its imprint upon his peaceful bailiwick by cajoling the United States postoffice thru the simple but deadly method of paying postage, to transmit literature advocating a united front of workers and farmers for the organization of a labor party in 1928 as a first step toward the formation of a workers' and farmers' government.

DID this local hero hesitate? Not for a moment. In the next issue of his sheet, February 16, he sounded the alarm. Space is lacking to reprint in full the stern rebuke administered to apostles of discontent so we give here only the restrained and constructive portions of his creed:

I HAVE enough confidence in the common sense of the good, clean, industrious "workers" of this country, so that I am not losing any sleep worrying about their attitude in this matter. I also know that the majority of the farmers in this land are not going to give heed to this propaganda; but there is an element composed of bums and loafers, fellows who will not work under any circumstances if there is a possible way of living without work; the shiftless, drifting element, floating from one part of the country to another to avoid those places where there is work they could do; thieves, drug addicts, perverts and degenerates, who gloat over "literature" of this sort, and who become inflamed by reading it and incited to further depradations upon decent society; hence the many holdups and robberies and other crimes of low degree. In every hobo camp, or "jungles," after a raid on them, quantities of this vile anarchistic "literature" is always found. The miserable, degenerate, moral hobo is not so much to blame as the criminal of more intelligence who writes this stuff. The Rothschilds and all of their ilk, should be hanged by the neck, and left hanging!

And the United States postoffice should be secured from the pollution of this "literature." Why isn't it?

BUT vigilant as he is the Mountain View moldor of opinion, perhaps because of stress of emotion, failed to carry out the best California tradition. We suspect that he is not a native son.

He forgot to laud the Californian climate and to brand the labor party leaflet as part of a Japanese plot.

But he did his best to live up to the heritage of the days of '49 when all troublesome problems were solved by hanging those thought to be responsible for them.

Sheer vicious reaction is not confined to the metropolitan press, directly owned or under the influence of industrial and financial lords. In the countryside the railway, light and power, mortgage banks and local lynches maintain such sheets as that from which we quote.

TO these sheets and their backers a party of workers and farmers, smashing up the local looting agencies and challenging their divine right to rule the community, appears as the end of all things.

It is only natural that hanging is considered as the most democratic method of dealing with the Communists who are the most consistent and active advocates of a labor party.

The lawful rule used by the Mountain View editor in characterising those who favor the idea of a labor party is an accurate measure of the hatred the idea arouses in the breasts of the crumb-gatherers grouped around the board of their capitalist masters.

As Sun's Sun Sets in the Land of the Rising Sun

The puppets of imperialism in China have resorted to beheading the strikers in a futile effort to stem the tide of revolutionary nationalism which is rapidly engulfing the newborn China. "General Li Pao-Cheng, the setting Sun's defense commissioner in Shanghai, has execution squads parade thru the streets. These cut-throats are armed with heavy swords which relieve pickets of their heads, and are later displayed in wicker baskets suspended on long bamboo poles. This is like attempting to extinguish a prairie fire by pouring oil over it. The results are the same. Instead of diminishing the strike in Shanghai it now embraces close to a quarter of a million workers.

But the beheaded victims are not lost heads. Theirs is part of the price every revolution incurs. The real lost heads are those hopping on the shoulders of British diplomats. How far lost they are in the blind alley of their imperialist game is shown by their repeated blunders in seeking an exit.

The situation in China is this: At this writing the Cantonese have planted the seeds of nationalism in dangerous and are now massing their troops for the march to Shanghai, where already the general trade unions are preparing to greet them. The remnant of Sun Chuan Fang's army is slated to make a final stand against the Southerners at Nanking, 30 miles south of Shanghai. How powerless they are is strikingly shown by "The New York Telegram," which, when it still calls Sun the defender of Shanghai, politely puts quotation marks around "defender of Shanghai." This grammatical addition was inserted only after the Cantonese knocked the power out of the once powerful Sun. This will not give the armies of the Kuomintang any worry. Nor anything else.

Within the week the People's Army will approach the Wampoo River, where the hulk of the foreign fleet lies at anchor. What will the British do when the Cantonese arrive within hailing distance? Will she allow the Southerners unmolested passage? If she does, her waning prestige as a world power is due for a further tumble. If on the other hand she attacks the Cantonese, the ruin of the workers of Shanghai, too unarmed, is certain to rebel. With a disciplined army at his front and rebellious city at her rear British diplomacy is apt to feel worried.

Adding to Britain's uncomfortable position is the report that Wu Pei-fu's troops are disarming those of Chang So Lin in the latter's step into Honan Province. Wu was the horse England backed in the days when Wu was a power. And Japan openly supported the Manchurian bandit. Now both rivals are settling their differences to the discomforture of England. Another distressing feature to Churchill is the fact that Tang Pin-shan, the Chinese communist leader, recently returned from Moscow with 43 Chinese students schooled in the Communist way of fighting imperialism.

To solve this enigma the lost heads of British diplomacy are meeting in Downing Street, while on other streets British workers are demonstrating their support to their Chinese brothers. It is problematical how long it will take before the English workers lead the lead of China and substitute a workers' government for one of lost heads.

TWO TALES FIT FOR FORD.

Here are two stories that would do honor to the Dearborn Independent, which is hereby authorized to reprint without credit. Both of them are alleged to be true by friends who were good enough to communicate them. And both of them have the same high moral. They teach that in every human heart, however depraved, there is a spark of kindness or decency.

I.

He was a prospering middle-class lawyer, with an unfortunate touch of temperament, who became dissatisfied with life, its shams, etc. Anyhow for reasons he knows best himself he threw up his practice, took to drink and generally headed downward. He found the going easy. But having reached bottom he met a girl, and that's where the story comes in.

She was only a prostitute, and quite aside from her trade she was a bad one. But he fell in love with her. Love is blind, etc.—any amateur story-writer can fill in the details. He wanted to save her, and for her sake to save himself. He decided to ascend once more to his respectable level, and to take the girl along with him. So he proposed honorable marriage, escape from her black past, forgetfulness and bliss.

To his surprise she hesitated. She loved him dearly, she admitted, and his picture of a virtuous home was alluring enough. It was, indeed, awfully good of him. Yet she felt that she must think it over. She did and next night she announced her decision. She could not possibly marry him. She might be a prostitute and a liar and a thief, but this thing she could not do. She could not marry a Jew.

II.

In every newspaper there is on file a collection of obituary notices, ready to be printed as soon as the people involved die. Only important persons, of course, are included among these advance "obits." It is in the nature of a compliment to have your death notice ready in a newspaper morgue. In one of the largest newspaper offices in New York it is the custom to pass copies of such obituaries as they are written to the whole desk staff. The idea is that they might catch mistakes or make suggestions. The editor gathers up the corrected copies and uses them to perfect the obit.

Well, the obituary of Sigmund Freud was put through this process. One of the men on the desk, to show that he was well-informed, added the sentence: "Prof. Freud was a Jew." When the editor had garnered the corrected copies, he came to this man's notation. He was supposed to be a rather hard-boiled and heartless person, this editor. But the aforementioned spark was there all the same. "Say, George, why the knock," he said, deprecatingly, and crossed out the insult.

The only thing that can be said for the freak weather we've been having is that it stimulates conversation. A ferocious sleetstorm right on the heels of spring and hedgehogs does wonders to break down the barriers of reserve between people. Three neighbors, one elevator boy and a fellow-reporter with whom we had never before exchanged a word have opened amenities on the basis of the weather. What if the storm did kill a dozen or so; our statistician estimates that it brought about 437,008 new friendships, thawed the frost of 94,721 dinner parties and brought a gleam of human contact into 988,654 lonely hearts.

Amen! Aimee McPherson, who is in New York to gather in souls and shekels, visited the wicked night clubs where sin breeds. That's the proper spirit. Other lieutenants of the Almighty may be content to preach on the basis of second-hand information. They are satisfied with pious generalizations and abstract knowledge. Not so Aimee. She is a realist. She tastes sin so that she may know whereof she speaks. She practices what she presumes against. Nothing goody-goody or finicky or fastidious about her. Strong in her faith she burrows deep in the troughs of the sinners. She rummages in the garbage piles. And she carries into her exhortations the very savor and aroma of these daring missionary explorations. Understand that, and at once the girl's whole career becomes clear, a mystery only to Hearst and the tabloids. Her "kidnapping" affair becomes an act of worship, a sacrifice for the cause, rather than a scandal. Her views on lying, adultery, mountebankry, etc., are no more abstractions. They are founded on courageous personal experiments. If only the lesser fry among the soul savers take her lead in this, they might find a few compensations for their arduous and underpaid work.

Add to Your Collection of Scrambled Headlines.—The "New Yorker Volkszeitung" on the front page of its edition for February 21st headlines thus, "HURRICANE CAUSES GREAT HAVOC; Not Intimidated by Sigman's Tactics."

American Opera.—You'd never guess it was American, K. Dupont's out, if not for the ballyhoo. Of course, Taylor and Millay are Americans, but as to the opera itself, he writes:

"The Taylor-Millay opera is received with patriotic enthusiasm But it must be noted that the librettist in search of a theme for an 'American opera' resorts to a conventional love story of an English feudal king in the tenth century. Miss Millay wins special praise for her revival of an archaic Saxon language. Thus at the very moment when the nationalist spirit created by the war expresses itself in the concentration upon the 'American language' in the critical studies of Mencken and in the vernacular writings of Ring Lardner and John Weaver, the librettist of the 'great American opera' returns to England for her language, even to the archaic fendal England, and the composer turns from jazz and Negro music to the manner of old English folk-songs and the traditions of Wagner. The published accounts of the new 'American' opera do not reveal that it gives any expression to modern social forces, American or European, nor that there is anything 'American' about it except the names of its authors."

In order that this column may not be accused of lacking sex appeal we present the following condensed novel, taken from life in the altogether:

HUSBANDS WHO PLAY.

"But dearest," he pleaded with his indignant wife, "I tell you it is nothing, absolutely nothing. This girl doesn't mean anything to me. We were merely playing strip poker."

The New York Times prides itself on completeness. It covers all the news all the time. For instance, Arthur Garfield Hays gave a lecture on his impressions of Russia, which the Times summarises in one sentence, thus: "He said he had found that the government was encroaching severely on the trade of private shopkeepers and that all initiative for the individual to make money was prevented by the Communist policy." So what's the use of going to lectures when you can read them next day in the Times?

Voroshilov Has Confidence in Red Army

On Ninth Anniversary He Says That War Plots Thicken

BULLETIN

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Great Britain has dispatched a progressive note to the government of the Soviet Union alluding to the assistance rendered by Soviet workers to the British miners during the general strike as anti-British propaganda. The note is not as vigorous as what the extreme Fascist section of the cabinet would desire. It is believed here that the misfortunes of British imperialism in China and fears of an Indian uprising prompted the sending of the note.

MOSCOW, Feb. 23.—Those differences among the powers which caused disarmament proposals of President Coolidge to fall will make it difficult to form an anti-Soviet bloc, declared Commissar of War Voroshiloff in a speech today, celebrating the ninth anniversary of the Red Army.

"The Red Army enters its tenth year with an highly electrified international atmosphere," said Voroshiloff. "This would be depressing if it were not for the fact that we have improved the efficiency of the staff and line and strengthened the air fleet, added a division of reserve cavalry and brought military industry near the pre-war level. We have developed excellent artillery and extraordinarily good machine-guns. We have invented a marvelous small calibre rifle and have achieved success in building our own defenses and our own anti-gas weapons."

"Small Navy But Good.

Admiral Malkevitch reports that the Red navy tonnage is now 32 per cent of the 1914 figures, while the personnel is 59 per cent and the general efficiency is 150 per cent.

The celebrations all over Russia were well attended by international representatives, as well as by the workers and peasants of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Warn Again America.

The speeches of those from outside the borders of the Soviet Union showed that they regard the Red Army as their army.

"In the coming days of the great struggle of workmen, peasants and all oppressed classes against their imperialistic oppressers, the American bourgeoisie will be among our most dangerous enemies," says a statement published over the name of an American, Duncan, representing the workers of the United States.

Surrounded by Plots.

The newspapers are full of facts showing the continued progress of anti-Soviet plots engineered by Russian whiteguards nbroad, in agreement with oil and other business men. At the same time, the peaceful intentions of the Soviet Union are emphasized.

Small Expenditure.

Despite its high state of efficiency, the Red Army takes up an inconceivably small percentage of the total income of the state, as measured by the standards of militaristic nations like England, France, or the United States of America.

The budget this year calls for only $346,000,000 for national defense, which is an increase of only $44,000,000 more than in 1926, and is altogether only fourteen per cent of the entire budget. Even this increase is used, not for making more armament, nor recruiting more soldiers, but for improving the comfort and cultural possibilities of the private soldiers.

This moderate expenditure allowed for the Red Army and Navy is all the protection that can be spared at present for a population which according to the last census was 165,000,000.

Lillian Herstein to Visit Soviet Russia

Lillian Herstein, chairman of the Chicago Federation of Labor Education Committee, was entertained by the Women's Trade Union League of New York on the eve of her departure for Palestine and Russia. Herstein, active member of the Teachers' Union, plans a seven months' trip, studying chiefly the trade unions of the two countries where she will spend most of her time.

Coal Barons Prepare to Smash United Mine Workers' Union

The [illegible] conference of the United Mine Workers' scale committee and the coal operators has been unable to agree. Several operators are opening mines in non-union fields.

Coal is being stored by all big consumers and coal dealers. There is said to be a supply for two months on hand.

Preparations are being made to speed up production in the non-union fields.

The operators refused to continue the Jacksonville wage-scale after March 31.

The stage is being set for a struggle which will mean life or death for the United Mine Workers—the most important union in American labor movement.

If the miners are defeated the American labor movement will be confronted with a series of attacks from which no union will be exempt.

There are three courses which the union can follow:

(1) Accept the terms of the operators—a cut in wages.

(2) Sign up with individual operators on the basis of the Lewis proposal for efficiency which actually means a wage reduction.

(3) Strike and turn the [illegible] an organizational drive in the unorganized fields, bring[illegible]e miners into the union defeat the operators and force a national agreement for the industry.

The first two alternatives mean the destruction of the union —the first method being immediately disastrous, the second being a slower but just as destructive a process.

The coal barons are banking on the non-union fields to crush the union under an avalanche of coal. Starvation of union miners will be the first weapon employed, later, the full force of the state and national governments will be used to drive the miners back to work at the operators' terms.

An organization drive that will add 200,000 more fighters to the ranks of the United Mine Workers of America is the weapon with which the resistance of the coal barons will be broken and the union not only saved but placed upon a firmer foundation than ever before.

The coal diggers, by making the program of the "Save the Union" bloc the program of the union in this struggle, with the organization of the non-union fields the first point on the order of business, will smash the offensive of the operators.

Little more than a month remains to put the United Mine Workers on a fighting basis—to perfect the strike and organizational machinery.

The coal barons have to do nothing except close the union mines and launch their publicity campaign against the union—publicity which well-paid experts have been working on for months.

In the union the militant rank and file and their leaders have to shoulder the burden of preparation. Outside of the union, the rest of the labor movement must be made to know that the miners are fighting the battle of the whole American working class and that no means to aid them should be overlooked.

The united front of the bosses against the miners can be broken by a united front of labor.

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

EVEN capitalist correspondents in China were forced to denounce the reign of terror turned loose in Shanghai by the minions of Sun Chuan-Fang on the workers who went on strike to celebrate the victory of the revolutionary nationalist government over the militarists. Headsmen with heavy swords marched through the streets and picked their victims indiscriminately. Heads were chopped off without even the semblance of a trial. The horror of the thing defies description. And the blame for the barbarities rests on the shoulders of the foreign imperialists.

The militarists will pay through the nose for the Shanghai slaughter. The wave of resentment that went up all over China will sweep the gang of native militarist murderers off the earth and their imperialist paymasters out of China. If the revolutionary government had beheaded half a dozen tuchuns who have been persecuting the people for centuries what a yelp would go up from the capitalist press.

YOUNG "Ed" Wilson, son of one of Chicago's packing magnates, is learning his father's business from the ground up. We are not told how much he finds in his pay check on Saturday, but we are advised that his working conditions are the same as those of the less noted slaves that toil in Packingtown during the daytime. When he leavea his working clothes behind him at the end of the day's work, he steps into a limousine and burns up the gas.

Every once in a while a scion of our financial aristocracy is presented to the working class in the role of a toiler. It makes a good story and since people have short memories the millionaire wage slave can be in Palm Beach or in Paris in a few weeks later and his career as a laborer in his father's factory will be forgotten until he is appointed head of the firm when the editorial hacks of the capi-

MINE COMMITTEE LETS LEWIS GO ON BARGAINING

Will Now Try to Secure Separate Agreements

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 23.—The United Mine Workers' policy committee today gave carte blanche to John L. Lewis, president, to institute negotiations with soft coal operators to arrange for a new conference to prevent a tie-up in the industry after April 1.

It was indicated that Lewis shortly will attempt to get a conference in Chicago to pick up the negotiations which broke down here over a disagreement on a new wage contract.

Conference Over.

Lewis reported to members of the miners' policy committee, meeting in executive session today, that steps already have been taken to swing into line operators in the districts lying outside the central competitive field of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania. The conference of central field representatives adjourned sine die yesterday.

Lewis did not say how much he would give up in the way of conditions underground, in order to get a formal agreement on the basis of the Jacksonville wage scale, nor whether he would consent to compulsory arbitration and revision of the wage scale, once nominally established. During the Miami negotiations he proposed a council of experts, half appointed by

Porto Ricans in Appeal for Nicaragua

Call on U. S. Marines to Desert and Return Home

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico., Feb. 23.—The people of Porto Rico, altho themselves broken under the heel of Wall Street imperialism, are aroused by the brazen military invasion and conquest of Nicaragua. They are insulted by the decision of the Navy Department to send part of the fleet now crushing Liberalism in Nicaragua, on a visit to Porto Rico.

The Porto Rican section of the Pan-American Anti-imperialist League has issued a special appeal to the [illegible] men of the fleet, and the Nationalist Party representative, Alonso Lastra Charries, has introduced a resolution into the Insular Chamber of Representatives calling attention to the fact that the United States has invaded Nicaragua against the will of "every civilized human being."

Porto Ricans Writhe

It also declares that Porto Rico writhes under the same unwelcome force, and that the people do not consent to the rule of the United States. The resolution concludes:

"THEREFORE, Be it resolved by the Chamber of Representatives of Porto Rico:

"To condemn energetically the policy of force utilized by the Executive of the United States of America in the Republic of Nicaragua impairing the democratic principles underlying the republican doctrines which are basic to the free nations and in violation of the sovereignty of Nicaragua and a menace to world peace."

Popular Resolution.

The resolution was submitted to a special committee to be studied and passed on and reported on to the next session. It caused consternation in the ranks of the servile unionist and socialist representatives, who are the guardians of imperialist rule in Porto Rico. But representative Charriez was met with an ovation from numerous anti-imperialists who waited for him to leave the senate at closing time; he had a multitude of hands to shake during that hour.

Anti-Imperialist Leaflet.

The sailors of the American war fleet are greeted on arrival at San Juan with a proclamation from the Anti-Imperialist League which points out to them that the invasion of Nicaragua is for the purpose of protecting property, and asks "Whose property?" Not the property of the sailors and marines of the fleet, nor of their relatives at home. The manifesto continues:

According to the unimpeachable evidence submitted by the senate committee on foreign relations the landing of American troops in Nicaragua was ordered by the state department at the direction of the banking houses of J. W. Seligman and Co. of Wall St., Brown Bros. of Baltimore, and the industrial and finance corporation of J. G. White Co. of New York.

Latins Rising.

Like your forefathers of 1776, we the peoples of Latin America are today also determined to liberate our countries from the clutches of a small group of bankers and exploiters who are now infesting, as well as exploiting, your own country.

GANGSTERS DRIVE [illegible] FRIERS OUT OF COOPER MEETING

Workers Demonstrate for Joint Board

When thousands of furriers loudly cheering for the New York Joint Board and Ben Gold, its manager, left the pro-[illegible] demonstration outside of Cooper Union late yesterday afternoon, various reactionary leaders of the needle trades unions inside, addressed a hall half filled with members of various trades, among them about 100 furriers.

This was supposed to be a meeting of fur workers, called by a Furriers' Trade Union Committee which has just been formed by the Long Island City officials of the International. As early as 3 o'clock there were 700 furriers waiting in an orderly line for admission to the hall. But at 3.45, a band of twenty police, many of them mounted, arrived on the scene and ordered the workers to disperse and go home.

Cops Break Up Line.

"There is no meeting," yelled the cops. "Go on home, all of you."

At 4 o'clock another line of furriers had formed, and at 4.15, this was also broken up by the police. Those workers who did reach the door and tried to enter, after showing their union cards, were roughly pushed on [illegible] by members of the gangsters, reinforced by members of the Industrial Squad.

Throw Out Furriers.

Meanwhile, at the Fourth Avenue entrance to Cooper Union, friends of the "right wing" were being admitted, and 50 furriers who answered to slip in with this group were later thrown out of the hall by the strong arm assistants of Abraham Beckerman, of the "reinforced" Cloaking Workers' Union, who has been called in to help the American Federation of Labor—of which he is not a member—try to reorganize the Furriers' Joint Board.

The demonstration of fur workers outside of Cooper Union lasted for several hours and then the thousands of workers adjourned to Webster Hall for a meeting. During the afternoon the "right wing" gangsters confiscated a quantity of the Joint Board's leaflets which announced a bona fide meeting of fur workers to be held tonight, February 24th, at Cooper Union at the same hour.

Rudner Case Causes General Roundup of Strangers in Canton

CANTON, Ohio, Feb. 23.—Guard about the county jail was doubled this afternoon as the trial of Ben Rudner neared its close and special precautions were taken to attempt the release of Rudner from the county jail in case of conviction. Mayor S. M. Swarts of Canton received the information.

An armed guard has been placed inside the main corridor of the jail behind the big doors and extra men are on duty outside.

A machine gun has been added to the equipment.

"Ben Rudner is a gangster with a rich man's means behind him," Prosecutor Henry W. Harter declared in his argument to the jury. Harter is demanding the death penalty for Rudner for his part in the slaying of Don R. Mellett.

Revolutionary Chinese Push on to Shanghai

Nothing Short of "Miracle" Can Stop Advance Of People's Armies

SHANGHAI, Feb. 23.—The rout of Sun Chuan Fang, defender of Shanghai, continues.

With the Cantonese driving forward with repeated thrusts and parries, General Sun Chuan Fang was today forced to evacuate Kashing, falling back on Sunkiang, approximately thirty miles from Shanghai.

Meanwhile severe fighting between the northern allies is reported from Honan.

General Chang Sun Chuan, son of Marshal Chang Tso Lin, is reported to have led a force of some 6,000 white Russians into Honan and to have attacked Wu Pei Fu.

Where General Wu?

Many reports are in circulation today as to Wu Pei Fu. One is to the effect that he has fled to the mountains, another declares he has gone over to the Cantonese.

In Shanghai the situation is still regarded as serious. It now develops that the shells dropped on the city yesterday came from two gunboats which went over to the Cantonese and their firing was only ended when two French gunboats drew alongside them and threatened to sink them unless they held their fire.

The greatest menace appears to be from a thousand or more disorganized troops of Sun Chuan Fang who are roaming about the outskirts of the international settlement.

Agitation Intensified.

Agitation in the native city is intensified today, although beheadings have ceased.

Some 30,000 mill workers returned to their work today, but it is estimated that there are still some 80,000 idle.

Laborers who were incensed over beheadings attacked the Chapei Police Station, killing one constable and injuring another. Two of the workers were arrested and will probably be executed tomorrow.

Three student open air lecturers and five nationalist recruiting agents were arrested and held today.

There is a total disregard for military restrictions in the native city and the military have been forced to move the heads from exhibition, as the result of violent agitation against executions.

Mail was available today to those who called at the post-office and full resumption of the postal service is promised for tomorrow.

Support For Cantonese.

Sun Chuan Fang is reported fleeing to Japan with control of Shanghai passing to Chang Tso Lin.

The deliverance of control of Shanghai into the hands of Marshal Chang Tso Lin may have serious consequences, as there is strong support in Shanghai for the Cantonese cause. However there are several thousands of deserters and stragglers from Sun Chuan Fang's armies in and around Shanghai and it is questionable whether these men will respond to the call of the new leader.

Kashing, considered the last stronghold of Sun Chuan Fang, has fallen and the advance of the Cantonese on Shanghai can hardly be stopped now, except by a miracle it is believed here.

Took French Money.

The forces of Sun Chuan Fang evacuated Kashing without a struggle after taking $80,000 from merchants of the town.

There was a report here that the evacuation of Kashing was by agreement with Chang Tso Lin, who is reported sending troops to aid the Chekiangs and 10,000 of his troops are already reported to have crossed the Yangtze and to be moving in the direction of Nanking. Chang Sun Chuan, son of Chang Tso Lin, is reported to be arranging to confer in Nanking with Sun Chuan Fang.

ENEA SORMENTI ANTI-FASCIST TO BE DEPORTED

The I. L. D. Will Hold Protest Meeting

The machinery of the United States department of labor under Mr. John J. Davis is being used to deport workers who have been active in the struggle against fascism in Italy and its agents in the United States. Enea Sormenti, one of the leading anti-fascists in America, has been arrested at the instigation of the Italian ambassador and is being held for deportation to Italy. To send Sormenti back to Italy means sending him to his death. This is a continuation of the fascist brutalities that have burned down co-operatives and working men's clubs; made trade unions illegal and broken up the homes of workers wherever anti-fascist sympathies were suspected.

The American labor movement has made clear its position towards fascism and the rule of Mussolini. Conventions of the A. F. of L. at Portland and Atlantic City passed resolutions denouncing the rule of the Black Shirts. The recent A. F. of L. convention at Detroit reiterated this position. In spite of all this Sormenti is still in danger.

The International Labor Defense is defending the case of Sormenti and maintains the right of asylum for political refugees. The New York section of the International Labor Defense is holding a protest meeting on Sunday, February 27th, at 2 p. m. in Webster Hall, 11th street and 3rd avenue. Prominent speakers will be present including:

Forrest Bailey, secretary Civil Liberties Union; Ben Gitlow, W. F. of America; Joseph Brodsky, International Labor Defense; Dr. Carlo Fama; Carlo Tresca, editor Il Martelo; Pietro Allegra, secretary Anti-Fascist Alliance of America; Arturo di Pietro, editor Il Nuovo Mondo; Enes Sormenti, editor Il Lavoratore; Arturo Giovannitti, Italian Chamber of Labor of New York.

Sinclair Yielding.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 23.—Harry Sinclair, American oil baron, was given route to the United States today, following conferences with President Calles, the secretary of the interior, and the American ambassador, concerning the enforcement of Mexico's land and petroleum laws. Before leaving, Sinclair expressed confidence that a satisfactory solution of the present difficulties will be found.

Eight Clerics Less.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 23.—Eight rebels were killed in a battle with federal forces near Zacatecas today, according to an official communication to the war department.

MARINES MOVE TO WAR ZONES

The map above shows the points of embarkation of U. S. Marines being sent from the United States to war zones of Nicaragua and China. From San Diego on the Pacific coast the sea soldiers have been sent to Shanghai, China, and to the western coast of Nicaragua, as the lines on the map indicate. From the eastern ports, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Newport News and other military bases, detachments have been sent to the east coast of Nicaragua.

POLITICIAN DEFENDS 48-HOUR LAW DESERTED BY N. Y. LABOR OFFICIALS

Now Carry Guns

Ralph Batschelet, top
Miss Lillian Snyder
Morris M. Grupp

The only voice, outside of that of the Workers (Communist) Party, yet lifted for the bona fide 48 hour week for New York working women is Frederick L. Hackenburg's. He is a New York politician, representing the 14th Assembly District in the lower house of the legislature, and is a member of the industrial survey commission which recommended an exhaustive bill providing in reality a limited nine hour day.

"I personally stand upon a straight 48-hour week for women in industry," declared Hackenburg in a minority report, the text of which was made public in New York City today.

Hackenburg's position is far in advance of Emanuel Covaleskie, who represented the New York Federation of Labor on the industry survey board. Covaleskie, a federation vice president, recommended adoption of the vicious nine-hour day provision.

"It is a part of my political philosophy," declared Hackenburg, "that nothing in the world is settled unless it is settled right. While I welcome the concessions recommended by the commission, I personally stand upon a straight 48-hour week for women in industry. No compromise is possible when a principle is at stake."

The New York Federation of Labor has officially recommended, through its executive council, the industrial survey commission's report on the "48-hour" bill.

The council declares to "be favorable to the interests of the wage earners," the report providing for a nine-hour day five days a week when a Saturday half day is worked. In addition 78 hours a year are allowed to be worked when the boss chooses.

Labor legislation experts declare that a straight eight hour law can be enforced only with difficulty, but that a "49 1-2 hour" bill, with 78 hours a year thrown in for good measure, makes it practically impossible to catch employers when they violate the law.

The industrial survey commission recommends that minors over 16 years of age be included.

Hackenburg, in his minority report, riddles the employers' argument that a 48-hour law and protective legislation for workers would drive industry from the state. He writes:

"I assert in passing that there is very little to the argument that industry will leave the state and go to places where there are no restrictions upon the labor of women. If we keep our standards down we encourage backward southern states to do likewise and morally are taking our share of responsibility for the low social conditions in the cotton mills below the Mason and Dixon line.

"The testimony before the commission and general information on the subject seems to show that even the backward states are slowly but surely coming to the economic standards established both by law and custom in the progressive empire state. With establishment of industry in the south, and the incidental prosperity and sources of employment, the southern workers are becoming imbued with the spirit of dignity of labor and insist upon a treatment due to all American workers."

AFTER the smoke of battle cleared away in the Chicago primary contest William Hale Thompson's victory was announced even before the dead and founded were collected from the theatre of war. There never was such a day even in Chicago. Sporting establishments did a land office business in guns and the most popular slogan throughout the city was: "Wherever you see a head, hit it." Victory was on the side of the heaviest battalions and with those generals whose armies were able to march on their stomachs. Thompson ran on an "America first" platform with the understanding that if successful Chicago would not thirst for the next four years.

Thompson is the unofficial champion of the "white open town." Another section of the republican party organization favored the opposite kind of a condition. During the primary campaign neither wing had a word to say about labor. They did not have to. Only the Workers (Communist) Party injected the workers' side of things into the campaign. This is a deplorable state of affairs. The workers of Chicago should have had their own candidate in the field on a United Labor program. They must get busy with this task.

THE right wing trade union leaders and socialists in the Australian Labor Party have stepped in line with our own bureaucratic red-baiters in the war against Communism. They charge the Communists with various crimes including a belief in dictatorship. Now what do those anti-dictators do? They object to the local unions having the right to nominate candidates for office on the A. L. P. ticket. The section of the trade union and political labor movement that is influenced by the radicals revised the rules so that the unions would be in a position to nominate their candidates directly rather than have this job done by the machine.

Arthur Brisbane hails the news published in a Denver paper that the United States government advised American oil magnates not to submit to the confiscatory decrees of the Mexican government. The Hearst press flopped over to the imperialists completely and Brisbane, the fake progressive, is now howling louder for strong measures in South America than any other member of the pack. We have yet to hear of a capitalist government threatening war on another nation to protect its nationals who happen to be workers from capitalist exploitation.

Larre-Borges Hops Off.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Major Larre-Borges and his colleagues, who are attempting an airplane flight from Italy to Uruguay, arrived at Casablanca, Morocco, at 4:45 this afternoon after a successful flight, according to a despatch from Madrid.

[illegible] hopped off at 11:20 this morning from Malaga on the first leg of the flight.

CARNIVAL BAZAAR AT CHICAGO TO BE BIG SUCCESS

Preparations Complete; Expect Huge Turn Out

The last bazaar conference of delegates from Chicago labor organizations met last Friday and mobilized the forces for work at the bazaar which will take place at Ashland Auditorium, Feb. 25, 26 and 27th. After a report from the bazaar executive, the conference discussed in detail the need for technical help and the program of entertainment. A number of committees were elected such as floor, finance, reception, buffet, etc.

Entertainment Features.

The bazaar will begin on Friday evening with an interesting program of folk songs by various national groups. The popular Freiheit Singing Society Chorus, the South Slavic orchestra, groups of Russian, German and Ukrainian Workers will also be on the program on the opening night. Every afternoon and evening there will be something of special interest. Saturday afternoon will be devoted to a special children's program. The Nursery Corner, in charge of a trained worker, will take care of little ones 2 to 8 years old and so make it possible for parents to enjoy themselves with the knowledge that their young ones are being properly cared for.

On Saturday night the grand ball will take place. Thousands of people which the big Ashland Hall accommodates will dance on this night to the tuns of one of the best dance orchestras in the city.

Sunday afternoon will be devoted to folk dances. The famous Cheeh-Slovak dancers who were received so enthusiastically at a former Chicago affair, will give several numbers, as well groups of Scandinavian, Russian and other nationalities.

Sunday night will see the wind up of the $10,000 bazaar when the luckiest person will be awarded the beautiful 7 passenger Chrysler automobile and other fine prizes. The Russian orchestra will play special dance music beginning at 4 p. m.

Various delegates reported on the articles which have been collected for the booths and the committees which will be in charge for the sale of these articles. One of the organizations is going to run a tea room in their booth and expect it to be of the busiest corners of the hall. Another group is going to fix up a fortune teller's booth.

There are only a few days left for preparatory work and much has to be done yet. All those interested in putting this affair over real big are urgently requested by the bazaar committee to report at 19 S. Lincoln St. and offer their services or early Friday afternoon at the hall.

Many individuals have small articles intended for sale at the bazaar. They are asked to inform the committee in charge or bring them to the hall early Friday afternoon where a committee will take care of all last-minute packages.

Miners' Committee Lets Lewis Bargain

each party to the controversy, with power in fact to change wages by increasing the amount of dead work, the size of cars that must be loaded at the face with coal that falls off before it is weighed, etc.

District 12 Doubtful.

Illinois operators have lued a long statement condemning the Jacksonville agreement, and it is understood that some compact exists among all the operators represented at the conference not to sign without a wage cut or its equivalent in efficiency regulations.

Nevertheless, Lewis has indicated that it is in Illinois that he expects to sign independent companies.

Propose Long Term Deal.

A five-year contract, with a more flexible wage provision than at present, is being advanced by the Illinois interests as a possible basis of settlement. Under this plan the pay scale could be revised each year to bring it in closer relationship with the non-union wage. If Lewis finally agrees to this proposition he may get a majority of Illinois and Indiana operators to sign up.

Ohio Recalcitrant.

Unless they are clubbed into signing by a coalition of the union and outlying Illinois and Indiana owners, the Ohio and Pensylvania operators are at present disposed to run open shop after April 1. This was clearly indicated in their explanatory statement which said that the miners' demand for a renewal of the present $7.50 a day contract was "indefensible."

The policy meeting today wound up all mine parleys so far as Miami is concerned. Any future conferences probably will be held in a city adjacent to the central competitive field.

France Dodges Debt.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—France has not yet made any formal offer to begin payment of $30,000,000 annually on her four billion dollar American war debt, ending ratification of the Mellon-Berenger agreement, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon stated today, announcements in Paris to the contrary.

Twin Foes of Labor are Old Party Candidates in Chicago Election

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE mayoralty primaries in Chicago are over and the former mayor, William Hale Thompson, appears as the Republican choice, with Mayor William E. Dever selected to succeed himself as the democratic candidate. The final elections will be held April 3.

Among the camp followers of both Thompson and Dever are to be found numerous members of the labor officialdom. Perhaps the division may prove to be about 50-50 thus completely neutralizing itself.

Recently an effort was made, at a conference held in the offices of the Chicago Federation of Labor, to drum up a delegation to call on Mayor Dever and urge him to enter the campaign for re-election. While the union heads were squabbling among themselves, unable to agree, a pretentious assemblage of big business representatives did call on the mayor much to the chagrin of labor's politicians.

It is the Chicago Federation of Labor that has hitched up its radio with Mayor Dever's office in the city hall, so that he can send out his speechs over the city free of charge whenever inclined.

This is the Mayor Dever who used his police to attack the strike pickets of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, resulting in many arrests and convictions, with many workers forced to serve sentences in the county jail. Strikes of machinists, moulders and other workers have met with similar vicious attacks. Yet the misleaders of the workers grovel at the feet of this enemy of labor.

Similarly with "Bill" Thompson, who gained some influence over the Chicago trade union movement when he got the credit for settling a street car strike when he first entered the city hall in the days before the war.

But Thompson is now allied with the Crowe-Galpin crowd. This is State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe's machine. This is the Black Crowe who has conducted a dozen raids against the headquarters of local trade union organizations, seized upon the slightest pretext. Crowe is proud of these attacks and in his campaign literature has listed them as great achievements, calling for his re-election.

Crowe, the republican, the ally of Thompson, was a fitting successor of the red baiter and labor hater, Maclay Hoyne, democratic state's attorney, who received a special fund from the business interests of Chicago to prosecute workers and workers' organizations.

Although Thompson may claim to have severed relations with Len Small, Frank L. Smith, senator-elect, and Fred Lundeen, nevertheless, he finds himself tied up to these worthies through Crowe, who has confessed before a committee of the United States senate that he received thousands of dollars from the public utility multi-millionaire, Sammy Insull, whose checking account helped send Smith to the senate.

The street carman's union, whose wages Smith sought to cut as a state public utility commissioner, are in open war against the senator-elect. They opposed the influence that the Chicago Federation of Labor, the Illinois Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers' Union, through their officials, sought to rally in support of Smith last November. If the street carmen are logical now, they must oppose Crowe's man for mayor of Chicago, William Hale Thompson.

Long before the February primaries rose on the offing, the Workers (Communist) Party in Chicago exerted every possible effort to unite the workers for independent political action through a Labor Party, or through the selection of a United Labor Ticket. These efforts failed.

The labor officialdom was still content to trail after Insull's millions or crawl at the feet of Chicago's Tammany Hall. The socialists thought only of the war on the left wing. Elements formerly connected with the Farmer-Labor Party continue to find comfort in a so-called "progressive" party. Under these circumstances the Workers (Communist) Party put its own candidate in the field.

Every development of this municipal campaign should be great for the mill of independent political action. The workers, through every utterance and act of Thompson and Dever, must see that these republican and democratic spokesmen are not the champions of the workers, but their sworn enemies.

Communists will thus be reinforced by the actual events in their arguments for the development of the Labor Party, for the breaking away of the working class masses from the capitalist parties. The municipal campaign in Chicago now going on should help build the forces of the Labor Party for the national elections of next year, 1928.

ROSALSKY TURNS GUNS ON JURORS, ASKING REFORMS

Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, who has been handing out ruthless jail sentences to striking cloakmakers, seems to be something of a Don Quixote. His latest windmill is the Association of Grand Jurors of the County of New York, which has been trying to put through a few little ineffectual legal reforms.

Reforms of any sort rile Judge Rosalsky. The association's program for modernising our grand jury system, installing microphones and amplifiers in grand jury rooms, improving conditions in district prisons, decreasing bail bond abuses and eliminating crooked lawyers has called forth bitter criticism from Judge Rosalsky, on the ground that the association is exceeding its powers.

The association includes about two-thirds of the 1,795 men on the panel of grand jurors. From this panel is chosen two juries of twenty-three men each, which have wide inquisitorial powers and which alone have the right to indict.

House Legalizes One Of Secretary Fall's Arizona Oil Schemes

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23. — The house today passed the Hayden bill, ratifying and permits granted by Ex-Secretary of the Interior Fall in the Navajo Indian lands in Utah and Arizona under executive order. The vote was 115 to 59.

The bill was passed after a warm fight, in which Rep. Sproul of Kansas, charged that it sought to legalize the Fall's oil schemes. One of the companies that will be benefitted, Sproul said is the Mid-West Company.

WOONSOCKET, R. I. MILL STRIKE OVER BOOST IN HOURS

1200 Workers Walk Out Of Social Mill

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Feb. 23.—Refusing to accept a boost in hours, 1,200 employes of the Social Mill, owned by the Manville-Jenckes Company, have walked out. The walkout occurred day before yesterday after the company had posted notices stating that operation of the mill would be discontinued.

Waiting for the authorization of a strike against all of the Manville-Jenckes mills, the Social Mill workers, led by Organiser Horace A. Riviere, are determined to fight this latest attempt of New England textile barons to boost hours and lower wages. They took a strike vote about two months ago, but refrained from going out at the request of the United Textile Workers' Emergency Board.

Organized Social Mill operatives at their meeting last night endorsed the spontaneous strike action of the workers. Long lines of pickets filed in front of the mills today.

Three workers were appointed at a meeting held at union headquarters last night to confer with the bosses and to ascertain the meaning of the notices posted by the company. BORAH MAY LEAD INVESTIGATION IN NICARAGUA

Resolution in Senate Likely to Pass

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—A senate investigation of the administration's Latin American policy during the summer—conducted by a traveling committee of senators headed by Wm. E. Borah—appeared probable today.

The purpose of such an investigation is two-fold, it is designed to throw a searchlight on the activities of American corporations below the Rio Grande, with particular reference to the banking and oil groups, and it is even more significantly designed to enable the senate foreign relations committee to have a deterring influence on any "war-like" activities in Washington while congress is not in session.

Against "Big Stick."

Borah sponsored the resolution in the senate after first assuring himself of the support of most of the democrats and the insurgent republicans, who are wholly out of sympathy with Secretary of State Kellogg's "big stick" policy in the Caribbean. A coalition of democrats and insurgent republicans has shown itself capable of controlling the senate on a given occasion, and hence the outlook for authorization of the investigation appeared bright today.

Almost unlimited sweep would be accorded the committee in the investigation. It would have the right to travel throughout Central America, hold hearings at which witnesses could be subpoenaed and sworn, subpoena records and documants, and otherwise conduct a most searching inquiry.

Towards Protectorate.

The resolution was prompted because of the evident drift of the state department's policy toward the establishment of a permanent protectorate over Nicaragua—a development which will inevitably inflame Latin-American sentiment against the United States from the Rio Grande to Cape Horn.

There have also been numerous rumors in Washington to the effect that the Mexican situation will become "acute" again soon after congress adjourns. These rumors have intimated that the state department is marking time in the Mexican situation until Secretary Kellogg's senatorial critics have scattered to their homes and that this policy will be abandoned for a "more vigorous" one soon after March 4. They have created a feeling of distinct uneasiness on the part of many senators who are opposed to the Kellogg policy, as reflected in the support already assured for Borah's resolution.

Committee Squabbles.

The Borah resolution was the subject of a warm discussion today at a meeting of the foreign relations committee behind closed doors.

Administration regulars strongly opposed the investigation on the ground that "it would embarrass" Secretary Kellogg in the conduct of Mexican and Nicaraguan policies.

The democrats, however, supported the resolution, and Borah later said if they continued to give him their solid support the resolution would be reported out in spite of administration objections.

Once on the floor, its passage is considered certain unless the administration filibusters against it.

TRAINED DIPLOMATS FOR POSTS

In the old days the diplomatic service was treated as political spoils. That was before American imperialism assumed its present form. Now the competition with European imperialism demands of our Big Business administration more efficiency. Wall Street tells Coolidge that he can't just send his friends to important foreign posts. Here are some laterday appointments. Left to right: Leland Harrison, now assistant secretary of state, goes to Sweden; J. Butler Wright, also assistant secretary of state, goes to Hungary; Hugh R. Wilson, chief of the division of current information, state department, goes to Switzerland.

UNION BUCKING COSTS PENNSYLVANIA ROAD LARGE SUMS OF COLD CASH; DEMORALIZATION

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

The huge price the Pennsylvania railroad has been paying for its anti-union policy is revealed in a study of the notorious Atterbury system. The Commercial & Financial Chronicle publishes figures indicating that the extra cost of non-union operation has cut down profits the last 5 years by possibly $250,000,000 and certainly more than half of that enormous sum.

"The demoralization which the Pennsylvania suffered because of the war," says the Chronicle, "was great. All carriers suffered acutely but on the Pennsylvania where the havoc was severe, recovery has been delayed by the complications of establishing a new labor policy that differed radically from that of its competitors."

To Break Union.

The radically different labor policy was really nothing new on the Pennsylvania. It meant breaking the unions that had gained a foothold under government control. It meant running a company union down the throats of its employes. It meant flouting the transportation act, disregarding the U. S. rail labor board and in general becoming a law unto itself to accomplish these ends.

The Chronicle does not deliberately set out to show the effects of this policy. But its comparisons between the Pennsylvania system and the New York Central, which has kept up relations with the unions, completely expose the Atterbury road. The Chronicle's figures show that the percentage of operating revenue required to meet expense on the Pennsylvania has risen far above the New York Central. It says, "Nothing in contemporary history is more striking than the shift in relative position of the Pennsylvania and the New York Central."

Increased Cost.

The Chronicle shows the course of the operating ratio of each system for the past 20 years, omitting the 6 years of abnormal conditions (1915 to 1920) as follows:

Percent of Expense to Gross Revenue	Pennsylvania	N. Y. Central
1905	71.4%	75.4%
1906	70.8	75.6
1907	73.6	77.3
1908	70.4	69.9
1909	69.2	65.9
1910	73.1	71.1
1911	73.2	68.6
1912	73.9	70.0
1913	77.7	75.1
1914	76.7	75.1
1921	87.6	77.5
1922	82.3	78.1
1923	81.8	75.6
1924	80.2	75.3
1925	78.5	73.9

In the first 3 years expense absorbed a smaller proportion of operating revenue on the Pennsylvania than on the New York Central. But costs were steadily rising on the Pennsylvania so that by 1914 the anti-union road had fallen behind in economical operation. In the 5 years 1921-1925 the difference becomes amazing.

In Money Terms.

The Chronicle explains the significance in money terms of the difference in operating ratios in the last 5 years. It says, "Each year the Pennsylvania has collected more revenue than the New York Central and each year the yield to the owners of the property in the form of net railway operating income has been less. In the 5 years taken together the Pennsylvania management has collected $662,000,000 more of gross revenue, and turned back to the owners $126,000,000 less of net railway operating income."

Had the Pennsylvania been able to maintain the same operating ratio as the New York Central system its total net income for the 5 years would have been about $645,000,000 instead of $401,000,000, an increase of nearly $250,000,000.

British Plan Pacific Flight.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Feb. 23.—Beating Americans with the first flight across the Pacific to Sydney, Australia, is the prime objective of four Britishers, three of whom are here today planning the plane now being built at New York. It will reach 9,400 miles and will have a flying speed of 100 miles an hour. Vancouver to Honolulu would be the first step, the only others being the Fanning Islands and Suva in the Fiji Islands. The aim would be to cover the 7,000 mile journey in ten days.

Train Crews Doing 190 Mile Run While Arbitrators Argue

BOSTON, (FP).—Another rail labor dispute goes to arbitration under the federal Watson-Parker act with submission of the Boston & Maine firemen and engineers case. The railroad ordered these workers to run straight through to Troy, N. Y. instead of returning from Deerfield, Mass., a half-way point.

Officials of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen protested that the 190 mile extension was excessive and a hardship for the workers. There are 51 stations, non-protested by interlock fences; over 200 signals governing the train movements; 130 grade crossings; 34 or more speed regulations and numerous special rules for operating trains on this run.

Vote Strike.

An affirmative strike vote was taken by the 3,000 firemen and engineers on the road to support the 40 men directly involved by the passenger run extension. G. Wallace Hanger, federal rail mediator, failed to bring settlement by negotiation between the road and the unions. D. S. Brigham, assistant general manager, was chosen for the company's arbitrator. S. H. Hoff, assistant grand chief of engineers brotherhood, is arbitrator for the men. These two will choose a third. Boston & Maine is under control of New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R.

MEXICAN RULERS BLOCK MEETING ON IMPERIALISM

Calles Swings Back to Reactionary Position

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 22. — New evidence of the Mexican government's determination to repress radical manifestations, particularly when directed against the United States, is seen in an order issued by the authorities forbidding the holding of a mass meeting called by the "All-American Anti-Imperialist League," for the avowed purpose of attacking the United States.

The effort to stage the anti-United States demonstration was frustrated when the authorities blocked all moves to assemble the meeting point-ing out that no permit had been issued permitting the gathering and insisting that it was unlikely that such permission would be forthcoming.

Gather at Quarters.

The promoters of the meeting left the scene, afterwards gathering at the headquarters of the league.

The Mexican government recently warned agitators that it would not tolerate efforts to stage demonstrations against the United States. Simulaneously, the government moved to check the activities of Communists among the workers and farmers in various sections of the republic.

Cleveland Meeting to Denounce Imperialism Hears Talk of Revolt

CLEVELAND, Feb. 23.—"Within five years there will be another World War or there will be revolution," said Benjamin Marsh, of the People's Reconstruction League, at the anti-imperialist meeting arranged by the Cleveland Committee on American Imperialism with the assistance of the People's Reconstruction League.

Mr. Marsh denounced President Coolidge and the militarists who are driving America into a new war. He showed up the plight of the farmers of this country, exposed the futility of the McNary-Haugen bill, which will only aid the big farmers, and stated that the foreign investments of the American bankers are of more concern to the government than the welfare of the people.

Speaking of Mexico, Mr. Marsh said that Mexico would be foolish to submit her dispute with the United States to arbitration. What Mexico should do is to defy the United States government."

What China Wants.

Mr. J. Jeong, of the Chinese Students' League, explained what the Chinese revolutionists want. He depicted the horrible conditions under which Chinese men, women and children must labor in the factories owned by Chinese and foreign capitalists, and stated that only one thing would solve the question, both in China and elsewhere, and that is "world revolution."

He told of the formation of unions of workers and peasants wherever the Canton army advances, thus insuring the rear guard of workers and peasants in sympathy with the Canton government. "They have taken the masses of the people, 90 per cent of whom are illiterate, and are teaching them to read and write."

What Finance Needs.

I. Amter, district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, explained the real needs of finance capital in the coming war. "It will make little difference whether the Wheeler bill passes congress or not," he said. "This bill is supposed to prevent the president from declaring war when congress is not in session. Wilson kept us out of war, and six months later, after using the press and every other agency, he had us in war."

Russia Deals Fair.

Turning to China, Amter declared that the reason the Chinese people are sympathetic to the Soviet Government, is that Soviet Russia is the only country that has renounced all concessions and special privileges.

Albert Coyle, who acted as chairman of the meeting, appealed to the audience to be on its guard, for the danger of war was ever present. A motion was made to form a permanent organization, and Mr. Coyle was empowered to appoint a committee of five to draw up a plan of organization and program of work.

New Organization.

Yetta Land, secretary of the committee, explained the origin and aim of the organization, and stated that the All-American Anti-Imperialist League had offered to co-operate, and that the Cleveland Committee on American Imperialism welcomed the active co-operation of all groups, for it is "non-sectarian and non-partisan."

A resolution dealing with American imperialistic designs in Nicaragua, Haiti, Mexico and China was unanimously adopted.

The meeting was most enthusiastic, all of the speakers meeting with a splendid response. Greater activity is contemplated by the committee.

Kao Has Resigned.

WAITING AT THE CHURCH

The republican party, organised expression of big business on the political field, is ready to go to the White House with anybody who will promise to love, honor, and obey. The only question is, with whom? There are plenty of suitors. The heat back of the recent congressional arguments, resulting occasionally in fists being shaken under senatorial noses, is not entirely due to differences of opinion on farm bills, branch bank bills, etc. Some of it is caused by personal rivalry.

SEAMEN'S CLUB BREAKING HOLD OF CHURCH AND OIL CROWD ON SAILORS

Seafarers Escaping Clutches of Holy Mission Outfits and Subsidized Man Catchers

By FRED HARRIS.

New York's South Street is coming into its own again.

As the center of the world's shipping and the main hangout of the sailor crowd, South Street during the last decade had been made the centered object of various church activities ostensibly to make a sailor a fit subject to be shown, but actually to disconnect him from union activity and bring him under the immediate control of the shipping interests.

If there is anything which is obnoxious to a sailor, it is a parson with his everlasting tale of the sweet lifa boreafter. Hard bolled skippers with their fisted mates, greasy cooks and leaky ships may cause him to utter a curse from his tobacco-juiced lips, but the sight of a parson will, without exception, send a sneer to his face and prompt him to speak words of contempt.

Much as he has despised and evaded this "glory crowd", yet it is enomolous that no one else has shown such persistency in following him, or has attempted to control his life more completely, than have the various seamen's missions.

Those worthy crusaders have now completely encroached upon his everyday activity. When he is broke, there is only the inevitable church mission to which to turn. If he wants to look for work then there is no other institution but the mission and the Y. M. C. A.

At these places he will sign for his job whenever he gets one, and it is precisely at those missions where he will sign off and get his pay when his trip is completed, and when he is thrown out of work again. It is a complete circle around the church during his entire life.

Standard Oil Subsidies.

Powerful as these seamen's missions are, with rich endowments and Standard Oil backing, the seaman during his idleness is just kept standing by, subject to a rigid inspection by his "christian" boarding house keeper. If he behaves well he may get a job, if he shows signs of independence and assess the policeman in the building, then he is likely to go to jail but will never get a job.

Gone are the days when, after having come to the home port from a trip around the Horn, he would get paid off to enjoy himself in his own way. Drunkenness may have been part of his life, but then these were clean drunks, indulged in as free and independent men. It was his way of living as a man who leads a hard battle against nature and men, and he at least had the right to do bottle.

Oldsters Are Busy.

Now he hardly earns enough to get paid off on, and his occasional spree has become a thing of the past. The church has now taken its place. Where formerly he had a right to choose his own way and usually preferred to go to hell with a bottle of whisky in his pocket, he is now compelled to go to heaven with a prayer book in his hand.

He has been made safe for the Standard Oil Co. and the Morgan line. The church, this much despised enemy of his, has stepped in and laid out a complete rule of conduct. It has provided standardized rooms, meals and religious readings and outside of that there is nothing left for him.

It is therefore with a sigh of relief that South Street has welcomed the establishment of the International Seaman's Club at 26 South Street, a place where a sailor may meet his own kind in his own way. It has a lunch counter where he may eat at his heart's content, at a price within the reach of his pocket book. There are tables with the greatest variety of reading matter ranging from the Seaman's Journal to International Correspondence. Also a few tables for games to pass the time away.

Regular educational meetings are to be provided for and every encouragement is made to stimulate their own thought. Men from all four corners of the world assemble here to discuss the topics of the day and a congenial atmosphere is thus created to make the men feel at home.

As soon as it is possible to break the job control, now exerted by the missions, an attempt is to be made to have the men provided with work, and to send them off to their seafaring work without carrying a grudge against the place which harbored them last but with a thought of regret and wishing to return soon.

Plans are also now being made to rent two more floors above the present location, for the purpose of establishing regular sleeping quarters, so that, when in port, the sailor may have a regular place where he can completely feel at home, come and go of his own convenience, and not get thrown out of his bed at six in the morning as is the case in the hallelujah place, the Seaman's Mission.

The International Seaman's Club was established on the model of other such places in European ports, which have been given great support by sailors over there, and which has helped a great deal to break the control thus far exerted by the Seaman's church, whose program is to rivet the sailor solid to the shipowner's interest.

On the floor above her was Father McConnell, there to "protect her innocence."

OH, HO! FOR THE MARDI GRAS

New Orleans Prepares for Greatest Festival in Its History; the Rich Will Magnificently Display Themselves to the Marvelling Populace, and the Hotel Keepers Pluck Indiscriminately All and Sundry.

Top, left, Rex; right, carnival maskers; below, acclaiming Rex.

By PIERRE JACQUES CARONDELET.

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The DAILY WORKER.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 23.—America's maddest, merriest, frolic and revel dawns again as old New Orleans sets the stage for her one hundredth Mardi Gras.

Straight down the line of the years for a century the South's greatest city that itself is more than two centuries old, has staged that carnival and the Ball of Comus bring the winter season here to a full stop.

Mardi Gras in New Orleans! That is the phrase that has drawn millions of Americans here year after year for a century. They came to revel here in the days when New Orleans could be reached by the rest of America only on river steamboats and coasting sailing vessels—unless you rode down on horseback. They come today in de luxe trains that have shower baths and barbers and manicures and radio as part of their standard equipment. Within the life of those living today they will be coming by airplane—some already have done so.

Some Come for a Day.

Scores of thousands only come for the day of Mardi Gras. But hundreds of others whose names have been in the Social Register for generations, come shortly after Christmas and are guests at the most remarkable series of balls in any social season anywhere in the world.

The cost? It runs far into the millions of dollars with every Carnival. It is nothing unusual for the wealthy father of some debutante in New Orleans to spend from $50,000 to $75,000 to launch his daughter upon her social career. The frock of one Carnival queen, a girl of nineteen, daughter of a millionaire Louisianan, alone cost $15,000 at a recent carnival. Nor is that a rare and isolated instance.

Nearly twenty balls mark the Carnival season that culminates on Mardi Gras. It is not unusual to have from $100,000 to $200,000 spent upon a single ball. For every ball is planned a year in advance, with special scenery and decorations, with special costumes for the members of each Krewe. Many of the older, more historic Krewes have their costumes made in Paris by costumers who from father to son for generations have counted that New Orleans patronage one of the greatest assets of their business.

Kingly and Courtly.

Every ball has its king and queen. They culminate in the Ball of Rex. And the King and Queen of Rex are King and Queen of the Carnival. All other monarchs of the season are subservient to them. But each queen is surrounded by her court of Maids of Honor and each King is surrounded by his court of Dukes.

Most gorgeous of all the balls is the Ball of Comus which is given on the same night—the night of Mardi Gras—as the Ball of Rex. In full panoply, of royal state, that night, the King and Queen of Rex and Comus with their courts interchange toasts.

To be King and Queen of Carnival is the highest social honor a New Orleans man and debutante can receive. It is costly honor. Any king of Carnival, or Rex, as he is known, must figure on accepting the honor that he has listed goodbye to from $25,000 to $50,000.

But they make it all back, if they are either real estate men with properties up state, or out of the bayou swamps—or if they are hotel keepers.

For the Mardi Gras is the grandest advertising stunt that a parasitic American gang of town boomers ever thought of. The crowds come from far and near, the parades swirl thru the streets, hundreds of floats on which thousands of dollars have been spent, costumed figures decked as knights and ladies, Klansmen or burnt cork minstrels, and recruited for fifty cents a day from the slums, give color, and the real estate men and the hotel keepers reap their golden harvest.

The Mardi Gras has its business aspects—quite a few of them. The hundredth exhibition of ostentatious display will break quite a few fathers of debutantes, but for the poorer sections of New Orleans it will mean a little cheap labor, and for the men on the make, it is the yearly fools' festival, where the fool has a good time and leaves his money with those predestined to separate him from it.

SUPER-GREYHOUND OF RAILS GOES ON DUTY

Locomotive No. 5200, the new "Hudson type," made for New York Central Lines at American Locomotive company's shops, Schenectady, N. Y. It cost $100,000, and has a speed of 120 miles an hour. This high speed will not be used, however. Instead the Hudson type will pull larger, longer sections of limited trains on the present time table. This permits the same engine and train crew to do more work, and throws out of employment a few more men—the modern tendency in railroading.

The Manager's Corner

MENTAL POLICE.

Capitalist society is replete with agencies whereby the daily life of the masses is directed into the "proper" channels to insure the maintenance of the present system of exploitation. Not only do we have police, soldiers, courts and jails, who keep a careful watch over what the workers do, but we have also an organized machinery of "mental police," to keep an eye on what the workers think. Of course it is more difficult to control the thought of the workers, than to control their actions. Capitalism has not yet invented a method of peering into the crannies of the brain and therefore it endeavors to accomplish its purpose by supervising carefully the raw material which goes to make up our thoughts and opinions—the facts of our everyday life as recounted in the newspapers.

Mr. J. H. Tregoe, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men has put this very aptly when he said the other day, "MUCH DEPENDS UPON OUR PUBLICISTS IN DIRECTING THOUGHT INTO SOUND CHANNELS. FROM THESE MAINSPRINGS OF ACTION MAY PAROXYSMS BE ABSENT AND WELL ORGANIZED REASONING CONTROL PUBLIC UTTERANCES."—BERT MILLER.

EIGHTH OF MARCH, INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY HAS GREAT HISTORY; WILL HAVE GREATER FUTURE

By RACHEL HOLTMAN.

The women began to struggle in the economic field much earlier than in the political field. As soon as the industrial revolution made it possible for them to enter industry, the women began to organize.

Economic strikes started in such industries as clothing and footwear as early as in the thirties of the last century. The struggle for bread was always acute and imperative.

A difference in views on the question of equal rights was noticeable in America quite early. The difference portrayed itself in the class struggle that began to develop in the whole of society. While the bourgeois women wanted the right to vote only for the sake of keeping the existing social order, the working women demanded the ballot not only to protect their interests, but also as a weapon that could be used for mobilizing the working class, in order to overthrow the whole existing capitalist society.

For this purpose there was called in 1910 an international conference in Copenhagen of all the women socialists. America was very well represented.

Clara Zetkin proposed that not only in America but in all the other countries such demands should be put forward. A definite day in the year was chosen for that purpose—the 8th of March.

On the 8th of March efforts should be made to mobilize the women all over the world; to support the struggle for equal suffrage; to overthrow the capitalist order of society and finally liberate women.

Germany, the stronghold of the Second International, celebrated this day in 1911 on a broad scale. In Austria the police dispersed meetings and demonstrations of women, because they were afraid of the immensity of the movement.

In this country the socialist women did not celebrate this day on their own book, but went with the suffragettes, who made use of the day to obtain votes, get publicity and members for the equal rights movement.

In Russia Women's Day was celebrated the first time in 1913. Special articles were written by the comrades in exile. A demonstration was held in Leningrad, which resulted in numerous arrests.

In 1914 Women's Day in Russia was celebrated under the slogan, "Down with the Czar!"

In 1916 the attempts to hold celebrations were in vain. In all countries the social democratic traitors worked hand in hand with the bourgeoisie and were a menace everywhere to carry anything thru.

But there came the month of February. The sufferings of the Russian masses were indescribable; poverty, hunger, sickness and death reigned all over Russia; the bloody war still demanded its victims.

Then the women of Leningrad left the factories and came out into the streets, demanding bread for their children, and their husbands back from the trenches. That was the first signal for the February-March revolution.

The peasant women celebrated that day the first time in 1920. Their slogans were of such necessities as they came in contact with in everyday life: "Down with the Bourgeoisie and capital." "Down with Illiteracy." Over a hundred schools were opened that day, besides homes for expectant mothers, nurseries and kindergartens.

With full pomp the 8th of March was celebrated in Russia in 1923. Women by tens of thousands and hundreds of thousands took part.

When Lenin died the slogan became: "Remember the Words of Lenin." "The Work in the Soviets Will Not be Complete if Millions of Women Workers in the Field and Factory Will Not Participate in It."

Until now it has been in general difficult to have such a celebration in this country. Last year there were small celebrations in Detroit, Boston and New York.

This year, in America, preparations are under way for celebrations on the 8th of March in all of the larger American cities. Working women will participate in considerable number, and as the years go on, in larger and larger numbers.

Young Workers League Invites Parents to Send Children to Open Forum

The Young Workers' League, Section 4 of Chicago, has been conducting an open forum at their headquarters 1239 S. Sawyer Ave., and the results have been very gratifying. The attendance has been to the full capacity of the hall and many young workers are now sympathizers of this league. The subjects are of timely interest to the American youth. The coming lecture is "Why U. S. marines are being sent to China," by Comrade Max Schachtman.

All are invited to attend. The lecture will be held Sunday, Feb. 27th, 3 p. m. at 1239 S. Sawyer Ave.

Section 4 is also conducting classes as follows: Every Wednesday 8:00 p. m., "Draft program of the Y. W. L.," every Thursday evening, "Marxian Economics," every Sunday morning at 11 a. m., "Public Speaking." All readers of the Worker are urged to send their children and shopmates.

Another Arbitration Scheme to Injure the Building Trades Men

CLEVELAND. — Charles Smith, business agent of the building trades council of Cleveland, has a strike arbitration plan. In a long, dreary article in the Cleveland Citizen of Feb. 12 he elucidates his plan, on the basis of a proposed agreement.

Not New.

There is nothing novel about the plan, for it is a counterpart of the U. S. Government's plan for settling railroad disputes, but is somewhat simplified. According to Smith, a "Board of Adjustment or Mediation," consisting of a certain number of members appointed by the General Contractors' Association and a like number appointed by the Building Trades Councils, will deal with each issue arising. Should a deadlock arise, a meeting of the board would have to be called within 48 hours.

"Three days shall be given the board in which to find and render a decision, unless further time is decided or agreed on. Pending and awaiting the decision of the board, work on the job in question shall continue."

Boss Does Anything.

"Any action taken by the Building Trades Council in prosecution of the rights of the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. shall not be deemed a violation or give cause for the voiding of this agreement. Any steps the General Contractors' Association may judge necessary to take to cover and safeguard the interests of its members shall not be deemed a violation or give cause for the voiding of this agreement."

In explanation of this "agreement, it is stated by Smith that the employers can decide on a permanent body of men for their side, if they please. As far as the workers are concerned, if, for instance, the carpenters get into dispute with the contractors, then the members of the board on the workers' side will consist of carpenters altogether.

This Will Bring Peace.

"But the best of Smith's argument is the following: "It would do away with all these sprints to courts after writs and injunctions, paying for high-priced attorneys who are willing to work both ends against the middle for the proper fee, and it would also do away with these 'private dicks' who infest the labor movement, and who turn in reports filled with lies that do their employers no good whatever."

The whole plan is a kind of modified Watson Parker Bill, for the building trades of Cleveland.

DRAMA

"Breaking Chains" Appeals to Workers—To Make Tour

This remarkable Russian film, now being shown for the first time in America after a sensational run in European countries, is received with great satisfaction and appreciation by all who have the good fortune to see it.

Thousands who have seen the film the first time have been deeply impressed with the tale it tells. In Chicago, where "Breaking Chains" was shown in December last, over two thousand people were turned away the first night.

"Breaking Chains" is a story that speaks of history in the making. While it has its plot with its heroes, villains, lovers and fighters, it also portrays the development of a new order of society, besides giving a realistic glimpse of the days of the barricades during the revolution. The film is a real story of life, full of action, drama and reconstruction. It fires the imagination and brings hope to the enslaved.

"Breaking Chains" will be shown in the following cities and theatres below listed:

Kenosha, Wis., Vogue Theatre, March 2; Kenosha, Wis., Butterfly Theatre, March 3; Cleveland, Ohio, Dutchess Theatre, March 2, 3; Collinsville, Ill., Miners Theatre, March 4; St. Louis, Mo., Odeon Theatre, March 6; Ziegler, Ill., March 7; West Frankford, Ill., March 9; East Hammond, Ind., Columbia, March 9; Gary, Ind., Plaza Theatre, March 11; Indiana Harbor, Ind., Sunnyside Theatre, March 12; Canonsburg, Pa., March 14; East Pittsburgh, Pa., March 15; Pittsburgh, Pa., March 16.

DILL-RADIO BILL MAKES RADIO WEAPON OF CANDIDATES WITH LARGEST CAMPAIGN FUND

By LAURENCE TODD.

WASHINGTON.—Without a roll call, after weeks of delay with occasional debate, the Dill radio control bill, in compromise form acceptable to Herbert Hoover, passed the senate and went to President Coolidge for signature.

Provisions in the original senate bill, stricken out in conference, required that all material broadcast at the expense of any private interest be so declared by the announcer; also that with regard to broadcasting statements by candidates for public office the station permitting any candidate to speak must grant equal privileges to all candidates—that is, be treated as a common carrier. It further provided that, for political talks "such license shall have no power to censor the material broadcast."

killed, the radio becomes the agents of the candidates with the largest campaign fund, and it is closed against the candidates who have little or no funds. Private monopoly in radio is added to private monopoly in big newspapers, in the control of channels of political and economic thought. Minority opinions face a new handicap.

Firetrap Tenements of Lower East Side Take Scores of Lives Yearly

The DAILY WORKER today publishes the first of a series of regional surveys of housing conditions in New York City. Will de Kalb, DAILY WORKER writer, who in 10 years on reporter and research worker, has studied metropolitan housing from all angles, tells of conditions in the congested lower east side.

By WILL DE KALB.

Lower New York has always been the most insanitary quarter in the city, and yet, ever since its beginning, it has been the most densely populated.

The squalor, disease, filth, and horror of the section as described in Jacob Riis' "How-The Other Half Lives" caused a tremendous shock in polite circles when it appeared many years ago. The terrible conditions be depicted are no different today—if possible, they are worse.

As many as sixteen people have been known to occupy one room in the Ghetto district, and in Little Italy. Families renting two rooms would be forced to live in one and secure a boarder or boarders for the other. Morals of ten went by the board.

Rents Average $32.

The average rental for a two and three room "apartment" on the lower east side varies between $18 and $45 per week, centering around $32. Only a few houses have heating devices; steam heat is comparatively unknown. Some houses have their toilets in the yard, as they did 75 years ago; most houses have one toilet to a floor, used by the members and boarders of four families.

Houses were built in the back yards of houses that faced the street. Only the few families near the top floor front see the sunlight. This system of erecting houses in every available space has made lower New York one vast, horrible fire-trap; only an excellent fire department and modern fire-fighting methods and apparatus, have postponed the occurrence of a gigantic fire similar to the one that swept Chicago in 1905.

The Annual Fire.

Scores of lives are lost yearly in tenement fires. In one fire, where an entire floor was burned out, 20 men, women and children were burned to death in the flames. The buildings are so old that they always collapse after a good fire. Fifteen firemen have been seriously injured this year in tenement collapses; five have been killed.

The average salary of the east side worker is $24 per week, varying from $8 to $60 and centering around $18-28. How he manages to pay $30 a month for his rooms is a mystery, since the east sider dresses as well as the resident in any other district, and pays the same amount for food and clothing.

Disease Lurks In Garbage.

Street cleaning department removal trucks pay few calls to the Ghetto and Little Italy, for Mr. Morgan's and Mr. Astor's rubbish must be removed first. As a consequence, the streets are littered with rubbish from morning till night, spreading disease of all kinds. The absence of sunlight makes disease still more prevalent.

The landlords, who used to be the kindliest and most patient in the city, have adopted the dog-eat-dog psychology of the average landlord. Rents must be paid in full on the first and fifteenth of the month, or he gets a "dispossess."

On the two coldest days in the past winter, three landlords were cold-blooded enough to eject many families, temporarily financially embarrassed and unable to pay the rent at that moment. These wards of the Real Estate Owners' Association grease the palms of the tenement house department inspectors, and they are able to go without making repairs.

Rents are much the same in Little Italy as in the Ghetto, with the exception that in some cases they are higher. On Mulberry St., some bootleggers are forced to pay as much as $60 a month for four rooms.

Penalty For Greeks.

In the Greek district, centering around Monroe street, rents are five and ten dollars higher than anywhere else on the lower east side, outside of the Syrian district on Washington St.

Greeks and Syrians, being unable to easily acquire a knowledge of English, are forced to live in one quarter, with their kind. For this privilege, the landlords exact a fee, just as they do in Harlem, and in Little Hungary.

The horrors of the east side furnish a ready indictment of the owning and ruling classes in this city.

Chicago Parent League In First Anniversary; Fights Platoon System

CHICAGO.—The first anniversary of the North-West Side Parents' League will be celebrated Wednesday, March 2, at 3301 LeMoyne St. (In the basement of the church), corner Spaulding. There will be an interesting musical program, refreshments, good speakers, etc. Beginning at 8 p. m. Admission free. All parents of the north-west side are invited.

The parents won their fight and began a struggle for an addition to the school and against the double platoon system and the junior high schools.

Catch Milk Dealer Using Bootleg Stuff For N. Y. Consumption

Another grafting milk dealer was put out of business today.

The Washington Creamery Milk Co. was the offending firm. Forty cans of bootleg cream, from an unidentified source, caused the suppression. Health Commissioner Harris issued the edict after a conference with the Waddington grafters, from which reporters were excluded.

A storage warehouse was then drew up to the Waddington plant at 102 West 24th St. Harris said. The driver got off, knocked peculiarly on the doors to the warehouse. They were opened, but closed as soon as the truck had entered. Harris' emissaries clambered vainly for admittance immediately after but after a long wait, called, police.

President William J. Mackay, the savory character who was heading the Waddington Company, was forced to agree not to engage in the milk business or allow any of his fellow officials to do so.

PORTERS' FUTURE INVOLVED NOW IN BOARD DECISION

Randolph Confident Union Will Win

Trade union or company union for the Pullman porters?

This is the issue involved in the decision of the railway board of mediation on the plea of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters for recognition as the official representative of the colored workers, declared A. Philip Randolph, general organizer, in an interview today.

"The eyes of the labor movement are upon our fight and upon the board's decision.

"We have every reason to believe that powerful interests other than the Pullman Co. are watching the outcome of the porters' case." Randolph explained, "it involves the serious question of whether or not a company union, organized and controlled by a company, can be recognized as the true and lawful spokesman of its employes, or whether the principle of self-organization of employes will be recognized and maintained."

The brotherhood has "a comfortable majority of the 12,000 men and women in the Pullman service enrolled as members," Randolph asserts, and they have signified their preference for the trade union over the company union. "The brotherhood has in its possession affidavits and other documents to prove that the so-called 'employe representation' plan is a fraud put over on the men against their will and knowledge."

Brotherhood officials are confident that the Pullman Company's case cannot stand up under an honest and unbiased investigation.

RIGHT WING IN WORKMEN'S CIRCLE BARS LEFTS FROM ALL COMMITTEES

Effort to Have Democratic National Executive Committee Killed by Reactionary Gang

Two main progressive demands in the Workmen's Circle were denied by the right wing at Sunday's meeting at Webster Hall.

The progressive delegates sentenced their main attention on the recognition of all political tendencies in the labor movement and representation of the progressives on committees.

Due to the policy of the National Executive Committee of suppressing and expelling branches, the Workmen's Circle today finds itself in a very critical situation with a declining membership. Comrade Esdin moved that representatives of all political tendencies be represented on the credentials committee. The chairman ruled this motion out of order. Comrade Salzman appealed to the decision of the chair.

Insist on Democracy.

In his appeal Salzman stated that for the last five years the left wing demanded representation on committees of the Workmen's Circle, but was ruthlessly suppressed by the National Executive Committee. He pointed out that if the organization is to grow and progress, the National Executive Committee must come back to the principles upon which the Workmen's Circle was built, allowing free expression and giving recognition to all political tendencies in the labor movement.

When the appeal of Salzman to the chair was put to a vote, the progressive delegates were counted out by appointees of the administration, and from the great number of the progressives only 80 votes were counted against and 292 for.

These tactics not only proved to the progressive delegates that the present administration, in order to maintain power will use all means, but even surprised some right wing delegates of the method used at the conference.

Impose Gag Rule.

The motion of Comrade Sultanto to have an half an hour discussion on the plans of activity and the composition of the National Executive Committee to be elected, was ruled out of order and the chairman immediately proceeded to read the names of the nominees.

Comrade Litshitz raised an objection against B. Wexler who personified the reactionary gang. In connection with that he wanted to make a statement. But no statement that will show up the past activities and policies of the National Executive Committee was allowed. Comrade Litshitz then appealed to the chair. Lieutenants came immediately to the assistance of the chairman and Litshitz was prevented from speaking.

The destructive policies of the administration were strikingly demonstrated when Max Levitt, the chairman of the committee for peace in the Workmen's Circle, objected to Chanin who is responsible for the split in the Workmen's Circle Schools. He pointed out that a man like Chanin who is identified with the Jewish Verband of the socialist party can not do constructive work and therefore can not be put on the executive committee.

In answer to Levit, Chanin expressed himself in agreement with the splitting tactics of the National Executive Committee. He stated that he is satisfied that he succeeded in splitting the schools and even if the non-partisan Workmen's Circle schools would want to affiliate with the official Workmen's Circle schools, he will continue to fight them bitterly.

No Demonstration for Herlich.

The chairman invited Herlich, the representative of the Polish Bund, who was hidden in a corner on the gallery. The progressive elements were aroused by the action of the chairman. Sensing the indignation of the majority of the delegates the chairman did not introduce Herlich to the conference. During the conference some of the left wing delegates attacked the progressive delegates, but the threat of the machine did not affect the militancy of the left wing

Poor Women Die of Infection in Public Ward of N. Y. Hospital

Six mothers, too poor to receive private treatment, have died at the Sloane Hospital for Women at Amsterdam Avenue and 59th Street within the past three weeks. None of the women in private wards were afflicted by the infection which caused havoc in the public ward.

Hospital authorities blamed an unknown "carrier" of the infection who may have been a visitor. Eight cases were reported.

40 FUR WORKERS ON TRIAL TODAY IN STRIKE CASE

The trial of 40 striking furriers on charges arising from the recent strike begins this morning at 10 before Judge Collins in Part 4 of General Sessions.

The sudden determination to bring all the cases up together was reached a few days ago, although normally the trials would be held over a period of weeks. The furriers, members of locals affiliated with the Joint Board, will be represented by union counsel headed by George Z. Medalie, 120 Broadway.

The charges grew out of hearings before the grand jury, which ordered the strikers held. Preservation of union rights during the strike, in which scabs and employers' agents provoked the furriers, precipitated the action.

Report Officers Dead In Yaqui Ambuscade

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 23.—General Juan Bautista, and Major Antonio Ulca were killed today near Ulca, state of Guanjuato during an attack by ambused rebels, following of Chief Gallegros, it was reported here today. The rebels were commanded by Vidales. According to reports reaching here, Federal Major Ulca was killed in a battle near Atoyae in the state of Guerrero.

This is considered a flare-up of the nearly suppressed Yaqui Indians rebellion, timed to correspond with the attempted clerical revolt farther south. The priest led rebellion has been completely crushed, and the Yaqui bands for the most part subdued. Sporadic acts of violence, such as the ambush reported above, continue, however.

PARIS, Feb. 23.—Fearful that his political enemies are active and that King Ferdinand has not received his telegram asking for permission to visit him as a private citizen, Prince Carol today sent a personal messenger to Bucharest with a request to the king that he be granted safe conduct to visit him.

KNIT GOODS UNION CALLS STRIKE IN BROOKLYN MILL

Knit Goods Workers, Local 55 of the United Textile Workers, have struck against the Duchen Knitting Mills, 2402 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn. Grievances are: discrimination and victimization of union members.

On Monday morning two union men were fired. All the men in the mill, who are 100 per cent organized in the union, walked out. A shop meeting was held in the Brownsville Labor Lyceum and the workers unanimously decided to strike. The organizer of Local 55 was present and the strike was officially declared against the Duchen Knitting Mills.

The demands are: 1. Recognition of the union: 2. reinstatement of the discharged union men: 3. no discrimination: 4. the forty-four hour week.

Girls Get $8—$12 a Week.

The conditions in the mill are intolerable. The workers are bitter with resentment against the treatment they receive. The majority of them are young girls who are shamefully exploited. The average wage of these girls is $8 to $12 per week, and $15 for experienced operators and finishers. The girls are rapidly joining the ranks of the strikers. The mill is crippled.

A picket line was organized, but before the pickets even arrived at the mill a host of policemen swooned down upon them. The police captain especially seemed determined not to allow any picketing whatsoever.

Three young strikers who bore strike signs were roughly handled and pulled into the mill by a policeman. He kept them there several hours, took them to the police station where they were bullied and threatened.

Trial on Wednesday.

They were finally arrested and taken to the Jersey Avenue Court. The hearing was set for Wednesday at 9 a. m. The three young strikers were paroled. The attorney of the United Textile Workers will defend the arrested strikers.

The Duchen Knitting Mill has been very busy and working overtime for months. The strikers are determined to stick and will stick it out until their demands are won.

Test New Plane for Battleship Landings

A new type of naval fighting airplane, equipped with hydraulic wheel brakes and hand and water landing features, is to be tried out within a week by the Curtiss Airplane Company, of Garden City.

The airplane is designed to land on the deck of a battleship in a limited space. Much of the cumbersome landing gear of the old type of amphibian plane has been discarded. Tests are to be made at Mitchel Field, and at the Naval Air Station, Anacos-

Selling Fancy Corsets Nets Her $100,000 Year Her Girls Get $15 Week

Mrs. Eleanor H. Green "earns" $100,000 a year. No, she does not work in a factory. She is not a dressmaker, a cloakmaker or a furrier.

Mrs. Green sells fancy corsets for fancy ladies. Apparently corsets are still in vogue. At least to the extent of yielding one hundred thousand dollars to Mrs. Green's purse every twelve months. She is the sales manager and "president" of Berger Brothers Corset Co., who employ hundreds of workers in his factory, most of whom are paid less than $1,000 a year.

Political Row Looms Over Transit Problem

Renewal of the running fight between Al Smith and Mayor Walker is seen as a result of the statement issued by Assemblyman Alexander, chairman of the state housing board that has been annexed by John H. Delaney, chairman of the local board of transportation. James suggests state control of local transportation, while Delaney answers him with the case for home rule.

While James is a republican, he stated the point of view of Smith while Delaney was the spokesman of the Walker administration.

McCormick Workers Pay for Boss's Monkey Glands; Special Train

CHICAGO (FP).—The following wage rates of workers in the McCormick works of the Chicago Ind. Harvester Co. are given in The Harvester Worker, a factory paper published by employes of the plant:

For a 9-hour day lumberyard workers get 43 to 46 cents an hour, workers in the furnace room get 45 cents, in the crane shaft department of the foundry work 9 to 10 cents. Girls in the twine department begin at $16 a week.

Pay For Trains.

"Just think of it," declares a girl worker in the twine mill, "working 9 long hours a day for $16 a week while executive like Mrs. McCormick can freely spend thousands of dollars on entertaining."

The reference is to the special train between New York and Chicago engaged by Edith Rockefeller McCormick so that she might make a christmas school board meeting on time. She was its only passenger.

Monkeying the Heavy Accident toll

In the McCormick works due to antiquated buildings and working conditions, an employe writes satirically, "The McCormick family and the circus parasites take a chance on accidents while playing golf, chasing monkeys for glands, etc."

Here the reference is to the alleged gland operation on Harold McCormick after his divorce from Edith Rockefeller McCormick and before his marriage to Ganna Walska, the opera singer.

The Struggle for Shanghai

The Chinese liberation movement is giving to world imperialism a lesson in strategy and tactics. But unlike the strategy of an imperialist enemy it cannot be applied by the imperialists even tho they understand it thoroly.

The People's Armies are advancing on Shanghai. They meet troops that know they are fighting their own people in the interest of foreign oppressors.

Inside Shanghai the working population strikes and demoralizes the rear of Sun Chuang Fang.

The wholesale executions of strike leaders have not cowed the workers but have increased their resentment and determination. In addition to their devotion to the broad nationalist and workingclass movement the Shanghai workers, with the rich experience of the 1925 strike and the memory of the massacre by British troops, have now the duty, which they understand, of avenging the martyrs who were executed in the last two days.

Any tyro in military science knows that Sun Chuang Fang cannot successfully defend Shanghai under the circumstances. He is an imperialist ship in a sea of revolution.

Bombardment by the warships of the imperialist powers in Shanghai harbor may prevent the People's Armies from taking possession for some time but this means serious damage to or complete destruction of property owned by foreign capitalists.

Imperialism has no base in the Chinese population in the southern and central and southeastern territories and without passivity or support imperialism in the greater portion of China is defeated.

Nor is there much comfort for imperialism, especially of the British brand, in the recent news that Chang Tso Lin has agreed to march against the People's Armies. Like the troops of Sun Chuang Fang and Wu Pei Fu, their morale will begin to decline and there will be defections.

The people's government and the people's armies represent the interests of the workers and peasants as opposed to the imperialists, militarists and landlords. The masses know this and the military strength of the people's armies therefore is not to be measured only by number of troops and equipment.

The strategy of the people's armies is based on the masses. It is the strategy of revolution and the imperialists cannot use it.

Imperialism in China can be victorious only by securing loyalty or at least neutrality from the masses of the population.

This it cannot do.

The Mexican Government Makes a Bad Mistake.

If the Calles government has suppressed a meeting of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, as dispatches from Mexico City report, it has taken what is not only a reactionary step but a very unwise one.

Doubtless designed to cater to the prejudices of Secretary of State Kellogg who says the League is a Communist organization, the Calles government will find, as all nationalist governments confronted with imperialist aggression have found, that any concessions not actually forced upon it, but made simply as evidence of "good faith" i.e. willingness to submit, serve only to arouse the hunger of the imperialist aggressor. The All-America Anti-Imperialist League is not a Communist organization. It is an organization which has as its main purpose the unification of all elements who are opposed to Wall Street aggression in Mexico, Central and South America. The membership includes such well known apostles of Latin American independence as Manuel Ugarte, poet-writer and lecturer, who represents the best of the anti-imperialist Latin American intellectuals.

Wall Street-Coolidge government will be satisfied with nothing short of surrender to its program. The Calles government either will become an instrument of Wall Street or it will extend and consolidate the gains of the popular revolution.

It cannot take a hostile attitude to mass demonstrations against imperialism without weakening its own position and strengthening that of the American state department. America has taken Nicaragua and rules it by armed force. Wall Street now has the base in Central America from which to drive north and south against the liberties of the Latin American masses.

In such a situation only a statesman who underestimates the danger, is preparing a retreat or is more afraid of the masses than of the imperialists, will make common cause with Wall Street against honest and capable allies.

The policy expressed by preventing a meeting of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League in Mexico City will prove disastrous to the best interests of the Mexican masses if continued.

The most conscious of the Calles government pass without an emphatic protest.

Letters From Our Readers

Wants Sports Column.

Dear Comrade:

Taking advantage of the invitation to write about The DAILY WORKER, I want to say a couple of words about it.

The DAILY WORKER has considerably improved, since its transfer to New York, and I am very glad of it. But while I believe that it satisfies the needs of the worker as a worker pretty fairly, I don't think it satisfies his needs as a human being. The theatre review column is a very good step in this direction. May I suggest that a similar column be introduced in regard to sports. The American people, and especially the young workers, are very fond of sports, and that is not unwholesome at all. I realize that The DAILY WORKER can't give a few pages to sports, but even a column would make it more interesting and more acceptable to the young worker.

I hope that my suggestion will be taken into consideration and that The DAILY WORKER will grow in size, circulation and importance.

Fraternally yours,
A YOUNG READER.

Missionary Writes of New China

The following letter is from an American missionary in China to one of his former classmates in the University of Minnesota.

We publish the letter, not because we are in agreement with it, but because it shows the trend of thought among a section of the American clericals who have been "civilizing" the Chinese. As a first hand account of impressions produced upon a class by the present upheaval in China it is an interesting document. (Editorial Note.)

SHANGHAI, January 25, 1927.

Things are moving in China, but whence no one knows. There are a few predictions made by some of the Chinese, but these are largely founded on hopes. Writers of articles in America and England speak as if they know, but none of their conclusions satisfy me. With most of them, their past experience and present status, play a larger part in the forming of their conclusions than any investigation that they may have recently made. This is partly true of even liberal journalists, with whom I would ordinarily have much in common. The movement is so large that we cannot tell what are all the forces moving it, or at what angle they will converge on a resultant—You see I remember my physics. I shall try to avoid the prophetic role, therefore. Frankly, I don't know what is going to happen, and I don't believe that any one else does. But I am joining forces with the first group, that is the Chinese, and using their method. I think there will be a New China.

Even Preachers See.

In today's paper, Eugene Chen of the southern government says "Chinese nationalism is an indestructible and invincible force". He says all see that a keen nationalism is emerging. The literate classes in China, numbering about thirty or forty millions, are more patriotic than they have been in the last five years.

The student world is all afire. Three years ago it was largely a student movement, but there is more solid support now. The gentry and chambers of commerce are joining in. The heat, born out of the continual agitation, is also burning away some of the dross so long in official life, and a new type of government official is coming to the front. A trustworthy administration is beginning.

It does not comprise all of the officials, but it makes up a very influential minority. The old type of official, even though he is supported by a larger army, is doomed. Going out before this new type. Some of them have faded away like paper in a flame. Today they are firmly entrenched, tomorrow they have fled to Japan.

Hate Britain.

Great Britain is the target of the political movement, and has been ever since the May Thirtieth Affair. She is the Beelzebub among all the other foreign devils, and is bitterly hated by all the Chinese. Taking the view of British policy, she must sympathize with the attitude of the Chinese, but in recent years a change has taken place in British attitude. Or rather they are not bound as imperialists in China as some other powers. Notably France, and Japan.

The French have been up the provisions of the Washington conference. So have the Japanese in part. The Shameen Affair in Canton, was done by British and French. The French were not blamed at all.

The Shanghai strikes were begun in Japanese mills, and the shooting of the students was an International Affair. All the powers ought to be blamed equally. But as each one of these and other incidents have occurred, the agitation that followed would center on the British. This result has been secured by some manipulation on the part of people behind the scenes. It has served to prevent the dissipation of the force of the movement.

As I see it, the movement which has been largely anti-British, could with justice have been anti-foreign. As practical strategy, it has been efficient.

Labor Movement Starts.

Intermixed with the political aspect are other things. There is a labor movement beginning. This aims at the usual things, but it's also patriotic and anti-foreign. The new government receives a lot of its support from the working classes. Factory workers in China are a small group. There are perhaps a half dozen factory cities in the whole country. The population is about fifteen per cent urban.

There is a government department to look after the interests of the farmers and laborers. But they are doing much for the farmers. The laborers are entirely illiterate, and any agitation orally stirs them against the foreigner who owns a factory or ship line. The laborers have been the most efficient weapon against the powers. They furnish the strike personnel, and also the pickets which have been so effective in Canton against the introduction of British imports. The Soldiers in the southern government have been used against the military war lords, but the laborers have been the chief weapon against the foreigners.

So far, the Chinese laborer has been content to be in the same organization with the Chinese capitalist. How long will he be content? As a side diversion, he has already begun several strikes in strictly Chinese concerns. When that becomes more frequent, on which side will the southern government stand?

Business Men Scared.

Right now, we are in the midst of a great excitment. Foreigners have been and are leaving the interior for the coast. Gun boats are coming from every country, and also troops. The ostensible purpose is to protect the foreigners. It is a situation fraught with danger. If some foreign soldier strikes a coolie with his bayonet, or if some crowd gets out of hand, and shots are fired, a great wave of destructive anti-foreignism will sweep over China. Boxer days will return. As many or more lives will be lost, as were lost twenty-six years ago.

No foreigner has been hurt yet, at least not seriously. At the clubs you can hear the wildest rumors batted back and forth as gospel truth. Every foreigner and many of the Chinese are looking for something to happen.

That's the first prerequisite for something to happen. At any sudden noise we all jump, thinking it may be a mob. To illustrate, Mr. Raven, a banker in Shanghai was sleeping peacefully one night.

He was rudely awakened by a stone hot water bottle being pushed out of the bed, by one of the sleeping children in another room. This sound he thought was that of a crowd of Chinese, and he rushed for arms. I think the business group are more excited than we missionaries are, but every one is very nervous. This temporary situation will soon quiet down, unless some false move is made. There are so many possibilities of a false move. The danger is not as great as news dispatches would have you think.

War Time Sociology.

I am enclosing the list of our courses in Sociology. Perhaps you would like to see our line up. I think for a school of five hundred, we are doing well. Much better than older schools of the same size in the United States. When I return in 1928, we hope to have two of us giving full time to Sociology. Elizabeth has told you that I shall be in Chicago next fall.

Still Practicing

Central Press

Dr. H. E. Catterson, above, of Spokane, Wash., is said to be the first regularly established physician in the vast territory of eastern Washington, northern Idaho and western Montana. Fifty years ago he entered the wilderness as a circuit doctor riding on horseback over territory considerably larger than the New England states. Isolated communities knew when to expect him and had their sick ready for treat ment when he arrived. He still is practicing.

A NEW NOVEL

V.

Bunny and Rachel had dinner, and then strolled on the water front; it was one of those warm nights that come now and then in Southern California; there was a moon on the sea, and a long pier with gleaming lights, and the sound of an orchestra drawing the lovers. At the entrance to the pier was a big bare hall, owned by the city, where very proper dancing was chaperoned by a religious city government. Bunny and his bride danced—oh, surely it was all right to dance a little bit, in this well chaperoned place on what ought to have been their honeymoon!

But in between the dances, while the orchestra was still, something shook the hall, a dull, sombre blow, like distant thunder, making the windows rattle, and jarring your feet. "What's that?" exclaimed Rachel. "An earthquake?"

"The guns," answered Bunny.

"Guns?" And he had to explain the fleet was practicing. There were a score or so of battleships stationed at the harbor, facing some unnamed enemy; and now they were at night target practice. You heard this now and then, day and night, if you lived near the coast.

So Rachel couldn't dance any more then. Each time she heard that dull boom, she saw the bodies of young men blown into fragments. The capitalists were getting ready for their next war; what business had the socialists to be dancing?

They drove along the boulevard which follows the harbor-front. It is fifteen or twenty miles, and there are towns and docks and bridges and railroad tracks and factories, and inland the "subdivisions" for the homes of working people. It is one of the world's great ports in the swift making; and those who have charge of the job, the masters of credit, see rearing before them that monstrous spectre known as "direct action" or "criminal syndicalism." The "industrial Workers of the World" had had a headquarters, where they met to discuss this program; and the masters made incessant war upon them.

The address which Ruth had given to Bunny was an obscure street in a working class quarter. There was a fairsized hall, with lights in the window, and the sound of a piano and a child's voice singing. Among the cars parked along the curb Bunny found a vacant space, and backed into it, and was just about to step from his car, when Rachel caught him by the arm. "Wait!" There came crashing down the street a squadron of motor-cars, two abreast and blocking the way entirely; and from them there poured some fifty men, carrying weapons of various sorts, clubs, hatchets, pieces of iron pipe. They made a rush for the entrance, and there came crashing and shrieks, and the crash of glass and battering of heavy blows.

"They're raiding them!" cried Bunny, and would have run to the scene; but Rachel's arms were flung about him, pinning him to his seat. "No! No! Sit still! What can you do?"

"My God! We must do something!"

"You're not armed, and you can't stop a mob! You can only get killed! Keep still!"

The sounds from within had risen to a bedlam; the hall must have been crowded, and everyone inside yelling at the top of his lungs. And that horrible drumming of blows—you couldn't tell whether they were falling on furniture or on human bodies. Bunny was almost beside himself, struggling to get loose, and Rachel fighting like a mad thing, and had never dreamed that she had such strength. "No, Bunny! No! For God's sake! For my sake! Oh, please, please!" She knew in those dreadful minutes the terror that was to haunt the rest of her life—that some day in this hideous class war there would come the moment when it was her husband's duty to get himself killed. But not yet, not yet! Not on their honeymoon!

It was like the passing of a tornado, that is gone before you have time to realise it. The attacking party emerged from the hall, as quickly as they had entered. They were dragging half a dozen prisoners, and threw these into the cars, of which the engines were still going; then down the street they went roaring, and silence fell.

It was permissible for Bunny to get out now, and run into the hall, with Rachel at his heels. He had one thought, the same as on that night when he had run over Mrs. Groarty's place, crying, "Paul! Paul!" They were certain to have taken Paul away on that lynching party; and how could Bunny save him?

The first thing he saw, in the doorway, was a man with a great gash across his forehead, and the blood streaming all over him; he was staggering about, because he couldn't see, and crying, "The sons-o'-bitches! The sons-o'-bitches!" Near him was another man whose left hand had been slashed across, and a women was tearing her skirt to make a bandage. A little girl lay on the floor, screaming in agony, and some one was pulling off her stockings, and the raw flesh was coming with them. "They threw her into the coffee!" said a voice in Bunny's ear. "Jesus Christ, they threw the kids into the boiling coffee!"

Everywhere confusion, women in hysterics, or sunk upon the floor sobbing. There was not a stick of furniture in the place that had not been wrecked; the chairs had been split with hatchets; the piano had been gutted, its entrails lay tangled on the floor. Tables were overset, and dishes and crockery trampled, and the metal urn or containeb in which the coffee had been boiling had been overset, and its steaming contents running here and there. But first they had hurled three children into it, one after another, as their frantic parents dragged them out. The flesh had been cooked off their legs, and they would be crippled for life; one was a ten year old girl known as "the wobbly song-bird," she had a sweet treble, and sang sentimental ballads and rebel songs, and the mob leader had jerked her from the platform, saying, "We'll shut your damned mouth!" LEADERSHIP IN THE GENERAL STRIKE.

"THE GENERAL STRIKE," by R. Page Arnot, 2s. "TRADES COUNCILS IN ACTION," by M. L. Burns, 2s. Labour Research Department, London.

Ramsay Mac Donald, J. H. Thomas, Arthur Pugh, Ernest Bevan, and the other responsible leaders of the British General Strike have on the one hand the "explanations." Their report was presented to a conference of Trade Union Executives, held January 20, 1927—more than eight months after the termination of the strike.

"The miners were to blame." This, in effect, is the conclusion reached by the spokesmen for the General Council.

The argument runs as follows: "There was to be a wage reduction anyway. As John Bromley said, the railwaymen have taken their reduction; why should not the miners take theirs? Since a reduction was inevitable the miners were in error in raising the slogan of 'Not a penny off the pay.' Representatives of the General Council on the eve of the strike had already secured an agreement involving wage reductions in all probability to which the members of the Cabinet would have agreed. Ten days later the General Council signed and accepted the Samuel Memorandum. On this issue they broke with the miners after the leaders refused to accept the Samuel Memorandum as authentic. The acceptance of the Samuel Memorandum, even if it had involved a reduction in wages, would have prevented the long and bitter struggle in which the miners waged from May to November, and as a result of which they were compelled to accept a wage reduction."

This argument is obviously far from the statement of trade-union policy made by A. B. Swales, president of the Scarboro Conference in 1925. It is not even a defense of existing standards. It is merely an excuse for accepting a reduction in wages without making a fight.

British Labor leadership has reached just this stage as a result of the sharp class conflict of the post-war years. Ernest Bevin, who was the fighting leader of the Lefts a dozen years ago has become the Samuel Gompers of the British Trade Union Congress. Bob Williams, immediately after the Russian Revolution, was urging British workers to unfurl the red flag over Buckingham Palace. At Margate, on October 11, 1926, he urged British workers to take it easy, elect some more labor representatives, and then wait and see.

The British General Strike did at least this touch for British labor leaders: it showed this rank and file that such men as MacDonald and Thomas were no longer willing to make a fight even against wage reductions. In their prime they struggled for better standards of living. During the war they gained many concessions for the workers. Through the post-war reaction, however, they have become defenders of a decadent economic system which forces the workers to carry the chief burden of disintegration.

The Strike did more than this, however. It gave the Minority Movement functioning in various localities a chance to test out the ability of younger men and women who, up to that time, had never been called upon to assume large leadership responsibilities. It developed the members of the Communist Party and enabled that organization to intensify its work particularly in the mining fields, and to spread a clear-cut class struggle concept of the General Strike. The Labour Monthly for January carried a long article describing the work of the Communist Party during the General Strike.

In both "The General Strike" and "Trades Councils in Action" are found descriptions in considerable detail of the splendid efforts of local leaders to offset the failure of the Central Trade Union Congress and Labour Party leadership to direct the General Strike.

The MacDonald-Thomas leadership grew up in an era of world peace and imperial plunder,—when standards of living were still high; when the trade unions were still satisfied to make immediate wage demands and when the outlook for "prosperity and progress" was still bright. Those days are past in Britain. Post-war developments have intensified the class struggle and thrown upon the labor leaders an immense responsibility for formulating the tactics necessary in the reconstruction of society. Britain is in the throes of a revolution. The labor leadership which was competent to handle problems of wages and hours can not meet the situation. Failure of defense in General Strikes, the Trade Union Congress report on the General Strike indicates this very greatly. The task of providing the new leadership rests with the minority movement and the Communist Party. —Scott Nearing.

COMMENTS.

The followers of Harry Waton have deviated from their fierce monotheism. They have discovered a new God—Oswald Spengler.

How they manage to square Marxism (no matter how cockeyed their interpretation of it is) with Spengler, who expresses the mysticism and pessimism of a dying class, we do not know.

"The Decline of the West" is an attack on the scientific method of tackling history, in the first place. You cannot understand history, says Spengler, in terms of cause and effect; you can only grasp its rhythm and its significance intuitively. This is semi-mystical hooey carried over from Bergyson.

In the second place, "The Decline of the West" is an attack on the Marxian notion of the dialectic. Civilizations rise and perish, according to Spengler, much according to the life cycle of the mushroom, according to Spengler. They are organic entities and have no connection with one another.

Spengler's book is one of the most comprahensive ideological attacks on Marxism. How many so-called Marxists and neo-Marxists fall for it is beyond us. —S. F.

"Intellectual Vagabondage," by Floyd Dell, contains one of the few attempts at a social interpretation of literature that has been made in this country. "Mammonart," by Upton Sinclair, and one or two books by V. F. Calverton are the only other books published in the United States which attempt to tie up literary with social movements. —H. F.

For those who want to get the full tragedy of the recent Convention of the United Mine Workers, I suggest that they acquire a copy of the "Autobiography of Mother Jones," (Chas. Kerr & Co.). This mighty woman, who has spent a precarious life in the movement to organize the workers in the coal mines of America, tells some of the vivid episodes. The book is written simply, directly, and vigorously, as befits a person who can hurl profanity in such fresh and dynamic combinations.

Clarence Darrow contributes one of his characteristic drawling, "Awshucks-what's-the-use" essays in the form of an introduction to the book. —S. G.

"The American Labor Year Book, 1927" ($1.65) contains much valuable material for those who deal in social facts. It is prepared in a skillful manner and offers an excellent source-book for active workers in the revolutionary movement in this country. Some of the subjects handled include Trade Union Organizations, Strikes and Lockouts, Labor Legislation, and Legal Decisions. —S. G.

Demand A. F. of L. State Stand on Imperialism

Open Letter From Workers Party Reminds Executive Council of China, Nicaragua

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Over the signature of C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary, the Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of America has issued an open letter to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, demanding that it take a stand for or against the Wall Street imperialist invasions of Nicaragua and of China, and to state also whether the Executive Council is for or against the American workers and farmers in their struggle against American imperialism and the threat of a new imperialist war.

The Executive Council of the A. F. of L. is reminded in the letter that it has up until now not made any such public decision. The letter of the Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party follows, in full:

* * * * *

Where Does the A. F. of L. Stand on Intervention In Nicaragua and China?

An Open Letter to the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. From the Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party.

To the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C.

You have thus far made no public statement in regard to the policy of imperialist intervention in support of the investments and profits of the great international banking houses of Wall Street, which the American government is pursuing in its intervention in Nicaragua, its threats against Mexico, and its massing of naval forces in Chinese waters.

Wall Street Game.

It was clear from the beginning of the intervention in Nicaragua that Coolidge and Kellogg were playing the game of the Wall Street exploiters in that country, who desire to set up a puppet government which will be subservient to their wishes and aid them in the exploitation of the people of Nicaragua. This has become even more plain since the victories of the liberal forces representing the people of Nicaragua has been answered by sending of new forces of American marines and the virtual taking over the country by the naval forces of the American government. Do you believe that because the American government has recognized the Diaz government it has the right to force this government upon the Nicaraguan people with American bayo-

CURRENT EVENTS

By J. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE British note to the government of the Soviet Union is a masterpiece of hypocrisy. Chamberlain charges the officials of the Soviet government with conducting hostile propaganda against the empire. Now, it is a well known fact that all capitalist governments are always at war with each other, using whatever means the times warrant. Only recently, the French government arrested, indicted and convicted English subjects engaged in espionage work in France. The bankers of one country make occasional attacks on the currency of another country. They are continually plundering each other's markets and inciting one country against the other.

Yet no sharp notes are dispatched because of such conduct. This kind of thing is quite proper. It is the way imperialist powers play the game. Why did the British send the provocative note? Simply because the victims of British oppression in the Orient regard the Soviet Union as their only friend in the world, because the workers' republic is a haven for the hunted victims of imperialism and because the headquarters of the Communist International is in the Soviet Union as the nucleus of the World Republic of Labor and also recognizes that between this stronghold of the world labor government of the future and imperialism there is a fundamental conflict.

Soviet Union has undoubtedly been giving moral support to the Chinese revolution. Any Russian workers or peasants who desire to risk their life in behalf of the nationalist revolution has the permission of the Soviet government. On the other hand, Britain and the imperialist powers have been supporting the militarists secretly and openly, with arms, men,

ALIEN REGISTRY BILL INTRODUCED INTO CONGRESS

Brand Proposes System Of Espionage

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. — Very quietly, almost without notice by the newspapers, the Brand bill for compulsory registration of aliens was introduced into the house of representatives, and ordered printed. It will come up for debate at the next session of congress. It will have the support of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, whose "voluntary" fingerprinting bills, and readiness to argue for other spy systems to control the lives of foreign born workers have made him notorious.

Costly To Workers.

The Brand bill embodies most of the vicious elements of its predecessors. It requires that after a date set by presidential proclamation, every alien entering the United States shall pay ten dollars to be registered, and five dollars a year after that to be registered again. If he is between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one he pays only three dollars, if younger than sixteen he is registered for nothing.

Residence Requirements.

The country is divided into districts, the center of each district to be a postoffice.

Whenever any alien permanently removes from the district in which he is registered, Section 6 of the Brand bill requires that he report to the post office of such district and give such information in regard to his movements as may be required in regulation. He shall, moreover, within two days after his arrival in

INDUSTRIAL DEPRESSION SETTLES DOWN IN FRANCE—UNEMPLOYMENT

PARIS (FP).—Closing of important factories, reduction of forces in all productive industries, and placing of workers on part-time schedules, are suffering most from the government's deflation maneuvers are those in the metal, leather, wood, clothing, transport, building and food trades.

The General Federation of Labor has demanded of the government that immigration be stopped, unemployment relief increased, relief works established on a large scale, and that the eight-hour day be strictly observed. Unemployment relief, only one-third of which is paid by the government, is limited to 48 cents per day regardless of the size of the family, and is graded down to 18 cents.

Marines Neutralize All Big Nicaraguan Cities "And Others," For Diaz

BLUEFIELDS, Nicaragua, Feb. 24.—Captain Woodward, chief of the American naval forces in the Pacific notified the Sacasa government today that no fighting would be permitted within a radius of 1,000 yards from Chinandega, Leon, Managua, Granada, Pasco Caballo, Coomapa, Quezalguagua, Chichigalpa, Posoltega and other points where marines are stationed.

Two thousand marines are expected to arrive here today. Most of them, it is said, will replace sailors, who are now ashore.

British Note On Nicaragua Prearranged

May Help Coolidge in Fight With Opponents

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 24.—The British note dispatched to Washington relative to the alleged need for protection of British nationals in Nicaragua was the result of a prearranged plan between the British foreign office and the state department, it was unofficially reported here today.

It is said to be a part of the arrangement between the two governments thru which the United States agreed to look benevolently on the British action in China while Britain would aid the state department in its policy in Central America in whatever way it could.

Coolidge and Kellogg can now go to congress with the British note and declare that its policy of landing an army of marines in the little country is proven justified.

The United States demanded that Britain would not land any troops and Great Britain is prepared to respect it, according to information here.

Relieved State Department.

Instead of viewing the presence of the British warship in Nicaraguan waters with alarm, state department officials apparently welcomed it today. It relieves this government of the necessity of providing a "place of safety" for British subjects, should conditions become serious, and at the same time it strengthens the state department's contention that the Nicaraguan situation is serious.

Secretary of State Kellogg has had a difficult task in convincing a considerable part of the senate that conditions in Nicaragua have justified the dispatch of nearly 5,000 marines and blue-jackets to the Central American trouble zone, consequently, the British action was regarded by state department officials as furnishing additional support for Kellogg's policy.

Despite the British action, there was today, however, no apparent diminution of senatorial opposition to the whole Nicaraguan policy of the administration.

Borah Was Ironic.

Senator Borah (R.) of Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, was inclined to be ironic.

"Little Nicaragua, with 600,000 people, is already surrounded by an American naval force sufficient to crush it overnight", he said. "Now the British navy moves into action. There are also a few Italians in Nicaraguo. I suppose the Italian navy will cruise patrolling the Mediterranean now and move to Caribbean waters.

"Meantime, no foreign lives have been lost, nor foreign property destroyed."

Borah quoted a letter he said he has just received from an American business man in Nicaragua saying "No Americans in Nicaragua have any just cause for complaint."

Unemployment Rife in San Francisco Region; Discharge Women First

San Francisco—(FP)—Over 12,000 men and women are out of work in the San Francisco Bay region according to the U. S. department of labor. Women are the chief sufferers, both in factories and offices. Many railroad men are being quietly dropped.

Indian Troops Dislike China Service

British Try to Play Up Religious Prejudice

(Special to The Daily Worker).

HANGKOW, Feb. 24.—Among the Indian troops landed in Shanghai by England, great dissatisfaction is spreading because of the unwillingness of the Indians to be used against a national revolutionary movement. The troops are particularly indignant about the propaganda of the British officers who attempt to incite the Indian soldiers by making them believe that the Chinese destroyed the Indian sanctuaries in Shanghai. After the soldiers convinced themselves on the spot that all this propaganda was made up of lies their mood was radically changed.

MOSCOW, Feb. 24.—The Executive Bureau of the Profintern sent a cable to the Trade Union Coonell of Shanghai greeting the heroic action of the Shanghai proletariat. Blames British Government.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The political bureau of the British Communist Party issued a manifesto declaring that the responsibility for the mass executions in Shanghai rest entirely with the British government. By dispatching British troops to Shanghai, Great Britain gave Sun Chuan Fang a chance to send his troops against the national army. Without British intervention, Sun Chuan Fang would have long been driven out of Shanghai.

CANTON, Feb. 24.—Several leaders in the international labor movement arrived here headed by Tom Mann who is speaking at a banquet given by Kwantung provincial government declared they came to study political conditions and situation of the labor unions and to get acquainted with the struggle in the unions for better conditions of the proletariat. They intend to visit other cities in China also.

SENATOR CALLS REED'S PROBE ONLY POLITICS

WASHINGTON Feb. 24. — In a dramatic and heated cross fire of charges and counter charges, Senator James A. Reed, chairman of the committee investigating graft in the elections last year, requested additional powers today. Specifically he wanted to open the ballot boxes of the Pennsylvania senatorial election in which there is evidence of corruption. The Reed committee has the boxes.

Enemies Attack.

Senator Arthur R. Robinson of Indiana, one of those a trifle implicated by the revelations of klan superpolitics in Indiana at about the time of the Reed investigation, took the occasion to charge Reed with hunting publicity.

"It is generally understood that the venerable, white haired senator from Missouri is a candidate for the democratic nomination for president. I do not impugn his motives but he could, if he wanted to, go down into North Carolina during the next year and investigate a senator there in order to get delegates to the democratic national convention. I don't say he would and I think he wouldn't, but he could.

Won't Call Him Marplot.

"I won't say as a former democratic president said, that he is a marplot, but I will say that this resolution is political, purely political. I recognize the publicity advantage that would come to the venerable senator from Missouri if he could ramble around the country between now and the presidential convention investigating elections.

"He would need no campaign fund. This would furnish him with plenty of publicity. But why should the United States be forced to pay the contribution necessary for the ad-

CANNES, France, Feb. 24.—Horace Dodge of Detroit was reported a heavy winner at the Cannes Casino today.

British Labor Protests Anti-Soviet Note

Britain Trying to Provoke a World Offensive

BULLETIN.

MOSCOW, Feb. 24.—The British note to the Soviet government is generally regarded here as a gesture to appease the die-hard elements in Britain who are pressing hard to break relations.

It is pointed out the note's weakness consists in its failure to specify instances of propaganda that violate the treaty.

Answering the charge that a prominent member of the political bureau had made speeches against the British, it is remarked that prominent members of the British conservative party have been equally outspoken against the Soviet Union.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—British labor is extremely indignant over the provocative note sent by Chamberlain to the government of the Soviet Union. Left wing labor leaders fear that the foreign office has had assurances from other imperialist powers that the time was ripe to risk a rupture of relations with Moscow.

If the British imperialists declare war on the Soviet Union, the progressive element of the "Hands Off China" committees that are now organized will be asked to add to their task the prevention of hostile action against Russia.

While the public in general is somewhat cold to the note as a result of the numerous "red scares" fed to them in recent years, there is real danger that the extremists in the cabinet will force the government to follow up the note with more drastic measures, hoping to provoke a world war against the Workers' Republic.

Circulating False Reports.

Foreign office agencies are circulating reports of heavy massing of Soviet troops on the Manchurian border with a view to aiding a revolt against Chang Tso-Lin, which is said to be brewing. Chang's police are reported to be raiding Communist residences and seizing revolutionary literature.

The Morning Post, die-hard organ expressed the opinion that the Soviet Union would not cease to promote the interests of the Communist movement regardless of notes.

The Daily Mail, tory organ berated the government for not using more insulting language.

The Daily Herald, labor organ mildly criticized the government, stating that the words of politicians and journalists, referring to Bukharin and others, should not be taken too seriously.

Flaming River Sets Barge Afire; Seamen Plunge Under Waves

CAMDEN, N. J., Feb. 24.—The oil-coated surface of the Cooper River was set afire, a barge loaded with lumber was destroyed, a wharf was burned, and the captain and mate of the Standard Oil Company's tanker Socony dived into the burning river and swam under the surface fifteen feet to shore today.

The Cooper River is 100 feet wide and a tributary of the Delaware River. It was believed that live coals thrown into the river from one of a number of barges moored in the river had set fire to the oil on the surface.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—President Coolidge today signed a bill, making immediately available $16,000,000 to eradicate the European corn borer, which has raised havoc in the corn belt.

Crucial Battle Near in Fight for Shanghai

Revolutionary Armies Capture City Within Forty Miles of Prize Orient Metropolis

SHANGHAI, Feb. 24.—The most important battle in the history of the Chinese Republic seemed impending today as both the Nationalist troops under General Chiang Kai-Sheik, from the south, and the Fengtien troops of Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, Manchurian war lord from the north, speeded up their race for military control of Shanghai, China's chief seaport.

The vanguard of the northern horde today had reached Wusih, 80 miles from Shanghai, while the Nationalist Cantonese occupied Kashing, 60 miles to the south-west.

Suhkiang appeared to be the probable scene of the impending battle, as the converging lines will meet there.

Agitation Increases.

The labor unions at 1 o'clock this afternoon called off the strike which has partially paralyzed Shanghai since last Saturday. The cotton mills and other factories immediately resumed full operation, and at the post office partial resumption was effected.

The agitation in Shanghai native city was more rife today because of the wholesale arrests by the military authorities. Approximately 200 persons, including 21 labor leaders, have been imprisoned. The labor leaders were abducted from the French concession where they had taken refuge.

General Strike Called.

The labor unions have announced that a general strike of one hour's duration, called for Monday from 10 to 11 o'clock throughout China, will be observed in Shanghai.

The Shanghai Times, an English-language daily, today reported the arrest, trial and execution of a strike picket at Chapei.

The United States transport Chaumont arrived today, bringing 1500 marines for China duty.

Cantonese Seize City.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The Cantonese forces captured Fengchun, 40 miles from Shanghai today, according to a Central News Dispatch from Shanghai. The loss of this town is considered as an almost irreparable blow to the left flank of General Sun Chuan-Fang's army.

An Evening News dispatch from Hankow said that labor leaders have called a general strike of one day for today as a protest against the Shanghai executions by General Sun's agents, and against the landing of British troops at Shanghai.

MUSSOLINI AND FRANCE COMPETE IN NAVAL POWER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Italy's real reason for rejecting President Coolidge's disarmament conference proposal was due to the Italian government's unwillingness to engage in any conference without assurance that she would be accorded naval equality with France, it developed here today.

Reports that the Italian government has made this plain in a "secret note" which accompanied the formal published communication were denied at the state department today. The department admitted, however, that the Italian ambassador in presenting his government's reply, made certain verbal explanations."

Diplomatic Move.

The state department said nothing about the reports, also current, that it knew all about the conflict between Italy and France, and the hesitancy

FURRIERS HOLD GREAT RALLY TO AID JOINT BOARD

Cheer for Kessler Who Defied Right Wing

With every seat in Cooper Union taken and hundreds of furriers standing in aisles and on the platform, New York's furriers yesterday evening pledged their unstainted support to their Joint Board and voted unanimously to carry on the fight against union disruption.

Hundreds crowded about the entrances to Cooper Union clamoring for admission while at least 2,500 furriers inside joined in a delirious demonstration of solidarity against right wing efforts to railroad militants to jail and break up the union.

A squad of 35 police, half of whom were members of the industrial squad in plain clothes, were stationed throughout the hall and at the entrances. They did not attempt however to exclude furriers.

Greeting for Kessler.

The first big demonstration of the meeting occurred when Morris Kessler, the 75-year old fur worker who challenged the right wingers at the International's meeting Wednesday evening to explain their tactics in trying to destroy the New York union, entered the hall.

"To the platform, to the platform", shouted hundreds of young furriers as Kessler was escorted to the speaker's platform to sit beside the officials of the Joint Board.

Climbing up to the platform, Kessler was greeted by the stormiest demonstration in his long life with all the workers standing.

"Hurrah for Kessler", "You told'em Kessler" and other cries resounded through stand old Cooper Union as the old man took his place.

In the midst of the opening speech of Chairman Isidore Shapiro, wild enthusiasm for Kessler broke out again and nothing less than the old veteran's rising to his feet and acknowledging the applause would satisfy the crowd.

Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board, Lieblowitz, Warshawsky, Hyman and other addressed the meeting.

AMSTERDAM FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS MUST MAKE REPLY ON CONFERENCE MOTION

AMSTERDAM (FP).—Action on the persistent British demand for an unconditional conference with the All-Russian Trade Union Council will be taken by the executive committee of the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions, in session in Amsterdam Feb. 24-25.

At its last meeting the general council of the British Trade Union Congress formally expressed its "regret" that the Amsterdam International's reference be held for the purpose of forming one labor international in place of the existing rivals—the socialist at Amsterdam and the Communist at Moscow.

The British general council inquired of Amsterdam whether it were ready in assuming that, if they were to convene such a conference with the Russians, the Amsterdam executive would refuse to participate; and if they would so refuse, what would be their reasons?

FILIBUSTER AND GAG LAW DECIDE ON BOULDER DAM

No More Deliberation In U. S. Senate

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. — The fate of the Johnson-Swing bill for the Boulder Dam rests for the moment on the ability of its opponents to filibuster until the end of this congress. All the fiction that the senate is a body of intellectual personages, chosen by the people of the United States because of their wealth of statesmanship and profound wisdom, has been laid aside. Sheer endurance of lung and larynx is deciding legislation.

To Vote On Gag.

A "gag vote" or cloture, stopping debate altogether on the Boulder Dam bill, will be voted on tomorrow.

Selfish interests back of each group lead fury to the argument over Boulder Dam. The real estate men of California have speculated widely in the lands that irrigation would turn from desert to gardens, and the power companies of Utah and Arizona are frantic at the prospect of losing the rich sources of electric power involved in the project. It is said that over a million horsepower can be generated, to cut the rates of the existing power trust.

Jamming Up Machinery.

Perched atop a legislative jam and opposed in the senate by one of the best-organized filibusters on record, the Boulder Dam bill faces great obstacles to enactment.

The senators from Arizona, Utah and Colorado, who fought the bill for five days and who drove their filibuster successfully through a torturous thirty-hour, all-night session from Tuesday morning until Wednesday evening, were prepared to resume the battle today. Administration leaders, meanwhile, talked of throwing their support to some other bill, fearful that the Boulder Dam filibuster might destroy all other legislation now pending.

Reclamation Project.

Sponsors of the Johnson-Swing bill, which would build a dam in the Colorado River to control floods, irrigate arid lands and supply cheap electric power, declared they would "go down to defeat, rather than surrender."

The bill held brighter prospects of enactment in the house, under a special rule, but even then, its foes could defeat it in the senate next week.

Many Laws To Die.

A crowded legislative calendar confronted the senate with scores upon scores of bills and resolutions facing certain death in the few remaining days before adjournment. Among the major measures, which administration leaders hope to enact, were the new public buildings bill, the alien property bill and the Andrews prohibition reorganization measure.

The senate agreed to consider the Tyson emergency officers' retirement bill at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Seven Steering Committee.

The republican "order of business" those measures given special preference by the republican steering committee—meanwhile passed almost unnoticed. The Boulder Dam and Andrews bills were named in the group while other measures, such as the railroad refunding act, the Capper "Truth in fabric" the French spoliations, the Copeland coal control, the new commerce bureau and the prohibition civil service bills. The Andrews measure alone has a chance of enactment if Boulder Dam falls.

N. J. PROSECUTOR GETS COLD FEET ON NEW MASSES

Fails to Arrest Ruth Stout as Planned

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 24.—A squad of cops, a battery of cameramen and a regiment of reporters and 800 workers attended the Scott Nearing lecture at the Labor Lyceum, 14th St. and Springfield Ave., last night to witness or participate in the arrest of Ruth Stout, business manager of the New Masses.

But the arrest didn't come off. District Attorney Smith, who had barred the magazine from New Jersey on the ground that it was lewd, lecherous and lascivious, got cold feet at the last moment and permitted Ruth Stout to sell the magazine in the hall.

What the New Masses lost in the way of publicity, the cops and newspapermen gained in the way of education. Scott Nearing outlined the propaganda methods of corporate newspapers and showed how the concepts of "law and order," inculcated in the minds of children, helped keep the working class docile.

American imperialist technique in Nicaragua was also described by Nearing.

his new district report to the post office there and give such information as may be required. Therefter the district to which he has removed shall be deemed the district in which he is registered, and the original record of his registration shall be accordingly transferred.

Each alien registering, over the age of sixteen, shall be given a certificate of identification, which he must produce when required by any agent of the department of labor, or any local, state or national peace officer.

Thus combination of passport and residence regulations is an efficient spy system, useful in terrorizing foreign born workers who wish to join unions, of assistance to police officers who plan to frame them up for crimes they did not commit, and providing the possibilities for enormous amounts of profits graft.

KELLOGG TRIES TO STOP PROBE INTO NICARAGUA

Senators to Go Anyway Officially or Not

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The department of state and the administration group in the senate are making heroic efforts to prevent the senate from sending any investigating committee to look into Latin-American affairs.

A first hand investigation of Latin-American affairs during the congressional recess by a committee of senators appears certain however, irrespective of whether the investigation is authorized by the senate.

Kellogg Protests.

When the foreign relations committee met today to again consider the Borah resolution, proposing such an investigation, it became known that Secretary Kellogg had registered strong opposition to it. This was enough to stiffen the regular administration senators against it.

Borah and several other members of the committee, however, plan to go "on their own" if the investigation is defeated by a threatened "regular" filibuster against it.

Kellogg's note to Senator Holmes was curt and insulting in tone, involving that the senate should keep its fingers out of affairs that Kellogg wishes to handle.

Makes Kellogg Sick.

"I suggest," wrote Kellogg, "that before acting upon this resolution the committee may with advantage avail itself of the information which the department of state will be glad to supply. I, myself, am at the moment confined to my house by the doctors orders.

"When the committee has thus exhausted the informational resources of the department, it will, I am sure, be in a better position to decide whether it is proper for the senate to send an independent committee of investigations into foreign countries with which the executive is conducting difficult and delicate negotiations."

Before a sub-committee of the senate foreign relations committee a couple of days ago, evidence was submitted which indicated Kellogg had lied to the committee on the important matter of the number of American oil companies obeying the land law in Mexico.

The senate today called upon Secretary of State Kellogg to supply information as to whether the oil interests of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Harry F. Sinclair and Edward L. Doheny are among the American companies which have refused to obey the land laws in Mexico.

In adopting the Norris resolution, the senate asked that Kellogg submit a list of any of the disobedient companies in which these three are shown to be interested.

of England to go farther towards peace than her neighbors, and desired a rejection of the "disarmament plea," in order to prepare the way for a larger American navy.

The rejection has certainly strengthened the naval program advocates in the house.

With resentment answering congress over refusal of France and Italy to accept President Coolidge's bid to a naval limitation conference, the house today prepared for a show-down upon the proposal to begin construction of three new $16,000,000 cruisers. The senate already has passed the bill.

"Big navy" advocates were hopeful that the international situation would turn the tide in their favor.

The reopening of the fight found an old alignment in the house with party lines knocked awry and the president's titular spokesmen opposing him. Speaker Longworth and Rep. Tilson of Connecticut, republican floor leader, were again ranged on the side of the "big navy" forces. In a previous fight, the cruiser proposal was lost in the house upon two votes, 177 to 175 and 183 to 161.

Letters From Our Readers

Editor, The DAILY WORKER: I overheard the postmaster you wrote about on February 11, on page 4,—about the Brown-Muselin case at Aliquippa, Pa.,—state that he had no apology to make to any one regarding his attitude in this case and he had no use for Communists or the Soviet Republic and he would not change his tactics. He also said that he would not keep out of any other case against Workers Party men if he could help it and he was proud to be a member of the American Legion. I wonder what he thinks us working men pay him for—to stool-pigeon for a blue-sucker corporation?—S. R., Woodlawn, Pa.

Congress Does Not Hear Demand for the Release of Sacco and Vanzetti

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE short session of congress rushes toward a close. In another week it will be history and among the matters that will be pigeon-holed, if labor does not rouse itself, will be the investigation demanded of the sinister activities of the department of justice agents in the frame-up of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. Days are spent in arguing the merits of the Boulder Dam project in the far west, that will enrich the real estate and oil millionaires of California, but not one minute is being given to the attack on the working class in New England, that has kept Sacco men close to death for nearly six years, and even now prepares to strap them in the electric chair.

The Detroit convention of the American Federation of Labor adopted a resolution demanding that the frame-up activities of the government's "D. of J." agents be thorely probed. It had been shown that agents had admitted they were definitely instructed to aid in the frame-up of the two workers. Charges had been made in open court that even now the department of justice, headed by Coolidge's friend, Attorney-General John Garibaldi Sargent, was concealing information that would result in the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

In the face of this showing the A. F. of L. sought only a congressional investigation. It did not demand a new trial.

The resolution demanding the investigation has been duly introduced in congress. But that is all. The resolution slumbers in the archives of congress, like thousands of other "scraps of paper."

The well-paid legislative agents of the A. F. of L. so far as is known, have made no effort to secure action on this resolution. They have been too busy, no doubt, lobbying for the Pepper-McFadden Banking Bill, legislation urged by the big bankers and log-rolled to victory with the aid of the reactionary elements supporting the McNary-Haugen Farm Relief Bill.

It is certain that no effort has been made by the A. F. of L. officialdom to arouse the workers of the nation in support of the demand for a congressional investigation of the Sacco-Vanzetti frame-up.

The official bulletin of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee of Boston, Mass., announces that this historic case has apparently reached its last chance in the courts of Massachusetts. These two men were convicted in 1921 of the murder of Frederic Parmenter and Alessandro Berardelli at South Braintree, Mass., in 1920, and the stealing of the Slater & Morrill Shoe Company payroll of more than $15,000.

On an appeal the state supreme court denied the motion for a new trial. Then Celestino Madeiros, also convicted of murder, confessed in Dedham Jail that he was at South Braintree on the day of the hold-up there, one of the active participants, and that Sacco and Vanzetti were not there.

On the affidavit of Madeiros, supported by others, the attorneys on behalf of the two workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, presented another motion for a new trial, this time on the ground of newly discovered evidence. The servile lackey of the shoe and textile interests of New England, Judge Thayer, denied that motion and the case again went to the state supreme court. Another hearing has been held. The whole revealing story of the efforts exerted by the United States government to take the lives of these two Italian workers was again told, with the additional facts that had come to light. The decision of the state supreme court has not yet been rendered. The pressing of the demand for the congressional investigation, if supported by sufficient numbers of workers, will have a definite and favorable effect on the decisive court at Boston. It has been said that "the supreme court watches the election returns". The Massachusetts supreme court, in common with the capitalists of New England and the nation, watch the workers to see just how easy it will be to inflict this crime upon them.

Labor must show its teeth. During the few days that remain the voice of the workers must be heard in congress. It would be an achievement if the whole working class could filibuster as efficiently, thru pressing the demand for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti upon congress to such an extent, that it would be impossible for this parliament of the oppressors to transact any other business. Lift your voice for Sacco and Vanzetti.

DAILY WORKER DRIVE PROCEEDS

The North Flings Down the Gauntlet

(By Worker Correspondent.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—Recently Paul Reisa, DAILY WORKER Agent of Los Angeles, addressed the Builders' Club of San Francisco in the interests of the Lenin Drive for 25,000 subs.

The quota of District 13, is 200 annual subscriptions. Comrade Reisa drew on his experience of last year's drive in which he piled up more points than any other sub getter in the country. He stressed the matter of a well selected list of prospects which should be sent in to The DAILY WORKER to receive a limited number of sample copies, these persons then to be followed up with personal solicitation. In the event that the prospect did not subscribe for the Daily he should be urged to subscribe for another of the party press.

Ten names were selected to be challenged through the columns of the Daily. These members of the Builders' Club were secured and plans were laid for the organization of a Workers' Correspondent Club.

Boasts Of Los Angeles.

Comrade Reisa waxed eloquent in his boasts of what the southern part of the state was going to do in this present drive. He allowed a belittling note aimed at the north to creep into his remarks. He sent a subtle shaft of ridicule into the ranks of the assembled builders and was properly interrupted by a comrade who then and there challenged Reisa and the south to put their damndest and the north would go them one better. Not only would the north make its share of California's quota, but would beat the south to it.

Feud Finds New Vent.

For many years there has been a sectional antagonism between the north and south of California. The fact that it has finally infected the party with its virus is duc entirely to the provocative manner in which Reisa boasted of the achievements of the home town of Aimee MacPherson.

We northerners are not easily provoked. We are to none in our admiration of what Reisa has accomplished in the past. But we say no comrade can rest on past glory. We do not care that Reisa was authorized to speak in the name of the South. But he belittled us. We are determined that Southern arrogance shall be met with the treatment it deserves. Our challenge to the South is that we will make our share of District Thirteen's quota and that we will beat the South to it. And we dare Reisa and the South to accept our challenge.

Furriers of Newark, N. J., Meeting Raise Sustaining Fund

NEWARK, N. J.—Despite a continuous downpour of rain, snow and sleet, over 300 workers turned out here to listen to the truth of the happening in the unions of the needle trades in New York City. There was no interference by the police or any attempts to close the hall. This caused the progressive workers of Newark to believe that the Workmens' Circle Hall was closed thru the request of the right wingers who are in control of the Workmens' Circle Hall.

The meeting was called under the auspices of the Jewish Workers' Progressive Club of Newark. The chairman outlined the purpose of the club which is to educate its membership and the workers in general to a clear understanding of their problems in the trade union movement and to give expression to needs of the progressive workers of the city.

Brothers Cohn of the Joint Board of the furriers and Brother Langer then briefly outlined the struggle of the membership in Local 25 of the furriers in Newark and told of their struggle against the officers in the International. He informed the workers that all the forces of reaction were lined up against the left wing and the progressive forces in the unions.

Brother Hyman, chairman of the strike committee of the cloakmakers in New York City spoke next. He stated we are in the fight, and will continue to be so until there will be democracy and honesty in the unions. As a result of his appeal many hands were sold and a sum of money raised to carry on the fight. There were many workers present from the buildings trades and other unions in the city. They will, carry on the work within their unions to raise money for the cloakmakers.

MINERS' UNION COMMITTEE MEN HURRYING HOME

Lewis Orders to Make Separate Agreements

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 24.—Members of the negotiations committee of the United Mine Workers of America are hurrying home today, with orders from International President John L. Lewis to make separate agreements with coal mine owners wherever they can. They are all either district or International officials of the union.

Lewis and the miners' union administration have made no preparations for a strike in the event of the negotiations breaking down, though they were many times warned by the progressive members of the United Mine Workers that they should do so.

Progressives Prepare.

While the union officials engage in risky gambling with double-crossing company officials, progressives are understood to be rallying their forces and preparing to carry on an unofficial organization campaign among the non-union miners who produce over half the soft coal of the United States.

Unless these non-union men can be brought out, the strike is certain to be costly to the union.

Hope Lies In Far West.

Meanwhile the Lewis administration and the Lewis negotiations committee have declared no other hope than that they can sign up enough outlying coal companies to influence the next negotiations conference, which will be held in two or three weeks.

They say they expect to get agreements in Montana, Wyoming and Washington state, although the union in the latter state is largely smashed. Montana and Wyoming mines employ about 8,000 men.

They also hope for some split in the operators' ranks in Illinois, although the Peabody Coal Co., the largest producer there, will have the expert advice and inside information of Frank Farrington, until last year president of District 12 (Illinois) and now the company's employment manager.

Farrington, like Lewis, was a great assailant of progressives, and did his best to drive them out of the union.

Progressives are calling for an organization drive in the non-union fields.

When Aimee Was in Town

This is not a press notice. Of course you know that Aimee was in town. New biblical history is in the making, for the popular Bride of the Lamb has hit the front page with a flash,—her visit to Texas Guinan's and other flesh-pots of Broadway was arranged with a sense of showmanship that would do Tex Rickard credit.

New Radio Man.

Hark her herald angels sing! Hallelujah. She was here with a new radio operator, a new choir, a new costume, and the same old line that brings penitent sinners into the fold, and coin of this blighted realm into the coffers somewhat depleted by her recent run-in with the California courts.

In the language of the show business, she packed them in and put it over at her New York shrine, the Tabernacle of Good Tidings, on West 39th St., near the main stem whose hydra-headed devil the lady-minister is going to suppress. The threat-ens to return and do it all over again at Madison Square Garden.

With Sex Appeal.

She knocks sinners for a row of Gideon bibles at two bits a throw or what have you. Aimee can put across the Word as effectively as Belle Baker singing a baby boy song and as effectively as Al Jolson crooning a mammy refrain.

Religion with a punch. Religion with sex appeal. The religion of success—discovered by the Prophet of Profit, Bruce Barton, and heralded by the Bride of the Lamb. You won't see any other way-showers here, any weetky of mention. Guthrie and Straton and other headliners don't give the evangelistic circuits a tumble—professional pride and spiritual belly-ache—but you can bet your last soul that Aimee's racket makes other soul-savers look like pikers. Will it pay, will it pay, will it pay on the great judgment day? Then and now, brother, Hallelujah. Amen.

Mass production, even in soul-saving, has its noted exponents, but none are as wise in an intuitive rather than tutored way. Aimee may be illogical, ungrammatical and practically illiterate, but she knows her onions.

Those Carmine Lips.

Gaze upon her in an immaculate white robe, draped with a carelessly worn blue cape, holding the bible and a cluster of roses and lilies in hands gracefully poised in an appealingly spiritual gesture. Catch a flash of amber from her hair and eyes, amber set off by the carmine of her full red lips, a combination of seductive coloring as noteworthy as the aggressive character of her nose and chin. Worldly knowledge and success crown her marcelled and glistening head.

Gentlemen Prefer.

Can it be that you are immune to the siren songs and wiles of those whom gentlemen prefer? Can't religion with a dash of sex appeal get you? Aren't you waiting for her exclusive life story written for Saint Barnarr?

If you tire of the art displayed by the Graphic, if your jaded sensibilities crave rest from the obvious allurements of Broadway chorines, if you demand finessed sex appeal, drop in and pay your respects to Aimee.

FIVE BODIES OF TWO SAILORS IN TANKER'S HOLD

Two Others Missing in Burning Vessel

The charred bodies of two sailors were found yesterday aboard the British tanker Black Sea off Bayonne as rescuers fought to board the still smouldering vessel which blew up in the harbor Wednesday.

The two bodies were discovered amidships on the port side of the tanker. So terrific was the heat thrown off by the burning oil vessel, that the rescuers were unable to board her to make a thorough investigation of the extent of fatalities. The belief was expressed by rescuers that several others of the crew also may have lost their lives in the terrific blast and the fire which followed.

Police Crew Finds Bodies.

The bodies were found by the crew of the police launch Gypsy, which pushed to the smouldering tanker's side when the captain of the rescue ship Resolute wirelessed that "several bodies" had been seen aboard the gutted ship.

It was admitted at the offices of Simpson, Spence and Young, owners of the tanker Black Sea, that four members of the crew are missing.

Seek More Bodies.

The bodies of the two which have been recovered were taken to the Battery by New York harbor police. They were burned beyond recognition.

A hazardous fight was continued by rescuers to recover additional bodies for fear the ship would sink. Their efforts were almost fruitless because of the raging heat from the still burning ship.

The vessel which at last reports was lying off Sixty-ninth Street Bay Ridge, was leaking oil and still burning as police launches and other vessels stood by.

Anti - Labor President Of Cuba Can't Come to Dinner Coolidge Offers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. — The contemplated visit of the President Manchado of Cuba, for which elaborate plans had been made in Washington, has been "indefinitely postponed," it was announced by the Cuban ambassador today after a long distance telephone talk with the presidential palace in Havana.

The president, it has said, is suffering from a severe attack of grippe.

A White House dinner was to have been given President Machado, and he was to have been widely entertained in the capitol, after which he was to have made a tour of many states.

Machado is a member of a pro-American group in Cuba, and secured aid from the United States department of state in his efforts to break the general strike against sugar and railroad companies about a year ago. He instituted a reign of terror against labor organizations.

The state department issued a statement recently declaring that Nicaragua appealed to the United States for protection. Here is the artist's conception of the situation.

Bethlen As Premier Dictator of Hungary Going to "Canossa"

BUDAPEST, Feb. 24. — Count Bethlen, premier dictator of Hungary, is planning, for reasons best known to himself, to visit Mussolini at Rome. In view of the premiers aspiration to establish a Hungarian monarchy, much speculation is rampant as to whether Bethlen's trip is not made to assure the support of Mussolini for the establishment of the monarchial throne.

If he undertakes to perfect his plans to crown Archduke Albrecht as Hungarian king he would also need the sanction of the Vatican as both Bethlen and Albrecht are catholics.

It is also thought that Bethlen is engineering an Italian-Hungarian alliance to counteract the alleged move for a Pan-German union between Austria and Germany, which plan would, it is asserted, have the backing of the Soviet Union.

and money. The interests of over 400,000,000 Chinese against the interests of the militarist hangmen and their foreign backers! The Soviet Union takes the side of the oppressed millions. Britain takes the side of their executioners.

This is exactly what is behind the British note. The infiuence of the Soviet Union on the workers and subject peoples of imperialism is feared in no place more than in England. Over 300,000 Hindoos are watching the course of the battle in China. They see the Chinese, hitherto treated with contempt, now chasing the soldiers of imperialism all over the lot. They see them challenge the power of the mighty empire and they see Chinese revolutionary diplomats talk cold turkey to the cleverest Great Britain can pit against them. Subject peoples are beginning to understand that guns speak louder than words and the cleverest diplomat in he who can command the greatest number of lethal weapons, against an opponent or a combination of opponents, all other things being equal.

The assistance rendered to the British miners during their strike by the workers of the Soviet Union is an important factor in promoting the note. Over $5,000,000 from Russia, where a new society is being built in the midst of a hostile world. Only a paltry $50,000 from the conservative trade unionists of the United States, where the standard of living of labor is unquestionably the highest in the world, where unions have millions of dollars in banks, where because of those very reasons the revolutionary spirit is confined to a few.

The generosity of the Russian workers had a powerful effect on the British laboring class. While they were being jailed and clubbed by agents of their own government they knew that the Workers' Government of the Soviet Union was friendly and helpful to them within the limits imposed by diplomatic necessity. International solidarity took a great step forward. The right wing leaders of British labor were exposed in their true colors as enemies of the workers and as agents of the capitalists. The urge to struggle for emancipation from capitalism took on fresh vigor. In this dark night there which labor is groping the beams from the Communist International directs it on its way and British imperialism and for that matter world imperialism, does not draw any fine distinction between the Soviet Union and the social revolution. They are synonymous, for which we bless the stars.

ONE of the most drastic laws ever passed on the statute books of any state in the union is the Baumes Law passed by the New York assembly, which automatically imposes a life sentence in a penitentiary on any person previously convicted four times. Several judges have branded the law as savage and barbarous, but the Court of Appeals in a decision declared it constitutional. For the time being it will be used against poorlo convicted of burglary and other crimes against property. But the time will surely come when the capitalist government will take advantage of its provisions to incarcerate for life workers who are convicted in connection with strikes.

DEMAND A. F. OF L. STATE STAND ON THE QUESTION OF IMPERIALISM

nets? Or should the Nicaraguan people have the right to self-determination and a government which they approve?

Coolidge's Pretenses.

The hypocritical pretenses of President Coolidge in his message to congress are so clearly given the lie by the course of the American government in Nicaragua that every worker can see that what the American government is doing is setting up a dictatorship of the American government through its marines and by force suppressing the wishes of the people of Nicaragua. This American dictatorship in Nicaragua may be camouflaged by the servile Nicaraguan puppets of Wall Street, but the imperialist aggression of the American government in support of the exploitation of Nicaragua by the American banking houses is so clear that even the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor cannot help but acknowledge it. Nicaragua is to become another Haiti, ruled by the representatives of Wall Street backed by American bayonets and exploited by American finance capital.

Other Mobilization.

At the same time that this imperialist aggression goes on in Nicaragua the American government is mobilizing naval forces at Shanghai as a threat against the Chinese nationalist forces, which are wresting China from the clutches of the imperialist capitalist powers, which have looted that country during the last half century and subjected the inciginty of extra-territoriality and foreign tariff control upon its people. While the United States pretends to be in sympathy with the demands of the Chinese nationalists for the ending of the unequal treaties, it follows the lead of Great Britain in massing naval forces at Shanghai.

The object of sending these forces is the same as that which is pursued in Nicaragua—the use of force in support of Wall Street investments and exploitation of China and to keep China as a field of imperialist exploitation by the American capitalists.

No Message to Workers?

Have you no message to the American workers and farmers in regard to these events? Will you not raise your voice in protest against the wholesale beheading of the Chinese trade unionists of Shanghai by the Chinese warlords who support capitalist imperialism in China, because they called a strike to show their support of the Chinese nationalist cause?

The open imperialist policy which the govarnment at Washington is following in the intervention in Nicaragua and the sending of American forces to China, and which is also apparent in the threats against Mexico over the oil leases, carries with it the threats of involving this country in a new imperialist war. The workers and farmers of the United States will pay the cost of such a war, in the sacrifice of lives upon the battlefields and the sacrifice of wealth which they produce and a consequent lowering of their standard of life.

Workers Protest.

Hundreds of thousands of workers have already expressed their protest against these imperialist policies of the government. Notably the Farmer-Labor Conference of Minnesota, representing the view of the quarter million farmer-labor voters of that state, the Chicago Federation of Labor, and scores of local unions of the American Federation of Labor.

In spite of the seriousness of the situation which the imperialist policies of the government is creating and all it involves for the workers and farmers, in spite of the open, brutal use of the American forces to subdue the people of the countries which are fighting American imperialist exploitation, and in spite of the protest of the masses of American workers and farmers against these actions, the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor has remained silent.

Where Does Council Stand.

Does this mean that the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor has aligned itself with the Wall Street imperialists and their gobernment at Washington and against the workers and farmers who are fighting these policies of imperialist aggression?

The American workers and farmers want to know why the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor has taken no stand in regard to this situation. The following statement to the American labor movement, published in the "Chinese Guide in America" expresses the attitude of the Chinese people of this country, and at the same time of the workers and farmers who are in sympathy with the aspirations of the Chinese nationalists to free their country from the grip of the imperialists:

"Many readers and Chinese in America have expressed surprise that no official utterance on the present crisis in China has been made by the American labor movement, especially in view of the fact that the Nationalist movement in China is the only group that is building up the organized labor movement of that country. Has the organized labor movement of America no opinion on intervention and the use of American naval and military forces in China?"

The Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party joins in this demand that the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor declare its position — with the masses of workers and farmers in the fight against American imperialism, or with the Wall Street imperialist looters of other countries and their government?

The workers and farmers of this country who are opposed to the imperialist policies of the government do not want a mere declaration from the Executive Council. They want action on the part of the Executive Council to mobilize all the forces of the workers and farmers against the policies of the government, and thus to stop the drift towards a new imperialist war. They want the Executive Council to join in calling great conferences of all labor and farmer organizations to throw the pressure of the power of the workers and farmers against the imperialist policies of the government—to build a united front of all workers, farmers and liberal forces against American imperialism and to fight the development toward a new imperialist war.

For Wall Street or for Workers.

The Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has taken the initiative to mobilize the power of the workers and farmers against American imperialism. It has thrown all its strength into the struggle. It calls upon the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to declare its position in this struggle without further delay.

For the Wall Street imperialists and the government at Washington which is carrying out their policies in the war and exploitation of weaker countries, or

For the workers and farmers of the United States in the fight against American imperialism and the threat of a new imperialist war?

Where does the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor stand?

Central Committee,
Workers (Communist) Party.

Youngster Wins Dog Race.

QUEBEC, Feb. 24. — Youth triumphed over age today when Emile St. Goddard, 21, of La Pas, Manitoba, won the 120 mile three-day eastern international dogsled derby—in a total elapsed time of eleven hours 37 minutes 35 seconds. Leonhardt Seppala, 50-year-old veteran of the famous serum drive to Nome two winters ago, was second, twenty minutes and twenty seconds behind his youthful opponent. Goddard's victory marked his second winning of the Quebec classic.

WRITER SWEARS KELLOGG LYING ABOUT MEXICO

Doheny Hired Bandit to Steal Oil Land

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The lie direct was again given Secretary of State Kellogg when Walter N. Liggett, a writer who has been making a special study of Mexican-American relations, testified before a senatorial committee that Kellogg's latest statement as to the number of American oil companies refusing to accept the Mexican law was false; that in fact 127 out of 147 companies accepted the law, and that Andrew Mellon, Harry Sinclair and E. L. Doheny control 82% of the acreage of the 20 companies defying the Mexican government. He wound up by describing how Doheny got most of his oil lands through buying up properties that his paid bandit, Palaez, had promised to destroy, thereby forcing the owners to sell for almost nothing.

Will Doheny Confess?

Liggett dared Willis to bring Doheny to confess as to how he got his Mexican lands, and why Standard Oil of Indiana refuses to continue payments on its purchase of his claims.

Liggett started things going by saying Kellogg's statement that the Calles regime is on trial before the world was an insult to the sovereignty of the Mexican people. Willis interrupted him to say that Kellogg was not the issue in this hearing. Liggett retorted that Kellogg, by his hostile statements and his "gas attack" through his former law partner, Assistant Secretary Robert Olds, had made himself the issue. Liggett reminded Willis that the committee had not summoned newspaper men and Olds to testify on the "Bolshevist hegemony" propaganda incident, to "see who is lying."

Resolution Against Invasion.

The investigation was in the Willis-Shipstead sub-committee of the foreign relations committee of the senate. The debate turned on the Frazier resolution instructing President Coolidge not to make war on Mexico while congress was not in session.

Willis finally declared the resolution to be an "insult" to the president. Frazier, who was present, replied that he sought merely to protect the right of the American people to determine when they were to be put into war.

Crusading for Justice.

Rev. Hubert C. Herring, secretary of the world relations commission of the congregational churches in the United States, who recently led a good-will delegation of some 60 American clergy and church press representatives on a visit to Mexico City, declared the Mexican people are solving their own problems. He said the Kellogg policy of ill-will now "threatens the best administration Mexico has ever had—the administration of President Calles."

He testified that he found the Mexican people in the mood of a crusade for social justice, growing out of the injustices of 400 years of oppression, in his opinion the United States should meet this situation "with care and sympathy, since no peaceful relations can exist between our two peoples unless we meet the Mexicans halfway."

Mexicans Arming.

Miss Carnelia N. Woods, for the Society of Friends, who was a member of the church mission to Mexico, said the Mexican nation is alarmed and afraid of the United States because of the aggressive attitude of Kellogg. The peons of Mexico, she found, "are determined to assert their rights as human beings—to break through the upper crust of society which has held them down in servitude, and to work out their own salvation.

Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the People's Reconstruction League, which staged the hearing, warned the senators that the armed forces of the United States had already seized Nicaragua, and that the next step would be Mexico, which is a far richer prize.

Federal Judge Faces Impeachment Trial

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. — [illegible] charges may be filed against Federal Judge Frank Cooper of the New York district, it was announced by La Guardia (R) of New York, told the House Judiciary Committee, as the committee opened his impeachment hearing today.

The threat to enlarge the scope of the case beyond charges that Judge Cooper connived at "under-cover" operations by dry agents came when Representative Graham (R) of Pennsylvania, told La Guardia that the committee had decided to limit the case to matters contained in La Guardia's original charges.

"I assumed that the committee would follow the precedent in the English case and allow presentation of any evidence of misconduct," said La Guardia. "I am ready to go on the civil side of the court and show conduct unbecoming a judge and neglect of duty by filing supplemental charges."

LAWRENCE MAYOR AGITATING FOR CHILD SLAVERY

Admits to Daily Worker He Opposes Bill

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

LAWRENCE, Mass., Feb. 24.—It was reported in the local papers here last Friday that Mayor Rochefort would before a legislative committee hearing at the State House in Boston and opposed a bill sponsored by the A. F. of L. which would raise the age limit of children from 14 to 16 years before securing employment in the manufacturing industry. The mayor gave as his reasons that it would increase the financial burdens of the communities by causing the cities to have to build more school-houses.

On the strength of the above report your correspondent sought an interview with His Honor where, after a wait of one hour in the outer office, I was ushered in the inner sanctorum as the previous patient made his exit through another door, just like the workings of a one-way street.

Went "On His Own."

There being no need of personally introducing myself, I proceeded at once to inform him of my important mission, namely: that of interviewing him for The New York DAILY WORKER. The mayor readily admitted the truth of the above report, and when asked who authorized him to appear before the legislative committee, he replied that nobody authorized him, but he went because he was in charge of the finances of the city of Lawrence.

"Are you aware that the bill was sponsored by the American Federation of Labor and that you are opposing a labor measure?" he was asked. He replied that it was only the electricians in the A. F. of L. movement that wanted it and pushed it through the convention.

In answer to the next question, if he had any other reason for opposing the bill," he said, "Yes, there were many parents that he knew that it would work a hardship upon, as it would deprive them of their children's earning power for two more years."

"Then you are opposed to the further education of the children of America?" was the next question.

At this he started to put on his over-shoes, saying, "No, but I think a reasonable limit has been reached."

"Have you any intention of again becoming a candidate for mayor at the next election?" he returned, and he retorted that he didn't think it was a proper question to ask at this time; furthermore, he had not given the matter sufficient thought and could not say.

At this point the mayor seemed to have had enough and walked towards the door followed by your correspondent, thus ending the above related interview.

New Law Forbids Bail Bonds in Many Cases, Is Aroused

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 24.—The public defenders' bill, which would prohibit the admission of bail in certain cases, was introduced in the senate yesterday.

The bill was sent by special messenger to the house, where an effort will be made by supporters to have it passed at tonight's session. The bill was introduced yesterday.

Introduction of the bill followed the resignation of Judge Henry A. Grady, North Carolina grand dragon, as a result of a break with Imperial Wizard Hiram W. Evans.

Left Wing Member of "Devil's Angels" Wins Right to Be Communist

(Special to Daily Worker.)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24.—An attempt, apparently, to disrupt the flourishing atheists' organization here, "The Devil's Angels," failed when the angels met and dismissed charges against an active member, L. P. Rindal.

Wm. F. Walling, a Republican and ex-soldier, and Wm. George Henry, president of the local unit, formerly a member of the Christian Endeavor League, seem to have tried to start a crusade against radicals in the organization.

Right Wing Charges.

Various charges, of "being interested in other organizations than in the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism" (to which The Devil's Angels is affiliated) were made against Rindal. The real basis for the movement to expel him, was that he distributed copies of The DAILY WORKER which contained favorable mention of the Atheist organization.

Defends Position.

Rindal's defense was that he had a right to be a Communist if he wanted to.

Queen Silver, youthful publisher of a magazine devoted to the interests of the young, and secretary-treasurer of the organization, with Grace Verne Silver, chairman of the speaker's committee, resigned in protest against the persecution of Rindal, but were re-elected when Rindal was vindicated.

Continue Work.

The vote seems to indicate that "The Devil's Angels" will continue its work, without permitting interference with its members because of their individual political opinions.

An actively functioning local of the Junior Atheist League has been formed in Los Angeles, with a full list of officers. For the time being, meetings are regularly held at 10 A. M. at 1805 N. Grammercy Place.

Both organizations are holding public meetings and social affairs.

BEER MURDER WAS SPECIAL HATRED AGAINST CHICAGO

Attendant Reveals She Wanted Many Arrests

CHICAGO.—(FP)—Shouts of "Cotsonfasenstil" and banners bearing the dreaded name are still rankling in the memory of Queen Marie of Rumania after her circus tour of the United States. She is particularly angry with Chicago where the largest demonstrations against her unsavory record were organized and where the influential Chicago Federation of Labor soothingly denounced "bloody Marie" by resolution.

"Flock of Swine."

The World Wide News Service correspondent, an article by a lady attendant of the queen at Bucharest in which Maria is quoted as saying of Americans: "My son was right when he said they were a flock of swine." She found it horrible to hear shouts from the crowds asking, "Hay queen, how's the old man?" Ferdy, her husband, happened to be ill at the time.

"Her majesty bitterly complained," writes her attendant, "against the treatment afforded to her in Chicago. She was very angry at the police because they did not make any attempt to suppress hostile demonstrations against her."

"Cotzofanesti."

In fact, however, the police did arrest members of the International Labor Defense who held Cotzofanesti banners aloft when her auto proceeded to the city hall. One demonstrator was assaulted by the cops. Cotzofanesti is the name of a small Rumanian town where the queen and two of her daughters were caught in nightgown parties with army officers during the world war.

It has become a term synonymous with treason if uttered in Marie's kingdom. The exposé of the wartime royal orgy was made in Chicago by The DAILY WORKER, the Communist newspaper.

I. L. D. Reception.

"While in America who are regarded by Marie as a flock of swine were crawling before her and kissing her bloodstained hand,"—says the International Labor Defense, "our organization prepared concerted hostile demonstrations against her American tour.

"International Labor Defense demonstrators assailed her with placards when she landed in New York and at every influential town she stopped off to make it hot for her. She got the worst reception in Chicago and she entirely avoided Cleveland where we had warm plans for her entertainment."

Federation Assails Her.

The Chicago Federation of Labor resolution states in part: "Whereas Queen Marie of Rumania now visits our country to solicit help for a government that cruelly oppresses the workers, peasants and trade-unionists within its borders, destroys their legitimate trade unions and peasant organizations and denies them the right of free speech, free press and freedom of assemblage. Resolved, that the sympathy of our labor movement is with those who now suffer under the iron heel of Rumanian capitalism."

In the Minneapolis common council she had been denounced as an international gold-digger.

Hackensack Builders Fight Injunction in North Jersey Court

Whether or not open shop bosses will succeed in temporarily checking the move to organize the unorganized in Bergen county, New Jersey, just across the river from New York, will be determined this morning when the building trades and teamsters' unions will protest an injunction against them obtained by the bosses.

The restraining injunction prevents Hackensack unions from interfering "with the plaintiff's business" by boycotts, sympathetic strikes, "and the weaning away of customers." The building boom in northern New Jersey has led to the growth of many open shop building and trucking firms.

The labor forces which are restrained by the injunction and which will fight it before Vice Chancellor Church this morning are Locals 825, 925A and 560, Steam and Hoisting Engineers, Teamsters, the Hoisting and Portable Engineers' local of Northern New Jersey and Iron Workers' Local 45.

Movie Organist Halts Panic in Showhouse

An organist who played his instrument with undiminished vigor prevented a possible panic yesterday afternoon when fire broke out in the City Hall Theatre, a motion picture house.

The 150 members of the audience filed out in orderly fashion, the fire which started from a film and was restricted to the projection booth, was first seen by Herman J. Von Ezk, the organist. He stood up, informed the audience there was a small fire, and then proceeded to accompany their quiet exit with a thrilling march.

The Manager's Corner

PUBLICITY FOR YOUR AFFAIR

We receive numerous requests from comrades and organizations asking for publicity for affairs and various collections. In this connection, a tip or two may be necessary. If you were to crowd the paper with long, detailed accounts of affairs about to be run or laudatory accounts of what we have done, The DAILY WORKER would very quickly lose its news value and the workers who read the paper for the news would soon get tired of reading about matters which should properly be contained in a party bulletin. The effect would be disastrous upon the circulation of the paper.

For this reason it is necessary that comrades throughout the country use their skill and judgment in writing up affairs in such a way as not to affect our circulation. The New Masses sent in a story the other day which is a good example of what can be done. The story of the possible arrest of Ruth Stout was cleverly linked up with the story of a meeting which was to be held there. What we want is real live news in every story that is sent in. Then the announcement of the event you want to advertise can be tied up with this story. Another good example of how this should be done was the publicity in connection with the Hands Off China Meeting in New York, which linked up the meeting with an excellent resume of what the capitalist press is saying about the Chinese situation. If you want your stuff properly handled, write it up cleverly, write it newsily, and you will get results.

ALLEN OF KANSAS GIVEN POINTERS BY B. MUSSOLINI

Fascisti Think He Will Be Next President

ROME, Feb. 24.—Mussolini was busy today with ex-Governor Allen of Kansas who is visiting here. The Italian newspapers have been hailing Allen today as the next president of the United States. Mussolini loaded the Kansan down with a big batch of blue books, dealing with the creation of the corporate state, his measures against strikes and his compulsory arbitration laws.

When Allen once asked his opinion of Mussolini, he said, "The Duce is an ace among the world's statesmen."

Allen, while governor of Kansas, enforced his infamous compulsory arbitration law, under which Hapgood and Dorchy were sentenced to prison terms for declaring a strike of coal miners a couple of years ago.

Harold Granata, of New York, fastened a beautiful platinum wrist watch today on the wrist of Mussolini, in behalf of the Italian American Society.

After thanking Granata, the Duce said, "America is the greatest business country in the world. I am applying American business methods to the government of Italy."

Don't Pack Workers Quite So Close, Asks Citizens' Union Head

New York workers are packed more closely than sardines and the present zoning laws are doing nothing to help them, according to a letter sent by the Citizens' Union to the Mayor's Committee on City Planning and Survey.

Recommending a radical change in the zoning laws, the letter signed by Dr. William J. Schieffelin, chairman of the union, exposes the horrible overcrowding in various sections of the city.

"With limitations mainly as to the proportion of lot space which may be built upon, the tendency of builders is to crowd too many families into a single unit", the letter declares.

Would Restrict Crowding.

Pointing out the possibility of changing this condition, Dr. Schieffelin says: "We are informed that, during the last few years, students of zoning have worked out reasonable graded regulations as to the permissible number of families per acre, the minimum area per family and the maximum number of families per foot of street frontage. With additional restrictions on this new basis, a more reasonable distribution of population would be assured."

The criminal neglect of many landlords was brought clearly home when seven persons, members of two families, in Brooklyn and Ridgewood Queens, were overcome by gas fumes Tuesday night. Joseph Miller, 40, his wife Edith and their three children of 1347 East Ninety-sixth Street, Brooklyn, and Lena Myerson and her niece, Roselle Meyerson, of 1735 Catalpa Avenue, Ridgewood, were overcome by gas in their respective homes. All were revived by pulmotors.

Seaman Hurt When Oil Tanker Burns

One man was seriously burned and another injured late yesterday when an explosion set fire to the oil tanker Black Sea docked at the Constable Hook Refinery of the Standard Oil Company at Bayonne.

A second explosion threw flaming oil over a half dozen tugs while the tanker was being towed first to the mid-flats.

A crew had barely finished loading the tanker with 25,000 barrels of naphtha and kerosene when the first explosion wrecked the pumping room and set fire to the cargo. David Davis, 37, a seaman, sustained an injured leg when he jumped from the deck of the tanker to the dock.

Flames rose 50 feet in the air when a second explosion spattered burning oil on the seven tugs.

Philadelphia Workers Thursday Has Two Good Dramatic Items Coming Along

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—One of the most interesting features of the coming week will undoubtedly be the celebration of the Proletkult Theatre. It is, of course, well known that the movement has established and operated the theatre not as a matter of importance and of far more reaching influence are the workers' own theatres.

Plays By Unions.

Almost every factory group or local union or party unit has its dramatic expression and the workers' learns even as he enjoys. For in these plays the lessons and technique of the struggle for freedom are given.

The Labor Movement in America must not neglect this important phase of its task and indeed already in many places efforts have been made to establish such activities. In Philadelphia there has been in existance for some time the Workers' Theatre Alliance which, through the efforts of Comrade Alfred Sobel (Director) and Comrades Weinberg, Thompson, White, Tobin and others has done remarkable work.

Benefit Strikers.

With very little assistance and practically no finances several plays have been presented for the benefit of various labor activities, such as the Passaic strikers, and at the present time the Alliance players are preparing to present a new play based upon that great struggle, the title being "Passaic."

Two other plays are under consideration. "Mr God Is Not In," by Harbor Allen, and "Singing Jailbirds," by Upton Sinclair. It is to commendable that such a small group has accomplished so much and it aims to develop this work to the utmost, not only locally but throughout the country. The efforts being made in various localities should be linked up to the greater strength of all.

Comrade Sobel invites all interested to communicate with him. Many working-class plays are of such a character as to require masses of participants, for strike picketing scenes, etc.

Who can better depict such scenes than workers who in real life have been on the picket line and felt the clubs of the forces of the boss? Address communications to our temporary headquarters, 521 York Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

Some Democrats Fight Anti-Third Term Rule; 'Anybody Can Lick Cal'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The third term issue, revived by rumors that President Coolidge plans to seek a renomination and re-election in 1928, may be well thrashed out in the senate, it appeared today, through debate on the La Follette resolution.

The resolution opposed the united opposition of administration senators although the insurgents were inclined to favor it. The democrats also split upon it, although not from any desire to support Coolidge for a third term. Some democratic leaders privately wish the president would seek re-election in the belief that any democrat can defeat him on the third term issue.

GREAT BRITAIN IS SEEKING EXCUSE FOR WAR AGAINST THE SOVIET UNION

Sends Provocative Note Threatening to Break Off Relations

LONDON, Feb. 24.—One of the most provocative notes ever sent by one government to another was dispatched today by Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary to the government of the Soviet Union.

The government of the Workers' Republic is charged with conducting hostile propaganda against the British empire and in particular with encouraging the peoples of countries under the British yoke to free themselves from British rule.

Particular mention is made of the Chinese revolution and its probable effect on the Hindoo masses. The British government blames the Soviet government for speeches delivered by prominent citizens of the country on the subject of British oppression in India, Egypt and China.

May Break Relations.

Chamberlain's note threatened a rupture of commercial and diplomatic relations between the two governments.

So flimsy an excuse for a threatened break has never been given before in the opinion of progressive labor leaders. The speeches of Bukharin and other leaders of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union have been given governmental status in Chamberlain's notes though members of the British cabinet deliver weekly speeches against the Soviet government without irritating Soviet nerves.

British Conspiracies.

The note declares that the Soviet government suffers from a delusion that Britain is continually plotting against the Union and is inciting Poland and other border states into hostile action. It is a well-known fact that Great Britain was behind Pilsudski's coup and back of the recent fascist revolution in Lithuania. Both adventures were decidedly hostile to the Soviet Union.

The importance attached to the Chinese revolution and the danger to the empire involved in its success were emphasized in the note by quotations from a speech delivered by N. Bukharin in Moscow last fall, quoted by Chamberlain as follows:

"In the event of the further victorious advance of the people and of the Communist Party into a war against Cantonese armies, foreign imperialism it is no utopia to assert that the victorious Chinese revolution will find an immediate echo in the neighboring colonial countries—india, Indonesia and Dutch India.

"All this makes it clear that China is the mighty center of attraction for a colonial periphery.

"The English miners' strike and the national revolution in China are, it seems to me, the chief spots where the Communist parties must apply their efforts. And I think as regards these lines of policy we have no reason whatsoever to be pessimistic. It is now clear that we must now concentrate the principal attack of the Chinese.

FRENCHY'S GANG SLUGS WORKER NOT PICKETING

Lead Pipe Used; Girl Gangsters Active

The activities of "Frenchy's gang," four of whom are now out on bail furnished by the International, were extened on Wednesday to an attack upon a worker who was not picketing.

Aaron Wertune, a presser of the Charles Meisel Dress Shop of 225 West 36th Street, was standing by the door of his shop waiting for it to open early yesterdy morning. The shop is not on strike

As he waited, three carloads of gangsters drove up, probably on their way to the B. Gershel dress shop nearby, which was called on strike by the Joint Board last week.

Seeing the gangsters approaching him, Wertune fled up the stairs, but was overtaken at the fifth floor. At the point of a gun he was forced to the roof, where he was beaten with lead pipe.

When he tried to scream for help, the gun was flourished and he was told to "keep quiet or you'll be killed," according to his statement. He escaped from his torturers by running down a fire escape. A physician pronounced him to be suffering from internal injuries, inflicted by blows from the lead pipe.

The gangsters were arrested, but were released by the police when "Frenchy" the leader of the gang, interceded for them.

Anna Gorach, chairlady of the Sklarew and Kaufman shop at 327 West 36th Street, was scratched by "girl gangsters" who attacked her picket line at that shop yesterday morning. Two other pickets were injured also. The shop is on strike to force recognition of Joint Board business agents by the employers.

Strikes have been called on the Arline Dress Shop, 352 Seventh Avenue, because workers were locked out in the Aywone Dress Shop at 361 West 36th Street, because a cutter was discharged for refusing to register, and in the I. Tiser Press Shop, because an operator was discharged for refusing to register with the International.

Workers, picket these shops!

Sixty Girls Trapped, Drop 20 Feet From Useless Fire Escape

Sixty girl workers, trapped by fire in a four-story loft building at 657 Broadway, Brooklyn, reached the street in safety yesterday by climbing part way down the fire escape and then dropping into the arms of policemen.

They were unable to escape by the stairway because of the flames and dense smoke. They and 20 male employes climbed down the fire escape, but found that it ended 20 feet above the sidewalk.

Brownsville Tenements Averaging $45 a Month Take 30 Per Cent of Pay

Brownsville, happy little Brooklyn trans-bridge village of a generation ago, today rivals the east side in high rents, congestion and unkempt streets. Violation of building and fire codes is rife. Will de Kalb, DAILY WORKER investigator found after a careful survey. De Kalb will cover every important working class district in New York in this series, and promises a few additional on housing for the leisure class.

By WILL DE KALB.

The emigration from the lower east side to Brownsville was one of the great heroic acts of a past generation of New Yorkers.

Unable to bear the intolerable living conditions in the Ghetto, groups of poor workers moved to the Brownsville section in Brooklyn, in the hope that in the island across the bridge, a homeland paradise could be found. And the story of their disappointment is further evidence of the terrible condition in which New York finds its housing situation.

Brownsville, contrary to general belief, is essentially a native, not a foreign community. The foreign-born residents of the Ghetto brought with them from Europe a certain animal-like patience and submission that fortunately was lacking in their American offspring. On attaining maturity, the youths rebelled. They moved to Brooklyn. Brownsville prospered, and a thriving community was born.

That was some thirty years ago. The hairs in the proud heads of those rebel youths have turned gray. Not only because of age, however. Long hours of toil, in an endeavor to live in a section where living standards are higher than in the Ghetto, have aged these emigrants before their time.

Landlords Organize.

No sooner did the landlords of Brownsville sense a constant influx of dependable, hard-working, peaceful citizens, than they put their heads together. Here was their opportunity. They must control the situation.

What did they do? What the workers have ever been laggard in doing, organize. They joined the local business men's organization. A special committee on housing was appointed. The interests of the landlord were to be well looked after—at the expense of the tenant.

More Fire Traps.

Brownsville has grown unaccountably in those thirty years, and yet not one-sixteenth of its houses are modern. Fire escapes, in many cases, I found to be totally lacking in spite of the tenement house laws; and the halls and stairways were so built, if a fire ever broke out, the windows would furnish the only means of escape. For there are as many families on a floor there as in Brownsville; some houses have thirty families.

Almost all of the two and three-story buildings have not only no fire escapes, but no other means of egress except a narrow wooden stairway in the center.

And if officialdom gets its way, Brownsville's streets will soon resemble those of the east side. On one street, two blocks from the busy thoroughfare, a janitor told me that street cleaners and dump-carts were seen only once in three days. This I verified, and found to be true.

But Rents Are Higher.

The homes, of course, are much better than those of the east side. Many have steam heat. Not so many people are crowded into one apartment. But the only difference between Brownsville and the Ghetto was made by the untiring efforts of the workers.

I got my greatest shock when I compiled a list of rentals to strike an average. The average rental is $45 per month, with rents varying between $35 and $75. This, in spite of the fact that the average apartment consists of only three rooms; almost none are larger than four.

These exceptionally high rents for workers' homes result from but one factor—the aggression of the landlords. At every opportunity, rents were raised. Twelve cases, testing the rent laws from every minute angle, were instigated by Brownsville landlords who wanted to know just how far they could go.

Even then they were not satisfied—hundreds of cases of Brownsville landlord vs. Brownsville tenant were tried in the courts, the landlord seeking to gain by law what he could not sabotage by hluster and trickery. If a powerful tenants' organization was not formed in Brownsville in 1922, that community would be paying still higher rents today.

No Repairs Made.

And even that organization was unable to force the landlords to make necessary repairs. Of ten apartments I visited in the district, seven had leaking faucets in the kitchens, each hose wasting more of the taxpayers' money.

Forty-five dollars per month—$15 per room! In spite of the average wage, $38 a week!

Wages vary considerably in Brownsville. Some families had an average wage-income of $20, others $80. It was the latter figure that brought the average wage up to $38. But it must be remembered that few of those who earn more than $56 a week, are employed all year round. And many who earn less than $35 a week, are also employed in seasonal industries.

So that while $45 a month must be paid out for rent all year round, $150 wages are not coming in every month all year round. When the outlay exceeds the income, pinching results. They pinch sometimes in Brownsville. But that's nothing. They learned how to do that, and grin and bear it, in the Ghetto.

In Soviet Russia, laws make it impossible for gouging landlords to charge more than 10 per cent of the workers' wages for rent. The minimum is 3 1-2 per cent. Rents average around 8 and 6 per cent. In America, and right here in Brownsville, rents average 30 per cent. What a difference!

In spite of this, there are as few empty apartments as in the Ghetto. I walked three miles—I met only seven "Apartment To Let" signs. What, Assemblyman Jenks, no housing shortage?

Jenks In Swell Albany Hotel.

I wish Jenks were with me when I walked into a real estate office to write this article. The realtor in charge showed me a list of available apartments. It hardly filled three-quarters of a typewritten page. And this realtor is known to have the largest trade among landlords in the Brownsville section.

I asked janitors, and they told me they had lists of people who wanted to move away from their present locations. She often received handsome bonuses from future tenants, she said, by notifying them immediately when a tenant gave her a moving notice. Waiting lists have been in vogue for the past six years.

Brownsville, the community founded by progressive youth, has been lying dormant for the past decade, satisfied with having grown into maturity. But The DAILY WORKER has sounded a call to arms. Progressive workers are massing themselves against the housing shortage, the creature of crooked politicians, money-mad landlords, and dollar-greedy builders.

Brownsville, the product of rebellious youth, will rally once more, and fight for better housing. You see, that's just the way it's built. It's in the Brownsville blood. And maybe it won't be a fight, eh! It will, if Brownsville can help it.

COMPANY UNION BOOSTER QUITS HUFFMAN MILL

PASSAIC, N. J., Feb. 24. — A significant victory for the Passaic woolen textile unions was seen today in the resignation of Robert M. Reinhold, director of public relations of the Forstmann & Huffman Co.

Reinhold was the leader of the company union forces in the Forstmann & Hinffman plant which were used in vain to stem the advance of the legitimate textile workers union. He devised a fake "industrial democracy" scheme distinguished mainly by its failure to fool the workers.

The textile workers union called off the strike against the mill last week when the management wrote that it would not discriminate against unionists in employing workers.

Reinhold and his wife are going south, presumably to accept employment in a non-union mill.

James A. Hare personal secretary to Julius Forstmann, is also a, w. o. l. No explanation is given for his resignation.

WAR IN CHICAGO FOR NOMINATION

One Mortally Wounded; Many Slugged

CHICAGO Feb. 24—Former Mayor William Hale Thompson, successful candidate in the race for the republican mayoralty nomination, today began organizing the machine with which he hopes to drive to victory at the April election over Mayor William E. Dever, renominated on the democratic ticket to succeed himself.

Thompson, twice mayor, and "wet" candidate, opposed to the League of Nations, was nominated in yesterday's blood-and-thunder primary. His majority over Edward R. Litsinger, chief opponent, was slightly in excess of 100,000 votes.

The democratic vote was light owing to the fact that Mayor Dever had virtually no opposition.

The total republican vote was 506,307. A total of 342,279 votes was cast for Thompson.

The campaign for the republican nomination was one of the bitterest ever waged in Chicago. Despite unusual precautions on the part of police and à large force of special deputies, shootings, slugginss, kidnapings and various forms of intimidation and fraud were recorded.

The British Note to the Soviet Union is a War Threat

Great Britain's note to the Soviet Union is deliberately provocative.

Even though Britain's endeavors to set up a united front against the Soviet Union from Roumania to Finland were not well-known, the language and general tenor of the note is in violation of all established rules of diplomatic procedure. This of course the Soviet Union does not mind as it shows a hostility which corroborates the statements made by Chicherin and other leaders of the Soviet Union.

A reading of the note discloses the rather surprising fact that the British foreign office is unable to cite any of the many overt acts of which it claims to have knowledge. It confines itself to complaints against statements made by Bukharin and others, statements which the whole world knows express the policy of the Communist International. It would be just as good an excuse for a note to America threatening to break off relations if anti-British speeches of prominent democrat and republican party members were treated in the same way.

But this of course applies only to the conventional diplomatic relations between capitalist nations. The British foreign office does not need such evidence as propaganda leaflets to convince it that the existence of the Soviet Union is a danger to British imperialism. It needs to look only at China to have additional proof every day.

Why was the note sent at this particular time?

First, because the powerful die-hard tory group in the British cabinet has forced acceptance of its immediate policy and second, because of the demoralization created in the ranks of labor by the desertion of the coal miners followed by their defeat leads the British rulers to believe that this moment should be utilized to strike another blow at the Soviet Union. Third, because the opportunity to show that the present tory policy, and the tone of the note itself, differs but little from the policy and the tone of the note sent by MacDonald when he was premier during the brief reign of the Labor Party.

The punch has been taken out of the note by the recent defeat of Sun Chuan Fang upon whom the tories had built great hopes but nevertheless the open expression of hostility at this time means that Tory Britain, with its agents in the ranks of the labor movement remains an implacable enemy of the worker and peasants' government of the Soviet Union.

The British labor movement has now a splendid opportunity, which will not be neglected if it follows the lead of the Communists and the left wing.

The imperialists answer the cry for freedom coming from the throats of hundreds of millions of workers and peasants with the threat of new imperialist wars. Britain's working class should take the lead in dealing another smashing blow to world imperialism by cracking this new offensive of reaction into a million pieces.

Another Right Wing Failure

The right wing in the needle trade unions again came off second best in the Cooper Union meeting Wednesday afternoon which was supposed to show a substantial rank and file following for the reactionaries in the Furriers' Union.

Not even all the right wing gangsters from the Amalgamated and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Unions which were rushed into the hall could give the meeting the appearance of being a genuine trade union gathering.

The police patrolled the streets around the hall but the left wing forces held demonstrations in spite of the interference. When some three hundred left wingers arose in a body and left the hall the meeting, so far as having a mass content, was over.

These offensives of the right wing serve only one purpose—to divert the energies of the membership from the main task of organizing the needle trades in New York City. The left wing has taken the correct position when deciding to concentrate on organization work in the shops, build the unions and leave the right wing to either continue to aid the bosses or acknowledge defeat. This does not mean that the right wing gangsters are to be allowed to work their will on the rank and file; it is by no means a policy of pacifism and any right winger who so interprets it will be sadly disillusioned.

It does mean, however, that the right wing will not be permitted to stop the organization of the industry and drag the needle trades workers down with it to defeat.

America's Orderly Election Procedure.

"One Shot, Two Slugged, Three Kidnaped; 61 Arrested, 16 Guns of All Types Seized."

So runs one of the New York World's heads over the story of the Chicago primary elections.

Americans, far more accustomed to the peaceful solution of public problems at the polls, never resort to violence as do the more backward peoples south of the Rio Grande.

It is only in Latin America, according to the best editorial talent the capitalist press can purchase, that disorder and bloodshed accompany elections.

Wall Street-Coolidge government has just occupied Nicaragua in order to teach the natives to emulate our peaceful parliamentary methods. The Nicaraguans are expected to vote to give the whole country to Wall Street as soon as they understand that nothing but peaceful elections are to be held under the cannon of American battleships with American marines looking on over the sights of machine-guns.

Chicago politicians and gunmen are only amateurs after all.

Washington Has Ceased to Be "the Hope of the American Republic"—Pres. Coolidge

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE Washington birthday speech of President Coolidge was a kyng in small New England where he put the American god of business to whom, according to Coolidge, George Washington was the first national figure to pay the homage due as puissant deity.

What could appeal more to the army of real estate boosters, salesmen, loan sharks, profiteers, contractors, "pay-as-you-go" furniture dealers, hard-surfaced road promoters, implement manufacturers and dealers, etc., who preach the gospel of "service" to victims whose susceptibility to the creed has been calculated with mathematical accuracy, than the following testimonial to the revered George.

This practical business ability and interest in broad and general affairs made him one of the first to realize that the future of the American empire lay in the regions beyond the Alleghenies in the territory of the Ohio and Mississippi.

THE thrifty father of his country displayed no particular acumen in believing that America would expand toward the west. If one wished to be nasty about it one could say that the Atlantic Ocean on the east made expansion in any other direction impossible especially in a period when the diving suit and submarine had not yet been invented.

In the absence of a marina or amphibious civilization incrase in population was bound to enhance the price of the virgin territory the thrifty Washington acquired by the purchase of land warrants at ridiculously low prices from needy investors and by other questionable methods.

"Actually," said Coolidge, "no American has ever done so much to open up vast tracts of land, first under the British and then under the American flag, fitted to become the home of millions of American farmers."

THAT Washington held his shadily acquired titles against genuine settlers who braved the dangers of the frontier to carve homes for their families out of the virgin forests, is a matter of record. By these acts alone he "automatically becomes the patron saint of the modern real estate speculator and all others of the leech tribe preying upon the workers and farmers of America.

Another quotation:

Washington has come to personify the American Republic. He presided over the convention that framed our Constitution. The weight of his great name was the deciding factor in securing its adoption by the states.

AMERICA'S historians whose opinions are amazingly alike of small are agreed that the Constitutional Convention was nothing more or less than a secret and conspiratorial gathering at which no single representative of other than the landholding, merchant and shipping groups was present. An examination of the social background of the delegates at this convention, made by anyone interested enough to consult recognized sources will substantiate this statement.

THE convention had no authority from the people for any action other than a revision of the Articles of Confederation. Congress, on February 21, 1787 had stated that the only reason it authorized the convention was for "the sole and express purpose of revising the Articles of Confederation."

The purpose of Washington and his fellow-conspirators was to insure their property against the populace and perpetuate the rule of the propertied classes. James Madison who kept a record of the proceedings that was not published until fifty years afterwards, stated during the debates:

In future time, a great majority of the people will not only be without land but any other kind of property. These will oppress the holders of such property, break down all distinctions in which ease the rights of public property and the public liberty will not be safe in their hands.

THE purpose of the convention was to entrench the colonial capitalists and landlords so strongly that they could not be dislodged by popular protest and revolt.

The purpose of the convention was no more sinister than the methods used to put over its decision as the law of the land.

The great majority of the population was disfranchised. Property qualifications were required for voters and the requisite qualifications were possessed only by the small minority represented by the delegates to the constitutional convention.

MASTER, in his book "With the Fathers," says:

Of the mass of unskilled laborers, men who dug ditches, carried loads, or in harvest time helped the farmer gather in his hay and grain, it is safe to say that very few, if any, in the course of their lives cast a vote.

The late Woodrow Wilson, in his "History of the American People" states that:

There were probably not more than 120,000 men who had the right to vote out of all the 4,000,000 inhabitants enumarated in the first census. (Taken in 1790)

It will be seen that approximately one person in thirty-three was allowed to vote on the Constitution. Tho men, says Fisher in "Men, Women and Manners in Colonial Times," averaged one vote to every four or five persons and:

This disfranchised majority, which included from three-fourths to four-fifths of the able-bodied men of the colony, had no more part or lot in the government than the women and children.

Washington was one of the principal beneficiaries of this condition.

NOT "the weight of his great name," as Coolidge says, but the disfranchisement of all but the colonial aristocracy and their hangers-on together with the wholesale use of fraud, bribery and corruption before and during the voting on the constitution were the deciding factors in securing its adoption by the states."

"Washington has come to personify the American Republic," says Coolidge and, in view of the circumstances, he has no reason why he is not entitled to this dubious honor.

WARE in Pennsylvania, with his $3,000,000 corruption fund, Smith in Illinois with his campaign financed by a public utility magnate who heads the open shop movement in that state, Coolidge who fights the farmers whose early prototypes were represented by Washington, Tammany Hall with its servile smile for the transit interests and police clubs for striking motormen and needle trades workers, Chicago with its elections held in a welter of blood and bribery —this is the republic of American capitalism whose course was charted by Washington.

COOLIDGE makes Washington the god of practical business and practical business is robbing the workers and farmers. For this reason the Coolidge speech will meet the approval of all elements who are sharing directly, or indirectly in the distribution of the loot.

Our business as intelligent workers is to show to our class the implications of the Coolidge speech and organize it for the purpose of putting an end to robbery which Washington, as a leader in the formation of the state machinery of American capitalism, believed in, justified and extended while the ragged and starving veterans of the American revolution were deprived of all voice in determining what the future form and purpose of the American government were to be.

What Price Aliens?

By JOSEPH KUDIRKET.

NO one knows as yet just how the Attorney General's raid of January 2nd will affect our provisional status as contained in Sec. 16, where the Secretary of Labor is authorized to make regulations, and Sec. 17, which expressly gives him power to employ assistance for enforcement. Under this latter clause it is intended that he employ an army of officials to engage in man-hunting crusades.

These officials will have unlimited opportunities to extort money; to bribe and to blackmail and wreak boundless oppression and wrongs upon inoffensive, innocent aliens and alleged aliens. These inspectors will be practically free from control and so be able to do very much as they please, as were those employed under the provisions of the Chinese Exclusion Act and to the evil temptations which the Aswell bill affords, practically unchecked, indicates an imminent danger to aliens and natives alike, who happen to incur the personal dislike of the inspector.

Free Play for Grafters.

By means of this law any individual or organization which happens to be prejudiced or economically jealous of an allen resident can have him arrested with possible deportation as the outcome.

What group of government officials have yet proved to be free from bribery and graft? The more so will these prospective ones be. With a bribe the records of the registered aliens can be "fixed" in any way that is wanted.

Convenience for the Klansmen.

What a wonderful chance it will give all the 100%-ers, Ku Kluxers, American Legionaires, K. of C.'s, etc., to "get" their men. The records (according to Mr. Aswell's proposal) are to be kept in duplicate; this duplicate "shall be filed in a central office." Convenient access to the records of each alien is thereby given so that within a few hours any allen can be apprehended and arrested for all sorts of "crimes." The record shall also contain a complete list of arrests and convictions with a record of final disposition of the case. If a record is not in suitable condition for the sinister purpose of the 100%-ers they will no doubt find some "honest" government official who is willing to "help them out."

Undercover Blacklisting.

The use of the blacklist has met with legal objections in some states. The Aswell bill does away with the need of every private blacklist. A complete, efficiant and centralized record of every allen worker's activity will be kept by the registering officials for the use and benefit of the employing class. All this without having to keep on their payrolls—as is now the case—stool-pigeons and spies, which has been very liberally provides that "the Secretary of Labor may request the co-operation of all federal, state, territorial or local courts and police and peace officers in making such reports."

These records will be a splendid aid in obtaining convictions. In labor trouble cases where the charge is picketing, rioting, loitering, etc., these records will have more weight in evidence than any policeman's or civilian's testimony. The will be government records and as such the inference is that they are true and accurate. This also eliminates the bosses' own sheriffs and denuties as witnesses. Then they have only to report to the registering officer and when his report is offered in evidence it will be neither cross-questioned or challenged.

Bearing Witness Against Oneself

Even the certificate of identification, which every allen is always to carry on his person, is also to contain information in regard to his status, so that any inspector or anyone who so wishes (peace officer) "Virgin Man" case to be Tried.

Producers and the cast of "The Virgin Man", one of the three raided plays, lost their fight yesterday for trial by a jury.

What was the meaning of this raid? According to the newspapers, it was the patriotic indignation of sailors from the fleet. There had been an explosion on one of the battleships, and several men had been killed, and the newspapers had printed a story that one of the wobblies had been heard to laugh with satisfaction. It is an ancient device of the master press. In old Russia the "Black Hundreds" were incited by tales of "ritual murders" committed by the Jews, Christian babies killed for sacrifice. In Britain now the government was forging letters attributed to the Soviet leaders, and using them to carry an election. In America the deportation delirium had been sanctified by a great collection of forged documents, officially endorsed.

It was a spontaneous mob, said these law and order newspapers. But this fact was noted; on all other occasions there had been policemen at these wobbly meetings, to take note of criminal utterances; but this night there had been no policemen on hand. Nor were there any afterwards; Bunny and the other "reds" might beslege the police department and the city government, and offer the names of the principal mob leaders, but there would be no step taken to punish anyone for this murderous raid!

Bunny didn't expect to find Paul, but there he lay, flat on his back, with several people bending over him. His left eye was a mass of blood, and seemed as if destroyed by a blow; he lay, limp and motionless, and when Bunny called his name he did not answer. But he was alive, gasping with a kind of snoring sound.

A doctor! A doctor! There were several in the neighborhood, and people rushed away to look for them. From the days of Bunny's residence in Bench City he knew the name of a surgeon, and hurried to a phone, and was so fortunate as to find the surgeon at home. Bunny told what had happened, and the other said he would come at once; in the case of injury to skull or other bones, X-ray pictures would be needed, so he gave the name of doctors who did such work, and Bunny did more telephoning, and arranged for one of these to be at his laboratory and await developments. Also he ordered an ambulance from a hospital.

Then back to the hall, where Paul lay in the same condition. Rachel had laid a clean handkerchief over the battered eye, and put a pillow under his head. The other victims had been carried away, and the door of the wrecked hall shut against the curious crowd.

The surgeon came, and said it was concussion of the brain. There was evidence of a heavy blow at the base of the skull—either Paul had been struck in the eye, and had hit the back of his head in falling, or else he had been knocked down by a blow from behind, and later struck or trampled over the eye. The first thing was a picture; so the unconscious body was taken to the X-ray laboratory, and pictures were made, and the surgeon showed Bunny and Rachel the line of a fracture at the base of the skull, running to the front above the oral cavity. There was nothing to be done, it was impossible to operate in such a place. It was a question of how the brain had been affected, and as to that only time could tell. They must keep the patient quiet.

There was a private hospital in the town; so before long Paul was lying on a bed, with a bandage over his eye, and his head in a sling to avoid pressure on the injured place; and Bunny and Rachel were sitting by the bedside, gazing mournfully. . Womanliks, Rachel was reading his thoughts. "Dear heart, are you going to blame yourself all your life because you didnt rush in' and get your skull brokan, too?" No, he couldn't have prevented the harm, he knew it; but oh, why did it hava to be Paul's brain—the best brain that Bunny had ever known! He sat with a horrified, brooding stare.

Bnt there was another ordeal to be faced. Rachel reminded him, "We've got to tell Ruth." She offered to attend to it, to spare his feelings. She got her brother Jacob on the phone—he had just got home from a committee meeting, and now he must call a taxi, and drive to Ruth's bome and bring her to the harbor.

Two hours later Ruth came running up the stairs, her face like a mask of fright. "How is he? How is he?" When she entered the room, and saw Paul, she stopped. "Oh, what is it?" And when they told her—"is he going to live?" She drew nearer, never taking her eyes off his face. Her hands would stretch out to him, and then draw back, because she might not touch him; they would go out again, as if they had a will of their own. Suddenly her knees gave way, and she sank to the floor, and covered her face with her hands, sobbing, sobbing.

They tried to comfort her, but she hardly knew they were there. She was alone, in the dreadful corridors of grief. Bunny, watching her, felt hot tears stealing down his cheeks. It wasn't natural for a girl to feel that way about a brother. Yet he had said; but Bunny knew bow it was—Ruth was back in those childhood days on the lonely hills of Paradise, when Paul had been her only friend, a refuge from a family of fanatics, with a father who beat her to make her think like him. Back there she had known that Paul was a great man, and had followed him all these years; she had watched his mind unfolding, and learned everything she knew from it—and now, to see it destroyed by a brute with a piece of iron pipe!

Hapgood, Harvard graduate and miner, fought hard, finally broken up by the police who entered the room, their intended victim escaped with only a few cuts and bruises."

"Three days before the attack, when I first arrived in town," says Hapgood describing the tactics of the Lewis machine at the recent miners' convention, "I had been invited to a cheap hotel room, hired for the purpose by three administration officials, one of whom had used the name of a friend of mine over the telephone inviting me to the room.

"When I got inside, the three officials, one of whom had a loaded sulomatic, attempted to beat me up so that I would have to go to the hospital instead of the convention. They were a little drunk, however, and they bungled their game. After a twenty-minute fight, finally broken up by the police who entered the room, their intended victim escaped with only a few cuts and bruises."

A series of brilliant sketches by Michael Gold, poems by Lola Ridge, a story by Joseph Freeman, an article on "Revolution and Sex," by Upton Sinclair and drawings by Diego Rivera, Hugo Gellert, William Gropper, Louis Lozowick and William Siegel are other features of the magazine.

Washington Hears More About "Red Plots"

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Another Red plot has been discovered by Secretary Kellogg, according to authentic information received by your correspondent today.

Diplomatic circles were stirred by the report that agents of Moscow are responsible for the New York subway jams. The information was conveyed to G-2 Headquarters at Governors Island with the request that the army's gumshoe experts watch all wearers of red neckties and subscribers to The DAILY WORKER. These culprits are also thought to be responsible for anti-CMTC propaganda.

Other bulletins given out by the state department today made such an impression that several newspaper correspondents were rushed to Walter Reed Hospital with fractured ribs brought on by prolonged laughter.

President Coolidge spent the day playing solitaire with the official spokesman.

No fights between senators and congressmen took place today and Will Rogers appeared greatly depressed due to the resultant lack of copy.

A Chinese Communist plot is seen in the attempt upon the life of an official high in British circles. This official, whose name is withheld by the Department of Justice, sent his laundry to a Washington Chinese laundryman who has been in communication with the Cantonese Government.

The jagged edges of the returned collars are offered by Department of Justice laundry experts as proof of the sinister attempt upon the life of the British diplomatic. The laundry man is under surveillance and several British warships are on their way to China, according to my information.

President Coolidge continued his game of solitaire with the official spokesman without any comment.

Newspapermen who were disappointed at the failure of senators and congressmen to stage one of their usual exhibitions turned their attention to the Dempsey-Tunney movies.

Another Red plot is seen in the heavy snowstorm of recent date. Department of Justice men were rushed to New York to investigate the activities of well-known Communists who were expected to seize the reins of government during the critical period arranged by an employe of the Federal Weather Bureau, who is reported to be subscriber to The DAILY WORKER.

Secretary Kellogg spent a restless night, President Coolidge played solitaire with the official spokesman and your correspondent investigated a report that friends of the Soviet government are using the red street lights to carry on communication with other agents of Moscow.

Diplomatic circles were stirred by a sinister attempt on the lives of several Department of Justice agents early today. Shortly after dining at a Chinese restaurant they were stricken with acute stomach pains. All are resting comfortably now.

The proprietor, who is a subscriber to The DAILY WORKER, is being watched and it is expected that additional forces will be sent to protect American lives and property in China.

President Coolidge played solitaire with the official spokesman, Secretary Kellogg was stricken ill with a nervous headache, and your correspondent spent a restful afternoon reading "Have Faith In Massachusetts."

WOLL HEADS ANTI-LABOR SQUAD, SAYS MAURER

Walkups and High Rents Feature Housing in Bronx

Jerry-built Structures With Small Rooms and No Fire Escapes Characterize Newest of the Big Boroughs

The Bronx, inhabited by the foreign born and yet American to the core, is a cross section of greater New York, with miserably crowded workers' tenements and spacious, beautiful dwellings for the leisured. But rents and apartments are both high—the rents averaging $45 and the apartments five stories and up, with no elevators. Will de Kalb gives DAILY WORKER readers an insight into Bronx housing in today's article. Sunday he will describe Yorkville and the Queens.

By WILL DE KALB.

All classes, all nationalities, all sections of New York are represented in the population of the Bronx. This most northern borough of greater New York is the only real "melting pot" in the east. It is composed, in the main, of the foreign-born, yet it is not a "foreign" community, nor has it any real "foreign" quarters.

If you want to get a vivid, accurate picture of the present housing situation, hop on a subway train that's going to the Bronx. The borough affords a composite picture of the good and bad conditions found in all other sections.

Everything that has been said about living conditions in the city is applicable to sections of the Bronx. Some parts of it rival the Ghetto. Some are almost an image of Harlem. Some are as beautiful, as pleasant to livr in as well-kept Seagate in Brooklyn, where "Al" Smith and other "poor" members of the rirh elite even have a private police and street cleaning force, to make the section still more exclusive.

A Little Housing Relief.

In justire to it, mention must be made at the outset that everything that has been done to relieve the housing shortage has been done chiefly in the Bronx. Outside of a little building in Queens, most of it has been done right here, by Bronx builders. But it didn't change the situation any.

Although the Bronx has the best building record in the rity, this applies to apartment houses leasing at $10 a room or more. Of the few flats I heard of that leased for less, I was immediately informed that the rents were raised to the standard level at the first opportunity.

If any Albany politicians are skeptical about the existence of a housing shortage, I would suggest that they drop up to one of the renting offices in the vicinity of the Hub when a new announcemrnt is made of an apartment to be built. The rapidity with which the rooms are snapped up by SENATOR BORAH insinuates that Coolidge and Kellogg plotted with the British government to have a British warship sent to Nicaragua to act as a "haven of refuge" for British nationals whose lives might be jeopardized by thr rivil war raging in that rountry. a war, which would have been over long ago had not the United States government sent its marines in there to maintain a reactionary puppet of American imperialism in the presidential chair. Here is a splendid opportunity for a serious opposition to send Kellogg scurrying for safety to the wide open spaces of Minnesota.

There is no serious opposition to the administration's Latin-American policy. Borah talks a good deal in congress but Borah is not organizing a mass opposition. Eastern democrats are tied up with Wall Street and the westarners are all wool Between the ears. Here is a chance for a good old lion-tail-pulling exercise. Whas congress needs now is a fellow with imagination like William Hale Thompson of Chicago, who in his rampaign for the mayoral nomination on the republican tirket threatened to bust King George in the nose if he came butting into Chicago's business.

When the Prince of Wales is not busy falling off his bloomin' 'orse he is busy slumming in London. The heir to the throne goes around seeing how the great half-fed exist. The prince is not taking those trips of his own accord. The British ruling classes are clever and farsighted. They want to popularize the young man who may yet be king, among the masses. There are hard times in store for the empire and some day when the long pent up grievances of the masses may be expressed in a desire to pull down the state pillars around the ears of the tory and liberal politicians, a popular prince may be an asset.

MAYOR JIMMY WALKER returned from Cuba and Palm Beach and the papers that announced his return also announced that more than seventy padlocked night clubs were unpadlocked. The mayor is a hard worker, but he likes a little relaxation. He may have walked a little about politics with another toiler, ex-mayor Hylan, when the pair met at Palm Beach. Mr. Walker returned without a trust plan, we are told. But the mayor who would solve the transit problem for this rity would be cursed by capitalist politicians of this generation and burned in effigy by their political helrs.

MUSSOLINI'S nation-wide rampaign to encourage large families has been dislocated by the action of milk contractors in distributing adulterated milk, resulting in a high infantile death rate. All Benito's exhortations went for naught. The next accident that will happen to Mussolini's scheme for a greater supply of rannon fodder may be the production of adulterated children.

Claim U. S. Copper Companies Backing Chilean Dictator

SANTIAGO, Chili, Feb. 25.—The Anaconda and Guggenheim copper interests are rumored to be the chief financial support of the Ibanez dictatorship here which conducts wholesale arrests and deportations of the opposition.

Manuel Vicuna, head of the late cabinet, has been ordered deported but has obtained a supreme court decision suspending the order. Rafael Gumucio, director of the conservative newspaper Diario Illustrado, has been arrested.

Three Communist papers have been suppressed and a large number of persons, mostly Communist deputies and labor union officials, have been added to the 100 or more already arrested and ordered deported.

Panic Foreseen In Building Profit Orgy

By WALLPROL.

A "panir of frightful proportions" will engulf the nation if the present ergy of building speculation is not halted.

This warning was given yesterday by Attorney General Albert Ottinger in a statement issued at Albany.

With billions of dollars of surplus values pressing on the money market for investment, building finance companies have engaged in financial jurglery on a colossal scale in the past four years, S. W. Straus, perhaps the leading building bond salesman of Amarico, pleaded recently for an entire reasation for six months of further building financing. The stimulation of building activity far beyond the needs of the country has already resulted in the overbuilding of business and fartory structures and will lead to a general paralysis of the building industry, Straus warned.

Two million building trades workers, more than half of whom are organized, will be seriously afferted in the event of the collapse of this stimu-

Gangster Held Without Bail For Attack

Gunman Who Shot Worker Attacks Pickets Again

Max Richter, member of "French's" gang, now awaiting the action of the grand jury for the shooting of Samuel Cohen, was arrested again Friday morning when he and fellow gangsters attacked the picket line at the Millare and Mandel Cloak Shop, 213 West 35th Street. Already under $8,000 bonds for shooting Cohen, he was ordered held without bail pending the investigation of his record by Judge Tolleris in Jefferson Market Court.

Richter gave his name as Max Rich, but was identified as Richter, who with three other men, attacked Cohen as he was coming away from a pirket line at Rothman, Reisman and Beaver shop at 521 West 57th Street, shooting him in the foot.

Two other gangsters, Max Alenich and Sol Freeberg, arrested with him on Friday, were relgased on bail of $500 upon a charge of disorderly rondurt. They will rome up for hearing on March 4th.

Mass Attack On Line.

The picket lines were attacked as if by a mass rampaign on Friday. The police already had captured three prisoners and were on their way to the 30th Street Police Station when they heard cries of help from Millare and Mandell Shop, where Richter and his fellow gangsters were beating up B. Lishovoff, Julius Shapiro, Dan Pollack, and M. Shanes. The last named received severe cuts on his face and head after he had been thrown to the street, and was the complainant on the felonious assault charge against Richter.

The three arrested earlier are well known to rickets as "Dubinsky's boys," being part of the strong arm brigade of David Dubinsky, manager of Cutters' Local 10. They were arrested after they attempted to assault Aaron Wortums, of the Charles Meisel Shop, 225 West 36th Street, and ruthers who were with him. They gave their names as Sam Greenberg, Max Blum and Harry Cohen, and were held on $500 bail to appear March 4.

Menace Workers.

Wortums was standing near his shop, which is not on strike, waiting to identify the men who attacked and beat him up on February 23, as he was waiting to go up to work. As the three men passed, he pointed them out to friends as his assailants. They immediately started toward the group, threatening Wortums with "a worse one than you got last time." He ran to the elevator, and from the second floor relled for police, who arrested the trio.

It was on the trip to the station with these three that the police discovered the trouble at the Millare and Mandel shop.

Diaz Sells Out The Army, Finance and Sovereignty

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — An outline of the treaty of alliance between the United States and Nicaragua, amounting virtually to an American protectorate over the country, which President Diaz has proposed to the state department was made public here today in the form of an appeal from Diaz for American public support.

Diaz proposes to give the United States a "permanent right of intervention" if the treaty is consummated, permit American control of Nicaraguan government finance, and American direction of a Nicaraguan constabulary, to be set up after the dissolution of the present armies.

Though the request for a treaty now comes apparently from Diaz, Wall Street's puppet president of Nicaragua, the first reports emenating from Washington were that the state department had demanded that Diaz consent to a protectorate over Nicaragua.

Send Woll After Farrington

MATTHEW WOLL has been caught betraying labor.

The accusation, together with the evidence, has been made public by James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor.

Woll, as acting president of the Civic Federation of Labor, is responsible for the efforts of that organization to kill various old age pension bills—legislation endorsed by the American Federation of Labor of which he is a vice president.

The anti-labor activities of the Civic Federation are financed by the Carnegie Foundation.

Woll is therefore a beneficiary of a fund left by the deceased steel capitalist who fought labor all his life and left a stipulated sum to finance these activities after his death.

There is something ghoulish in the role now played by Woll. Through him as head of the Civic Federation the dead hand of Andrew Carnegie, who in his day hired hundreds of Pinkerton detectives to disrupt the labor movement, pays salaries to respectable stool pigeons equipped with fountain pens and typewriters to poison the channels of publicity and deceive workers. Some of this tribe parade as officials of the labor movement.

Woll has tried to cover his career as an agent of the enemies of labor with the mantle of a crusader. He has specialized in denouncing Communists as enemies of the labor movement.

It seems clear now that Woll's purpose in his attempts to drive Communist workers out of the labor movement has been to distract attention from his own Judas-like activities.

His motto has been the same as that credited to William Hale Thompson, former mayor of Chicago, by his erstwhile friend Fred Lundin:

"When in doubt, hire a band."

Woll has beaten the tom-toms and called for war on Communist and left wing workers until the labor movement is distracted with the din.

While labor officialdom has been hunting for Communists Woll has been gathering in and paying out the Carnegie fund shekels to scuttle the old-age pension legislation.

There is a remarkable similarity between the cases of Woll and Frank Farrington, former president of District 12, United Mine Workers of America, recent fraternal delegate to the British Trade Union Congress, now exposed as a paid agent of the Peabody Coal Company in the Miners' Union and forced to resign.

Farrington was a mighty hunter of "reds." He expelled all militant opposition elements and even ruled that the defense committee organized to back the victims of the Ku Klux Klan in Ziegler, Illinois, was a "dual organization."

Farrington joined hands with Lewis in the expulsion campaign against the Communists and left wingers. Like Woll, Farrington could work himself into a frenzy on the subject of Americanism versus Communism while saying nothing but nice things about the bosses.

To a considerable section of the American working class this attitude on the part of a labor leader means the same thing as finding an individual writing code letters to a detective agency or the department of justice.

Before very long it is a test that will be used by the whole labor movement to determine the loyalty of its leaders.

We are sure that if this test is applied to Matthew Woll and the trade union membership permitted to express their conclusions, his Jekyll and Hyde career will end suddenly.

We do not advocate any cruel and unusual punishment for Woll—we do not want to send him to prison or deport him although this is his program for dealing with Communist workers.

What we want and what we are going to get, with the support of some millions of workers who have no love for agents of the bosses whether they are just ordinary spies or acting presidents of the Civic Federation, is the abolition of Woll and all he stands for in the American labor movement.

In plain words we do not care a tinker's damn how long Woll continues to be a member and official of the Civic Federation, but we are going to do all in our power to see that he is driven out of the American trade union movement.

"We Want Woll To Follow Farrington" is a good slogan.

Vice President of A.F.L. Fights Pensions

Unites With Bosses Against Measure Unions Endorse

WASHINGTON—(FP—Has Matthew Woll, a vice-president of the American Federation of Labor which has repeatedly endorsed old age pensions for the veterans of industry, a right to act as president of an organization that is trying to kill all pending old age pension measures?

That is the issue raised by Jas. H Maurer, veteran president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor and chairman of the Pennsylvania Commission on Old Age Pensions. He has written Woll a letter, pointing out that Woll is acting president of the National Civic Federation, and that Ralph M. Easley, rhairman of its executive council, which contains a number of the worst anti-labor employers in the United States, is now trying to cheat aged workers of old age pensions favored by organized labor. Maurer says to Woll that it is hardly consistent for Woll to be in both camps.

Violating A. F. L. Ruling.

"The A. F. of L. at a number of conventions," writes Maurer, "unanimously adopted resolutions demanding the establishment of old age pension laws throughout the states.

"In view of the above I am puzzled to understand a letter, addressed apparently to all governors and legislators by the Natl. Civic Federation of which you are the acting president and signed by Ralph M. Easley, rhairman of the executive rouncil. In substance, it practirally asks the governors and legislators to do nothing on old age pensions until a study now being undertaken by the Civic Federation is rompleted and modestly suggests that only this study will reveal the truth about the problem.

Woll's Letter Lies.

"It also untruthfully asserts that 'there are no reliable statistics at present exrept those pertaining to the population of Massachusetts'."

Maurer goes on to say that "A persual of the letter connected with Kasia spent last night at police headquarters in Cohoes. She asked for lodging after her money had given out. At first she denied her identity, claiming she was "Margery Kindall," but later she admitted she was the missing daughter of Judge and Mrs. Mahoney.

When she arrived at police headquarters she carried a small handbag containing an extra pair of stockings, two bracelets and a package of rigarettes.

COOLIDGE VETOES FARMERS' BILL AS HE SIGNS THE BANKERS' BILL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—President Coolidge today double-crossed the farm bloc and did his bit for the establishment of a money trust by vetoing the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill and signing the McFadden branch banking bill on one and the same day.

The two bills have been closely united thruout their passage in congress. Both went over as a result of a bargain between the middle western senators back of farm relief, with the Morgan senators, pushing the branch banking act. Vice President Dawes took a leading part in the negotiations by which they were passed. He is reported as having no comment on the action of the President today.

A Brutal Rejection.

That the president would sign the McFadden bill was a foregone conclusion. But that he would veto the farm bill, and do so in the irritatingly insulting manner which he chose, was something of a surprise. In an 8,000 word message accompanying the veto, Coolidge gives as his first reason the appointive power of the president. The election of a farm board is declared unconstitional, and an opinion to that effect by the attorney-general is enclosed in the message. Secondly, the president thinks the scheme will not work, and thirdly, that it would be a bad thing if it did work.

Protest Deportation Of Enea Sarmenti at Webster Hall Meeting

A united front meeting will be held tomorrow afternoon, two p. m. at Webster Hall, 11th. near Third Ave., to rally working class sentiment against the deportation of political refugees.

Enea Sormenti, editor of Il Lavaratore is scheduled for deportation at the present time. Thousands of other workers are in danger. Their only crime is that they are fighting the tyrannical rule of Mussolini who has burnt down working men's clubs, trade union offices and co-operative societies, and also brutally murdered all who showed the slightest working class sympathies.

The A. F. of L. Conventions have denounced Mussolini and Fascism in no uncertain fashion. The mass meeting tomorrow will crystallize the protest of the workers of New York. Prominent speakers, representatives of all shades of opinion will attend.

As the marines extend their activities there is scarcely any territory left for the liberals to attempt to take from the Diaz forces.

Neither is for the worker. The workers' candidate in this election is C. E. Ruthenberg, who will be placed on the ballot by petition. He is the nominee of the Workers Party, and his local supporters have issued the following statement calling for active circulation of the petitions:

The job can be done! We can get the signatures, if we mobilize the party. Getting 15,000 signatures looks big, until you realize that if every member does a little, the job is done.

Well Done, Sec. 1.

Section 1 got 200 signatures last Sunday, with 14 members on the job. Those were gotten in the Negro section, where the old party politicians are making a heavy campaign. The Thompson (Republican) forces published statements in the "Defender" warning the voters that if they signed any statement at all, they would lose their right to vote for him.

Litsinger, his opponent for the Republican nomination in the primaries, had vote pledge cards distributed. Tha Thompson forces came with pledges repudiating the Litsinger pledges. The voters have been scared into not signing and other petitions. And in spite of this, signatures are being secured. Lydia Beidel is pushing the work in this section.

Competition Develops.

Section 3, with Nalle Katilus in charge, is getting into the campaign with both feet. Last Sunday, four comrades got a total of 184 names. Section 3 already has well over 250 names.

A triple challenge has been extended and accepted by the Section Secretaries of Sections 1, 3 and 5. Last night, Bill Matheson of Section 5 said to Nellie Katilus, "We're going to get more names than Section 3." But Nellie said "You won't." Today, when section 1 was asked to get into the three-cornered fight, Lydia Beidel said "I'm game." The fight is on.

And speaking of challenges, Sections 4 and 6 are evenly matched. We will watch them both. Section 4 secretary has accepted. And we are sure that Section 4 will respond.

Remember—you have until March 5th to bring the last lists to the party office at 19 S. Lincoln St. Each party member should now have filled at least one list of 24 names. Have you done your Communist duty? If not, do it now!

THE NEW MASSES GOES TO NEWARK

THE hero in this picture is none other than District Attorney Smith, of Newark, N. J., who is determined to save his fair city from the insidious influence of the New Masses. The fact that the poor wages paid young girls in Newark, drives them into prostitution and makes Newark one of the largest centers of prostitution in the east does not disturb District Attorney Smith. He has decided that the lecherous and obscene, (and he doesn't like its political views). So go the New Masses must.

state department with the dispatch.

Troops of the other powers are already patrolling the international settlement and throwing up barricades.

Outside the settlement, in the native city, the masses are ready to welcome the Cantonese. Troops of the defeated Shanghai army are falling back on the city and troops of the northern army are coming in, presumably to act as reinforcements, but looting is feared. In the meantime the Cantonese army is sweeping on toward Shanghai with all defenser swept aside.

U. S. Forces To Land.

Landing of American forces to act jointly wih Britain in Shanghai was forecast earlier in the day when the American minister at Peking joined in a note of warning to the Chinese.

Most of the American warships are alongside the whorfs of the international settlement, and can land troops in this way without passing through the seething native section, it was stated.

Imperialists Extend Lines.

HANKOW, Feb. 25.—The imperialist powers today extended their lines outside the international settlement and landed heavy artillery from their warships as the armies of the nationalist government captured Sunking, the last stronghold of the militarists in the way of the victorious revolutionary forces.

Soldiers of the Sun Chuan-Fang armies are now in full retreat and are looting in the suburbs of Shanghai.

Italian and Japanese troops are said to be aiding the British. The imperialists have practically taken over the entire city of Shanghai. They threaten to establish a "neutral zone" taking in a territory extending twenty five miles beyond Shanghai.

in his way to demand his wrinkled clothes and drove to his home and his wife. Then he went to the bank and his earnings on whatever the small boggers were able to supply. But the millionaire banker cannot see that there is wrong with the principle of the law or some other disgruntled beggar may have squealed on him. The judge gave him 30 days in the poorhouse and Mrs. Malone will be back from a trip to Havana by the time Mr. Malone is able to resume his job. Malone should open a bank, ask the people to let him take care of their money, give himself a title and a respectable salary and spend half the year in Europe. No judge would dare send him to jail, even if he robbed the bank. Even beggars should be choosers.

Another big labor victory was scored in England. The tory candidate was defeated by a large majority. This Labor Party success is further proof that the gentleman by the name of Casson who recently wrote in the New York Evening Post that British labor was turning away from class political action and giving more to the capitalist parties was lying. Not that the leaders of the British Labor Party, such men as MacDonald, Snowden and Thomas are a whit less imperialistic than Baldwin and Churchill. The significance of the victory is that the masses are turning their backs on the capitalist parties and voting the labor ticket. Later they will turn their backs on the MacDonalds and recognize in the leadership of the Communist Party the only one that points the way to the overthrow of imperialism.

THE Central Executive Committee of the All-Union Soviet Congress reports a revenue of over five billion rubles and expenditures of 4,900,000,000. The government is able to place the sum of 100,000,000 in reserve. Not so bad. This does not prove that the workers' state can industry. The Soviet Union started out without nothing left over from the Czarist regime but a legacy of demoralization, inefficiency and corruption, combined with a hostile capitalist world which waged war on the young Workers' Republic with fire, sword and boycott. That the Soviet Union could survive despite this hostile array is the greatest marvel in history. It should bring a thrill to the heart of every worker in whom the divine fire of rebellion has not turned into ashes. It is an omen of the complete victory of the social revolution.

THE New York World finds the British note to the Soviet Union proper and a legitimate protest against practices, that, as Mr. MacDonald said no government could tolerate." The World compares this action with the accusations of Bolshevism made by Coolidge and Kellogg against Mexico. The World is just as dishonest and hypocritical as the British note. Pulitzer's organ is aware of England's attempt to organize hostile blocks against the Soviet Union. Indeed before the editorial in question saw the light of day a Polish-Lithuanian pact was signed at the instigation of England with the object of isolating the Soviet Union and giving the empire a base of operations. The "liberal" World is just as reactionary under the skin as its more candid contemporaries

Why not? There are no fundamental differences between the political gangsters that are gunning for the privilege of looting the second richest city in the country. Thompson is almost certain to be elected mayor. The workers will be no better off under his regime than they were under that of the big business servant Dever.

Supreme Court Will Dodge Issue in Case Of Kansas vs. K.K.K.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Formal opinion by the supreme court dismissing the appeal of the Ku Klux Klan of Georgia from a Kansas order danying the klan the right to operate in that state unless it complies with the State Foreign Corporation Laws is expected to be handed down next Monday. After hearing attorneys for the klan argue the case, Chief Justice Taft and other justices indicated that the court is without jurisdiction.

Big Banking Interests Guide the Pen of Cal Coolidge at Washington

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

AT no time has the puppet nature of the Coolidge presidency been better revealed than in his veto of the McNary-Haugen Farm Relief Bill and his signing of the McFadden-Pepper Banking Bill, both of which passed thru the upper and the lower houses of congress.

Out of the west comes the roar of protest that the industrial East has dictated the Coolidge decisions. But that hardly hits the nail on the head. Coolidge's pen, as he signed or refuses to sign legislation that comes to him from congress is moved at the dictates of the great international financiers, whose power is centered in Wall Street, and who have more to say today about what transpires in the White House than at any time since the executive mansion was built.

The bankers control in great industry. This is shown in the Morgan organization and control of the steel trust and the General Motors Corporation that pushes Henry Ford to the wall in the auto industry. Banker control has been established over the Chicago packing industry. The banks run the railroads, clearly revealed in the disposition of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, following its bankruptcy, and clearer still in the struggle raging between the New York Central and the Pennsylvania Railroads.

Let the farmers understand, therefore, that it was great finance with its home in the East, that crushed their hopes for the very conservative McNary-Haugen Farm Relief measure, while at the same time getting the field of approval of their government at Washington for a bank bill that will "wipe out all the little bankers inside of ten years", according to one senator.

The McNary-Haugen bill was designed principally to aid the rich farmers and those who live off the working farmers,—the landlords, food profiteers, the railroads and small bankers, who are in a strategic position to seize for themselves any increases in prices won for the staple products of the land. The McNary-Haugen bill was not intended to alleviate in the least the conditions of the millions of farm workers, tenant farmers and mortgage farmers, whose lot grows steadily worse, but who have not yet developed sufficient class solidarity to wage a national struggle in support of their grievances.

Of course, the arguments advanced by Coolidge in support of his veto of the McNary-Haugen measure are too thin to offer even the slightest screen to hide the president's servility to Wall Street.

Coolidge objects to the selection of a Federal Farm Board from nominees suggested by farmers' organizations. He claims that is "unconstitutional" because it will take away his appointive power. That ought to rouse a roar of laughter. When it comes to appointing members of the interstate commerce commission or any other important government body, Coolidge quickly turns his ear to Wall Street to get his orders. The truth is that the money power is jealous of its hold on the executive power in the government. It will not surrender any of this power to even the rich farmers and their allies. Taking the position that, "We are the government!" these financiers rather struggle to strengthen the government's executive department power.

Similarly, Coolidge raises the arguments that the McNary-Haugen bill concerns itself with only one third of the products of the American farms. That is not the fault of the authors of the bill. They included everything they could, uniting for the first time, for instance, the cotton growers of the South with the corn and wheat raisers of the North. They are willing to bring in all the rest.

It was long argued that Coolidge might sign the bill as a matter of political expediency in his effort to win the republican nomination next year. This hope has now been crushed. Wall Street does not need to play this way. Coolidge's veto of the McNary-Haugen bill helps him into the political ash can. But Wall Street has many other candidates that it will trot out, claiming for them the political purity of driven snow. And Wall Street has hopes that the workers and farmers will again come forward, happy and obedient, to again offer themselves as victims of the capitalist political shell game.

Bitter disappointment will be visited upon the capitalist mentors of Cal Coolidge, if the workers and farmers develop their unity in the building of the Labor Party, that will not only fight the big capitalists but also the servile middle class. Coolidge will not be re-elected next year, but labor will have made no progress unless it drives forward in the building of its own power independent of and in bitter opposition to the exploiters, big and little.

NO BOULDER DAM UNLESS CLOTURE RULING CARRIES

Six Day Filibuster to Go On Unless Gagged

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — After surviving a six-day filibuster, the senate this afternoon "suspended" consideration of the Boulder Dam to begin consideration of the new public buildings bill.

This action did not displace the Boulder Dam measure from its privileged status as the senate's "unfinished business" because of an old and seldom used rule. The rule was invoked by Vice-president Dawes to aid the westerners.

The chance of the Boulder Dam to pass seems to depend entirely on securing a two-thirds vote of the senate tomorrow for the gag rule shutting off debate. The cloture petition is headed by the name of Hiram Johnson, who has often denounced such procedure.

One of the worst legislative jams in memory developed in the senate as a result of the filibuster against the Boulder Dam measure and the efforts of its advocates to force it to a final vote. A dozen other bills of major importance languished on the sidelines while senators fought over the Colorado River bill or quarreled over precedence for other bills. Few of these measures can be passed between now and adjournment one week hence, it was apparent, unless the Boulder Dam filibuster is broken.

the present study of the Civic Federation warrants the definite conclusion that the entire undertaking was conceived in iniquity, bias and untruthfulness.

"Every one knows Mr. Easley's all too long record of persistent opposition toward social legislation. It is because of this practical and pharisaical attitude that the United Mine Workers and several other international labor organizations now have constitutional prohibitions against their officers joining the Civic Federation.

Many Reactionaries.

"The chairman of this particular old age pension study is Tecumseh Sherman, an old reactionary and a man who has consistently written against old age pensions regardless of all facts and truth. Mr. Easley admits that the money for this investigation has come from the Carnegie Corporation whose past unfair position toward labor in general and unions in particular are of historic record. And to cap it all I have reliable evidence that your local investigators are definitely instructed to obtain only such information as will disprove the facts found by the various state commissions and especially those found by the Pennsylvania commission.

"Since when has the Carnegie Corporation become converted to labor unionism and assumed the championship of labor legislation?"

Archibald Stevenson, John Hays Hammond, Geo. B. Cortelyou, Elon Hooker, Nicholas E. Brady and E. K. Hall of the Bell Telephone trust are named as anti-labor members of the executive committee of the Civic Federation.

He personally appeared on the platform at the last meeting of the New York Trades and Labor Council, and in an hysterical speech led the attack on the left wing needle trades members present.

Predict Panic in Orgy Of Building Profit

hind building progress. Steady employment with rising wages seems characteristic of the organized building industries for the past three years will cease as an abrupt halt in the financial upon seems to grief as predicted by Ottinger.

Ottinger's comment is aimed at the New York bond houses which have participated in the building finance orgy. The billions of dollars of profits and dividends which have been buried at Wall Street investment companies for profitable investment have proved the last to real estate mortgage and bond companies to engage in the shadiest of deals.

The G. L. Miller Co., a bond house in which American Federation of Labor bankers were deeply involved, was the first of the big houses to crash last year, and Ottinger asserts that more will follow Miller if a halt is not called.

Stagger Business World.

"Unless greater safeguards are thrown around the investments of the public in the enterprises promoted by these concerns, big and little, a series of financial crashes that will stagger the business world is bound to ensue," said Ottinger.

He served notice on such concerns that he was prepared to prosecute them under the Martin Anti-Stock Fraud Law if the regulations affecting realty bond issues are not rigidly observed in the future.

Up to September 26, last, 15 leading real estate bond houses had sold $971,000,000 bonds for 1926. In 1925, the same houses sold $291,000,000 according to the attorney general.

Gambling With Funds.

"Some companies have been guilty of gambling with investor's funds," Ottinger said. "Failure to observe the regulations promulgated by the anti-stock fraud bureau will provoke the exercise of the most drastic provisions of the Martin law against these companies. Such companies which prove delinquent will be effectually suppressed by injunction and foreign corporations guilty of violating this code will be excluded from the state.

"The state is a virgin field of operation for these real estate bond concerns. Our investors annually absorb upwards of $300,000,000 of these securities, a fact which calls for the most energetic enforcement of the regulations the attorney general's office has promulgated.

"Observance of the rules the attorney general has framed for the handling of the funds of these enterprises will prevent a repetition of the G. L. Miller and Co. failure. Ignorance of them will surely precipitate a panic of fightful proportions."

U.S. HUNGARIANS BLOCK MOVE FOR LOAN TO HORTHY

Workers Bank in Two Big Organizations

Two new organizations of Hungarians in the United States—the bulk of them workers—have been formed. The Federated Hungarian Societies of America brings together about 200 organizations with a total membership of 200,000. The federated group aims to aid naturalization of the million Hungarians in this country.

An Anti-Horthy League for Hungarians has been started to combat efforts of the Horthy regime to erect a Kossuth monument in New York. The proposed Horthy move is a blind, says Hugo Gellert, labor artist, for sending 50 agents of the Hungarian dictator to America in the hope of drumming up financial and other support for the reactionary government of Hungary. Horthy's regime has been marked by persecution of workers and their organizations.

Need Monument In Budapest.

"If the supporters of the Horthy terrorists regime in this country are anxious to erect a monument of Kossuth," Hugo Gellert declared, "let them erect one in Budapest. There is no monument to Kossuth in the most important city in Hungary."

The Anti-Horthy League holds its first big meeting 2 p. m., March 13th, at Central Opera House, New York.

Aims of the Hungarian societies federation include: A delegate council to defend and represent all Hungarian-Americans and their institutions; school for naturalization of members; co-ordination of present competing organizations' work; a forum for free lectures, exhibits, theatricals, etc., to aid Hungarian-American community life; pooling of resources of all Hungarian sick and benevolent societies for erection of a sanitarium; publication of a federation newspaper; combatting all forms of reaction.

Brooklyn Painters Will Demand $14.00 Scale Beginning April First

On and after April 1st the Brooklyn painters, within the jurisdiction of District Council No. 28, will demand a wage scale of $14 per day.

Preparations are being made to enforce this demand and in case of refusal of the painting contractors to pay the new scale the union is going to go on a strike. District council 28 has asked the endorsement for this strike from the painters in New York and the Queens, who upon request have pledged full cooperation to assist the Brooklyn brothers in realizing their demand.

This new wage scale was drawn up in view of the fact that the building program for the coming season is one of the biggest of the previous years and will give employment to every painter available. It is stated also that the present rate of wages required by the job fully justifies a wage increase, especially so since the painting trade is seasonal compelling a painter to be idle for 4 and 5 months during the winter.

High Rents Feature Housing in Bronx

waiting should be interesting to them. And if they need to be convinced, they might ask themselves how long they lived at their present house, how much they paid, why they moved, and how long they waited for this opportunity.

Before I describe the living conditions in the various sections, let's digest a few facts and figures first. To give an average wage and rental for the entire Bronx would be erroneous, for the variation is startling. But the average salary of the majority of wage-earners is $36. Their rent averages $45. Among the poorer people, the unskilled laborers, the average salary is $30—the rent is $25. These figures apply chiefly to East Bronx, Hunts Point and South Pelham. But among the middle class, who learn on an average of $48 a week, the rental is only $35.

Who bears the burden of the rents? The same person that bears the burden of taxation—the poor man.

Jerry Building.

It's a trifle hard to describe the tenements of the Bronx. They aren't exactly terrible—they haven't had time to be. But their real danger is not the things that are obvious, but those that aren't apparent.

The buildings, most of them housing twenty families or more, were slapped up in a hurry. Cheap stucco was put on the outsides; this has been knocked down by snow and ice. But that's the landlord's worry. What concerns the tenant and therefore us is the fact that because of the hurry, the houses were improperly built, internally.

"Walk Up" Apartments.

The rooms are exceptionally small, crowding everybody, entirely eliminating privacy. The beautiful sunlight, which the Bronx has in magnificent abundance, can only be enjoyed by half the tenants, and then only in one room, either the kitchen or the parlor. The apartment houses are tall, seven or eight stories high, but few of them have elevators. The tired mother must climb all those flights of stairs after a hard day's work.

Why landlords are not forced to build fire escapes for each and every house, I do not know. The law requires it. Yet, throughout east Bronx and as far north as Pelham, I found houses with no fire escapes, veritable firetraps.

Wash lines, to improve the appearance of the houses, I suppose, have been placed on the roof. The poor tired mother has to lug her wet wash five and six flights, then, with wind howling all around her, she hangs up her clothes with icy fingers.

Landlord Rarely Loses.

But if you have money to invest, there's no mind how tainted your income is, take a tip and invest in the Bronx. The Bronx landlord, according to the dockets, is forever in court, and he rarely loses. He is given every opportunity to raise the rent and in the summary of one case, I found that the judge had given him instruction in how to worm through a loophole in the emergency rent law and thus be able to raise the rents a little more.

If you've got to be a gouger, do it legally. But don't do it like the bloodsuckers in east Bronx, who, taking advantage of the ignorance of the Italian tenants, shake a speed warrant in their faces, and tell them with a straight face they'll be locked up if they don't pay an increase. This was done in countless cases, a local lawyer proved to me.

Be Low—But Within Law.

If you've got to be low, be low. That's quite in conformity with the ideology of the New York landlord. But don't be illegal. Three landlords were fined for doing that up in the Bronx. And that's against ethics, as the Bronx Ward of the United Real Estate Owners' Association will tell you.

Italian Press Guarded.

ROME, Feb. 25.—While the Italian press is guarded in commenting upon the British protest to Russia against the spread of anti-British propaganda, it is apparent that Italy is fearful of an armed clash between Britain and Russia unless, according to Lavoro D'Italia, London, effects a pact with the Cantonese based on the pound sterling and renews its alliance with Japan.

The Manager's Corner

ADVERTISING BRINGS THE SHEKELS.

You remember the old story of the farmer who complained because he was unable to walk thru the forest with a long ladder, which he carried horizontally. So it is with many comrades who try to do things in the hardest possible way, when there is a simple, easy way to do the same thing more effectively. This is as true about helping The DAILY WORKER as it is about other things.

Many comrades do not realize what a substantial source of income there is for The DAILY WORKER in advertising. There are many advertisers who would be glad to advertise in The DAILY WORKER, as the National Labor Daily. It is simply a case of failure to approach these people.

Advertisements can easily be obtained from restaurants patronized by our readers, doctors, dentists, lawyers and other professional men, who want to reach a radical crowd, or who are sympathetic with our paper.

Every affair which is arranged by a labor, co-operative or fraternal organization, by a social club or group of workers should make arrangements whereby a certain sum is set aside for advertising in The DAILY WORKER.

One important fact, however, must be kept in mind, and that is the question of payment. We can get a paper full of ads, if we don't ask for money. Radicals especially, are very lax on this point. As far as possible payment should be made in advance, unless the customer is a very responsible party, with established financial credit. We are running a special line of professional, restaurant ads at $15.00 a month and $1.50 per inch for a single insert. Out-of-town ads receive a special reduced rate of $10.00 a month, and $1.00 per inch. Here is a practical way to help The DAILY WORKER. Why not try it?—BERT MILLER.

An Imperialist Rival Appears in the Nicaraguan Situation.

Now that Great Britain is sending a battleship to Nicaragua to protect His Majesty's subjects, will Secretary of State Kellogg please have one of his bright young men explain how American intervention has prevented interference by European powers?

This, it will be remembered was one of the principal reasons given by Kellogg for armed intervention. The Monroe Doctrine was in danger according to this Coolidge appointee; if America did not act decisively we might lose prestige overseas.

The protection of lives of American citizens and other nationals is not necessary now nor have any foreigners been injured or even menaced during the whole course of the recent struggle.

A letter from an American in Nicaragua read by Senator Borah to the Foreign Relations Committee puts the case thus:

> No Americans have any cause for complaint. We are treated with consideration. The only Americans who are complaining are a few who secured certain concessions on mahogany lands from Chamorro and Diaz and which they will lose if the Diaz rule falls. IT WILL FALL UNLESS HELD UP BY OUR MONEY, FOR THE PEOPLE ARE AGAINST DIAZ. (Emphasis ours.)

The protection of lives of nationals who are in colonial regions trying to get rich always comes in handy when larger issues, such as the control of a canal route and the establishment of a base of operations against Mexico and South America are the real objectives of imperialism.

The dispatch of a warship by Britain to the scene of conflict is no mere routine matter. It has a direct connection with Wall Street's drive into Latin-America and also with the situation in the Far East.

Just as the United States sends battleships to Chinese waters as a display of sea power to impress both the Chinese masses and her imperialist rivals so does Great Britain send one of her war fleet to Nicaraguan waters.

Only a fool will believe that Great Britain is concerned over personal danger of her subjects from Nicaraguans with American battleships off both coasts of Nicaragua and with all the principal cities held by U. S. marines.

The dispatch of a British battleship to Nicaragua, in spite of the effusive denials of the state department of any political significance attaching to the incident, means that the occupation of Nicaragua by American forces has now become of first class importance internationally, that Wall Street and its state department meet rival forces in a field of politics which the most strenuous efforts have failed to confine to the western hemisphere.

The invasion of Nicaragua has sharpened the imperialist rivalry between America and Great Britain.

Cooper Union Meeting Wipes Out Pretensions of Right Wing in Furriers' Union

The overflow meeting called by the left wing Joint Board of the Furriers' Union for Cooper Union Thursday night, was a brilliant contrast to the small and gangster-ridden meeting held by the right wing the day before.

2,500 furriers—all who could get into the hall—cheered and applauded Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board, and Louis Hyman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Joint Board. The spirit of the meeting was militant and optimistic. It pledged the full support of the left wing majority in the furriers', and cloakmakers' unions to the strikers who are being persecuted by Sigman, Beckerman, Schachtman, Woll, Rosalsky and Co. and contributed $5,000 as a first payment.

Unity for defense of arrested strikers, unity for organization of the shops, unity in the struggle to prevent the right wing destroying the unions—this was the program voiced by all the speakers and this was the program endorsed by the rank and file.

No one can fail to understand, after reading the report of this meeting that the right wing pretensions to leadership in the Furriers' Union in New York are of the same character as those of the grand dukes to power in the Soviet Union.

RAISE $5,000,000 TO FEED CULTURE TO WORKERS THRU CHAUTAUQUAS

Awfully Anxious to Keep Workers Out of Mischief During All Their Leisure Time

A $5,000,000 fund for the large-scale dissemination of bunk is being raised.

Expert bunk-shooters like Edward Bok, Ida Tarbell, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, William Hard and Simeon D. Fess, Ohio standpatter, are supporting the move. Hard boiled capitalists who know their onions—like Charlie Schwab, Otto Kahn, Henry Morgenthau and Samuel Mackeboerts, chairman of the board of the Chatham & Phenix National Bank, are supplying the coin.

One would think that the schools and the capitalist newspapers are supplying all the bunk that it is necessary to keep the American worker fed. But the National Community Foundation thinks differently.

The National Community Foundation proposes to raise $5,000,000 to subsidize chautauquas and correspondence schools throughout the country. "The great increase in the amount of leisure time that we all are acquiring," says a statement issued by MacRobert's office at the Chatham & Phenix National Bank yesterday, "presents a situation that is fraught with danger unless adequate educational programs of the popular type are furnished."

The scheme is one of which many employers have found so effective. Feed the workers jazz, Fourth of July orations, and a picnic now and then —and keep 'em quiet.

Nicaragua's Struggle for Freedom

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

THE occupation of Nicaragua by American troops under which the country becomes a protectorate like Panama, closes another chapter in the history of intimidation and intervention which has been made by the U. S. state and war departments in the last 17 years.

The history of American-Nicaraguan relations during this period consists of a series of warlike acts on the part of America, acts perpetrated behind the thinnest veil of justification, and on the part of the Nicaraguan masses, of heroic sacrifice in the brief periods of peace and unbesitating bravery on the field of battle facing overwhelming odds.

SUBJUGATION of Nicaragua as a studied policy of American imperialism began coincidently with the acquisition of the Panama canal zone under the Roosevelt administration—which is another sordid chapter in American history.

Taft carried out the policy of the "big stick" which Roosevelt merely named but did not originate—It took on its militant form under McKinley with the ousting of Spain in 1898 and the establishment of complete American hegamony of the Caribbean area.

A feasible canal route thru Nicaraguan territory—a route which some engineers claim is far superior to Panama's—is the main reason why American imperialism began to look with covetuous eyes at this little country. Since that time American interests in Mexico, Central and South America have increased tremendously and Nicaragua now is a pivot for the wheel of imperialist enterprise in the republics to the south.

ROOSEVELT not only grabbed the Panama canal zone but laid the basis for a duplication of this feat with the Nicaraguan route as the prize.

Taft continued the aggression begun by Roosevelt. A Latin-American carrier describes the series of "incidents," as the diplomats call them, as follows:

"The North American Government, interested in preventing the possible construction of a new inter-oceanic canal thru Nicaragua, sent a squadron into Nicaraguan waters in April, 1908, composed of the cruisers Washington, Colorado, South Dakota, Albany, etc., with a contingent of 4,000 men and instructions to avail themselves of a pretext for landing. The president of Nicaragua, who at that time was Don Jose Santos Zelaya, tried to temporize with Captain Moore, head of the squadron. But shortly after, on October 10, 1909, Mr. Moffat, the North American consul at Bluefields, on the Atlantic coast of Nicaragua, supported an insurrection led by the governor of this region, Senor Juan J. Estrada. Mr. Knox (then secretary of state) in a note which aroused much comment in Latin America, declared the revolution legitimate, and handed Senor Zelaya's representative in Washington his passports. In the course of the struggle, General Toledo, who commanded the lawful Nicaraguan forces, had shot two American subjects (citizens—the writer evidently has in mind the imperialist character of the U. S. government—W. F. D.) whom he had caught in the act of trying to dynamite the government's ships.

"This threw light on the character of the revolution and the leader of it himself, Senor Estrada, took it upon himself to confirm this later, by declaring in the New York Times of September 10, 1912, that this movement had received financial aid from North American companies, mentioning the firm of Joseph W. Beers, which contributed $200,000, and Samuel Weil, who gave $150,000. Convinced that the revolutionaries would receive every sort of help from North America, the president of Nicaragua, not to prolong the struggle, thought it patriotic to resign, and left the country on board the United States gunboat General Guerrero, after handing over his powers, in accordance with the constitution and by the consent of congress, to Dr. Don Jose Madriz, a jurist, having no connection with politics. This government was recognised by many nations, but not by the United States, which continued to support the fictitious revolution. When Senor Madriz gave orders to attack Bluefields, he was met by the fact that the harbor was defended by North American sailors, and that the cruisers of that country were blockading the coast. Realising that it would not be a civil but an international struggle, he renounced his mandate on August 26, 1910, and left for Mexico, where he died shortly afterwards. So the U. S. under the presidency of Mr. Taft took possession of the customs of Nicaragua, and thus was started the regime which still continues to this day." (Manuel Ugarte—"The Destiny of a Continent"—translated from the Spanish—Edited by J. Fred Rippey, Assistant Professor of History, University of Chicago, in his most arrogant and insulting manner. (—Emphasis mine.)

THE Nicaraguan national debt, owed to New York bankers, was created and this was the pretext given for the conspiracy against Nicaraguan sovereignty and the application of the doctrine of "force without stint or limit."

The answer of the Nicaraguan masses was one of the most touching evidences of their willingness to sacrifices personal welfare for freedom from imperialist domination. The people began to raise money by popular subscription to pay the debt. Ugarte says:

"Nothing could be more painful and moving than these lists, in which were to be seen the tears of a nationality. The newspapers of Nicaragua of March 12, 1912, set aside wide columns in which the most humble offerings could be read side by side with the contributions of the most-well classes; Samuel Gavarrete, his whole possessions; Louis Delgado, the proceeds of the sale of her bed; Juana Gutierrez, the house where she lives; Laura Roque, her sewing-machine; Manuel de Aragon, day laborer, the value of twelve days' work; Raman Robleto, his cart with two oxen; Joaquina Velasquez, licensed mendicant, her day's collection, 20 centavos."

VOLUMES have been written on the subject of the sacrifices the French populace made to pay the indemnity demanded by Germany after the war of 1870-71. Particularly in America was a paean of praise for the French sung when the house of Morgan drove this nation to war against Germany to protect the loans made to France and the other allied powers. But no American writer has yet felt inspired to write the epic of the sacrifices noted above.

But the efforts of the Nicaraguans were not confined to attempts to pay off the American usurers in gold. Many Nicaraguans gave their blood and lives in the struggle against "the colossus of the north."

NICARAGUAN exiles in Costa Rica, Julian Irias, Rodolfo Espinosa, Alejandro Bermudez and General Zeledon organized and led an expedition to assist the national revolutionary movement headed by General Mena.

American troops were landed to defend the puppet government set up by the American state department, the town of Masaya was bombarded, Zeledon killed and the revolution crushed.

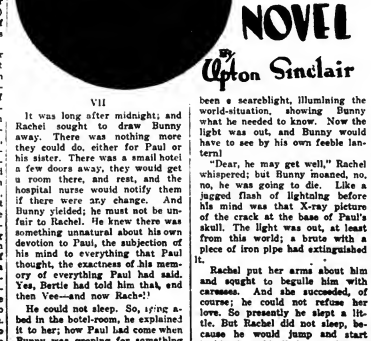
ANOTHER Latin-American writer has described this affair:

"The battle began with sustained artillery fire (North American), which the marines kept up for twenty-four hours against the light and improvised fortifications protecting the town of Masaya. An assault was afterwards made on them. The resistance was weak owing to lack of munitions, especially for artillery.

"The field was continued in the plaza with the aid of the forces of Francisco Diaz, and after a few minutes the white flag was up and the citizens were disarmed. Owing to Mena's surrender he had not been able to receive those he expected not the reinforcements from Granada.

"Zeledon was pursued, overtaken, captured, killed. How? The patriots maintain that he was captured and assassinated. Others on the other side say he died of his wounds. History, which will take possession of the victim's name to honor it as it deserves, will clear up this point; for we do not wish to take this task upon us, even with the documents before us, for fear of being blinded by admiration for the hero and indignation against those who were the executors, both of him and of his country." (Doctrina Wilson—By Policarpo Bonilla, ex-president of Honduras.—Emphasis mine.).

THE press of American imperialism pictures the Nicaraguan masses—all Latin Americans for that matter—as pliant instruments in the hands of unscrupulous politicians. The record shows, however, that Latin-American populace has been far more discerning in this respect than the American masses. The fact that war can be waged on a nation of 600,000 people by Wall Street's government, that it has been waged off and on ever since 1906, without any effective protest in America, and with millions of people believing that no protest is justified, is proof of the ease with which the American masses have been deceived and the need for agitation to bring action.



AMERICAN armed forces are in Nicaragua to stay and to make similar forays on the neighboring republics when it suits the purpose of Wall Street to have this done.

They will be withdrawn only when the workers and farmers of both continents unite their forces against the common enemy.

The history of the determined struggles against imperialist aggression, like those in Nicaragua, show that the American masses need not fear that their Latin-American brothers-in-arms will be backward in the fight.

All over Latin-America the workers and peasants form the great majority of the population. The increasing necessity for resistance to American imperialism will tend to give their organizations and economic struggles an increasingly revolutionary character.

In Mexico, Central and South America are the allies of the American masses. Together they will write the next chapter in the history of the struggle against imperialism in the Western Hemisphere.

It was long after midnight, and Rachel sought to keep Bunny away. There was nothing more they could do, either for Paul or his sister. There was a small hotel a few doors away, they would get a room there, and rest, and the hospital nurse would notify them if there were any change. And Bunny yielded; he must not be unfair to Rachel. He knew there was something unnatural about his own devotion to Paul, the subjection of his mind to everything that Paul thought, the exactness of his memory of everything Paul had said. Yes, Bertie had told him that, and then Yes—and now Rachel!

He could not sleep. So, lying awake in the hotel-room, he explained it to her; how Paul had come when Bunny was groping for something different and better in his life. Paul had given him an ideal—something stern and hard—self-sufficiency, independence of judgment, determination to face life and understand it, and not be drawn away in pursuit of money or pleasure. Bunny had not been able to follow that ideal—no, he had lived in luxury, and gone chasing after a woman; but he had had the vision, the longing to be like Paul.

And then, at each new crisis in his life, Paul would come along, a sort of standard by which Bunny could measure himself and what he was doing, and realize how little success he was having. Paul had taught him about the workers, and how they felt; Paul had been the incarnation of the new, awakening working-class. Paul's mind had been a searchlight, illumining the world-situation, showing Bunny what he needed to know. Now the light was out, and Bunny would have to see by his own feeble lantern!

"Dear, he may get well," Rachel whispered; but Bunny moaned, no, he was going to die. Like a jagged flash of lightning before his mind was that X-ray picture of the crack at the base of Paul's skull. The light was out, at least from this world; a brute with a piece of iron pipe had extinguished it.

Rachel put her arms about him and sought to beguile him with caresses. And she succeeded, of course; he could not refuse her love. So presently he slept a little. But Rachel did not sleep, because he would jump and start in his sleep, his limbs would quiver—just the way she felt when the great guns went off!

What was Bunny doing? Fighting those brutes with their clubs and hatchets and iron pipe? Or back in the old days, when he had hovered; watching Paul and Ruth, watching events that wrung his soul? Watching Dad deprive the family of their land; watching the oil operators crush the first strike; watching the government tear Paul away and make him into a strikebreaker for Wall Street bankers; watching Vernon Roscoe throw Paul into prison; watching capitalism with its world-wide system of terror drive Paul here and there, harry him, malign him, threaten him—until at last it hired the brute with the iron pipe!

FOOTNOTES TO THE NEWS

First Forum Staff.—The great American confessional is under way, folks. Souls purged of secrecy. Hidden corners of a million lives ventilated by publicity. Sorrows spread where all may see and be forewarned. Everybody tells everything. The Catholic confessional is a joke by comparison. The psycho-analysts' confessional doesn't shine in. Chambermaids, prime ministers, "society" matrons, plumbers, jazz babies, evangelists, captains of industry, yeggs, stumble over each other in the crush to exhibit their private lives. An epidemic of frankness rages in our midst. Any of us may be hit by the contagion.

Eminent novelists tell why they hate their wives, why they didn't become carpenters instead of writers, how they sweat to create. See the Cosmopolitan, McClure's, the American Mercury, etc. Ex-feminists and ex-radicals tell how they got that way. See The Nation, The New Republic, The New Leader, etc. The housekeeper of the White House tells the bed-room secrets of our Presidents. Fat millionaires tell what they did with their first nickle or dime, how they got their first jobs, how they made their first billion. See Success, The Nation's Business, etc.

And the great anonymous mass of humble stenographers, prostitutes, shop girls, chorus steppers, understair heroes and heroines reveal their One Voluptuous Nights, their Fast and Furious Romances, their Babes Out of Wedlock. Heart-throb. Sinners in Satin. Purple Pleasures. Sticky, gooey romance. Fifteen-cent, 20-cent and 25-cent thrills and adventure. Tons of it spawned by the presses every day. Bernarr Macfadden—the greatest Father Confessor of all time. True Stories, Romances, Experiences. True Ghost Stories. True Lies. I Confess, Marriage Stories, Secrets, Sex. Still they come.

Then there are the tabloids and their full-sized imitators. By Peaches Herself, Daddy Himself, Charlie Chaplin's Best Friend, Valentino's Sweetest Sweetheart. By Gilda Grey, Houdini's Ghost, the Murderer Himself, etc., etc. Each of them guaranteed, sealed with the picture and the original signature of the author. Confessions, revelations, inside stuff, the Whole Truth at Last Exclusively in This Paper.

No newspaper or magazine, however solid and respectable it purports to be, can escape the sweep of the confessional urge. And the reading public believes. It matters nothing that Peaches and Daddy testify in court that they had not even seen their "confessions" before publication. It matters nothing that conscience-stricken hack writers admit that they are the authors of the first-person outbursts of mythical sinners. It matters nothing that the confessions of the supposedly uneducated cabaret singers, department store counter girls, etc., lapse into excellent English. We believe. There can be no confessional without Faith.

The capital I has come into its own. It is to the new confessional what the cross is to the Roman brand. Unless the epidemic is stopped the third person will be eliminated from American grammar. Only the first and the second will remain: I for confession, and you for accusation.

First person dope for the masses. An opiate and soporific. To give them make-believe thrills and to keep their minds off other things. To keep them satisfied while at work and to prevent them from thinking in their leisure.

W. Reynolds of Detroit writes:

"Riding around our fair city in our somewhat less than fair transportation system I have observed groups of foreign-looking persons feverishly tearing up our streets and throwing up barricades of paving stones and other debris. This activity is accompanied by an open and flagrant display of red flags. Most ominous of all, I have noticed swarthy Mexicans among them obviously inspiring this assault on our institutions. Do you think Mr. Kellogg should be advised of these goings on?"

Yes, Comrade Reynolds. Any ditch-digger who works feverishly for the wages he gets in Detroit deserves to be denounced.

LETTER TO A LUNATIC

Dear Lester:

Lester dear, I always keep my promise. I promised to tell you all the latest news as best I can. I mean that I don't know it so well myself, but will do my best. I know how awful bard it must be for you, dear, in that lovely asylum without papers to cheer you up. So here goes.

Both the president, Coolidge, and the head of the navy, Wilbur, have been saying things about naval armaments. First Coolidge sent a letter to other presidents and kings in other countries. Then Wilbur made a speech about preparedness. Near as I can make out they think that we ought to get together right away and reduce our navy because there may be a world revolution any day and we need the largest army and navy in the world to put it down. Two countries, France and Italy, refused to talk about smaller navies. The answer for France was made by Briand, the same fellow I mean who got the noble prize for peace. Japan and England and the United States will therefore have to talk it over between themselves. But all of them have a lot of warships in Shanghai and the way things are going maybe the Chinese will reduce their navies for them and save them a lot of trouble.

Also I know you will be very glad to learn that there are only 5,000 Communists in our country. It's a wonder there are enough to go around. I mean the way thousands of them are in every union, such as the miners, the cloakmakers, the fur workers, the carpenters and so on; and a lot more are needed to spread poison in the army, the navy, the women's clubs, the public schools, and so forth. At one meeting, in Madison Square Garden, there were 20,000 of them according to all the papers, so it all goes to show, doesn't it?

Lester darling, a woman took up swimming to reduce and she swum the Catalina channel. Well, she didn't succeed, so why should the papers make so much fuss? I mean she didn't succeed in reducing, as I saw her picture. Also you will be glad to be informed that our nation's income last year was $80,982,000,000, and that there are 200 Americans insured for a $1,000,000 or more. Isn't it wonderful, Lester? Also a young boy of 12 killed a storekeeper because he was hungry and needed bread. The picture papers have started a drive to clean up the stage. The stage is dirty. All the picture papers print awful pictures from those shows to prove it.

That's about all for this time, honey, but I will write real soon. Always, always yours,

Sincerely yours,

MYRTLE.

P. S.—Dear Lester, I forgot to tell you also that Chamberlain has sent a letter to Soviet Russia saying that he would start a war if the Bolsheviks do not stop making trouble in Poland, the Baltic countries, China and other parts of the British Empire, which is news, isn't it Lester darling? I mean the same Chamberlain that also got a noble prize for peace.

MYRTLE.

WOLL HEADS ANTI-LABOR SQUAD, SAYS MAURER

Farm Bill Vetoed; Bank Bill Signed

Coolidge On Same Day Ratifies Money Trust and Crushes Weak Attempt at Farm Relief

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—President Coolidge today double-crossed the farm bloc and did his bit for the establishment of a money trust by vetoing the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill and signing the McFadden branch banking bill on one and the same day.

The two bills have been closely united thruout their passage in congress. Both went over as a result of a bargain between the middle western senators back of farm relief, with the Morgan senators, pushing the branch banking act. Vice President Dawes took a leading part in the negotiations by which they were passed. He is reported as having no comment on the action of the President today.

A Brutal Rejection.

That the president would sign the McFadden bill was a foregone conclusion. But that he would veto the farm bill, and do so in the irritatingly insulting manner which he chose, was something of a surprise. In an 8,000 word message accompanying the veto, Coolidge gives as his first reason the appointive power of the president. The election of a farm board is declared unconstitutional, and an opinion to that effect by the attorney-general is enclosed in the message. Secondly, the president thinks the scheme will not work, and thirdly, that it would be a bad thing if it did work.

The terminology of the message is contemptuous and sarcastic. Coolidge flays the farm bloc for singling out only certain farm products for aid and, he says:

"It seems almost incredible that the producers of hogs, corn, wheat, rice, tobacco and cotton should be offered a scheme of legislative relief in which the only persons who are guaranteed a profit are the exporters, packers, millers, cotton spinners and other processors.

Hates Price Fixing.

"Clearly this legislation involves governmental fixing of prices. It gives the proposed federal board almost unlimited authority to fix prices on designated commodities. This is price fixing furthermore on some of tha nation's basic foods and materials. Government price fixing once started has alike no justice and no end. It is an economic folly from which this country has every right to be spared."

Crudely Sarcastic.

Clearly implying that the farm bloc senators were fools and infants, at least in economics, Coolidge railed particularly against the equalization tax as being a law, in effect, that congress shall delegate to a federal farm board, nominated by farmers, the power to fix and collect a tax, called an equalization fee, on certain products produced by those farmers. This certainly contemplates a remarkable delegation of taxing power.

Feels for Farmer Vote.

Then in sudden feeling for the poor persecuted farmer, suffering from evil designs of politicians not attached to the administration bloc, the president declares:

"The bill would impose the bur-

SENATOR BORAH insinuates that Coolidge and Kellogg plotted with the British government to have a British warship sent to Nicaragua to act as a "haven of refuge" for British nationals whose lives might be jeopardized by the civil war raging in that country, a war, which would have been over long ago had not the United States government sent its marines in there to maintain a reactionary puppet of American imperialism in the presidential chair. Here is a splendid opportunity for a serious opposition to send Kellogg scurrying for safety to the wide open spaces of Minnesota.

There is no serious opposition to the administration's Latin-American policy. Borah talks a good deal in congress but Borah is not organizing a mass opposition. Eastern democrats are tied up with Wall Street and the westerners are all wool between the ears. Here is a chance for a good old lion-tail-pulling exercise. What congress needs now is a fellow with imagination like William Hale Thompson of Chicago, who in his campaign for the mayoral nomination on the republican ticket threatened to bust King George in the nose if he came butting into Chicago's business.

When the Prince of Wales is not busy falling off his bloomin' 'orse he is busy slumming in London. The heir to the throne goes around seeing how the great half-fed exist. The prince is not taking those trips of his own accord. The British ruling classes are clever and farsighted. They want to popularize the young man who may yet be king, among the masses. There are hard times in store for the empire and some day when the long pent up grievances of the masses may be expressed in a desire to pull down the state pillars around the ears of the tory and liberal politicians, a popular prince may be an asset.

MAYOR JIMMY WALKER returned from Cuba and Palm Beach and the papers that announced his return also announced that more than seventy padlocked night clubs were unpadlocked. The mayor is a hard worker, but he likes a little relaxation. He may have talked a little about politics with another toiler, ex-mayor Hylan, when the pair met at Palm Beach. Mr. Walker returned without a transit plan, we are told. But the mayor who would solve the transit problem for this city would be cursed by capitalist politicians of this generation and burned in effigy by their political heirs.

MUSSOLINI'S nation-wide campaign to encourage large families has been dislocated by the action of milk contractors in distributing adulterated milk, resulting in a high infantile death rate. All Benito's exhortations went for naught. The next accident that will happen to Mussolini's scheme for a greater supply of cannon fodder may be the production of adulterated children.

Criminals Work With Police in Importing Rum, Says Andrews

Liquor has been imported here under police protection, Gen. L. C. Andrews, dry "Czar," told a house ways and means sub-committee in Washington yesterday in defending "under cover" methods of dry law enforcement.

"The situation in New York is the same as elsewhere, with criminal classes entwined with governing classes," said Andrews.

"I have in mind two cases where liquor ships came to the docks surrounded by the police. The liquor was hauled away in trucks under police protection."

Diaz Sells Out Army, Finance, Sovereignty

Kellogg Publishes Outline of Unequal Treaty

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — An outline of the treaty of alliance between the United States and Nicaragua, amounting virtually to an American protectorate over the country, which President Diaz has proposed to the state department was made public here today in the form of an appeal from Diaz for American public support.

Diaz proposes to give the United States a "permanent right of intervention" if the treaty is consummated, permit American control of Nicaraguan government finance, and American direction of a Nicaraguan constabulary, to be set up after the dissolution of the present armies.

Though the request for a treaty now comes apparently from Diaz, Wall Street's puppet president of Nicaragua, the first reports emenating from Washington were that the state department had demanded that Diaz consent to a protectorate over Nicaragua.

The main outlines of the treaty proposed were also given out by the state department while the Diaz proposals were supposed to be still in the mails.

BIG NAVY CONGRESSMEN NOW TALK TO PUSH BILL FOR TEN CRUISERS

Militarists and Imperialists Take Advantage of Coolidge's Fake Disarmament Offer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — "Big navy" advocates, after winning a smashing victory in the house for funds to begin work on the last three cruisers of the 1924 program, were considering today trying to pass the pending ten-cruiser authorization bill.

The $325,000,000 naval supply bill, to which the three-cruiser amendment was attached, was to be sent to conference again today. As the bill now stands, the senate demands $1,200,000 to begin work on the trio of cruisers, while the house is content with $450,000.

In accepting the amendment, 208 to 172, the house reversed its previous action in the face of the apparent disapproval of President Coolidge.

Failure of Mr. Coolidge's arms limitation parley, with keen resentment toward France and Italy especially, was the reason ascribed by many house members for supporting the amendment.

Opponents of the Big Navy scheme consider the Coolidge disarmament proposal as insincere gesture, made with a foreknowledge of failure, and for the purpose of placing the onus of militarism upon France and Italy, leaving American pacifists with no argument, and convincing economically minded congressmen that they would have to make appropriations for warships.

Panic Foreseen In Building Profit Orgy

Crash of Frightful Proportions Near, Ottinger Warns

By WALLPROL.

A "panic of frightful proportions" will engulf the nation if the present orgy of building speculation is not halted.

This warning was given yesterday by Attorney General Albert Ottinger in a statement issued at Albany.

With billions of dollars of surplus values pressing on the money market for investment, building finance companies have engaged in financial jugglery on a colossal scale in the past four years. S. W. Straus, perhaps the leading building bond salesman of America, pleaded recently for an entire cessation for six months of further building financing. The stimulation of building activity far beyond the needs of the country has already resulted in the overbuilding of business and factory structures and will lead to a general paralysis of the building industry, Straus warned.

Workers Would Suffer.

Two million building trades workers, more than half of whom are organized, will be seriously affected in the event of the collapse of this stimulated building program. Steady employment with rising wage scales characteristic of the organized building workers for the past three years will come to an abrupt halt if the financial spree comes to grief as predicted by Ottinger.

Ottinger's statement is aimed at the New York bond houses which have participated in the building finance orgy. The billions of dollars of profits and dividends which have been hanled at Wall Street investment companies for profitable investment have proved the bait to real estate mortgage and bond companies to engage in the shadiest of deals.

The G. L. Miller Co., a bond house in which American Federation of Labor funds were deeply involved, was the first of the big houses to crash last year, and Ottinger asserts that more will follow Miller if a halt is not called.

Stagger Business World.

"Unless greater safeguards are thrown around the investments of the public in the enterprises promoted by these concerns, big and little, a series of financial crashes that will stagger the business world is bound to ensue," said Ottinger.

He served notice on such concerns that he was prepared to prosecute them under the Martin Anti-Stock Fraud Law if the regulations affecting realty bond issues are not rigidly observed in the future.

Up to September 26, last, 15 leading real estate bond houses had sold $971,000,000 bonds for 1926. In 1925, the same houses sold $291,000,000 according to the attorney general.

Gambling With Funds.

"Some companies have been guilty of gambling with investor's funds," Ottinger said. "Failure to observe the regulations promulgated by the anti-stock fraud bureau will provoke the exercise of the most drastic provisions of the Martin law against these companies. Such companies which prove delinquent will be effectually suppressed by injunction and foreign corporations guilty of violating this code will be excluded from the state.

"The state is a virgin field of operation for these real estate bond concerns. Our investors annually absorb upwards of $300,000,000 of these securities, a fact which calls for the most energetic enforcement of the regulations the attorney general's office has promulgated.

"Observance of the rules the attorney general has framed for the handling of the funds of these enterprises will prevent a repetition of the G. L. Miller and Co. failure. Ignorance of them will surely precipitate a panic of frightful proportions."

Send Woll After Farrington

MATTHEW WOLL has been caught betraying labor.

The accusation, together with the evidence, has been made public by James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor.

Woll, as acting president of the Civic Federation of Labor, is responsible for the efforts of that organization to kill various old age pension bills—legislation endorsed by the American Federation of Labor of which he is a vice president.

The anti-labor activities of the Civic Federation are financed by the Carnegie Foundation.

Woll is therefore a beneficiary of a fund left by the deceased steel capitalist who fought labor all his life and left a stipulated sum to finance these activities after his death.

There is something ghoulish in the role now played by Woll. Through him as head of the Civic Federation the dead hand of Andrew Carnegie, who in his day hired hundreds of Pinkerton detectives to disrupt the labor movement, pays salaries to respectable stool pigeons equipped with fountain pens and typewriters to poison the channels of publicity and deceive workers. Some of this tribe parade as officials of the labor movement.

Woll has tried to cover his career as an agent of the enemies of labor with the mantle of a crusader. He has specialized in denouncing Communists as enemies of the labor movement.

It seems clear now that Woll's purpose in his attempts to drive Communist workers out of the labor movement has been to distract attention from his own Judas-like activities.

His motto has been the same as that credited to William Hale Thompson, former mayor of Chicago, by his erstwhile friend Fred Lundin:

"When in doubt, hire a band."

Woll has beaten the tom-toms and called for war on Communist and left wing workers until the labor movement is distracted with the din.

While labor officialdom has been hunting for Communists Woll has been gathering in and paying out the Carnegie fund shekels to scuttle the old-age pension legislation.

There is a remarkable similarity between the cases of Woll and Frank Farrington, former president of District 12, United Mine Workers of America, recent fraternal delegate to the British Trade Union Congress, now exposed as a paid agent of the Peabody Coal Company in the Miners' Union and forced to resign.

Farrington was a mighty hunter of "reds." He expelled all militant opposition elements and even ruled that the defense committee organized to back the victims of the Ku Klux Klan in Ziegler, Illinois, was a "dual organization."

Farrington joined hands with Lewis in the expulsion campaign against the Communists and left wingers. Like Woll, Farrington could work himself into a frenzy on the subject of Americanism versus Communism while saying nothing but nice things about the bosses.

To a considerable section of the American working class this attitude on the part of a labor leader means the same thing as finding an individual writing code letters to a detective agency or the department of justice.

Before very long it is a test that will be used by the whole labor movement to determine the loyalty of its leaders.

We are sure that if this test is applied to Matthew Woll and the trade union membership permitted to express their conclusions, his Jekyll and Hyde career will end suddenly.

We do not advocate any cruel and unusual punishment for Woll—we do not want to send him to prison or deport him although this is his program for dealing with Communist workers.

What we want and what we are going to get, with the support of some millions of workers who have no love for agents of the bosses whether they are just ordinary spies or acting presidents of the Civic Federation, is the abolition of Woll and all he stands for in the American labor movement.

In plain words we do not care a tinker's damn how long Woll continues to be a member and official of the Civic Federation; but we are going to do all in our power to see that he is driven out of the American trade union movement.

"We Want Woll To Follow Farrington" is a good slogan.

Marines Hold Liberals While Diaz Attacks in Safety Near Matagalpa

MANAGUA, Feb. 25. — While American marines are now occupying the principal cities of Nicaragua, an army of Diaz troops has set out from Matagalpa to give battle to the liberal forces to the east of that city.

President Diaz has turned over the Tiscapa Fortress to U. S. marines, who are also in occupation at Leon and Chinandega.

As the marines extend their activities there is scarcely any territory left for the liberals to attempt to take from the Diaz forces.

THOMPSON-DEVER FIGHT IS BOOZE AGAINST WEALTH

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—The election excitement is just beginning here. After the spectacular success of the Thompson-Crowe machine in the street fighting which featured the primary elections, Big Bill Thompson's forces are concentrating against Mayor Dever.

Vice President of A. F. L. Fights Pensions

Unites With Bosses Against Measure Unions Endorse

WASHINGTON—(FP—Has Matthew Woll, a vice-president of the American Federation of Labor which has repeatedly endorsed old age pensions for the veterans of industry, a right to act as president of an organization that is trying to kill all pending old age pension measures?

That is the issue raised by Jas. M. Maurer, veteran president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor and chairman of the Pennsylvania Commission on Old Age Pensions. He has written Woll a letter, pointing ont that Woll is acting president of the National Civic Federation, and that Ralph M. Easley, chairman of its executive council, which contains a number of the worst anti-labor employers in the United States, is now trying to cheat aged workers of old age pensions favored by organized labor. Maurer says to Woll that it is hardly consistent for Woll to be in both camps.

Violating A. F. L. Ruling.

"The A. F. of L. at a number of conventions," writes Maurer, "unanimously adopted resolutions demanding the establishment of old age pension laws throughout the states.

"In view of the above I am puzzled to understand a letter, addressed apparently to all governors and legislators by the Natl. Civic Federation of which you are the acting president and signed by Ralph M. Easley, chairman of the executive council, in substance, it practically asks the governors and legislators to do nothing on old age pensions until a study now being made by the Civic Federation is completed and modestly suggests that only this study will reveal the truth about the problem.

Woll's Letter Lies.

"It also untruthfully asserts that 'there are no reliable statistics at present except those pertaining to the population of Massachusetts'."

Maurer goes on to say that "A perusal of the men connected with

BOSTON STRIKERS WILL PICKET THO INJUNCTION IS ON

Strikers' Mass Meeting Scorns Boss Tactics

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—An enthusiastic mass meeting this morning was the answer of the Boston striking cap-makers in the latest tactic of their employers, the injunction. This will be followed by mass picketing Monday, injunction or no injunction.

At the mass meeting, Organizer J. Miller, J. Corshun, H. Mold, and M. Woodrow members of the union declared in speeches roundly applauded by the strikers, that they would not be cheated of their just rights by any court order.

Workers Desperate.

For four weeks the workers have presented an unbroken front, picketing has continued successfully, and now with the busy season coming on, the employers have resorted to their last weapon.

Judge Morton in the equity session has issued a temporary injunction and it has been served on the officers and certain active members of the union.

Would Stop Pickets.

There are the usual orders not to engage in violance nor in threats of violence, which in practice are always interpreted by judges friendly to the employers as prohibiting any argumentor discussion practised upon scabs, no matter how peaceful in nature.

Those served with the temporary injunction are summoned to appear in court next Tuesday to show why the injunction should not be made permanent.

THOMPSON-DEVER FIGHT IS BOOZE AGAINST WEALTH

Circulate Petitions for Ruthenberg

the school books of Chicago public schools.

Little Bob Crowe.

Thompson's gang includes Robt. E. Crowe, district attorney, whose chief claim to fame, aside from having his special police beat up garment strikers, is the fact that his assistant district attorney was killed last year in company with a gang of bootleggers.

Dever, with his superintendent of schools, McAndrew, who approves of the platoon system, and his hold on the Catholic vote as well as the big business element, will run neck and neck. Dever will get the money. Thompson will promise booze.

Ruthenberg For Workers.

Neither is for the worker. The workers' candidate in this election is C. E. Ruthenberg, who will be placed on the ballot by petition. He is the nominee of the Workers Party, and his local supporters have issued the following statement calling for active circulation of the petitions:

The job can be done! We can get the signatures, if we mobilize the party. Getting 15,000 signatures looks big, until you realize that if every member does a little, the job is done.

We have till March 9th. Two more Red Sundays. Almost 3 more weeks.

It Can Be Done!

It can be done! Anyone going out gets signatures. Al Zuris of Section 3 heads the list with 120 signatures; Nellie Katilus, Margaret Miller (Section 3) and N. Stevens of Nucleus 75 have 60 each; Bratton has 48; Valentin has 30. Lists of 24 names have been sent in by Olehowsky, Marie Houston, Axel Carlson, N. Green, Pevoff, S. Baumeister, Matheson, J. Cohen. These are the pacesetters. It can be done!

Well Done, Sec. 1.

Section 1 got 200 signatures last Sunday, with 16 members on the job. These were gotten in the Negro section, where the old party politicians are making a heavy campaign. The Thompson (Republican) forces published statements in the "Defender" warning the voters that if they signed any statement at all, they would lose their right to vote for him.

Litsinger, his opponent for the Republican nomination in the primaries, had vote pledge cards distributed. The Thompson forces came with pledges repudiating the Litsinger pledges. The voters have been scared into not signing and other petitions. And in spite of this, signatures are being secured. Lydia Beidel is pushing the work in this section.

Competition Develops.

Section 3, with Nellie Katilus in charge, is getting into the campaign with both feet. Last Sunday, four comrades got a total of 184 names. Section 3 already has well over 250 names.

A triple challenge has been extended and accepted by the Section Secretaries of Sections 1, 3 and 5. Last night, Bill Matheson of Section 5 said to Nellie Katilus: "We're going to get more names than Section 3." But Nellie said "You won't." Today, when section 1 was asked to get into the three-cornered fight, Lydia Beidel said "I'm game." The fight is on.

And speaking of challenges, Sections 4 and 6 are evenly matched. We will watch them both. Section 6 secretary has accepted. And we are sure that Section 4 will respond.

Remember—you have until March 5th to bring the last lists to the party office at 19 S. Lincoln St. Each party member should have filled at least one list of 24 names. Have you done your Communist duty? If not, do it now!

THE NEW MASSES GOES TO NEWARK

THE hero in this picture is none other than District Attorney Smith, of Newark, N. J., who is determined to save his fair city from the insidious influence of the New Masses. The fact that the poor wages paid young girls in Newark, drives them into prostitution and makes Newark one of the largest centers of prostitution in the east does not disturb District Attorney Smith. He has decided that the New Masses is lewd, lascivious, lecherous and obscene, (and he doesn't like its political views). So go the New Masses must.

Troops of the other powers are already patrolling the international settlement and throwing up barricades.

Outside the settlement, in the native city, the masses are ready to welcome the Cantonese. Troops of the defeated Shanghai army are fulling back on the city and troops of the northern army are coming in, presumably to act as reinforcements, but looting is feared. In the meantime the Cantonese army is sweeping on toward Shanghai with all defenses swept aside.

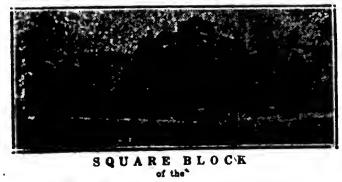
U. S. Forces To Land.

Landing of American forces to act jointly with Britain in Shanghai was forecast earlier in the day when the American minister at Peking joined in a note of warning to the Chinese.

Most of the American warships are alongside the wharfs of the international settlement, and can land troops in this way without passing through the seething native section, it was stated.

Imperialists Extend Lines.

HANKOW, Feb. 25. — The imperialist powers today extended their lines outside the international settlement and landed heavy artillery from their warships as the armies of the nationalist government captured Sunking, the last stronghold of the militarists in the way of the victorious revolutionary forces.



Soldiers of the Sun Chuan Fang armies are now in full retreat and are looting in the suburbs of Shanghai.

Italian and Japanese troops are said to be aiding the British. The imperialists have practically taken over the entire city of Shanghai. They threaten to establish a "neutral zone" taking in a territory extending twenty-five miles beyond Shanghai.

Another big labor victory was scored in England. The tory candidate was defeated by a large majority. This Labor Party success is further proof that the gentleman by the name of Casson who recently wrote in the New York Evening Post that British labor was turning away from class political action and going over to the capitalist parties was lying. Not that the leaders of the British Labor Party, such men as MacDonald, Snowden and Thomas are a whit less imperialistic than Baldwin and Churchill. The significance of the victory is that the masses are turning their backs on the two capitalist parties and voting the labor ticket. Later they will turn their backs on the MacDonalds and reorganize in the leadership of the Communist Party the only one that points the way to the overthrow of imperialism.

THE Central Executive Committee of the All-Union Soviet Congress reports a revenue of over five billion rubles and expenditures of 4,900,000,000. The government is able to place the sum of 100,000,000 in reserve. Not so bad. This does not prove that the workers cannot run industry. The Soviet Union started out without nothing left over from the Czarist regime but a legacy of demoralization, inefficiency and corruption, combined with a hostile capitalist world which waged war on the young Workers' Republic with fire, sword and boycott. That the Soviet Union could survive despite this hostile array is the greatest marvel in history. It should bring a thrill to the heart of every worker in whom the divine fire of rebellion has not turned into ashes. It is an omen of the complete victory of the social revolution.

THE New York World finds the British note to the Soviet Union proper and a lenient protest against "practises, that, as Mr. MacDonald said no government could tolerate." The World compares this action with the accusations of Belshevism made by Coolidge and Kellogg against Mexico. The World is just as dishonest and hypocritical as Coolidge and Kellogg. Pulitzer is aware of England's conspiracy to organize hostile blocks against the Soviet Union. Indeed before the editorial in question saw the light of day a Polish-Lithuanian pact was signed at the instigation of England with the object of isolating the Soviet Union and giving the latter not a base of operations. The "liberal" World is just as reactionary under the skin as its more candid contemporaries.

Big Banking Interests Guide the Pen of Cal Coolidge at Washington

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

AT no time has the puppet nature of the Coolidge presidency been better revealed than in the veto of the McNary-Haugen Farm Relief Bill and his signing of the McFadden-Pepper Banking Bill, both of which passed thru the upper and the lower houses of congress.

Out of the west comes the roar of protest that the industrial East has defeated the Coolidge decision. But that hardly hits the nail on the head. Coolidge's pen, as he signed or refuses to sign legislation that comes to him from congress is moved at the dictates of the great international financiers, whose power is centered in Wall Street, and who have more to say today about what transpires in the White House than at any time since the executive mansion was built.

The bankers control in great industry. This is shown in the Morgan organization and control of the steel trust and the General Motors Corporation that pushes Henry Ford to the wall in the auto industry. Banker control has been established over the Chicago packing industry. The banks run the railroads, clearly revealed in the disposition of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, following its bankruptcy, and clearer still in the struggle raging between the New York Central and the Pennsylvania Railroads.

Let the farmers understand, therefore, that it was great finance with its home in the East, that crushed their hopes for the very conservative McNary-Haugen Farm Relief measure, while at the same time getting the seal of approval of their government at Washington for a bank bill that will "wipe out all the little bankers inside of ten years", according to one senator.

Thus finance capital delivers a double blow at the small capitalists and struggling middle class elements.

The McNary-Haugen bill was designed principally to aid the rich farmers and those who live off the working farmers,—the landlords, food profiteers, the railroads and small bankers, who are in a strategic position to grab for themselves any increases in prices won for the staple products of the land. The McNary-Haugen bill was not intended to alleviate in the least the conditions of the millions of farm workers, tenant farmers and mortgage farmers, whose lot grows steadily worse, but who have not yet developed sufficient class solidarity to wage a national struggle in support of their grievances.

Of course, the arguments advanced by Coolidge in support of his veto of the McNary-Haugen measure are too thin to offer even the slightest screen to hide the president's servility to Wall Street.

Coolidge objects to the selection of a Federal Farm Board from nominees suggested by farmers' organizations. He thinks that is "unconstitutional" because it will take away his appointive power. That ought to rouse a roar of laughter. When it comes to appointing members of the interstate commerce commission or any other important government body, Coolidge quickly turns his ear to Wall Street to get his orders. The truth is that the money power is jealous of its hold on the executive power in the government. It will not surrender any of this power to even the rich farmers and their allies. Taking the position that, "We are the government!" these financiers rather struggle to strengthen the government's executive department power.

Similarly, Coolidge raises the arguments that the McNary-Haugen bill concerns itself with only one third of the products of the American farms. That is not the fault of the authors of the bill. They included everything they could, uniting for the first time, for instance, the cotton growers of the South with the corn and wheat raisers of the North. They are willing to bring in all the rest.

It was long argued that Coolidge might sign the bill as a matter of political expediency in his effort to win the republican nomination next year. This hope has now been crushed. Wall Street does not need to play this way. Coolidge's veto of the McNary-Haugen bill helps him into the political ash can. But Wall Street has many other candidates that it will trot out, claiming for them the political purity of driven snow. And Wall Street has hopes that the workers and farmers will again come forward, happy and obedient, to again offer themselves as victims of the capitalist political shell game.

Bitter disappointment will be visited upon the capitalist mentors of Cal Coolidge, if the workers and farmers develop their unity in the building of the Labor Party, that will not only fight the big capitalists but also the servile middle class. Coolidge will not be re-elected next year, but labor will have made no progress unless it drives forward in the building of its own power independent of and in bitter opposition to the exploiters, big and little.

NO BOULDER DAM UNLESS CLOTURE RULING CARRIES

Six Day Filibuster to Go On Unless Gagged

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — After surviving a six-day filibuster, the senate this afternoon "suspended" consideration of the Boulder Dam to begin consideration of the new public buildings bill.

This action did not displace the Boulder Dam measure from its privileged status as the senate's "unfinished business" because of an old and seldom used rule. The rule was invoked by Vice-president Dawes to aid the westerners.

The chance of the Boulder Dam to pass seems to depend entirely on securing a two-thirds vote of the senate tomorrow for the gag rule shutting off debate. The cloture petition is headed by the name of Hiram Johnson, who has often denounced such procedure.

One of the worst legislative jams in memory developed in the senate as a result of the filibuster against the Boulder Dam measure and the efforts of its advocates to force it to a final vote. A dozen other bills of major importance languished on the sidelines while senators fought over the Colorado River bill or quarreled over precedence for other bills. Few of these measures can be passed between now and adjournment one week hence, it was apparent, unless the Boulder Dam filibuster is broken.

Negro Crew Revolts Against Ship Tyranny

Goaded by the tyranny of a white master and mate, the colored crew of the lumber schooner Alice Pendleton mutinied off Norfolk, Va. and were being held today by coast guard officers. William King, a Negro sailor, is charged as leader of the mutiny. The ship was en route from Portland, Me. to Jacksonville.

FARM BILL IS VETOED; BANK BILL IS SIGNED

Coolidge Acts for the Money Trust

dems of its support to a large degree upon farmers who would not benefit by it. The products embraced in the plan are only about one-third of the total American farm production. There are several million farmers who do not produce any of the designated products, or very little of them, and they must pay the premiums upon the products designated in the bill."

If the farmers have a right to set up a government bureau to fix prices for their products, why, asked Mr. Coolidge, have not steel, lumber, coal and other producers the same right?

Bureaucracy Coming.

"Such action would establish bureaucracy on such a scale as to dominate not only the economic life, but the moral, social and political future of our people."

The insurance feature of the bill, under which the government would insure co-operatives against losses by violent price fluctuations, was characterized as "destructive of all orderly processes of trade."

Unconstitutional Too.

"The main policy of this bill is an entire reversal of what has heretofore been thought sound."

The veto was principally because of the unconstitutionality of the bill, according to Coolidge, and he appended a decision of the attorney-general, criticising it for illegally depriving the president of his appointive power.

Cheats Farm Bloc.

Comment among the farm bloc Middle Western senators who sold their support to the money trust and industrialists and voted for J. P. Morgan's branch banking act as part of the bargain to get the McNary-Haugen bill passed, is various, rueful, realigned or profane, depending on the personality of the senator.

Most are certain that Coolidge's veto ruins his chances to ever be president again. But this consoles little, as there is much evidence that Coolidge has become the rather undignified sacrifice of the Eastern financiers. He pulls their chestnuts out of the fire at whatever cost in popularity. If he becomes too unpopular with farmer voters, Wall Street can easily replace Coolidge. Dawes, for example, strenuously supported the McNary-Haugen bill, and is said to desire the presidency.

Bill No Worse Than Tariff.

The bill itself, its supporters point out, provides no bureaucratic aids to farming that do not already exist unofficially for iron, tin-plate, textiles, etc. Neither does it discriminate among products any more than does the protective tariff, to which Coolidge is as firmly addicted as any stand-pat senator.

Such opposition to the bill as exists among farmers centers around the argument that it is a relatively impotent piece of legislation. It is harmless in general, but provides little beyond the loan of $250,000,000 for encouragement of co-operative selling.

But even that, the farm bloc senators begin to see, was too much for the financial section of the republican party. The latter tricked the farm bloc by supporting the McNary-Haugen bill in congress, got its own measures passed, and then had Coolidge veto the farm bill.

Democrats Also Criticize

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Farm bloc spokesmen and democrats generally criticised the president, while administration supporters gave him praise.

NEW WAR THREAT ON SOVIET UNION

Polish-Lithuanian Pact Is Baltic Bloc Scheme Hatched Great Britain

BERLIN, Feb. 26.—Announcement of an agreement between the fascist governments of Poland and Lithuania, hostile to the Soviet Union, coming on the heels of the dispatch of the British note to Moscow brings the possibility of an imperialist war against Russia led by Great Britain into the near future.

The past fits in with the long-cherished British scheme to organize a Baltic bloc front which Great Britain could wage war against Russia.

News of the conspiracy created a shock in Berlin governmental circles though it has been known for a long time that negotiations had been going on. The development completely justifies the statement delivered to the press in Berlin by Georges Tchitcherin, Soviet foreign minister, that Britain was organizing a hostile bloc against the Soviet Union. This statement was given as one of the reasons for the provocative British note.

Positive reports that Smetona and Pilsudski have at last shaken hands were received from Riga today, though the fact that secret negotiations between them have been under way has been known here for some time.

Lithuania Needed Money.

The Lithuanian need of English credits played a decisive role in the negotiations and overcame the Lithuanian resentment against General Zeligowski's seizure of Vilna in 1921 which had converted the whole Baltic into a smoldering volcano.

Under the agreement Poland acknowledges Lithuanian sovereignty over Vilna and promises to return it "when Bolshevism is no longer dangerous". In return Lithuania accepts very great mistake,' said Senator Capper (R) of Kansas, farm bloc leader.

Rep. Haugen (R) Iowa, co-author of the bill, said:

"It is a great disappointment to every one who was back of real farm relief legislation, undoubtedly the fight will go on, and in the end we shall win."

Waves Silent.

Vice President Dawes, who actually fathered the bill and who virtually directed its enactment, had no comment.

The democrats criticised the president.

"This veto is a surrender to the industrial east for political purposes," said Senator Caraway (D) of Arkansas. "It is really a political veto. The president decided that his chances for renomination were to be served by an unqualified surrender to the industrial east.

Senator Copeland (D) of New York, declared: "The president defeats himself for a third term by vetoing this bill."

The administration ranks, however, rallied to the president.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Feb. 25.—Governor John Hammill and the Iowa legislature acted promptly today to start machinery in motion to bring about passage of the McNary-Haugen bill over the president's veto.

Within ten minutes after word was received that Mr. Coolidge had vetoed the bill, both branches of the legislature had named committees to draft resolutions calling upon congress to pass the measure again.

Makes Fight Harder.

MANHATTAN, Kans., Feb. 25.—"President Coolidge's veto only means we will make a harder fight until economic justice is available to agriculture," said Ralph Snyder, head of the Kansas farm bureau today in commenting on the killing of the McNary-Haugen bill.

Lowden Has Regrets.

LABOR PRESIDENT OF PENNSYLVANIA DENOUNCES WOLL

Reactionary Scored for Alliance With Boss

the present study of the Civic Federation warrants the definite conclusion that the entire undertaking was conceived in iniquity, bias and untruthfulness.

"Every one knows Mr. Easley's all too long record of persistent opposition toward social legislation. It is because of this practical and pharisaical attitude that the United Mine Workers and several other international labor organizations now have constitutional prohibitions against their officers joining the Civic Federation.

Many Reactionaries.

"The chairman of this particular old age pension study is Tecumseh Sherman, an old reactionary and a man who has consistently written against old age pensions regardless of all facts and truth. Mr. Easley admits that the money for this investigation has come from the Carnegie Corporation whose past unfair position toward labor in general and unions in particular are of historic record. And to cap it all I have reliable evidence that your chief investigators are definitely instructed to obtain only such information as will disprove the facts found by the various state commissions and especially those found by the Pennsylvania commission.

"Since when has the Carnegie Corporation become converted to labor unionism and assumed the championship of labor legislation?"

Archibald Stevenson, John Hays Hammond, Geo. B. Cortelyou, Elon Hooker, Nicholas E. Brady and E. K. Hall of the Bell Telephone trust are named as anti-labor members of the executive committee of the Civic Federation.

Woll Hated in New York.

Woll is well known in New York. He injected himself into the struggle between the rank and file of the Fur Workers Union and their reactionary international officials as an aid of the latter. By means of a fake investigation of the furriers' strike here he accumulated the basis of a "report" denouncing the workers for their victorious struggle. He personally appeared on the platform at the last meeting of the New York Trades and Labor Council and in an hysterical speech, led the attack on the left wing needle trades members present.

Boston Central Labor Union Refuses Faker's Paper an Endorsement

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—While the first New England Daily Worker conference was in session, The DAILY WORKER is thoroughly discussed at the meeting of the Central Labor Union of Boston.

Kearney, the former president of the Central Labor Union is at present publishing a red baiting sheet called The Labor Herald. It sets for itself the tasks of "combating Communism in the American Labor Movement."

Kearney came to the C. L. U. meeting in the hopes of having it endorse his sheet. He brought with him the call to The DAILY WORKER Conference, and after reading The DAILY WORKER Conference Call, exclaimed, "See, the Communists are bringing the DAILY WORKER to Boston, we must establish a means to combat it."

Then S. Welsman of the capmakers' union, now on strike for better conditions, got up. He challenged Kearney to tell the delegates as the C. L. U. where he was in last year's strike of the Chesler Taxi Company drivers, which was broken through the scabby activities of Kearney. He asked Kearney where he was when the Passaic strike broke out. He told of the work of The DAILY WORKER in behalf of the Passaic strikers. He told of the work of The DAILY WORKER among the foreign born, of the constant work to organize the unorganized, of its help to organized labor in bringing its struggles to the workers of this country.

When he was through he was greeted by applause.

Kearney, in fury because of his failure to secure the endorsement of his Labor Herald, yelled out to J. Miller, the chairman of the capmakers' union: "Are you a Communist?" Miller answered, "Its none of your business!"

The Manager's Corner

ADVERTISING BRINGS THE SHEKELS.

You remember the old story of the farmer who complained because he was unable to walk thru the forest with a long ladder, which he carried horizontally. So it is with many comrades who try to do things in the hardest possible way, when there is a simple, easy way to do the same thing more effectively. This is as true about helping The DAILY WORKER as it is about other things.

Many comrades do not realize what a substantial source of income there is for The DAILY WORKER in advertising. There are many advertisers who would be glad to advertise in The DAILY WORKER, or the National Labor Daily. It is simply a case of failure to approach these people.

Advertisements can easily be obtained from restaurants patronized by our readers, doctors, dentists, lawyers and other professional men, who want to reach a radical crowd, or who are sympathetic with our paper.

Every affair which is arranged by a labor, co-operative or fraternal organization, by a social club or group of workers should make arrangements whereby a certain sum is set aside for advertising in The DAILY WORKER.

One important fact, however, must be kept in mind, and that is the question of payment. We can get a paper full of ads, if we don't ask for money. Radicals especially, are very lax on this point. As far as possible payment should be made in advance, unless the customer is a very responsible party, with established financial credit. We are running a special line of professional; restaurant ads at $15.00 a month and $1.50 per inch for a single insert. Out-of-town ads receive a special reduced rate of $10.00 a month, and $1.00 per inch. Here is a practical way to help The DAILY WORKER. Why not try it?—BERT MILLER.

CHICAGOLITES

Oh Domaily! Domaily!

At last the Queen of Cotzofanesti acknowledges that she received a tremendous reception from the workers of Chicago and that this reception made the kink so sick that she had to cut short her American tour and go back where she came from.

Under a first page streamer head, "Queen Marie Assails Chicago," the Chicago Herald and Examiner prints a story by a lady attendant to the Queen in which it is disclosed that "her majesty bitterly complained against the treatment afforded her in Chicago. She was very angry at the police because they did not make any attempt to suppress hostile demonstrations against her."

There were only a few heads broken and about a dozen people arrested. If this happened in Roumania, the sjigurance would have been more active, no doubt. A few killings, a couple of hangings would be more to the taste of the bloody queen.

Anyway the Chicago workers get the credit for reminding the queen of Cotzofanesti. It made her majesty so mad that she is now calling Americans "a nation of swine."

But wait until the Roumanian workers and peasants get hold of the royal family, then you'll hear something worth while!

Spilling the Beans.

"No one who is dependent is free," stated Edward J. Tobin, county superintendent of schools, speaking before a group of children "on thrift." He forgot to mention that all the Chicago Herald and Examiner prints are for a job, and all the farmers are dependent on the railroad companies, the grain speculators, the money lenders and many other small and big exploiters.

Youthful Silk Worker Sinks Bullet in Brain As Protest on Future

GARFIELD, N. J., Feb. 25.—Another youthful suicide was reported to the police here today. Theodore Tatarah, 19, of 1087 East 24th St., Paterson, shot and killed himself at the grave of his brother, in the cemetery of Saints Peter and Paul here today, according to the police.

Young Tatarah was employed in a silk mill at Paterson. He left school when he was 15 years old. A note, written on a small pad, begged forgiveness of his parents, and expressed a hopelessness toward the future. In a postscript, he wrote: "I never was any good, anyway—wasn't smart or ambitious or a leader."

A second note, apparently directed to the finder of his body, read: "Please don't think I am insane, because I am as sane as anybody, but it takes a lot of nerve when you are planning your own death, like an architect his building."

Cleveland Tag Day to Aid Passaic Strikers; Many Still Need Help

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—The Cleveland Conference for Passaic Strike Relief will hold a tag day on Saturday, Feb. 26, at 3 p. m. The committee asks all friends and sympathizers of the Passaic strikers to get their equipment at the Freiheit Hall, 3514 East 116th St., in order that as much money for the strikers may be raised as possible.

Although information has reached the Cleveland office that a large part of the strikers has returned to work, it is clear that they will suffer privations for a long time, owing to the duration of the strike and the brutality of the employers, who will not be too quick in taking back the strikers. The committee, therefore, requests every man or woman who can contribute a few hours' work to be out on Saturday.

An Imperialist Rival Appears in the Nicaraguan Situation.

Now that Great Britain is sending a battleship to Nicaragua to protect His Majesty's subjects, will Secretary of State Kellogg please have one of his bright young men explain how American intervention has prevented interference by European powers?

This, it will be remembered was one of the principal reasons given by Kellogg for armed intervention. The Monroe Doctrine was in danger according to this Coolidge appointee; if America did not act decisively we might lose prestige overseas.

The protection of lives of American citizens and other nationals is not necessary now nor have any foreigners been injured or even menaced during the whole course of the recent struggle.

A letter from an American in Nicaragua read by Senator Borah to the Foreign Relations Committee puts the case thus:

> No Americans have any cause for complaint. We are treated with consideration. The only Americans who are complaining are a few who secured certain concessions on mahogany lands from Chamorro and Diaz and which they will lose if the Diaz rule falls. IT WILL FALL UNLESS HELD UP BY OUR MONEY, FOR THE PEOPLE ARE AGAINST DIAZ. (Emphasis ours.)

The protection of lives of nationals who are in colonial regions trying to get rich always comes in handy when larger issues, such as the control of a canal route and the establishment of a base of operations against Mexico and South America are the real objectives of imperialism.

The dispatch of a warship by Britain to the scene of conflict is no mere routine matter. It has a direct connection with Wall Street's drive into Latin-America and also with the situation in the Far East.

Just as the United States sends battleships to Chinese waters as a display of sea power to impress both the Chinese masses and her imperialist rivals so does Great Britain send one of her war fleet to Nicaraguan waters.

Only a fool will believe that Great Britain is concerned over personal danger of her subjects from Nicaraguans with American battleships off both coasts of Nicaragua and with all the principal cities held by U. S. marines.

The dispatch of a British battleship to Nicaragua, in spite of the effusive denials of the state department of any political significance attaching to the incident, means that the occupation of Nicaragua by American forces has now become of first class importance internationally, that Wall Street and its state department meet rival forces in a field of politics which the most strenuous efforts have failed to confine to the western hemisphere.

The invasion of Nicaragua has sharpened the imperialist rivalry between America and Great Britain.

Cooper Union Meeting Wipes Out Pretensions of Right Wing in Furriers' Union

The overflow meeting called by the left wing Joint Board of the Furriers' Union for Cooper Union Thursday night, was a brilliant contrast to the small and gangster-ridden meeting held by the right wing the day before.

2,500 furriers—all who could get into the hall—cheered and applauded Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board, and Louis Hyman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Joint Board. The spirit of the meeting was militant and optimistic. It pledged the full support of the left wing majority in the furriers' and cloakmakers' unions to the strikers who are being persecuted by Sigman, Beckerman, Schachtman, Woll, Rosalsky and Co. and contributed $5,000 as a first payment.

Unity for defense of arrested strikers, unity for organization of the shops, unity in the struggle to prevent the right wing destroying the unions—this was the program voiced by all the speakers and this was the program endorsed by the rank and file.

No one can fail to understand, after reading the report of this meeting that the right wing pretensions to leadership in the Furriers' Union in New York are of the same character as those of the grand dukes to power in the Soviet Union.

RAISE $5,000,000 TO FEED CULTURE TO WORKERS THRU CHAUTAUQUAS

Awfully Anxious to Keep Workers Out of Mischief During All Their Leisure Time

A $5,000,000 fund for the largescale dissemination of bunk is being raised.

Expert bunk-shooters like Edward Bok, Ida Tarbell, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, William Hard and Simeon D. Fess, Ohio standpatter, are supporting the move. Hard boiled capitalists who know their onions—like Charlie Schwab, Otto Kahn, Henry Morgenthau and Samuel Mecklorieta, chairman of the board of the Chatham & Phenix National Bank, are supplying the coin.

One would think that the schools and the capitalist newspapers are supplying all the bunk that it is necessary to keep the American worker fit. But the National Community Foundation thinks otherwise.

The National Community Foundation proposes to raise $5,000,000 to subsidize chautauquas and correspondence schools throughout the country. "The great increase in the amount of leisure time that we all are acquiring," says a statement issued by Mac-Robert's office at the Chatham & Phenix National Bank yesterday, "presents a situation that is fraught with danger unless adequate educational programs of the popular type are furnished."

The scheme is one of which nanny employers have found so effective. Feed the workers jazz. Fourth of July orations, and a picnic now and then—and keep 'em quiet.

Nicaragua's Struggle for Freedom

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

THE occupation of Nicaragua by American troops under which the country becomes a protectorate like Panama, closes another chapter in the history of intimidation and intervention which has been made by the U. S. state and war departments in the last 17 years.

The history of American-Nicaraguan relations during this period consists of a series of warlike acts on the part of America, acts perpetrated behind the thinnest veil of justification, and on the part of the Nicaraguan masses, of heroic sacrifice in the brief periods of peace and unhesitating bravery on the field of battle facing overwhelming odds.

SUBJUGATION of Nicaragua as a studied policy of American imperialism begins coincidently with the acquisition of the Panama canal zone under the Roosevelt administration—which is another sordid chapter in American history.

Taft carried out the policy of the "big stick" which Roosevelt merely named but did not originate—it took on its militant form under McKinley with the ousting of Spain in 1898 and the establishment of complete American hegemony of the Caribbean area.

A feasible canal route thru Nicaraguan territory—a route which some engineers claim is far superior to Panama's—is the main reason why American imperialism began to look with covetuous eyes at this little country. Since that time American interests in Mexico, Central and South America have increased tremendously and Nicaragua now is a pivot for the wheel of imperialist enterprise in the republics to the south.

ROOSEVELT not only grabbed the Panama canal zone but laid the basis for a duplication of this feat with the Nicaraguan route as the prize.

Taft continued the aggression begun by Roosevelt. A Latin-American writer describes these in a series of "incidents," as the diplomats call them, as follows:

"The North American Government, interested in preventing the possible construction of a new interoceanic canal thru Nicaragua, sent a squadron into Nicaraguan waters in April, 1909, composed of the cruisers Washington, Colorado, South Dakota, Albany, etc., with a contingent of 4,000 men and instructions to avail themselves of a pretext for landing. The president of Nicaragua, at that time was Don Jose Santos Zelaya, tried to temporize with Captain Moore, head of the squadron. But shortly after, on October 10, 1909, Mr. Moffat, the North American consul at Bluefields, on the Atlantic coast of Nicaragua, supported an insurrection led by the governor of this region, Senor Juan J. Estrada. Mr. Knox (then secretary of state) in a note which aroused much comment in Latin America, declared the revolution legitimate, and handed Senor Zelaya's representative in Washington his passports. In the course of the struggle, General Toledo, who commanded the lawful Nicaraguan forces, had shot two American subjects (citizens—the writer evidently has in mind the imperial character of the U. S. government—W. F. D.) whom he had caught in the act of trying to dynamite the government's ships.

"This threw light on the character of the revolution and the leader of it himself, Senor Estrada, took it upon himself to confirm this later, by declaring in the New York Times of September 10, 1912, that this movement had received financial aid from North American companies, mentioning the firm of Leonard W. Beers, which contributed $200,000, and Samuel Well, who gave $150,000. Convinced that the revolutionaries would receive every sort of aid from North America, the president of Nicaragua, not to prolong the struggle, thought it patriotic to resign, and left the country on board the Mexican gunboat General Guerrero, after handing over his powers, in accordance with the constitution and by the consent of congress, to Dr. Don Jose Madriz, a jurist, having no connection with politics. This government was recognized by many nations, but not by the United States, which continued to support the fictitious revolution. When Senor Madriz gave orders to attack Bluefields, he was met by the fact that the harbor was defended by North American sailors, and that the cruisers of that country were blockading the coast. Realizing that it would not be a civil but an international struggle, he resigned his mandate on August 26, 1910, and left for Mexico, where he died shortly afterwards. So the U. S., under the presidency of Mr. Taft, took possession of the customs of Nicaragua, and thus was started the regime which still continues to this day." (Manuel Ugarte—"The Destiny of a Continent"—translated from the Spanish—Edited by J. Fred Rippey, Assistant Professor of History, University of Chicago, in a most arrogant and insulting manner. (—Emphasis mine.)

THE Nicaraguan national debt, owed to New York bankers, was overdue and this was the public reason given for the conspiracy against Nicaraguan sovereignty and the application of the doctrine of "force without stint or limit."

The answer of the Nicaraguan masses was one of the most touching evidences of their willingness to sacrifice "personal welfare for freedom from imperialist domination. The people began to raise money by popular subscription to pay the debt. Ugarte says:

"Nothing could be more painful and moving than these lists, in which were to be seen the tears of a nationality. The newspapers of Nicaragua of March 12, 1912, set aside wide columns in which the most humble offerings could be read side by side with the contributions of the moneyed classes; Samuel Gavarrete, his whole possessions; Louis Delgada, the proceeds of the sale of her bed; Juana Gutierres, the house where she lives; Laura Roque, her sewing-machine; Manuel de Aragon, day laborer, the value of twelve days' work; Raman Robleto, his cart with two oxen; Joaquina Velasquez, licensed mendicant, her day's collection, 20 centavos."

VOLUMES have been written on the subject of the sacrifices the French populace made to pay the indemnity demanded by Germany after the war of 1870-71. Particularly in America was a paean of praise to the French sung when the house of Morgan drove this nation to war against Germany to protect the loans made to France and the other allied powers. But no American writer has yet felt inspired to write the epic of the sacrifices noted above.

But the efforts of the Nicaraguans were not confined to attempts to pay off the American usurers in gold. Many Nicaraguans gave their blood and lives in the struggle against "the colossus of the north."

NICARAGUAN exiles in Costa Rica, Julian Irias, Rodolfo Espinosa, Alejandro Bermudez and General Zeledon organized and led an expedition to assist the national revolutionary movement headed by General Siena.

American troops were landed to defend the puppet government set up by the American state department, the town of Masaya was bombarded, Zeledon killed and the revolution crushed.

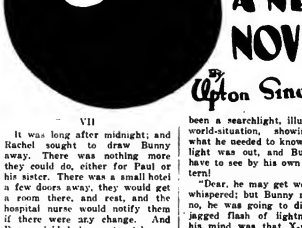
ANOTHER Latin-American writer has described this affair:

"The battle began with sustained artillery fire (North American) which the marines kept up for twenty-four hours against the light and improvised fortifications protecting the town of Masaya. An assault was afterwards made on them. The resistance was weak owing to lack of munitions, especially for artillery.

"The fight was continued in the plaza with the aid of the forces of President Diaz, and after a few hours, Zeledon gave it up as his munitions were exhausted. Owing to Mena's surrender he had not been able to receive those he expected nor the reinforcements from Granada.

"Zeledon was rescued, overtaken, captured, killed. How? The patriots maintain that he was captured and assassinated. Those on the other side he died of his wounds. History, which will take in possession of the victim's name to honor it as it deserves, will clear up this point; for we do not wish to take this task upon us, even with the documents before us, for fear of being blinded by admiration for the hero and indignation against those who were the executors, both of him and of his country." (Doctrina Wilson—By Pollcarpo Bonilla, ex-president of Honduras.—Emphasis mine.).

THE press of American imperialism pictures the Nicaraguan masses—all Latin Americans for that matter—as pliant instruments in the hands of unscrupulous politicians. The record shows, however, that Latin-American populace has been far more discerning in this respect than the American masses. The fact that war can be waged on a nation of 600,000 people by Wall Street's government, that it has been waged off and on ever since 1908, without any effective protest in America, and with millions of people believing that no protest is justified, is proof of the ease with which the American masses have been deceived and the need for agitation to bring action.



AMERICAN armed forces are in Nicaragua to stay and to make similar forays on the neighboring republics when it suits the purpose of Wall Street to have this done.

They will be withdrawn only when the workers and farmers of both continents unite their forces against the common enemy.

The history of the determined struggles against imperialist aggression, like those in Nicaragua, show that the American masses need not fear that their Latin - American brothers-in-arms will be backward in the fight.

All over Latin-America the workers and peasants form the great majority of the population. The increasing necessity for resistance to American imperialism will tend to give their organizations and economic struggles an increasingly revolutionary character.

In Mexico, Central and South America are the allies of the American masses. Together they will write the next chapter in the history of the struggle against imperialism in the Western Hemisphere.

It was long after midnight; and Rachel sought to draw Bunny away. There was nothing more they could do, either for Paul or his sister. There was a small hotel a few doors away, they would get a room there, and rest, and the hospital nurse would notify them if there were any change. And Bunny yielded; he must not be unfair to Rachel. He knew there was something unnatural about his own devotion to Paul, the subjection of his mind to everything that Paul thought, the exactness of his memory of everything Paul had said. Yes, Bertie had told him that, and then Vee—and now Rache!!

He could not sleep. So, lying awake in the hotel room, he explained it to her; how Paul had come when Bunny was groping for something different and better in his life. Paul had given him an idea!—something stern and hard—self-sufficiency, independence of judgment, determination to face life and understand it, and not be drawn aside in pursuit of money or pleasure. Bunny had not been able to follow that ideal—no, he had lived in luxury, and gone chasing after women; but he had had the vision, the longing to be like Paul.

And then, at each new crisis in his life, Paul would come along, a sort of standard by which Bunny could measure himself and what he was doing, and realize how little success he was having. Paul had taught him about the workers, and how they felt; Paul had been the incarnation of the new, awakening working-class. Paul's mind had been a searchlight, illumining the world-situation, showing Bunny what he needed to know. Now the light was out, and Bunny would have to see by his own feeble lantern!

"Dear, he may get well," Rachel whispered; but Bunny moaned, no, no, he was going to die. Like a jagged flash of lightning before his mind was that X-ray picture of the crack at the base of Paul's skull. The light was out, at least from this world; a brute with a piece of iron pipe had extinguished it.

Rachel put her arms about him and sought to beguile him with caresses. And she succeeded, of course; he could not refuse her love. So presently he slept a little. But Rachel did not sleep, because he would jump and start in his sleep, his limbs would quiver—just the way she felt when the great guns went off!

What was Bunny doing? Fighting then the brutes with their clubs and hatchets and iron pipe? Or back in the old days, when he had hovered over Paul and Ruth, watching events that wrung his soul? Watching Dad deprive the family of their land; watching the oil operators crush the first strike; watching the government tear Paul away and make him into a strikebreaker for Wall Street bankers; watching Vernon Roscoe throw Paul into prison; watching capitalism with its world-wide system of terror drive Paul here and there, harry him, malign him, threaten him—until at last it hired the brute with the iron pipe!

FOOTNOTES TO THE NEWS

First Person Stuff.—The great American confessional is under way, folks. Souls purged of secrecy. Hidden corners of a million lives ventilated by publicity. Sorrows spread where all may see and be forewarned. Everybody tells everything. The Catholic confessional is a joke by comparison. The psycho-analysts' confessional doesn't shine in. Chambermaids, prime ministers, "society" matrons, plumbers, jazz babies, evangelists, captains of industry, yeggs, stumble over each other in the crush to exhibit their private lives. An epidemic of frankness rages in our midst. Any of us may be hit by the contagion.

Eminent novelists tell why they hate their wives, why they didn't become carpenters instead of writers, how they sweat to create. See the Cosmopolitan, McClure's, the American Mercury, etc. Ex-feminists and ex-radicals tell how they got that way. See The Nation, The New Republic, The New Leader, etc. The housekeeper of the White House tells the bed-room secrets of our Presidents. Fat millionaires tell what they did with their first nickle or dime, how they got their first jobs, how they made their first billion. See Success, The Nation's Business, etc.

And the great anonymous mass of humble stenographers, prostitutes, shop girls, chorus steppers, understair heroes and heroines reveal their One Voluptuous Nights, their Fast and Furious Romances, their Babes Out of Wedlock, Heart-throb, Sinners in Satin, Purple Pleasures. Sticky, gooey romance. Fifteen-cent, 20-cent and 25-cent thrills and adventure. Tons of it spawned by the presses every day. Bernarr Macfadden—the greatest Father Confessor of all time. True Stories, Romances, Experiences. True Ghost Stories. True Lies. I Confess, Marriage Stories, Secrets, Sex. Still they come.

Then there are the tabloids and their full-sized imitators. By Peaches Herself, Daddy Himself, Charlie Chaplin's Best Friend, Valentino's Sweetest Sweetheart. By Gilda Grey, Houdini's Ghost, the Murderer Himself, etc., etc. Each of them guaranteed, sealed with the picture and the original signature of the author. Confessions, revelations, inside stuff, the Whole Truth at Last Exclusively in This Paper.

No newspaper or magazine, however solid and respectable it purports to be, can escape the sweep of the confessional urge. And the reading public believes. It matters nothing that Peaches and Daddy testify in court that they had not even seen their "confessions" before publication. It matters nothing that conscience-stricken hack writers admit that they are the authors of the first-person outbursts of mythical sinners. It matters nothing that the confessions of the supposedly uneducated cabaret singers, department store counter girls, etc. lapse into excellent English. We believe. There can be no confessional without Faith.

The capital I has come into its own. It is to the new confessional what the cross is to the Roman brand. Unless the epidemic is stopped the third person will be eliminated from American grammar. Only the first and the second will remain: I for confession, and you for accusation.

First person dope for the masses. An opiate and soporific. To give them make-believe thrills and to keep their minds off other things. To keep them satisfied while at work and to prevent them from thinking in their leisure.

W. Reynolds of Detroit writes:

"Riding around our fair city in our somewhat less than fair transportation system I have observed groups of foreign-looking persons feverishly tearing up our streets and throwing up barricades of paving stones and other debris. This activity is accompanied by an open and flagrant display of red flags. Most ominous of all, I have noticed swarthy Mexicans among them obviously inspiring this assault on our institutions. Do you think Mr. Kellogg should be advised of these goings on?"

* * *

Yes, Comrade Reynolds. Any ditch-digger who works feverishly for the wages he gets in Detroit deserves to be denounced.

LETTER TO A LUNATIC.

Dear Lester:

Lester dear, I always keep my promise. I promised to tell you all the latest news as best I can. I mean that I don't know it so well myself, but will do my best. I know how awful hard it must be for you, dear, in that lovely asylum without papers to cheer you up. So here goes.

Both the president, Coolidge, and the head of the navy, Wilbur, have been saying things about naval armaments. First Coolidge sent a letter to other presidents and kings in other countries. Then Wilbur made a speech about preparedness. Near as I can make out they think that we ought to get together right away and reduce our navy because there may be a world revolution any day and we need the largest army and navy in the world to put it down. Two countries, France and Italy, refused to talk about smaller navies. The answer for France was made by Briand, the same fellow I mean who got the noble prize for peace. Japan and England and the United States will therefore have to talk it over between themselves. But all of them have a lot of warships in Shanghai and the way things are going maybe the Chinese will reduce their navies for them and save them a lot of trouble.

Also I know you will be very glad to learn that there are only 5,000 Communists in our country. It's a wonder there are enough to go around. I mean the way thousands of them are in every union, such as the miners, the cloakmakers, the fur workers, the carpenters and so on; and a lot more are needed to spread poison in the army, the navy, the woman's clubs, the public schools, and so forth. At one meeting, in Madison Square Garden, there were 20,000 of them according to all the papers, so it all goes to show, doesn't it?

Lester darling, a woman took up swimming to reduce and she swam the Catalina channel. Well, she didn't succeed, so why should the papers make so much fuss? I mean she didn't succeed in reducing, as I saw her picture. Also you will be glad to be informed that our nation's income last year was $89,563,000,000, and that there are 200 Americans insured for a $1,000,000 or more. Isn't it wonderful, Lester? Also a young boy of 12 killed a storekeeper because he was hungry and needed bread. The picture papers have started a drive to clean up the stage. The stage is dirty. All the picture papers print awful pictures from those shows to prove it.

That's about all for this time, honey, but I will write real soon. Always, always yours,

Sincerely yours,

MYRTLE.

P. S.—Dear Lester, I forget to tell you also that Chamberlain has sent a letter to Soviet Russia saying that he would start a war if the Bolsheviki do not stop making trouble in Poland, the Baltic countries, China and other parts of the British Empire, which is news, isn't it Lester darling? I mean the same Chamberlain that also got a noble prize for peace.

MYRTLE.

DRAMA

White Hope of American Drama

By MICHAEL GOLD.

MAYBE I'm prejudiced, but I think the most interesting theatre in New York is going to open its doors Wednesday, March 2, when John Howard Lawson's "Loud Speaker" will be played at the 52nd Street Theatre.

I think every labor man, every revolutionist, everyone fascinated by the machine age, by the noise and hope of modern life will go to see this play.

Lawson is the brilliant white hope of the American theatre. He knows labor and he knows the modern stage. He has a close affinity to the work of Mielziner and his revolutionary designs in theatre. More than anyone, Lawson has caught the spirit of industrial America. Most of our so-called "modern" writers, like Sherwood Anderson and Waldo Frank, are frightened to death of industrial America. They seek refuge in the past, in Dostoievsky, in the soul, in mysticism, in wind and wheat-sock. But Lawson moves freely among the subways, skyscrapers, steel plants and production halls of America. He is not afraid of machines, but symbolizes them.

His play, "Processional," was the finest, and perhaps the only real working-class play ever produced in this country. It was a play of the West Virginia miners' strike done in a jazz technique. It established almost overnight in American theatre art. The new play will create another sensation.

"Loud Speaker" is concerned with the humor and hypocrisies of a radio, who is running for Governor of the state. But what makes his examination of the platforms of the succeeding parties of the hour. At the same time he is amused up by the most cruel and devastating of his own. The play is a fiendish cartoon, which punctures all the fake and bokum of our fat-cauliflower politicians. It is in the style of Robert Minor and Art Young, and if I were governor of the state of New York I would suppress it.

The New Playwright's Theatre, under whose auspices "Loud Speaker" is being produced, is a new organization. Most of our art theatres in New York have become timid and bourgeois. They are afraid to experiment. They are afraid of guts and passion and revolutionary harshness in the theatre. They like to produce dainty little costume trifles, and decadent European problem plays, and mystic highbrow morbidities.

The New Playwright's Theatre is to get away from all this. It will try to break down the walls that separate the street from the theatre. It will be produced against drawing room plays, and sophisticated cream-puff tragedies. It will try to get close to the earth, to the fields, factories and workers' life of America. It will be afraid of nothing.

In Lawson's play New Yorkers will have the first chance to see a revolutionist and such an actor now used in most of the revolutionary theatres of Soviet Russia—in the Proletcult theatres, and the Meierhold theatre.

There will be two other plays in the two weeks following. One of them is a tragedy of Negro religious hysteria, called "Earth," by Em Jo Basshe. This young writer edited a paper called "Facts" opposed to the war, and was active in the People's Council and the old Socialist Party. It is his second play.

The third play will be a comedy of the Mexican revolution, called "La Plaza," by myself. Maybe that's why I am prejudiced in favor of this theatre, because it is possibly the only one in New York that will produce plays of this kind, where revolutionary problems are thrashed out on the stage. The Mexican play opens about March 26.

There are five playwrights directing the theatre. They are Em Jo Basshe, Francis Edwards Faragoh, who used to be the dramatic critic of Pearson's magazine when Frank Harris ran it, and whose play "Pinwheel" is being done at the Neighborhood Playhouse; John Dos Passos, who wrote the finest anti-war novel in America, and writes regularly in the New Masses; John Howard Lawson, and myself.

We are trying hard to give radicals a theatre of their own in New York. It's to be a hard-boiled theatre which is to get far away from that silly and decadent thing called art in bourgeois circles. We want to write and produce plays for the workers, who are the best audience. We don't want bored dilletantes, or the idle rich and patronizing. We want our audience to have a good time in the theatre and not to be bored with all the fake problems of the Intelligentsia. We are going to interpret modern America, as The DAILY WORKER and the New Masses interpret it, not as Vanity Fair does, or the American Mercury.

The time is not yet ripe for a real workers' theatre like the Proletcult in Moscow, but the New Playwright's theatre is going to be the nearest thing to it in America. That's all one can promise just now.

If this theatre can be a bridge to the real workers' theatre that will come when we have a mass revolutionary movement in America, I, for one, will be satisfied.

We are going to do our best to get all the young talent we can. If there are any Communist playwrights in America, this theatre will be the first to give them their chance, for next season we are to put on eight more plays by young writers. Harbor Allen is writing a play for us among others, and Alfred Kreymborg and E. E. Cummings. I can honestly say I believe this theatre deserves the support and attention of every radical. There is so much of the fake, the arty, the conservative and downright trashy in the New York stage, that this theatre, whatever it does, deserves support for its intentions.

The theatre is located at 52nd street and 8th avenue, and there will be seats as low as 50 cents. We are going to arrange some kind of discounts, perhaps, for trade union groups.

BROADWAY BRIEFS

Paul Green, whose first play, "In Abraham's Bosom," is now playing at the Garrick Theatre, will soon have the second of his dramas of Carolina life on Broadway. Edwin Wolff is casting "The Field God," a play of North Carolina "poor whites," and it is scheduled to go into rehearsal next week under Wolff's direction.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW

Author of the brilliant satirical comedy "Pygmalion," now playing at the Guild Theatre.

EDITOR'S NOTES

By ALEX BITTELMAN

THERE was a time, not very long ago, when to speak of American imperialism was tantamount in the eyes of the rulers of our land to insulting the national flag. These days are fast disappearing. The phrase "American Imperialism" is coming to be accepted even by apologists of capitalism as a perfectly proper expression of present day capitalism in the United States.

And along with this goes a comparatively frank defense of the extension of American imperialism. Says the Michigan State Journal:

"Never before in the history of America did we have such a grand total of investments abroad as we have at present. The chances are the tendency is now merely under way and that capital and our enterprise will go abroad in an increasing way."

Which is quite fair though not a complete statement of the case. And further in the same paper:

"This condition is bound to be expressed in international relations. It is being so expressed. (Very beteh your life it is.—A. B.) Our little difficulty in Mexico and in Nicaragua are symtoms. From now on, America, whether it will or not, is bound to expand its influence. We may as well begin to think straight about such expansion."

"Our LITTLE difficulty in Mexico and in Nicaragua" . . . isn't that a peach of a statement?

Senator Borah, being more inclined to champion the interests of the smaller independent manufacturer rather than those of trustified industry and banking, which are primarily responsible for the imperialist policies of the American government, takes a different though not very consistent view of American imperialism. Speaking before the American Jewish Congress the other day, he said:

"China, Syria, Nicaragua and Mexico all present the same problem and reveal the same minister policy. It is not war between the great powers, but spoilation of the weak nations. Are we to adopt such methods and such means of adjusting the controversies as will insure settlement upon the basis of justice rather than upon the basis of force?"

We, too, like Justice—justice to the oppressed and weak nations. We admire very much the Justice practised by the Soviet Union in this mattar. And we are particularly strong believers in the justice which is being put into effect by the oppressed nations themselves when they rise against their oppressors. What we mean is some such justice expedition like the one at present engaged in by the Chinese revolutionary armies.

But at the same time we are firm adherents of the policy of struggle right here, at home, against the imperialist robbery of our "own" capitalists. But we demand real, energetic struggle and not mere words. Call it justice, if you must, but get the American military forces out of China, Nicaragua, Haiti, the Philippines, etc., compel the American government to keep its hands off these weak nations, for something about it that will bring results instead of creating the illusion that by talking about justice one can make our imperialists behave in a just manner.

While Senator Borah is philosophizing on justice, the American imperialists, who are not philosophers, but men of action, are establishing themselves in full control of Nicaragua. They call it a protectorate, but we all know what it means.

What is the conclusion? Liberal senators and kind-hearted opponents of imperialism generally should give this matter just a little bit of thought.

SUPER-POWER is fast revolutionizing industry and is preparing the basis for a still more radical revolution in social relations. The recent Midwest Power Conference at the Coliseum in Chicago is very instructive from this point of view.

Engineer Kane of Swift & Co., spoke with great enthusiasm on the prospects of super-power and its possibilities. He said:

"I prophesy that the meat-packing plant of the future will operate every power-driven piece of machinery, whether it be for manufacturing, dumping, refrigeration, transportation, lighting, or heating, from the monster-turbine of a super-power station.

This is no dream, although the vested interests of monopolistic capital will continue to resist effective technical progress whenever and wherever the latter comes into conflict with its control of markets and prices.

But assuming for the moment that Kane's prophesy will come true under capitalism, what will it mean in terms of the well-being of the masses and society as a whole? Of this spoke another engineer, W. Sykes, consulting engineer of the Inland Steel Company. According to him, here is what is happening as a result of super-power development:

"With each great improvement in power development and distribution there has come an increase in production of the steel industry, improvement of working conditions (?) and standard of living of its 470,000 employes."

We fully agree as to increase in production, but

PICKET LINE.

Three hundred men and women
Boys and girls
Stamping their feet upon an ice-clad sidewalk

To keep their bodies warm
And their toes from freezing;
Circle in kaleidoscopic motion
Around the entrance of
The brick colored textile mill,

And shout
Solidarity forever!
And the vapor coming from their mouths
Is like sky-writing to the other workers

Who take it up
And answer
Solidarity forever!
And three blue cops
With deformed faces
Wield their night-sticks
And shout
Break it up!
And three hundred men, women,
Boys and girls lift their voices
And shout
Solidarity forever
For the union makes us strong.

demand proof for the alleged "improvement of working conditions and standard of living" of the half-million steel workers. In the last ten years production in the steel industry had increased 36 per cent per man, but how about the real wages for the overwhelming majority of workers? How about the speed-up and squeeze-out methods that are making life a misery for the workers, and the growing oppressive weight of centralized capitalist government, imperialist rivalries and the ever present danger of new wars?

The further development of super-power holds out incalculable possibilities for the improvement of conditions and the raising of the standard of living of the masses. But these possibilities will not be realized under capitalism. It will require a proletarian revolution to make super-power serve humanity instead of a small clique of capitalist monopolists.

IN commenting upon Coolidge's proposal for "further" limitation of naval armaments (New Magazine, Feb. 19, Editor's Notes) we advanced the idea that the whole business was a piece of brazen hypocrisy which will result not in decrease but in INCREASE of naval armaments by American capitalism. Only, thanks to Coolidge's offer, which, as was known beforehand, was going to be and has been rejected by the European powers, now we can blame the other fellow. This is actually happening. The Army and Navy Journal, a government publication, carries an editorial on the matter in which it says the following:

"Obviously without the participation of France and Italy in the proposed naval disarmament conference, there is but one course for the United States to pursue. That is to proceed instantly (mind you, INSTANTLY—A. B.) with the construction of a sufficient number of cruisers and fleet submarines to place our country upon the same level of strength as other nations signatory of the Washington treaties.

This is a great game. It would appear on the surface as if the right hand did not know what the left one was doing. But in the center of it all stands the Big Boss of the show. Big monopolistic business is his name, and it is him who is directing the whole affair for the greater power and glory of American imperialism.

THE labor organizations of Shanghai, China, have declared a general strike. The masses of workers have responded to the call in a splendid manner, and the strike is growing daily. It is a great strike with great objectives. It represents the mobilization of working class power in Shanghai against the reactionary rule of Marshal Sun Chuan-Fang, against the oppression of foreign imperialists and for the victory of the Chinese revolutionary movement.

The forces of Marshal Sun are seizing strike pickets and beheading them right on the streets of the city. Which is supposed to be part of the "humane" campaign of British imperialism against Bolshevism. Capitalist culture and civilization served to the Chinese workers on the swords of Sun's mercenaries.

But the Chinese workers—the real backbone of the revolution—are learning fast how to fight and conquer. Despite the loss of many and many valuable heads and lives that the revolutionists will suffer in the course of the struggle, the CAUSE that will be beheaded eventually will be that of the imperialist oppressors and their Chinese flunkeys.

WHAT was it that Queen Marie said about her American hosts and entertainers? Vulgar . . . Servile . . . Flock of swine. . . . Anything else?

Well, let the American aristocracy defend its honor if it feels offended. Our wealthy and powerful did all they could to make themselves look cheap and ridiculous in the eyes of every honest American worker. And if there is anything to be said to the noble queen, let the ruling class of our land do the saying. We spoke our minds when the delicate creature was in our midst. Now—nothing to add or subtract.

China Faces The Philippines

By HARRY GANNES

It was not so very long ago that General Chang Kai Shek, in an interview with an American newspaper correspondent, called the attention of the Filipinos to the fact that the road to complete independence lay in a definite anti-imperialist struggle against the United States. With the continuing success of the nationalist forces in China the truth of this assertion becomes indelibly clear.

Since the seal of the United States for fair elections has forced it to go to the expense of dispatching marines to Nicaragua, and since the revolt till with Mexico, the question of the Philippines has sunk into the background. The Thompson report with its excuses for unlimited retention of the Islands under American domination, however, safely rests in the presidential files for future reference; and no occasion will be lost to use it at the proper time.

But just as the Stevens report on extra-territoriality was so much waste paper at the time it was printed due to the entirely changed situation in China by the time the learned Chicago lawyer reached here, so the Thompson report is more than slightly affected by the very same shift in Asiatic relations. With a unified, nationalist China the importance of the Philippines as a spearhead of United States imperialism is magnified tremendously. Hong Kong, as an imperialist stronghold under the control of the United States, assumes an added importance as a Pacific port, as foreign concessions in Shanghai lessen. Whatever the outcome of the Chinese civil war the foreign military control of Shanghai must wane, and the imperialist navies must shift their bases to new quarters. Kuangchau-Wan, Hong Kong, Port the United States there, Manila occupies a commanding position opposite to the entire Orient. Within a radius of 1,000 miles (Manila) is estimated that there are 150,000,000 people; while within a large circle (radius of 2,880 miles) 800,000,000, or about one third of the world's population live.

A lifting of the imperialist bond from China means a tightening of United States control on the Philippines. The Chinese nationalists have foreseen this turn of events. That is why Chang Kai Shek called upon the Filipino nationalists to declare their sympathy with the Chinese struggle against world imperialism. So far the Filipino politicians have not been able to grasp the importance of the world anti-imperialist struggle to the extent to lend moral and material aid to a struggle that has for its aim the breaking of the backbone of imperialism at its most vital juncture.

Of course, it has been the proud boast of the more pro-American of the Filipinos such, for instance, as Aguinaldo, that after all the Filipinos are the Christian vanguard among the Asiatics, and, therefore, do not precisely fit into the anti-imperialist picture. But they forget that even the nickname of "the Christian general" did not prevent Feng Yu-hsiang from shipping with the Canton forces in an effort to wire out the domination of their whiter-skinned co-religionists. If necessary, even the Bible can offer sanction for driving out the money-lenders.

The relation of the Philippines to China and the rest of the Asiatic world will become more apparent when the status of China becomes fixed as an independent nation. Even some of the bourgeois journalists have become aware of the correlation of the anti-imperialist feeling in the colonies of the world. Kirby Page in an article on the Philippines, "The Dangers of Drifting," (The World Tomorrow, Feb. 1927), says:

"All over the Far East there is a rising tide of resentment and hostility toward the peoples of the West . . . The relations between the Orient and the Occident are steadily getting worse. The policy of force has already broken down in China, is functioning very badly in India and is more and more dangerous everywhere in the East. If we stay in the Philippines against the wishes of the Filipino, we will supply more oil on the flames of Oriental hatred."

But the fact remains that, on the contrary, the United States is preparing for a later move in the Philippines; and the growing class and race consciousness in other parts of the Orient will tend to weld the grip of the United States on the Philippines unless the Filipinos shift the base of their independence campaign from one of a long-drawn out legal appeal and a reliance on American bounty to the more solid and fruitful base of world alliance with the anti-imperialist forces, and particularly affiliation with the victorious Chinese nationalists.

There is no doubt that the victories of the Chinese armies must stir the Filipino masses, the majority of whom after all are farm laborers, or poorly paid factory workers. The repeated political general strikes in Shanghai must have some meaning for them. There is constant communication with China. It takes about two and one half days to reach China from Manila and more than fourteen to reach the United States. Commerce between China and the Philippines ante-dates the Spanish conquest. And at the present time there are 45,000 Chinese in the Philippines and but 5,574 American imperialistic representatives and their retinue. In fact, there are more Chinese in the Philippines than any other race besides Filipinos. In short there is a basis for a strong bond of union between the two nations.

Furthermore, there is nothing that the Supreme Council in the Philippines could do more effectively to advance its independence campaign and force leather-necked Governor General Wood out of the Islands than by coming out with an open declaration in favor of Chinese nationalism and a declaration of sympathy and a promise of material aid. China will undoubtedly reciprocate and the unity of political aim between the victorious Cantonese and an anti-imperialist nationalist Philippines will undoubtedly bear more palatable fruit for the Filipinos than a reliance on paper promise.

The Last Words of Four Communists

By ANTON BIMBA

BRAVE were the comrades who died in the hands of the Lithuanian fascist executioners. They went to death in the prime of their lives. Still they would not refuse to pay the highest for their love for the ideals of the working class. As long as there was a spark of life in them they continued to challenge the fascist murderers and to fight the struggle of the proletariat for its emancipation.

The four comrades who were executed in Kovno on December 27th, shortly before they were shot down by the fascisti wrote the following address to the workers:

"Comrades! We four Communists, Karl Pozela, Kazys Giedris, Josef Greifenberger and Rafael Tribeny, were sentenced to death by the field court. Only comrade Faivusch Abramovitch was sentenced to prison for life and Comrade Shelnga to eight years imprisonment.

"We have addressed a request to the president, that our case should be transferred to the district court or the tribunal, pointing out that the time in question is under amnesty.

"However, the fact that we have been tried by a field court makes it certain that we will be executed.

"The best wishes to all our comrades! Live, work and attain your aim, comrades."

In his last letter to the comrades on Dec. 25th, Comrade Pozela wrote:

"On Dec. 24, 1926, four of us, Karl Pozela, Joseph Greifenberger, Mazys Giedris and Rafael Tribeny, were sentenced to death by the field court. The process of the trial showed that the government had decided in advance to exterminate us in spite of everything. They tried as far the past actions which had been covered by the amnesty law and they did not even follow their own laws. The charge alleging that we are supposed to have conspired to overthrow the government on Christmas or on New Year's is a pure provocation. All the other witnesses, Nervaisas, Shavinis, Tamasauskas and others, who did not even know us, had to play the role of provocateurs well, were secret service men. We exposed the provocative character of their charges during the trial, especially pertaining to the accusation that we made preparations to overthrow the government on Christmas. As to the charge alleging that we fought against the independence of Lithuania, we pointed out that we were exactly the ones who fought against those who wanted to sell out Lithuania to the imperialists of Poland. But our speeches were unnecessary, because as it appears, the verdict was prepared in advance. As soon as the verdict was declared they proposed to us that we write to the president begging him for pardon. But we decided not to beg for pardon. Instead we wrote a statement demanding to transfer our case to the army court by to the Supreme Tribunal in view of the fact that we were condemned for that period of our activity for which according to the laws of Lithuania we could no longer be prosecuted. I think that our statement will mean nothing because the farce of the trial shows that the decision was made long ago.

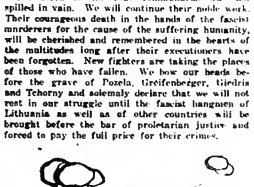
"All comrades heard the verdict calmly and courageously. Saying nothing about others, Comrade Tribeny also is holding himself bravely.

"Greetings to all. Work and win, comrades."

Comrade Kazys Giedris wrote on Dec. 26, 1926, as follows:

"Dear comrades, today I am addressing you my last word. My path of struggle for truth and for the interests of the oppressed and exploited has ended—the field court which took place on Dec. 24, 1926, condemned me to be shot. But I will die full of hope that this struggle will not stop until it is won. I have nothing to regret, except that I did not accomplish much, that there were moments in my life which I did not know how to fill with work. Therefore my only wish is do not lose moments not filled with work; struggle and win. I step to my death courageously and firmly; you, comrades, be firm and brave also."

Comrade Joseph Greifenberger in his last letter written on Dec. 27, 1926, 2 p. m., among other things says the following:



". . . If the ruling bourgeoisie would satisfy itself with the blood of only four comrades, it would not be much to worry about. But this is only a beginning. The dungeons are filled to overflowing not only in Kovno but also in all other parts of the country. Hand in hand with the persecution of the active workers goes the destruction of all the class organizations. The working class will realize the whole weight of the yoke of taxation—only when its organizations will be destroyed and when it will be weakened and left without a leadership. The bourgeoisie will snatch from the workers all the improvements which they have gained by struggle and by the workers during the last few months. The economic pressure will increase enormously. The terrible suffering of the unemployed, the hardships of the peasants, the price of taxation—such are the problems will not be solved by the ruling parties; they will not show even a desire to solve these problems in the interest of the toiling masses. And all this happens on account of the deadly treachery of the parties of the petty bourgeois populists and social democrats. The present deplorable events of the last few days before the coup d'etat proved beyond a shadow of doubt that the petty bourgeois parties are hopeless. They were warned against the approaching danger again and again. Any rank and file worker could see the danger clearly, but the leaders of the social democrats did not want to see it. The tragedy of the petty bourgeoisie is also in the fact that it poses as a government while it has no ground under its feet. This fact has been clearly demonstrated by the ease with which the coalition government was overthrown.

"In their desire to appease the rising reaction they persecuted the militant workers and their organizations. They cleared the road for the reaction of the big capitalists, for the bourgeois dictatorship by tattling about "democracy."

"And it must be said that it is very clear now that the leaders of these parties such as the Slezeviches and the Kairysis are perfectly satisfied with the events. In order to satisfy the masses they should have severed their relations (with the bourgeoisie) and fought the capitalists, but they could not do this for their very petty bourgeois character would not permit them to do it. This explains their dastardly treachery. They did not use any means whatsoever to defend themselves. Even more than that; they did the best they could to restore the innocence of the constitution which had been trampled upon and raped by the fascisti. But the innocence cannot be restored in politics just as it cannot be done in medical surgery.

"The masses are thinking. They shed the best of their democratic illusions that have lasted up to hand and foot yet. But this lesson, as hard as it is, will not pass in vain. After having learned the character of the petty bourgeoisie and the role of their parties and after having broken themselves loose from their influence, the masses will clear the road to their final emancipation from the yoke of capital."

The blood of the four communards was not spilled in vain. We will continue their noble work. Their courageous death in the hands of the fascist murderers for the cause of the suffering humanity, will be cherished and remembered in the hearts of the multitudes long after their executioners have been forgotten. New fighters are taking the places of those who have fallen. We bow our heads before the grave of Pozela, Greifenberger, Giedris and Tcherny and solemnly declare that we will not rest in our struggle until the fascist hangmen of Lithuania as well as of other countries will be brought before the bar of proletarian justice and forced to pay the full price for their crimes.

THIS WEEK'S PUZZLE No. 3.

Try and solve this puzzle. The answer is a word in six letters meaning to fight against the bosses in stopping work.

My first letter is in SOME but not in MANY.
My second is in CENT but not in PENNY,
My third is in RUN but not in WALK,
My fourth is in RING but not in TALK,

THE LITTLE GREY DOG

In one of the Negro huts arrived the little grey dog who had been born in the splendid stable, and this is how it happened.

Once when the rich man walked through the stable, he noticed the little grey dog who was playing in the straw. He examined the little dog, and said angrily to the coachman, "What is this ugly little creature doing here in my beautiful stable? Take it out, drown it in the river."

The coachman promised to do this; indeed he pitied the lively little animal, but the master was strict and he did not dare to disobey the command. He called the little dog, who came running joyously, and started toward the river. As he came near the homes of the slaves, a little black boy ran out of one of the huts and cried, "O, the lovely little animal! Where are you taking it?" And he ran quite close to them and patted the dog, who mischievously jumped at him, barking.

THE WORKERS' FLAG

By HENRY SOMPOLINSKY.

There is a flag of red hue,
The bravest flag that flieth
Whose folds wave o'er hearts full-true
As no worker can deny it.
Here's to the workers—their cause no deat.
Here's to the soul that carries it!
Here's to the hearts so far or near,
That love the flag of the Soviet!

Workers! Your red banner fling!
For the cause beneath its folds
Your anthem loudly sing
Beneath the flag, the red flag.
The brave flag that we love
Workers! Workers! We stand to do or die,
Beneath the flag, the red flag
That waves for victory nigh.

wielding a sharp break. In practice Canada is already half outside the empire, but the position awaits a crisis to be brought out.

In South Africa, on the other hand, where British influence has been financially strong, but lacking political basis, being linked up with the Dutch financial oligarchy against both the Boer farmers and the colored four-fifths of the population, a change in the situation has brought an actual increase in imperialist influence. The Boer nationalists, represented by Hertzog, have closed ranks with the British. This undoubtedly reflects the growing agitation and organization of the colored majority, which has manifested itself in many ways during the past two years (notably during the Prince of Wales' visit, and in the protest against the Bloemenfontein massacre), and resulted in a steady weakening of the old intransigent republican policy of the nationalist. This process reached its culmination at the imperial conference; Hertzog publicly ate his words amid the jubilation of the imperialists at the one positive success of the conference: the whites closed ranks, and a fusion of parties may follow. Here the "unity" is simply the counter-revolutionary unity of the white exploiters against the colored 80 per cent of the population, who will inevitably carry forward the fight for independence to victory.

Finally, in Australia and New Zealand, British connections and financial control are still close and strong; the American invasion has only just begun; and the anti-Asiatic policy involves strategical dependence on the British navy. This is reflected in the close present alliance of Britain and Australia, as shown in the role of Bruce at the conference, and in the scale of armaments contributions. But Australia has developed a strong independent bourgeoisie (as Bruce pointed out, over half the total Australian debt is now held in Australia), and is becoming a principal battleground of British and American influence.

This has been vividly shown in Bruce's visit to America and Coolidge immediately after the imperial conference, in the playing off of Wall Street against the City of London as a source of new capital, in the rapid American commercial invasion, and in the visits of the American navy as the sign of the new protection. With the transference of the centre of world politics to the pacific and the weakening of London as a financial centre, Australian orientation inevitable turns increasingly to the United States.

Summing up the situation, the "unity" which has been "saved" at the imperial conference represents an unstable equilibrium in which the total of forces is steadily accumulating against British hegemony, but in which the various upper-bourgeois elements of the different states hang together, partly on the basis of definite common interests, partly for fear of the consequences of disruption. Only a crisis will show fully the actual array of forces.

The policy of the British bourgeoisie in the face of this situation is to endeavor to carry through a far reaching process of empire development or reorganization on the lines of the propaganda of Mond and others for the development of the empire as a "single economic unit." This conception runs like a single thread through the whole home, foreign and financial policy of British bourgeoisie in the present period. Such a policy, however, can no longer be conducted on the old conception of the development of Britain as the industrial centre of a predominantly raw-materials-producing empire. It has, on the contrary, to build on the new fact of the industrial development of the dominions, and to endeavor to build up the new economic structure of the empire on the basis of the transference of industrial development under British financial control to the dominions and India, leaving Britain to more highly specialised, secondary and luxury industries. If this process can be developed on a large scale, then the "mass migration" of the unemployed in Britain to industrial employment in the dominions, still bringing profit to their masters, becomes possible, and a new basis would be reached. But this process requires a series of years of undisturbed development, and during this period a large scale financing from London, such as can only be achieved by extracting enlarged profits from the declining British industry, that is, by driving down the British workers. These factors give the key to conservative policy in the present period.

Will the British bourgeoisie be likely to be able to succeed in this new line of policy of empire development? The answer to this question lies in the whole character of the existing British and world situation.

The policy of empire development comes into conflict with the central contradiction that it depends on the enlarged financial and capital-exporting power of Britain, just when that financial and capital-exporting power is declining. This decline inevitably continues with the home industrial decline, which cannot be solved within capitalist conditions. The attempt to raise enlarged profits out of the declining industry involves wholesale attacks on the workers, intensified class struggle and the revolutionizing of the British workers. At the same time the independent colonial bourgeoisie, untrammelled by these complications, develop more rapidly than they can be controlled by Britain finance. Finally the seat of world economic and financial power rests with the United States, which has all the advantages in these respects and is effectively endeavoring to take over into its own hands the development of the British empire in the new period. From this situation a host of crisis and conflicts may arise; but what is certain is that British capitalism has no longer the power to carry out the development of the empire under its control, and the attempt to do so will only hasten the development of the revolution in Britain.

Nevertheless this policy necessarily remains the grand objective of the British bourgeoisie, and imperialist propaganda will play a large and increasing part in the years immediately in front, as the only path side of the bourgeoisie directly, but within the labor movement. The imperialist penetration of the upper strata of the labor party, both right and so-called "left" (the Clyde and Lansbury or even) is developing with increasing momentum witness the "Forward" campaigns for empire development in support of Garvin, Baldwin, etc; the growth of the "British Commonwealth Group" in the parliamentary labor party to a majority of the membership; the foundation of the "London Weekly" as a "non-party" empire weekly under the editorship of a prominent labor member, Haden Guest, with the cooperation of Amery, conservative colonial secretary, and similar signs of abundance. This development is inevitable. Reformism, bankrupt at home through the economic crisis, is increasingly to the propaganda of empire illusions as the sole alternative to revolution. The propaganda of imperialism goes hand in hand with the propaganda of class peace.

In consequence in the coming period it is necessary in Britain to redouble our anti-imperialist propaganda, to show the hopeless and illusory character for the British workers of the schemes of empire development, to show the meaning of the development of Britain as a parasitic centre, to show the connection of imperialism and the attack on hours and wages, to show the connection of imperialism with armaments and the next war, and in consequence to show the unity of interests of the white and colored workers and peasants in the empire against the British and dominions' bourgeoisie and in unity with the international working class, and to show the line of development of Britain, not as the decaying centre of the empire, but along the line of the socialist revolution as part of the United States of socialist Europe and so eventually as an integral healthy part of world socialist economy.

A Quack's Panacea

By WILL DE KA

THE world is becoming educated. What better evidence could I offer than a letter, printed in the Woman's Home Companion for February, typical of thousands of other letters, the receipt of which is "What can we believe?"

The dark clouds of ignorance, produced by incense-burning capitalism, are gradually being penetrated by the strong clear winds of science. People who never thought of doubting the tenets of religion and reminiscence are beginning to wonder and ask "why."

Of course, in a periodical so narcotic and soporific as it is natural that the question is referred to Mr. Bruce Barton, the gentleman who signed Jesus up for his local Rotary Club, to answer. Any well read man of science could have informed the inquiring editor of the Companion that the answer has already been written several times over by Messrs. Joseph McCabe, Chapman Cohen, Joseph Whelan, Luther Burbank, and many others. But none of these, unlike Brother Barton, are purveyors of sweetness and light. So the diplomatic advertising man, famous as the "discoverer" of Jesus and the Bible, was paged.

THE problem of religious belief confronts every man when he is suffering from the birth-pangs of intellectual as well as social emancipation. Only one he sees his castles in Spain topple to dust; he is overwhelmed by the complexities of religious differences; his brain is bewildered by the abstractness of the whole subject.

But, as he is nearing the apex of emancipation, he comes to realize that religion is only born of ignorance, and exists through ignorance only; that the sole reason for the existence of religion is man's inability, as yet, to master the great scientific mysteries of the universe. Religion was born of ignorant assumption; so soon as science, which demands only the truth based on acid-tested fact, entered the field, the death knell of religion was sounded.

IN answering the letter, which reveals that the correspondent is bewildered by the religious controversies reflected in the daily press, Friar Bruce begins with "There are three things to be said before we turn directly to answering this letter." But does he mean "said"? Mr. Barton would have been hypocritical and apologetic had he frankly stated there were three premises to be established, with the consent of the opposition, on which his treatise would be based. An examination of his next three paragraphs reveals that the desired consent could not be forthcoming.

He starts out with the assertion that the church is very much alive, proving it with an anecdote around the hackneyed phrase "Nobody kicks a dead horse."

THAT the church is alive, I admit, with regret. But if Barton had taken the trouble to examine microscopically the status of the church today, and compare it with previous epochs in ecclesiastical history, he might be willing to admit that I am justified in contending the church is a dying institution. And may I also remind the scholarly (sic) advertising expert that it is quite a practice to kick a dying horse, to ascertain whether his apparent illness is only pretended.

DISCUSSION and even disagreement are incompatible, in the very nature of Christianity," he continues, citing the fact that Jesus of Nazareth had no more bitter opponents than the highly organized and very pious church of his day. This I will admit with gusto, even going so far as to supply the causes therefor. Mr. Barton very adversarily omits. There were dissenters in the church from the beginning because, in spite of its institutional discipline, the church has never been able to stifle the lead protests of thinkers against its miseries. Heresy after heresy rankled the church; the foundation that was supposed to be built on solid rock was imbedded in sandstone—every storm left its pillars more disintegrated than ever.

THAT Jesus was opposed by the organized and pious church of his day is significant. Biblical scholars have found that Jesus had no intention whatever of founding a new religion. The only evidence that could be so construed is found in gospels written years after his death, in some cases by men who never saw him, and which were altered, even forged, by the priesthood succeeding Peter.

THIS literary hack, who might be putting his time to better avail writing advertisements for the august Lydia Pinkham, says we can take great satisfaction in the steady growth of tolerance, a christian victory. Ideal! The entire history of christianity is a record of cruel intolerance, a christian victory. Indeed! The entire history to the present day. Alas this religious diplomat been ignoring the news that appears under Mississippi and Tennessee date lines? And does he ever glance over the pages that are foolishly devoted every Monday morning to reports of sermons? The expressed beliefs and actions of the majority of our clerics give the lie to any such statement.

HAVING attempted at the outset to make things easy for himself by establishing false premises, Mr. Barton gets around to the business at hand, the answering of the letter. He does this by presenting the spiritual biography of a typical, and what he considers thoughtful, American woman, who had passed through the various stages of religious doubt and "found a sure footing."

She was the daughter of a small town Methodist deacon, and before she went to college had religious beliefs, which, condensed, read like this: "God is a man, very powerful, who sits on a jeweled throne in a palace in Heaven, which is a city with solid gold streets and high walls studded with diamonds and rubies. The gate of the city is tended by St. Peter who shuts the door against nearly all comers. The recording angel has a desk near the throne and looks down at the world continuously, noting every mistake which mortals make. God is very stern and depressed by the wickedness of the world. He created Adam and Eve, and gave them a chance to lead perfect lives, but they sinned, and this made god so angry he condemned the whole human race. Every man, woman and child born into the world thereafter was damned. Jesus, the son, had a kinder heart, so he came down on earth and sacrificed himself to appease god's wrath. All who confess the name of Jesus and are baptized inherit eternal life; all others, even babies dying in infancy, were still under the curse of Adam's fall."

SOME belief! Barton says the case is typical of thousands; of this I am positive. Imagine the horror of it, civilized human beings, believing in so pernicious a creed. I will not, for the sake of my gentle-hearted readers, repeat the infamies of such a dogma—I shall only call attention to the phrases in black print.

But that intolerant, ignorant, inhuman belief is held by the majority of those who consider themselves good churchmen. Truly, there is great need for a messiah, but a rationalistic one.

THEOLOGIAN Barton's heroine, he tells us, gradually came to revise that creede into seven simple, definite beliefs, through the good offices of a white-haired professor consulted at college. They reasoned the matter out, he says, and came to the following conclusions:

"Somewhere and somehow back of this vast universe there is an intelligence, a god. She simply could not conceive of a universe that just happened; it seemed to her far more incredible than a universe that was planned." Here we have in a nutshell the argument supporting the first dogma. There Is A God. Ever since the evolution of the mind from thropism to reason, man has been seeking the first cause.

GRANTED, for the sake of argument, that there must be some ruling factor in the universe, some intelligence, let us call it, where is there any evidence that it must be personified? Or that it is more than natural law? Or that it must be worshipped, or can be influenced, or has human likes, dislikes and prejudices?

He attempts to prove God's existence by the facts that a watch must have a maker, a cathedral a builder. He says "Is it any the less revolting to the intelligence to stand out under the stars and believe that they gathered themselves out of the vapors, that they determined their courses, settled the cycle of the seasons and are spinning away in space without plan or motion—a senseless merry-go-round of motion, doomed at last to destruction?"

HIS absurd attempt at absurdity is indeed laughable. I am no astroneer, and neither is he, but I can recommend a book to him that will enlighten his mind in this particular, provided it can be enlightened. It is "The Child's Book of Astronomy," and all libraries carry it. I would advise him to procure a copy.

If he reads this and similar books, he will learn that natural laws have governed the evolution of the world. How these laws came to be, even the most learned scientists, not including Mr. Barton, do not know. They are here, that is all; of their origin we are ignorant. Perhaps natural laws govern all progress because nature has a tendency to progress in an orderly, natural way. But that is only a hypothesis, and I will not follow Mr. Barton's example in presenting an assumption as an established theory. It is not necessary to find the first cause, if we are not yet familiar with all its effects.

THE "thoughtful" woman presumes that God must be as good as she is because he created her, and the less, she says, cannot create the greater. Sardonically, I might ask "And is he?" but I will content myself with remarking how discouraging that great thought would be to a certain Mr. Nietzsche, and his doctrine of the Superman.

And so her beliefs continue. She disregards the miracles because there is a lack of biblical evidence. I wish she were just as rational on other points, for her own sake. She believes in the church, while admitting its fallacies. It represents, she claims, the ideals of the finest character the earth has known. I must ask her to reconsider the doctrines of heaven and hell, the punishment of the damned, the exalted state of celibacy, and all the other perversions dispensed under the label of religion. Perhaps she might change her mind.

BUT of its benevolence, she asserts, have come our colleges, our hospitals, and charities. Benevolence? If these are good works, it is incumbent upon the church to further them, it is not benevolence. The record of the church in suppressing learning throughout the ages does not bear out this statement. And the clerical system of charities is a social evil, invented by the handmaidens of the exploiting ruling classes, to aid in the continuity of such exploitation. Enough. Any clear thinking person could punch enough holes into this panacea for religious doubt of Mr. Barton's to make its structure even less solid than that of the proverbial sieve.

self-destructive fallacies, be enjoyed.

THE ego, the vanity in man does not permit him to see or recognize the fact that in his innermost thoughts, his conclusions are reactions to his desires. This life is short, therefore he creates an eternal future one; this life is miserable, therefore he looks forward for a reward for his misery in that future ideal existence. His thoughts, in all cases, mirror his desires.

Our pre-est existence we can shape as we will. And only so soon as men realize that their Heaven must be brought to earth, and the present social system reconstructed so that it will bring happiness where there is none, and eliminate needless misery and suffering, will mankind cease to look beyond the horizon and above the skies for a first cause, and seek, and even find it, here on earth.

After the Imperial Conference

By R. PALME DUTT (London)

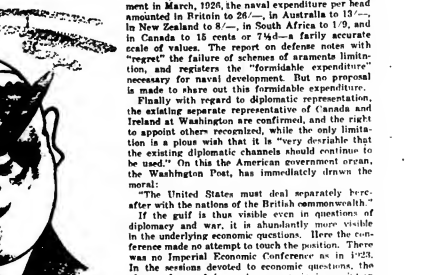
THE essential problem of British imperialism at the present stage is the problem of maintaining the unity of the empire under British hegemony in the face of the disparate tendencies of the various parts, consequent on independent capitalist development, and the growing economic and strategical weakness of the British centre. This problem takes different forms according to the character of the parts: In the case of the conquered colonial races, where the control is directly military and autocratic, and the local bourgeoisie weak, the only menace is the menace of mass revolt; in the case of the emigrant White colonies or Dominions, where there is a strong local bourgeoisie with many ties with the British, the control is necessarily indirect, taking the form of alliance, concessions and economic domination etc., and the struggle of interests take more subtle forms. The imperial conference, as the conference of white executives, itself directly only with the problems of the latter group; in relation to the subject nations, constituting six-sevenths of the empire, the British and dominions bourgeoisie maintain a united front, as the single section on colonial affairs in the report makes clear.

British hegemony over the White Dominions rests on three factors: first, the economic supremacy of Britain as the leading industrial workshop and financial centre of the world; second, the financial superiority of Britain as the source of new capital for development; and third, the strategical supremacy of Britain as the protector against foreign attack and mediator of sea communications. The weakening of British hegemony over the dominions follows on the weakening of the above factors: the industrial decline, financial inability to furnish sufficient supplies of new capital, and the transfer of naval supremacy since Washington; second, on the invasion of a new and stronger candidate for these functions in the shape of the United States; and third, on the independent development of the dominions towards their own industry, accumulation of capital and even their own military and naval forces.

The solution of this situation for British imperialism has developed along two lines, first, a complete economic reorientation of the bourgeoisie in accordance with new conditions and the weakened position of Britain; and second, a closer alliance with the colonial bourgeoisie. This reorientation is, however, beyond the power of British capitalism in decline; and the closer links come in conflict with a thousand forces, both inside and outside the empire, which render their consolidation impossible. Hence the failure of the successive efforts at empire development and unification, which nevertheless remain the central line of policy of the British bourgeoisie and the cornerstone of the reformist labour leaders (who follow them) as the sole solution of the whole crisis.

In the 1923 Imperial Conference the attempt was made to establish a simple economic unification on the basis of business principles. This policy broke down on the fundamental economic interests: the dominions, while continually granting imperial preference, have raised their tariffs against both British and other foreign goods; British manufacturing and commercial interests were not prepared to penalize regardless of their trade for the sake of one third. The British government, introducing the program of tariffs, fell at the general election of 1923; and subsequent developments in this direction have been on the whole limited.

The three years between 1923 and 1926 saw a growth of separatism, as well as of American economic penetration of the dominions. This separatism gave rise to acute political problems: questions of separate diplomatic representation, of a separate army, of a constitutional crisis in Canada, demands for independence in South Africa, repudiation of war obligations by all the dominions, repudiation of the Locarno Pact.



The 1926 Imperial Conference was principally concerned with this political crisis. When the imperial press speaks of the conference as a "success," they mean that the immediate acute points of this political crisis were successfully faced—or evaded—without a break-up. The character of such a claim as a "success" sufficiently reveals the delicacy of the situation.

The political document in which the constitutional agreement is registered exists in the Report on Inter-Imperial Relations. This report, which is the principal public document of the conference, is nominally a charter of dominions autonomy, proclaiming their fullest independence and equality with Britain. A closer examination will show that this pronouncement is deceitful, and that while the document concedes no right to the dominions that they have not already won in practice, its drafting is cunningly devised to strengthen—so far as constitutional form goes—and reaffirm British hegemony. In this sense the report on Inter-Imperial Relations is a diplomatic victory of the British bourgeoisie.

The report defines the mutual relations of Britain and the dominions as that of "autonomous communities within the British empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the crown, and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

In this magic formula, already, the dog lies buried. The dominions are solemnly freed of all allegiance to the British government; instead, they only owe "allegiance to the crown" i.e., the British king. Who is the British king? As everyone knows, the paid servant of the British government. Throughout the document, relations to the British government are substituted by relations to the British king. By this means as the king is supposed to be "non-partisan" the constitutional instrument of British control in time of crisis e.g., in case of war, is strengthened. As "Augur," the foreign office spokesman in the Fortnightly Review, remarks with cynical satisfaction, no one suggested that the Civil List (the king's pay) should come from any one but the British government.

But the British hegemony is in fact more explicitly laid down in the report. For after the formula of freedom and equality comes the limitation: "but the principles of equality and similarity, appropriate to status, do not universally extend to function"; and this limitation is made more explicit in the sentence which "Augur" acclaims as the "crown" of the report: "In the sphere of foreign policy as in the sphere of defense the major responsibility rests now and must for some time continue to rest with His Majesty's Government in Britain."

Thus in the sphere of forein policy and war which is precisely the principal political question facing Britain and the dominions, the effective hegemony of Britain is maintained, while at the same time the dominions retain their right of repudiating specific obligations such as Locarno. What is the consequence in case of war? "The King" cannot be at war and not at war at once, at war in respect of, say, England and Austarlia, and not at war in respect of Canada and South Africa. The empire must go to war as a whole or break up. This crisis remains uncovered; but the British bourgeoisie undoubtedly hope to holve it in the moment of crisis by their effective hegemony n the manoeuvrngs leading up to a war crisis and by the appeal of loyalty to the king, etc.

What results the conference actually reached in respect of foreign policy and war, and the preparations for the next war, it is not possible to say, as the whole of these proceedings and decisions constituting the most important part of the conference, remain secret. The whole of Chamberlain's speech on foreign policy, as also the speeches of the military, naval and air chiefs, and subsequent discussions remain secrets. In 1923 the major portion of Curson's speech was published. In the 1911 imperial conference, Grey's famous speech to the Colonial Premiers, outlining the aner policy of the Entente, was kept secret for years. Thus 1926 returns to the position of 1911. The increasing secrecy, as also the heavy stress placed on questions of armaments, and the carefully staged and imposing military, naval and air displays all bear witness to the increasing imminence and urgency of war conditions. Whether any secret understandings or commitments between the respective governments were reached at this conference can only be matter of surmise at present.

Certainly it is essential that the working class forces both in Britain and the dominions should conduct the most active campaign against secret commitments for the next war reached as a result of the conference, as well as demand complete publicity of the whole proceedings. In Austarlia' left wing working class propaganda has actively taken up this question. In Britain the servile labor party leaders have not even challenged the secrecy of the proceedings, thus affording a true measure of their concern for "democracy" in the most vital issues of war, peace and governing policy, affecting directly one quarter of the human race.

Whatever diplomatic victories, however, the British bourgeoisie may have secured with the aid of their superior experience and manoeuvring ability, an examination of the realities of the position will show that none of these have changed, and that the actual gulf between the interests and policy of the dominions and Britain remains unbridged. Even in respect of forein policy, all the tangible results, in regard to the most acute questions, are negative.

Thus on Locarno, the dominions "congratulate" the British government on the work achieved, but show no signs of accepting any of the responsibilities themselves; on the contrary, by the very character of this "congratulation," they ostentatiously mark the pact as a sole concern of the British government.

In the same way, on Singapore, Australia and New Zealand "note with special interest" the work done towards developing a naval base, but regret their inability to shoulder a share of the "heavy expense."

Still more conspicuous is this position on armaments expenditure. According to an official statement in March, 1926, the naval expenditure per head amounted in Britain to 26/—, in Australia to 13/—, in New Zealand to 8/—, in South Africa to 1/9, and in Canada to 0/9 cents or 7½d—a fairly accurate scale of values. The report on defense notes with "regret" the failure of schemes of armaments limitation, and registers the "formidable expenditure" necessary for naval development. But no proposal is made to share out this formidable expenditure.

Finally with regard to diplomatic representation, the existing separate representative of Canada and Ireland at Washington are confirmed, and the right to appoint others recognized, while the only limitation in a pious wish that it is "very desriable that the existing diplomatic channels should continue to be used." On this the American government organ, the Washington Post, has immediately drawn the moral:

"The United States must deal separately hereafter with the nations of the British commonwealth."

If the gulf is thus visible even in questions of diplomacy and war, it is abundantly more visible in the underlying economic questions. Here the conference made no attempt to touch the position. There was no Imperial Economic Conference as in 1923. In the sessions devoted to economic questions, the gloomy facts of increasing economic inassocial on were set out, but no solution was proposed. The British government representatives endevored to put on an optimistic tone, and boasted that British trade with the empire had risen in proportion to total trade from 37 per cent before the war to 44 per cent in 1925, and that the total value of exports to the empire in the same period had risen to 48 per cent. But the boast was obviously hollow, as the dominions nominal value of 48 per cent (actually, allowing for the change in money values, equivalent to a stationary or even declining total) was outstripped by the United States increase of exports to the empire in the same perio by 108 per cent: while finally in the figures of dominions trade the British proportion was diminishing.

A liberal observer of the school of Lloyd George, McCurdy in the Contemporary Review, has remarked, as the most striking feature of the conference, the fact that for the first time the dominions representatives appeared as public critics o the economic stability of Britain. To this it might be added that the comparison to Britain's isfavor was almost invariably with the United States. The significance of this needs no stressing.

On the crucial question of migration, of decisive importance alike for unemployment in Britain under capitalist conditions and for the British development of the dominions, no gress was reported, nor any hopes held out.

The results of the Empire Settlement Act of 1922, already declare dat the 1923 conference "incommensurate with the needs of the situation," showed no improvement: 30,000 in 1923, 40,000 in 1924, 39,000 in 1925—this for the territory of the dominions representin one seventh o the globe! Nevertheless the 1926 report recognifze that it is "impossible" to look or "mass movements" o migration, in view of the urban industrial character of the British population and the agricultural needs of the dominions. Here, too, is so far deadlock in the plans of British capitalist development of the empire.

In view of this whole situation, what is the "unity" which the British and dominions bourgeoisie have proclaimed to the world? To answer this question, it is necessary to differentiate the situation in the main dominions, as the dominions are not a unity.

In Canada non-British influence are strongest. Here United States influence is already predominant, as shown in the recent election, and in the figures of industrial holdings and trade. Canada could not participate in any war against the United States. But British influence is still strong, especially in the eastern states, in landholding, railroads and banking. The Canadian bourgeoisie would not wish any sudden break with Britain, although fearful of any external commitments or entanglements, and insistine on their own independence of action. Thus Canadian participation in the empire remains a passive one, refusing any obligations, but

Ship Committees On Soviet Vessels

By J. CANTY

THE tasks of the ship committees, as the primary organizations of the union on board the ships, are determined both by the statutes of the Water Workers' Union of USSR and by the general tasks with which the working class of the Soviet Union became confronted ever since the overthrow of the bourgeoisie and the establishment of the proletarian dictatorship.

The fundamental and immediate task of the ship committee is the protection of the economic interests of the ship's crew and of their working conditions, as well as the satisfaction of their cultural needs.

For these purposes the ship committee:

1.—Looks after the faithful observance of the collective agreement and of the wage agreements, both on the part of the administration and crew of the ship;

2.—Looks after the proper hiring and discharging of crews on the basis of the collective agreement signed between the parties;

3.—Sees to the timely payment of wages, to the observation of all the rules concerning labor protection and social insurance on the part of the administration, takes care of improving working and living conditions aboard ship, look after the quality of the crew's food, and also co-operates with the labor inspectors in their work, and,

4.—Carries on cultural and educational activity among the crew, assists in the illiteracy campaign, by arranging during leisure hours: talks, readings, courses, lectures, etc., looks after the activity and content of the ship's wall-newspaper, and takes charge of the ship's library.

In the domain of professional organization, the task of the ship committee is: to get the workers on board the ship to join the union; to develop the revolutionary class consciousness among the members of the crew; to make propaganda for organizational proletarian discipline: to represent the members of the crew before the various departments and institutions, including the organs dealing with any conflicts arising between members of the union and the administration.

Furthermore, on ships owned by the Soviet government it is also one of the tasks of the ship committee to encourage in every way the profitable running of the ship, to assist in promoting efficiency and labor discipline.

The last task arises from the fact that the working class, during the period of the proletarian dictatorship, has for its important purpose to take part in the building of the socialist commonwealth, and in the first place, in the organization and improvement of the state industries and transports. In this connection the trade unions of the USSR, incidentally, furnish a school for the management of socialized industries.

Of course, this last task does not in any way concern the ship committees on board ships owned by private people or by concessionaires. Aboard such ships the only task of the ship committee is to look after the economic interests of the members of the union and to take charge of cultural and general educational work.

Thus, the ship committees, although only constituting the primary organs of the union, are charged with very responsible, complex and varied tasks and functions. As the Contemporary Review remarked, as the most striking feature of the conference, the fact that for the first time the dominions representatives appeared as public critics o the economic stability of Britain. To this it might be added that the comparison to Britain's isfavor was almost invariably with the United States. The significance of this needs no stressing.

Organizational Structure of Ship Committees.

The ship committee is an elected body composed of from 3 to 5 members and 1-2 candidates, elected at general meetings of the ship's crew.

Part is taken in these elections by all those working aboard ship who have the right of becoming members of the union, whether they are members or not. On the other hand, only members of the union may be elected on the ship committee, and not under 18 years of age.

The election meeting is considered valid if attended by not less than two-thirds of all the people employed aboard the ship. Those ure considered elected who obtained an absolute majority of the votes, i. e. 51% or over, of all the votes recorded in the meeting. The election is carried out by means of personal and open voting. In this respect the principles of trade union democracy are fully applied.

The term of office for the ship committee aboard ships navigating throughout the year is for 6 months, and on board ships engaged in seasonal navigation, the term is for the duration of the period of navigation.

On a request being made by not less than one-third of the members of the crew, the question of re-election of the ship committee before the expiration of their time may be raised at a general meeting of the crew.

In order to audit the finances of the ship committee an auditing committee is elected at the same meeting of the crew in the same manner, composed of three members, and serving for the same period as the ship committee. The auditing committee examines the financial activity of the ship committee at least once a month, and furnishes its report both to the general ship's meeting and to the leading organ of the union.

The ship committee chooses its officers, consisting of the chairman, secretary and treasurer.

In order to cope with its tasks, the ship committee may organize sub-committees for labor protection and educational activity, composed of 3 to 5 people each. Furthermore, on large sea vessels and dredges owned by the state, a production committee may also be organized, having for its purpose the discussion of problems relating to the best organization of work aboard ship, and so on. The members of this committee are chosen by the ship committee from among its members and from among the more active and efficient members of the crew. The production committee is an auxiliary organ of the ship committee working under its guidance.

The ship committee carries on its work during the time that they are free from their regular duties or board. For any additional work upon the ship committee, either all the members or those that are most charged with work, are getting a special compensation of from 8 to 22 roubles per month, according to the size of the crew.

The funds for the maintenance of the ship committee and for the conduct of cultural and educational activity are obtained from the ship's administration in the shape of contributions of from 1% to 3% of the total wages paid to the crew, according to the terms stipulated in the collective agreement.

In 1926 the Water Workers' Union of the USSR had 706 ship committees, which organized over 2,000 sub-committees and attracted about 8,000 people into active work in the union.

In the capitalist countries the living conditions of the seamen are different from those prevailing in the USSR. In those countries the trade unions are hampered by the ship owners at every step in the conduct of their work. But the seamen must insist on the formation of ship committees aboard every ship. Only the ship committees will help them to become organized, only under the existence of the ship committees the seamen will be able to build up the organization in the proper way and on sound democratic principles.

On the other hand, none other than the ship committee can look after the faithful observance of the working agreements, the labor protection rules, etc., on the part of the administration.

The organization of ship committees aboard the Soviet ships should serve as an example for the seamen of all countries to emulate.

AVERAGE COTTON MILL WAGE $17.48 PER WEEK; MUCH VARIATION IN DIFFERENT STATES

How you lived on that wage is not explained in the report just issued by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, but the fact that that was all you got is shown by elaborate tables of figures taken from cotton mill payrolls and records from 151 mills in the 12 cotton textile states. These states—Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama and Georgia—contain 92 per cent of all the workers in this povertymaking industry.

Women Lowest.

Men's wages were slightly less miserable than those paid to women. Both were forced to accept a reduction in weekly pay in the period from 1924 to 1926, and the reduction in weekly pay from 1920 to 1926 was 30 per cent. At the same time the working hours were increased by 2 per cent.

Male workers in all occupations in the industry received an average weekly wage of $20.87 in 1924, and they worked 53.5 hours. In 1926 the male workers received only $18.67 and worked 53.8 hours.

Female employes in 1924 got $18.15 for 52.3 hours, and in 1926 they had to accept $15.89 for 52.8 hours of work in the mill.

Many Children.

That a great many employes were children is indicated by some of the figures, given for different jobs in the mills. Thus the male spool tender in 1924 got only $10.46 for 55 hours' work, and in 1926 they got $11.25 for 59.2 hours, while female workers at the same job got $15.19 for 53.3 hours in 1924, and $13.69 for 53.6 hours in 1926. These male workers must have been boys, and the female workers grown women, with a considerable number of girls in 1926.

Wages Vary.

How wages vary from state to state is shown by a comparison of earnings and hours worked in seven selected occupations in the industry, for male and female workers separately. Alabama pays the lowest wage in most cases. Thus, for picker tenders, male, the rates are: Alabama, $12.40 for 56.6 hours; Connecticut, $18.84 for 51.9 hours; Georgia, $12.21 for 56.8 hours; Maine, $19.06 for 54 hours; Massachusetts, $19.35 for 49.1 hours; New Hampshire, $21.03 for 54.2 hours; New York, $18.73 for 48.4 hours; North Carolina, $14.70 for 55.7 hours; Pennsylvania, $22.44 for 53.3 hours; Rhode Island, $19.59 for 50.5 hours; South Carolina, $13.81 for 55 hours, and Virginia, $13.85 for 55.4 hours.

Lower in South.

Male speed tenders get $16.09 in Alabama, $16.17 in South Carolina and $16.70 in Georgia. Female speed hours. In New York the same job, tenders get $13.81 in Alabama, $14.69 at 50 hours, paid $32.85, while in in South Carolina and $15.60 in South Carolina, at 55.3 hours, it paid Georgia for a week of 55 and 56.1 $20.85 to the aristocrats of the mill.

Female frame spinners get less than $12 a week in Alabama and South Carolina, while female weavers are prosperous at $15.21 in Alabama, $15.18 in South Carolina, $16.19 in Georgia and $19.18 in Connecticut, with $17.54 in North Carolina, which claims leadership of the South.

The highest wage mentioned in the study is $36.15 for loom fixers, male, in New Hampshire, working 54.2 hours.

RIVET PASSER

Poised on his lofty spider-web of steel,
I saw him stand against the blue of day
And saw him catch, a mere young boy at play,
A white-hot rivet—catch and swiftly kneel
And place it in the girder there, then wheel
And catch another. He would never sway.
The gang below would draw its breath and say
"The fool'll kill himself!" but seemed to feel
His life was charmed, and yet one day it came—
The rivets, hissing meteors, were flung
To him and quickly placed and made to stay
By singing hammers—like a speck of flame
One rivet flew—an awful instant hung
In space his body—then we turned away.

WE sound the mournful note so often in this column that it is with exceeding great pleasure we introduce our readers to Benjamin Titman, who was born in Russia forty-one years ago and came to America when eleven. Unlike the great many who start at the bottom and stay within a few rungs from there, or the comparatively few that start at the top and end at the bottom, Benjamin rose from beneath the surface and a few days ago hung a million dollars worth of insurance up in his bedroom.

Here is the text for several thousand sermons thruout the United States. The story should be pasted on the window of every pawnshop in the Bowery and in the hat of every white-collared slave in America. No doubt Secretary of Labor Davis will notice the tale and will use it to illustrate the opportunities existing in this country for loyal aliens, the next time he has the pleasure of deporting a group of radical alien workers.

Since I am on the subject of aliens, the following is too good to pass over in silence. A member of the International Pocketbook Workers Union informed the writer that Mr. Shiplacoff, manger of the union was charged with using Mussolini tactics on the members. Shiplacoff did not bat an eyelid but replied: "We Americans will use the methods of 1776 and send you foreigners back to where you came from."

WHICH reminds me of another story. An ex-Irish catholic was delivering a speech on socialism in the days when some socialists were socialists. The inevitable interrupter popped up with the observation that socialism was against the catholic religion. The speaker asked him for his authority. "David Goldstein," came the reply. Then the ex-catholic orator dug down deep into his spacious chest for his strongest vocal blast and with indignation chiseled on his brow he thundered: "Why, my ancestors were catholics when Goldstein's were picking up bottles and rags in the streets of Jerusalem."

None can be more bitter against the radical alien workers than immigrants who have sold themselves to the capitalists. Mr. Davis, our secretary of labor is a Welshman. "From puddler to cabinet official" could be the title of his scenario. Mr. Davis is worth a million dollars, perhaps more. For every sucker that joins the Moose, Davis gets a dollar in commission. It is a better contract than the one held by the imperial wizard of the K.K.K. The dollars come in steadier. Mr. Shiplacoff receives the not inconsiderable salary of $125.00 a week as manager of a small union. He is said to belong to the "left wing" of the socialist party. A man could grow a dozen wings for that salary.

WHAT does a little thing like the senate mean to Samuel Insull, millionaire public utility man, who has been famous for anbaldizing opera in Chicago for several years and for purchasing politicians more recently? Sam treats the senate with almost as much contempt as does Calvin Coolidge. The only difference is that the senate pays Cal back in his own coin while it can hardly touch a hair on Sam's bald head. Sam was hailed before the Reed slush investigation committee but he refused to say to what set of politicians he gave the sum of $40,000 during his spending orgy in the last congressional elections. City's Workers Cheated of $1,000,000

Tammany Keeps Promised Pay Rise Safe in Treasury

Where's that $1,000,000?

Municipal workers, marshalled into line to vote for Tammany before the November election, were promised a nice fat reward in a million dollar pay boost.

But to date there has been no boost. Instead, the million fund has suffered lonely confinement in the city's cash boxes, or banks, or wherever they are kept, while city workers get along as well as they can on their meager pay.

Early in March, city machinery will begin creaking and groaning when Charles L. Kohler, Tammany budget director, submits to the board of estimate a proposal for disposing of the fund. But who will get it?

Last year a similar fund, supposed to be used for low wage workers, was parcelled out among magistrates, municipal court justices and some of the trusted lieutenants immediately urrounding Jimmie Walker. These ellows, already getting $5,000 a year or more, stepped up the gravy.

Real Workers Get Low Pay.

In the meantime nurses, stenographers, typists, elevator operators, bridge tenders, telephone operators and ungraded workers, the majority of whom make less than $30 a week, have gone without their promised raises. Under the new schems, they will get $570,000 of the million, if and when the board of estimate decides to give it to them. Another $250,000 may go to clerical workers, also badly in need of more pay.

Uncer present Tammany plans, the rest of the money, including an additional $150,000 accumulated this year, will be left for the big boys to split.

Saved for Election Time.

Comptroller Berry, head of the finance department, opposes any increase to city workers at all. He's for keeping the money in the treasury, presumably into use before the next election. "Giving away" money on wage increases now would be a waste of money, it is understood in the best Tammany circles. Distributed before the 1928 elections, it will have a refreshing effect in stiffaning the Tammany line for Al Smith, and what ever local and state dignitaries are running for office.

Few of the city's workers who expect to benefit under the $1,000,000 wage increase are organized. This is a compelling reason for no distribution, in the eyes of Tammany, which has a high respect for organization.

Strong municipal employes' unions could open the Tammany blind pig's eyes and make him see immediately the advantages of living up to preelection promises.

MISMANAGEMENT OF MODERN INDUSTRY SO GREAT THAT ONLY QUARTER OF MEN EMPLOYED ARE MAKING USEFUL PRODUCT

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

The growth of America's nonproductive classes at the expense of the producers is a feature of the last 15 years, a survey of the country in 1925, 1920 and 1910 by the national industrial conference board. The report indicates that an increasing proportion of the population is either idle or engaged in competitive distribution, with a corresponding decrease in the proportion in agriculture, mining, manufacturing and transportation.

While the entire population of the country increased from 91,972,266 in 1910 to 115,380,000 in 1925, a gain of 25½%, the nnmber in agriculture, mining, manufacture and transportation increased only a little more than 3%, from 28,490,402 in 1910 to 27,760,000 in 1925. In the same period the number in non-industrial occupations increased from 11,276,934 to 15,160,000, more than 34%.

Useful Producers Decline.

The decline in the number engaged in producing agricultural raw materials, from 12,659,082 in 1910 to 10,500,000 in 1925, has been given considerable publicity. But less has been said about the tremendous increase in the number engaged in trade and in clerical pursuits. The gain of 57½% in these two groups, raising such nonproductive workers from 5,351,723 to 8,420,000, accounts for almost the whole 1,000,000 the decrease in number of farmers and other agriculturists.

The number of clerical workers alone rose from 2,707,053 in 1910 to 3,820,000 in 1925, an increase of 120%.

Call the Marines Back! Machine Gun Volley in Philadelphia, Pa., Streets

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27.—One man was killed and two others were wounded as a machine gun barked its message of death from an automobile which speeded by the Club Friedlie here early today.

Men and women participating in a private party in the night club fled in terror after the shooting, believed to have been the climax of an underworld feud.

The dead man is John Brickter, 29, address unknown. Six bullets pierced his neck, forehead and back.

Five bullets penetrated the neck, shoulders and abdomen of Mike Duffy, 43, who according to police is dying in Hahnemann Hospital.

The chairman of the club, Earl Brown, 34, is being treated in a local hospital for two bullet wounds in the thigh.

Woman Victim To Greed of Landlords

Perishes in Fire Under Wooden Stairway

Landlordism today chalked up another victim. She is Mrs. Carmelo Sgroy, 48, who was trapped in a tenement fire at 125 Madison St., yesterday. Overcome by smoke and flame, she died despite an hour's effort with a pulmotor to revive her.

A wooden stairway, unprotected by fireproofing, was immediately responsible for the death of Mrs. Sgroy. It raging flames in her apartment.

But the real responsibility for her death lay upon the landlord's lobby at Albany, which last year killed a measure which would have forced landlords to fireproof all staircases in tenements.

Stairway Mass of Flames.

Fire of undetermined origin burst forth under the stairs of the five-story tenement building at 125 Madison St., directly under the Brooklyn-bound walk of the Manhattan bridge. In a few minutes the entire stairway was wrapped in flame and crumbling.

Mrs. Sgroy opened her eyes to a room illumined by a red glow and filled with smoke. She heard in an adjoining apartment the crying of her grandchildren.

Rushes to Grand Child.

Mrs. Sgroy might have saved herself. But she rushed to the aid of the child. The room was filled with smoke.

Mrs. Sgroy gathered the baby to her breast. She ran to the window, but a whirlwind of flame blocked her. She ran the other way, but the hallway was roaring flame. She was hemmed in.

Clutching the child, she lay on the floor. She placed the child underneath her, covering it with her body, and wrapped her skirt and dress around her, so that no smoke or flame might reach the child's lung. She didn't cover her own mouth.

Firemen Climb to Rescue.

Firemen James J. Sullivan, Capt. David Lynch of Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1, and driver Walter Hilles were told of persons trapped up on the fifth floor. Flames were leaping from windows and it looked like death to attempt a rescue.

They raised a 75-foot aerial ladder and clambered up.

Sullivan scorched by flames and almost suffocated crawled in a window. Then Lynch and Hilles also disappeared through the window and grouped around in the dark. Finally Sullivan's hand touched the grandmother and child. Weak himself, he dragged both back a few feet, and then Hilles dragged them further and then Lynch. They were getting weaker every moment. Lynch carried the two unconscious forms down the ladder.

Firemen Unconscious.

The firemen returned and grouped some more. They found Angela Lee, the 75-year-old woman, who had been ill, unconscious under a couch. They dragged her out and carried her down. Then out in the air, all three firemen became unconscious.

The pulmotor worked for an hour on Mrs. Sgroy. It was futile. But the child was revived after a half-hour's work.

Labor Rallies To Defend Sormenti

Denounces Kellogg's Effort To Deport Italian Editor

That the United States government has conspired with Mussolini to hound Italian political refugees and deport them to "certain death," was the charge made yesterday afternoon at Webster Hall, where the International Labor Defense held a protest meeting against the deportation proceedings aimed at Enzo Sormenti, editor of the anti-Fascist Il Lavoratore.

Joseph Brodsky, labor lawyer, acting as chairman, Arturo Giovanitti, of the Italian Chamber of Labor, and Ben Gitlow of the Workers Party, were among the speakers who scored Secretary Kellogg and Secretary Davis of the labor department for scrapping the ancient American tradition of political asylum.

Sormenti, anti-Fascist leader in America, was arrested last October after a fiery speech against Mussolini in Tammany Hall. He was taken to Ellis Island for deportation, but later released under $2,000 bail. Clarence Darrow, prominant lawyer of Chicago, will appeal his case to Washington on a plea of haven for political refugees.

Deportation to Italy will mean certain death to Sormenti, declare officials of the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America. The American Civil Liberties Union is co-operating in the Sormenti fight, according to a telegram from Forrest Bailey.

Former Haven Of Oppressed.

When Kossuth, Garibaldi, Carl Schurz and other champions of liberty had to fly from their native countries, they ware met in America with open arms, said Giovanitti. "It was considered an honor For Garibaldi to be in America," he declared.

Now the Italian people are again fighting for freedom. But now, when champions of liberty are denouncing the most foul and abject tyranny the United States is trying to hand those refugees back into the bloody jaws of Mussolini. The accuse is that they are here illegally.

"Why is Sormenti going to be deported? Only because he entered illegally? If he were a bootlegger, if he had accumulated fat American dollars and grown fat on wealth himself, he would be allowed to stay. There are thousands and thousands of illegally entered immigrants who are allowed to remain. The reason why they are going to daport Sormenti is because Mussolini wants his head, because he is a rebel and a Communist."

Boo Mussolini.

At each mantion of Mussolini the audience broke into prolonged boos. The name of Sormenti was greeted with cries and cheers.

Giovanitti declared that Sormenti had committed a two-fold crima against "the tyrant of Italy"; first in opposing the fascist regime and sec-

CONGRESS JUST TALKS AND GAGS SELF TO DEATH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Sunday, the dying Sixty-ninth Congress drew a breath and looked itself over. Apparently its work is done. The worst legislative jam in history confronts it. Any minority can stop action on any important bill by filibuster in the senate, unless cloture is invoked, and though some senators show an almost fascist eagerness to "gag" their associates, the necessary two-thirds majorities are probably lacking. The Boulder Dam cloture was defeated yesterday by 59 against to 32 votes for it.

The presidential bee is buzzing quite audibly. News reached congress within two hours after the veto of the McNary-Haugen bill that the Iowa legislature had started a petition in favor of Senator Frank Lowden's nomination for president by the republican party.

There is no question of a "split" between Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Dawes. That already exists. There is an official coolness between the president and the vice-president of long standing, and which has been particularly marked during the present session.

Yorkville Landlords First to Organize Higher Rents; Queens Becoming Slum

Middle European Community of Last Century Now Rackrented by Efficient Band of Tenement Profiteers

Will de Kalb, in his survey of Yorkville, the old Manhattan settlement centering on 86th St., tells today how landlords there formed the first rent-conscious organization in all New York. Yorkvillers, pressing over into Queens, find themselves as badly off now as the friends they left behind them in Manhattan. With average monthly rents of $45 balanced against weekly income of $34, the Queens tenement dweller is no better off than his fellow workers in other sections of the metropolis.

Yorkville is one of the city's genuine working class communities. Beginning as a village in the early forties, when New York City was centered below 34th St., it grew until it became the melting pot of the city. Immigrants from Germany, Hungary, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria

DIME CARFARE IS NEAR; NO RELIEF FROM TAMMANY

Politicians Fumble With No Action in Sight

A boost in subway fares looms closer than ever and the possibility of transit relief recedes farther and farther as the republican majority in the legislature primes itself for a war against the $300,000,000 subway bond amendment.

Mayor Walker, who has returned to New York after a little vacation in Cuba, Palm Beach, etc., discovered that opposition had crystallized against his scheme for granting bus franchises to the Third Avenue and Equitable Coach Companies as well as against the $300,000,000 subway bond amendment.

Determined to fight the republican opposition to his plan, Mayor Walker will visit Albany some time this week. The republicans favor the present subway system while Mayor Walker wishes to amalgamate the B.-M. T. and the I. R. T.

The defeat of the subway bond issue will leave New York workers at the mercy of the subway barons who have long been contemplating a raise in fares, and the defeat of the bus project will postpone indefinitely what was in the first place an ineffectual attempt at transit relief.

Charges that various bus bids had been surreptitiously changed were made several days ago by John H. Delaney, chairman of the board of transportation. This and the request that action on the proposed franchises be postponed for a week, which was made by Comptroller Berry, furnished the last meeting of the board of estimate with plenty of excitement.

While members of the board of estimate are wrangling with each other over fat bus contracts which they wish to hand out to their friends, New York workers are anxiously waiting for long-promised transit relief and hoping that action will be taken which will prevent a boost in subway fares.

Disgusted with the failure of city and state authorities to take action, residents of Jamaica have protested to the Port Authority, pointing out that many Jamaica and Queens residents have to walk more than a mile to a bus line, to find that they have to stand on a running board for three or four miles. The Jamaica Board of Trade declared in a letter, that "adequate transit facilities should be provided for the greater Jamaica district as well as for the entire borough of Queens."

The inadequate transit facilities in Jamaica and Queens has its parallel in all of the outlying districts of New York, where many workers are compelled to live because of high rents in Manhattan. Formal protests by various civic bodies have already been made to the Board of Trade and Transportation.

Soviet Workers Protest British War Threat

Gather in Thousands at Shops Thruout Union

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The answer to the provocatory note sent last week by the British cabinet to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics has just been received, and is a dignified, but complete answer to all charges. It declares that threats cannot intimidate the Soviet Union, expresses a desire to continue friendly relations, and points out that there is no agreement between the two governments to prevent anybody within the borders of the U. S. S. R. from saying what he pleases about England. It refers to Churchill's personal abuse of the heads of government in the U. S. S. R. and to the atrocities between members of the English cabinet and Russian white guards in England.

MOSCOW, Feb. 27.—Mass meetings protesting against the British note to the Soviet government were held outside factory works in Moscow, Leningrad, Kharkov and other towns thruout the Soviet Union when the news was made public.

Resolutions were passed demanding that the Soviet Government send spirited reply to the haughty provocative note and stressing the importance of firmly rallying the ranks of the proletariat around the Comintern in reply to the British government.

Declaration of War.

Many persons interpreted the British communication threatening a break of British-Soviet relations as a threat of war, and responded with resolutions asserting Soviet Russia's preparedness for all eventualities.

The Red army garrisons at Kharkov and Moscow passed a resolution declaring:

"Let the English bourgeoisie know that the Red army is ready at any time to repel an attack. We instruct our government to repudiate in the sharpest tones the haughty English rulers. We have been and will be on the side of the workers of China. Lord Curzon did not scare us. Neither shall Austen Chamberlain."

Can Defend Itself.

Five thousand workers in the factory of "The Hammer and the Sickle" passed resolutions that "the Soviet Union doesn't want war but if attacked it will move the entire nation."

The official organ, Pravda, appr hends that the vote may encour the die-hards in Great Britain to "re attempt a break." Pravda warns conservative government of G britain that such a move would make Anglo-Soviet relations worse.

Pravda declares that the document does not produce a single piece of evidence to support its charges of violation of its agreement by the Soviet government. It just as ridiculous, the paper declares, to say that the Soviet Government is identical with the All-Union Communist Party as to say that the British government is identical with the Conservative Party and say that the actions of the latter were the actions of the British government.

RUSH TWO MORE BRITISH UNITS TO SHANGHAI IN WAR ON THE CHINESE

Mutinies and Desertions Among Northern Troops

London, Feb. 27.—The British Shanghai defense force yesterday became an actuality with the arrival of the troopship Nagunatic with General Duncan, who has been given supreme command of the British forces in China.

General Duncan's ship also brought the first battalion of the Dedfordshir, regiment and the second battalion of the border regiment.

The rival armies of the defeated Sun Chuang Fang and those of Chang Tso-Lin's ally Chang Tsung-Chang had several clashes. Sun's forces are going over to the Cantonese in large numbers.

Militarists Lying.

Considerable propaganda against the Cantonese is sent from here to foreign countries. Individual acts of violence are attributed to the Cantonese tho the Nationalist government is decidedly opposed to giving the imperialists any excuse to arouse unbinding indignation against them. They wish to disarm the imperialists of a "moral" cause for a declaration of war.

Imperialists Fall Out.

It is believed that Japan's decision to send Chang Tso-Lin and his army south the Nationalist government troops was prompted by a desire to bloc Great Britain, which is reported to have the intention of inaugurating an aggressive polley in Southern and Central China.

There is much talk of a regrouping of the powers in the Pacific. Indications are that Britain is seeking to patch up the old Anglo-Japanese alliance and trying to organize a bloc that would weaken American influence in China, another reason for Britain's flirtation with Japan is an attempt to stem the growing influence of the Soviet Union in the Orient.

WON'T DISMISS FORD TAX TRIAL; EVIDENCE IS IN

Dodge Got $25,000,000 For Ford Stock

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Decision by the board of tax appeals in the government's $30,000,000 tax case against Senator James Couzens of Michigan and other former Ford Motor Company stockholders will be deferred until late in the spring, it was announced today.

Hearings Concluded.

Hearings were finally concluded with testimony on special issues affecting the John F. and Horace E. Dodge estates, and an agreement was reached to allow fifty days for filing of briefs. Another twenty-five days will be allowed for replying briefs.

Oral arguments summarizing and interpreting the mountains of documentary and statistical evidence will be arranged for some time after May 1st.

Former Ford Motor Company stockholders logt the fight to dismiss the government's long-disputed $30,000,-000 tax claims and and the case at once.

They moved to disallow the claims on the ground that their Ford stock value contentions had been upheld by the evidence. Only by an unconstitutional construction of "fair market price or value," it was asserted, could a lower value be found.

Withhold Ruling.

The board of tax appeals, however, withheld any ruling on the motion leaving it as one of the issues to be disposed of when it decided the case.

The attempt to win an immediate decision for Senator James Couzens of Michigan and other former stockholders was made a moment after the tax cases had formally ended with the completion of their rebuttal testimony.

$23,000,000 To Dodge.

Twenty-five millions in cash was paid to the Dodges within a month after they made their deal to sell out to Ford, it was testified by Walter L. Dunham, vice-president of the first and old Detroit National Bank, of Detroit.

Consolidation of News Reel, Comedies, Short Scenarios in New Trust

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27.—One of the most important alliances ever made in the motion picture industry, involving the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, William Randolph Hearst and Hal Roach organizations was completed today, according to advices received by Louis B. Mayer, head of the M. G. M. studios here, from Nicholas M. Schenck, executive vice-president in New York.

The deal concerns the creation of an M. G. M. news reel service to be produced by the Hearst organization and the affiliation of Hal Roach, world's foremost producer of comedies, as the first step in establishing a large M. G. M. short subject department.

The news reel cameramen will be constantly on duty covering the news in the Los Angeles and Southern California, which will be distributed in hundreds of theatres throughout the world. The amalgamation also means that the motion picture industry in Los Angeles will receive an impetus in production, particularly in the short subject field to fully round out the new M. G. M. short subject department.

Insull went to Washington in response to a senate invitation. He was shocked to the core when he heard Frank L. Smith, the beneficiary of the greater part of Sam's election swag, had the cash tied to him by the same bulldozed senators who are now developing callouses on their bellies travelling before the money Mahatma.

To whom did you give the $40,000 that he left deposited in 1st? the politicos pursued the inquisitors. "Gentlemen, I am deeply distressed because my conscience does not permit me to answer," almost sobbed Mr. Insull. The senators had to adjourn to their hip pockets to relieve the emotional strain, the hearing was adjourned, an avalanche of upturned palms managed Samuel's, and it never occurred to anybody to sing "The Prisoner's Song," What would happen to a radical labor leader hailed before a senate committee for violating an injunction can be left safely to your imagination?

Alfred L. Smith, governor of the Empire State has his headgear in the ring for the presidential nomination on the democratic ticket. A nation-wide publicity campaign is now being conducted to break down the wall of anti-catholic opposition that divided the last democratic convention into two hostile camps when Madison Square Garden, Tex Rickard's private theatre of war was the scene of the greatest bloodless strife ever fought out in that arena. Even the art of William Jennings Bryan could not keep the two sections of Wall Street's and the Lord's armies from desiring to annihilate each other. The outstanding figures in the protestant and catholic camps were eliminated and a colorless Morgan attorney was picked only to pass out of the political picture in an election that placed the crown of victory on the brow of a Vermont bill collector and strike-breaker.

William Gibbs McAdoo is now as dead politically as A. B. Fell is outside of New Mexico. Al Smith has the backing of Wall Street. Which means that Wall Street would be satisfied to see Al ride the donkey in the next political race. Its agents in the G. O. P. camp will see to it that a loyal jockey mounts the elephant. Then the circus will be introduced with the press agents painting the wonders of the scenes inside the big tent and the Barnums announcing the "next act" to the voting multitudes. The attention of the workers will be attracted and their thots distracted by the commotion. While they should be building a Labor Party and laying the political foundation for political mass action against the capitalist system they will be quarrelling with each other over the relative merits of the capitalist circus performers.

General Ben Butler of Massachusetts, the famous orator and advocate, was once pleading a case in a Boston court. The general was a master, before a jury. He could fix more of his "peers" with his tongue than other attorneys could with the purse. But in the middle of his exhortation a small army of cats set up a terrific caterwauling from a nearby alley. Everybody in the courtroom laughed, from the judge to the bailiff. The general was irritated. This weakened the effect of his speech. He was in the middle of his peroration when a feline host on the outside. Always equal to the occasion the general raised his hands and said seriously, pointing to the direction from which the sound came: "Gentlemen, this only means more cats." Likewise a victory for a democrat candidate or a republican candidate means only more exploitation for the workers.

WILL NEGOTIATE OVER SOUTHWEST COAL AGREEMENT

Bosses Desire Separate Contract and Wage Cut

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Feb. 27.—Coal operators in Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas and Texas will not enter into a new wage agreement with miners effective April 1 if unions insist on the same basic terms as applicable in the central competitive field, Miller D. Hay, chief mine inspector of Oklahoma, declared today following a canvass of operators' organizations.

A joint meeting of operators and miners will be held in Kansas City in March and the former will insist local conditions must be the basis for a new contract without reference to the decision of miners' national organization in the Florida conference, it was said.

Effects Lewis Program.

President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers stated, after tha breakdown of negotiations with the operators at Miami, that he relied on the signing of agreements with coal companies in the outlying districts such as Oklahoma, Kansas, and Washington to break the opposition of the coal operators, and prepare for a renewal of the conference just ended. But this presupposes that the new separate agreements will be signed on the basis of the Jacksonville scale.

Proves Progressives' Point.

Progressives in the miners' union see in the demands of the southwestern operators for wage reductions proof of their claim that separate agreements are not the best way to approach the problem, and that only immediate preparations for a wide-spread strike and organization campaign are effective arguments with the fairly well united mining companies. The progressives are especially insistent on strike preparations, pre-pareada for the union, and organization, among the non-union miners. They charge that Lewis has neglected this work in the past, and demand that he busy himself with it before it is too late.

Several Meetings for Heretic Bishop in and Around City of Angels

LOS ANGELES, Calif. The International Labor Defense of Los Angeles announces that Bishop William Montgomery Brown, the famous author of "Communism and Christianism, will speak at the Auditorium, Trinity Auditorium, 5th and Grand, Sunday evening, March 6. His subject will be "The Power of the Workers."

Meetings have also been arranged in Pasadena and Long Beach. The meeting in Long Beach will be held on Saturday, March 5, at the Holder's Auditorium, 320 West Ocean St. Monday evening, March 7, has been reserved as a meeting date in Pasadena. Bishop Brown will participate in the present general strike at Shanghai (China), were executed with the most cruel and vandalistic and barbarous methods.

Strike agitators, pickets and students were beheaded and the decapitated heads of the victims are now exhibited on poles in the principal thoroughfares of the native quarters at Shanghai.

The men and women throughout the world who are members of the Communist International realize that the class struggle is a severe affair. We recognize that the capitalist class perceives in us Communists a bitter and uncompromising foe. But we feel also, that as enemies we workers should not be murdered like dogs, but should at least be treated to the courtesy of the firing squad.

The local (Columbus) Workers (Communist) Party has passed this resolution to protest emphatically against these cruel, inhuman outrages, which occur in the presence of French, British and American troops. A copy has been forwarded also to the American section of the Kuomingtan Party.

Movie King Disclaims Chaplin Divorce Move

Samuel Goldwyn, film magnate, who arrived yesterday from Hollywood with Joseph Schenck, flatly denied reports that their mission is to urge a quiet settlement of the Chaplin divorce suit.

"Mr. Chaplin needs no assistance in managing his marital affairs, any more than is his professional interests," said the producer. "Furthermore, the film industry is in no way affected by his wife's divorce action."

Tax Cabinet's $30 Rum Only Denatured Alcohol in Chemist's Test Take

"The very finest Scotch whiskey, for our own exclusive trade," stammered the waiter.

"It's expensive, but you have to pay to get the best," Thomas plead. "$30. Thank you sir. I'm sure you'll be surprised by the quality."

Those soft spoken words were uttered into the ears of two prohibition snoopers by a waiter in Texas Guinan's "300 Club," but it turned out that the waiter was the one that was surprised.

Today J. W. Quillen, chief chemist of the prohibition headquarters, announced that the "Scotch" is of the highest grade than re-distilled denatured alcohol cut to an alcoholic content of 37.86 per cent. He added that if a person drank enough of it he would be poisoned slowly.

Denver Capmakers' Strike Continues; Scab 'Ad' Is Killed

(By a Worker Correspondent).

DENVER, Colo.—Capmakers in two shops have been on strike for about two weeks and are still out, asking for an increase in wages, especially for the lower paid girls.

At the Midwest Cap Factory the matter of wage increase was brought before the State Industrial Commissioner Williams.

It was agreed to by both the company and the representative of the union that the 40-hour week be postponed until 1928. The girls who were getting as low as $15.00 per week were allowed an increase of 5 and 10 per cent.

The strike is still on at the Perfection Cap Company and no effort is being made to run the shop.

Look For Scab Help.

At the Capitol Cap Works an effort has been made by the manager, Mr. Cohen, to run annie with non-union help. He has advertised for help and out stated that a strike was on in the shop which is against the state laws. Cohen was called into the district attorney's office and warned not to repeat the advertising unless he states a strike is on. Cohen says he can get plenty of girls to work for $9 and $10 per week.

The journeymen have no wage scale at present, but an agreement has been reached for apprentices.

A year ago a well known Communist capmaker represented the national organization and secured a good agreement with all of the shops while this year a non-Communist was present and the result has been a partial failure up to date.

Senate Foreign Affairs Committee Dodges War Probe in Latin America

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

SENATOR WHEELER (democrat-Montana) declared recently that the great bankers were only waiting the adjournment of congress to plunge the United States into war with Mexico and open actual hostilities in order to crush completely Nicaragua.

The senator takes himself and congress too seriously. This has again been shown by the meek obedience with which the senate committee on foreign affairs, against the wishes of its chairman, Senator Borah, voted against a trip to Mexico and Nicaragua to actually investigate conditions there.

Secretary of State Kellogg sent a clerk to capitol hill urging that the Borah request be rejected and the "administration senators" effectively clamped the lid on the proposed investigation.

The best that Senator Borah could do in the hope of securing some favorable action, was to urge the adoption of an amendment to his resolution providing simply that the committee have authority to investigate Central American and Mexican matters "without leaving the country." "Nervous Nellie" Kellogg would thus be permitted to tie his apron strings securely around the legs of the senate senators, permitting them to nobble about within sight where they would be incapable of doing any damage to the policies of "dollar diplomacy." On fair days and "Nervous Nellie" might take his senatorial wards across the street from his own offices, for a stroll through the White House grounds where "Cautious Cal," Wall Street's parliamentary nurse extraordinary, could beam upon his good little children.

But the "administration senators" even refused to demand this liberty. Senators Moses, Lenroot, Willis, Pepper, McLean, Edge, Copper and Fess-flesh went over the top for the complete vassalage of the legislative wing of the government to the executive power embodied in the president and his cabinet. Borah got the support of the farmer-labor senator, Shipstead, and the democrats rallied back of him but this only gave him a bare majority of 9 to 8 on the committee, with Hiram Johnson, of California, absent. Hiram, the running mate of the late republican "progressive," Roosevelt, on the 1912 "insurgent" ticket, is now with the administration crowd, supporting the White House and state department in its Mexican, Nicaraguan and Chinese policies. "Bill" Borah's threatened trip to Mexico and Nicaragua is therefore squelched. He will not even be allowed to play his timid game of anti-imperialism in the government's back yard in Washington, unless he can secure some action from the senate itself, which is doubtful. Borah will probably not even make the fight.

It is hoped that Borah will fight. The New York World claims that Senator Johnson might be won for the "stay at home" investigation. Even such an investigation might turn up some revelations that would be of interest to the masses of the American workers. But even if the amended Borah resolution passes the senate, the "administration leaders" are planning to overlook the matter of an appropriation to meet the committee's expenses.

These incidents merely show again how congress abdicates in favor of the centralized government concentrated in the nation's executive power. Members of congress, especially of the senate, do not even dare ask for the information upon which they are supposed to carry out their constitutional privilege of declaring wars. Whether congress is in session, or out of session, the plunderbund pulls the strings that makes its puppet, Coolidge, wave the flag as a signal for the lawmakers of the old parties to fall in line and whoop it up for war.

The senate committee on foreign affairs duplicates the care taken by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in turning its eyes away from the troublous situations in Mexico and Nicaragua. At the Detroit convention of the A. F. of L., it was impossible to get President William Green to agree to go to Mexico. Labor officials came all the way from Europe to attend the gathering held at Mexico City, but Green refused to budge from Washington. The call for the meeting of the Pan-American Federation of Labor was also issued with no mention of steps to be taken on the new depredations of Wall Street imperialism south of the Rio Grande.

The A. F. of L. officialdom has shown itself, in these instances, as obedient to the will of Wall Street as the "administration senators" on Borah's committee on foreign affairs. Every effort is thus being made to shut out the light on this drive toward war. The workers and farmers must demand that the full glare of the truth be shed on this situation. Open the war on secret diplomacy. Fight the impending war by opposing the drive in the dark toward war.

tricked into supporting, was already influencing the actions of the Federal Reserve Board today. Middle western senators had the bitter sweet experience of seeing the board grant authority to the Richmond and Dallas banks to establish branches at Charlotte, N. C., and San Antonion, Texas, badly before the ink was dry on the president's signature—of on his vote of the farm relief bill.

Johnson Powerless.

The Boulder Dam bill, against which an eight-day filibuster was waged, was fundamentally an attempt to increase the property values of Imperial Valley, California, at some injury to the present exorbitant profits of the power companies controlling in Arizona and Colorado.

Senator Johnson of California eloquently pointed to the power interests as his chief opponents, but his handful of realtors did not have the driving power to line up the senators and shut off debate.

Gag Unpopular.

Johnson went down to defeat because of the bitter factional differences in the senate and not upon the merits of his bill. He had maintained a big majority of the senate on all previous votes, but upon cloture he lost both wets and drys as well as those senators opposing the Tyson officers bill. The drys thought further debate on the Boulder Dam bill would serve as a filibuster against their own measure, while the wets opposed cloture because the same "gag rule" has been asked on the dry bill. He also lost a number of insurgents who are opposed to cloture in any form.

Some of the democrats also deserted the bill in order to help their colleague, Ashurst, win his fight against it.

Two more cloture petitions are pending in the senate, one on the Tyson emergency officers' retirement bill and the other to stop debate on the new public buildings bill. Still another petition is circulating calling for the end of debate on the Andrews reorganization bill, a prohibition measure.

CHARGE MOTION PICTURE TYRANT CREATES TRUST

Department of Justice Investigates Hayes

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27. — That Will H. Hayes, moving picture czar, has built up a ruthless monopoly of the production of moving picture plays and their distribution, is the essence of charges preferred against him with the department of justice by Frank J. Rembusch, head of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of Indiana.

D. of J. Won't Explain.

The department of justice admitted receiving the charges, and acknowledged it would ask for further information, but otherwise would not comment.

Rembusch states that the companies operating under Hayes, constitute an association for producing plays, and that they have crushed out nearly all competition.

Wrecks Opponents.

If a theatre owner does not like their prices or other terms, and tries to deal with a rival, they are not content with threatening him with boycott, but will send agents into his city to break down the good will of the public for him, and in the final act, if he does not succumb before, to build a theatre of their own near his and put him out of business.

College Students at Workers School Are Visibly Impressed

Two hundred men and women, many of them college students, visited the Workers' School and Workers Party headquarters, 108 East 14th St., Saturday afternoon as a part of their tour conducted by Clarence Y. Howell, director of the Reconciliation Trips.

Previously they had visited the Russian colony of Harlem and had heard speakers representing the former nobility present their point of view at a meeting held at 5 West 125th St. They then had visited the Jewish Daily Forward, where B. Charney Vladek, spoke on the socialist point of view towards Russia.

According to Howell, they had not learned very much from either the emigres or Vladek, and were keenly interested in the Communist point of view.

Dr. Abraham Mazkoff, instructor, and lecturer in the Workers School, told of conditions in Russia before the revolution and then recited conditions at the present time.

Referring to the trade unions, Markoff pointed out the importance they play in the life of the workers. How all workers in the richer industries obtained a two weeks' vacation while those who done heavier work received a four weeks' vacation.

NICARAGUANS BEG AMERICAN LABOR TO SAVE LIBERTY

Promise Guerilla War On Yankee Marines

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, Feb. 27.—Calling upon Latin-Americans to unite as one man, to arm, to carry on guerrilla warfare against the Wall Street conqueror of Nicaragua, "to kill from ambush all the marine devils of our forests" the American mercenary troops brought to maintain Adolfo Diaz on his presidential throne, 5,000 Nicaraguans have given into Costa Rica have signed a petition to the people of Nicaragua and organized labor all over North America.

Appeal To All Labor.

The petition was composed by Luis Felipe Ibarra, president of the Nicaraguan league of Costa Rica. It is addressed "To the Constitutional Revolution, To the People of Nicaragua, and to the Federation of Labor of Central America, Mexico and the United States of America." The workers of the United States are especially appealed to: "If the sovereignty of your great republic rests in you, why don't you help this proletariat people (cf Nicaragua)?"

Slavery or War.

The petition recited that the Nicaraguans have to choose only between holding out their hands for the fetters of Wall Street, or marching to battle, and continues:

"To our brother workers and to the people of Central America, we say: Be with us in this hour of our crucifixion if you cannot help us with your blood, because those who govern you prevent it, help us nevertheless by giving us courage and moral support in the pulpit, the press and by petition and protest; for we are brothers in race, in language, in location, in our common aspirations and ideals and finally, in the socialism of the present day which joins all men of all races in their anxiety to live a better life, materially and spiritually.

Mexico—Big Brother.

To the workers and people of Mexico we say also: You are our big brothers racially. From your watchtower you have discovered the tortuous road that the Yankee conqueror follows to surprise these peoples, and you have sounded the alarm to all Latin America. Help us to defend our constitution, our justice and our dignity, that have been scorned by the present Government of the United States, for you are greater and more powerful than we are and very scrupulous about liberty. Your voice is heard by all the people of this continent and of the whole world.

To American Labor.

Workers and people of the United States: You know what liberty is worth. The lamp of the statue which you have in New York harbor seems to say to all the travelers of the earth who come to your shores: "Here liberty reigns." If this is true, why do you allow your bankers and public men to impose the shameful slavery of enforced labor upon a small, weak country like Nicaragua? If the sovereignty of your great Republic rests in you, why don't you help this proletariat people, who are your brothers in name, by their democratic institutions and by the ideal which unite all the workers of the world in the fight against centralized capitalism?

Your representatives in the United State senate can divert the course of the imperialistic policies of your business men with respect to these countries of Latin America, if you but ask it.

Your future lies in our virgin lands. Here you can come with every confidence, if you come with your civilization, your industries and with the lamp of kindness in your hand; but do not allow your "money changers in your temple" to come to us to purchase our liberty with millions of gold, for the sovereignty of the most unfortunate people of the world cannot be bought with money, unless at the cost of blood and dignity.

To you, constitutional soldiers, we say: Stand firm in your plans beneath our flag; the time has come to put your valor and patriotism to the test, for the moment approaches to avenge the blood which American bullets made us shed in 1912. At that time we were an army, shattered, ill-fed and unarmed, but in that hour of sacrifice our last blood shed the blood of those hired soldiers which the same Adolfo Diaz, himself, caused to be disembarked on our shores.

Today we are armed and with justice as a shield on our breasts. If the Yankee outrages us again, let us unite as one man, and do not present ourselves in one battle, carry on guerrilla warfare. Kill him from ambush and in the denseness of our forests. In order that this time he may know how a dignified and free people values liberty.

If you succumb by reason of their greater strength, have faith that after you, there will be others of our brothers who shall be able to punish the traitors to their country and those foreign diplomats who, through their power formed a partnership with Adolfo Diaz for the sale of our sacred country.

CHINESE, LATINS, HINDUS, IN CALIFORNIA HELP EACH OTHER IN FIGHT ON IMPERIALISM

By HOWARD HARLAN

PALO ALTO, Feb. 27.—The Chinese of California are waking up to the necessity of opposing American imperialism. Under the leadership of some Chinese students at Stanford University, a paper is published entitled the "Chinese Guide in America." This past week an English supplement has commenced publication.

The object of the new paper, according to its editors, is to disseminate knowledge concerning the nationalist movement in China. They urge all groups to unite their forces to prevent the intervention of Wall Street in Chinese affairs. They intend to stimulate a friendly and cooperative feeling between the Chinese and American workers.

In his opening statement to the public the editor explains that there is no paper in America, with the exception of the DAILY WORKER, that prints the news concerning the Chinese crises in a favorable and intelligent way, so that the new English supplement of the Chinese Guide must be utilized to supply the deficiency and present to English readers an expression of Chinese experience, aims and aspirations.

It is pleasing to note that the other national groups in California are beginning to assert themselves openly in respect to the recent activities of American imperialism. The local representatives of the Mexican government have addressed political gatherings and taken part in public debates in order to make clear the motives behind the recent attitude of the American Government to our Southern neighbor.

The Hindustan Gadar Party, the nationalist party of India, has recently passed resolutions, copies of which were sent to all our labor papers, sympathizing with the Chinese in their attempt to establish national sovereignty in their own country and calling upon the Indian people, both at home and abroad, to lend every possible assistance to their neighbors in China in their efforts to eliminate the concessionaire and extra-territoriality inflicted upon them.

Even the few representatives of Nicaragua that reside among us are giving expression to their dissatisfaction with American interference in their domestic business, and are lining up with the other national groups to oppose the extension of modern imperialism into the colonial sections of the world.

Britain Answers Cal By Creating Another Navy: "Royal Indian"

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Proposals for a new arm of the British navy were officially announced today.

The British government, it is announced, will ask parliament to enact a law creating the Royal Indian Navy, in which Indians trained as naval officers and seamen, will serve. This navy would be available for the use of the British admiralty when a state of emergency is declared.

The government, it is stated, has received some dominion replies on President Coolidge's disarmament proposals but its reply will be held up until all of the dominions have expressed their opinion.

Covernment Operation Of Shipping Board Not A Loss, Says Senator

WASHINGTON (FP).—Government operation of the Shipping Board mercantile fleet has been economically successful, and has contributed powerfully to the industrial prosperity of the nation, Sen. Fletcher of Florida told the senate in reviewing the needs of the fleet for new construction and a permanent policy of public ownership and operation on all the seas.

There is evidence of the success of the Panama Railroad steamships, and of the fleet operated by the War Department Railways. The loss from operation in 1926, Fletcher said, was "fifty times less than the benefit to American commerce." In fact, many of our commodities, surplus products, could not have been moved to market at all in these times of peace if the government had not been ready to serve them, while we were able to put into service and carry to foreign markets our wheat, corn, cotton and other products."

Want Passenger Liners.

His recommendation was that congress declare a liberal and permanent policy of ownership and operation, and a policy of freight rates so low as to make trade routes, including refrigerator ships for the perishable fruit trade, but should operate paralleling lines on the Atlantic.

The senator urged that most of the ships [illegible] action in selling for [illegible] ship on which the government has a deficit over $2,000,000 in operation being sold for $500,000. The last need another sale of $20,000,000 worth of ships for $5,000,000. These sales, he thought, came about within the criminal law.

Jews Want Protection From Atrocities Marie Inflicts Upon Them

WASHINGTON (FP).—Protection from persecution for the Jews in Rumania was asked of the American government by a resolution passed by the American Jewish Congress, in session in Washington. Speakers told of the cruelties and crimes inflicted upon their brethern in Rumania by fanatics who have the encouragement of the government of Queen Marie.

The resolution denounced the Rumanian government for failing to punish anti-Jewish criminals, for conducting a propaganda of hate, and for conspiring to deprive 1,000,000 Jews of their political rights.

Labor Rallies in New York to Save Sormenti

ond in opposing it in America, where Mussolini is most anxious to win favor and support.

"Eastern labor must not allow Sormenti to be sent to his death any more than it must allow Sacco and Vanzetti to be sent to the electric chair, he argued. "Has the United States government still some sense of shame and dignity," he asked, "or has it relinquished all that at the demands of the monarch of the Blackshirts?"

Labor Can Keep Sormenti Here.

Brodsky kept the audience laughing by relating some of the stupidities of the state department in dealing with deportation cases of radicals. "If the voice of labor can sound loud enough to be heard through the locked doors of the state department," he asserted, "Sormenti and the other political refugees will not be deported."

"Illegal entry," according to Gitlow, is a convenient phrase under which the government ousts radicals, but which doesn't apply when U. S. marines shell mass uprisings in Latin America and China. "If it is illegal to enter the United States without a permit, why isn't it illegal for the marines to enter Nicaragua without a permit," he demanded.

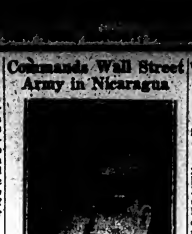
"Recently the Chinese masses arose in arms against imperialist exploiters. The Hankow Federation of Labor, a legal entry, why does it send battleships and forces to defend Shanghai? That's because there are U. S. bankers and U. S. investments to defend in China. Nobody in Washington is worrying about the 'illegal entry' of $1,000 marines in China, but when of the fleet comes to Sormenti, the country to escape the bloody tyranny of Fascism, the government tries to kick him out.

Applauds Praise Mussolini.

"The U. S. government, like the government of Mussolini, is for the protection of exploiters, profiteers and bankers. It recognizes that every enemy of Mussolini is also an enemy of Wall Street. That's why our capitalist, Ellis Zoller [illegible] Sormenti from Italy with glowing praise. They like Mussolini because he has outlawed the eight-hour day and labor unions, and because he has organized a band of hoodlums to terrorize all opposition.

"This is what our big Italy loving capitalist calls a peaceful revolution. They are blind to the fact that 'revolution' was made with brutality, torture and the murder of best sons of the soil revolutionary movement.

"Sormenti, Pietro Allegra, secretary of the Anti-Fascist Alliance, and Carlo Tresca, editor of Il Martello, spoke in Italian. Albert Weisbord, former Passaic textile strike leader, was a surprise speaker at the end of the meeting.



A resolution was passed calling upon the government to re-establish America as the "champion of the downtrodden the world over," and denouncing the rule of Fascism for "its record of murder and terrorism" and its "spies who swarm through America and have enlisted the support of the U. S. department of labor under the direction of John J. Davis." The resolution "demands the same right of asylum for the present refugees as has been accorded so many distinguished rebels in the past."

Brodsky announced that the International Labor Defense will hold a bazaar from March 10 to 13 inclusive at the Star Casino, 105 East 107th St., to aid political prisoners. Letter Indicates Judge Himself SuggestedPlan For Booze Provocateurs

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27. — R. Q. Merrick, federal dry administrator, today submitted to the house judiciary committee a letter he said he received from Federal Judge Frank Cooper, Northern New York, in which the judge himself suggested a conference to devise a plan for entrapping bootleggers.

The letter was filed upon demand of Rep. La Guardia (R) of New York, who has brought impeachment charges against Judge Cooper.

Merrick testified that in response to that letter he called up Judge Cooper, and had before him a plan whereby federal agents masquerading as bootleggers and bought and sold liquor from bootleggers. Later the arrested "bootleggers" on the bootlegged traffic. Merrick said Judge Cooper approved the plan.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Feb. 27.—Arthur E. Foote, of the United States department of Commerce, in an address today before the Twelfth Annual Convention of the Wholesale Stationers at the Ambassador Hotel here, declared that waste in six major industries averaged 49 per cent. He attributed 60 per cent of this waste to bad management, and less than 25 per cent to labor. The public could eliminate some of this waste by demanding less variety, the speaker said.

WORKERS OF POLAND, PERSECUTED BY FASCISTS, THANK NEW YORK BRANCH OF LABOR DEFENSE

The International Labor Defense in New York has received the following letter from the International Red Aid section in Warsaw, Poland:

Dear Comrades: — We are sending you a receipt for the collection made by you for the political prisoners of Poland. We thank you in the name of our brothers who are buried behind prison bars by Pilsudski's fascist government. You do not know perhaps that your offer came just in time; the government locked up the best enlightened, the most sacrificing fighters for a peasant-workers' Poland.

Two weeks ago, about six hundred White Russian peasants were thrown into prisons, among whom were four from the White Russian Peasants-Workers Branch, and Felix Holowicz, from the Independent Workers' Party.

Then again the government struck against the party by declaring Sylvester Wojewoda a "spy." The government took this inhuman means of fighting, for the reason that it saw that the more people they seized from the workers' and peasants ranks, and threw into prisons, the more people rushed to take the places of those removed; and even to swell those ranks. For this reason this despicable means was used for the "political" battle that they might embarrass the leaders before the masses and blackmail them as scoundrels and spies.

Pilsudski Put it Over.

This was mostly done by Pilsudski's party, whose very presence is a stain on the greatest crimes against the workers of Poland.

But in the future everything that is just and revolutionary in Poland will hurl back the contemptible and weak attacks of Pilsudski's followers, and defeat every attempt against the truly radical peasants' and workers' movement.

Be with us comrades in these difficult times and do not stop sending help to those who, if not today then tomorrow, will be taken from our ranks and thrown into cells. Believe us, that the growing revolutionary strength of worker-peasant mass, and your wide support, moral and material, we hope, will speedily burst the bourgeois jail gates, and all the martyrs for the workers' cause will be free to do creative work in a New Poland.—Chairman of the Committee.

WORKERS WAIT HOURS FOR PAY FOR SHOVELING

Stand in Line to Get Their Insult

Within the shadows of Grace Church, on Broadway and 10th Street, where the ministers of the Lord sling the bunk for fat salaries, stand a long line of men. It's eight-thirty now and they've been standing there since five, waiting for their pay.

They're snow-shovellers and their pay is fifty cents an hour. They've been working ten hours a day, so that the Rolls Royces may ride the more easily down the streets of New York.

Every now and then, the cop on duty, a two hundred pound bruiser, strides down the line, flourishes his club, and bellows, "Get the hell in line, there." The men swear under their breaths and get.

Hungry Kids Waiting.

They're an odd lot, these men. All ages, all sizes, and all nationalities.

Behind me is an old Italian, the father of thirteen children. One of them, of me, is, an eighteen-year-old boy who has just bummed in from Arkansas.

"No jobs down there," he says with a heavy drawl. "Farmers are having a hell of a time. The cotton's lying around there loose, waiting to be picked, and farmers can't hire anybody to pick it."

Tomorrow some of these men will return to Bowery missions or will stand in long lines in front of employment agencies waiting for dishwashers' jobs at $14 a week. The others will sit on park benches and wait for another snowfall.

Food Prices Down as Farmers' Surplus Is Dumped on Market

According to the retail food index furnished by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the cost of living dropped 3 per cent in the period of December 15 to January 15 in New York City. There was a decline of 1-2 per cent for the country as a whole. Although the decline in price was general, the metropolitan communities were favored.

While the retail price of food in New York City is 62 per cent higher than is was in pre-war days, it was 3 per cent lower on January 15 of this year than on the same date last year. Chicago shows a 72 per cent increase over the pre-war level. Washington runs its ante-Bellum mark with a 68 per cent advance.

Among the commodities that showed a decrease in price are fresh eggs, 5 per cent; oranges, 5 per cent; storage eggs, 4 per cent; pork chops, butter, oleomargarine, lard and rice, 2 per cent; bacon, ham, leg of lamb, canned salmon, fresh milk, navy beans, canned corn, canned peas, coffee, prunes and bananas, 1 per cent; vegetable lard substitute and macaroni prices dropped less than five-tenths of 1 per cent.

Ten products increased in price—cabbage 12 per cent; onions, 10 per cent; hens, rolled oats, graulated sugar, 3 per cent; plate beef, tea and cheese, 1 per cent; and sirloin steak, rib roast and wheat cereal, less than five-tenths of 1 per cent.

Twelve food articles showed no change in price: round steak, chuck roast, evaporated milk, bread, flour, cornmeal, rolled oats, graulated sugar, potatoes, baked beans, canned tomatoes and raisins.

There is a suggestion that prices will tend to an incline in the war department's increasing the army's ration allowance from thirty-six to fifty cents a day.

Pope's Dope Joint Seeks Alliance With League of Nations

PARIS, Feb. 27.—Diplomatic circles are abuzz with reports that the Vatican is bribing its way into the League of Nations. A prolonged conference was held late this afternoon between Monsignor Maglione, the Papal Nuncio here and Foreign Minister Briand.

They talked for more than an hour and the utmost secrecy was maintained relative to the question discussed. A report persists nevertheless that Monsignor Maglione's mission was to sound out the possibilities of the Vatican's actively affiliating itself with the league.

Close political observers hold the belief that the French foreign minister favors the Vatican's adherence to the league and undoubtedly will lend support to such papal ambitions. The pope will probably ask M. Briand to study the possibility of the Vatican's entry into the league and support its candidacy at the proper time.

Sing Sing Prisoners Don't Have Easy Life, Says Former Pen Czar

OSSINING, N. Y., Feb. 27.—Upon his retirement from the office of state commissioner of corrections, James L. Long, is out today with a statement explaining that the prison population doubled in his eight years supervising state prisons and hospitals for criminal insane, that he believes in rational prison reform and that Police Commissioner George McLaughlin of New York is wrong in hinting Sing Sing inmates are coddled.

"I still believe in prison reform as I did when I first came to understand the work of the department," he said.

No Coddling at Sing Sing.

"I firmly believe in prison reform and this talk of there being coddling of inmates in Sing Sing or any other New York state prison is ridiculous.

"I would be willing to bet that most of those, who say there is, have never visited Sing Sing or any other New York state prison to find out the truth or they would not talk that way.

Little Service for Condemned.

"So far as Commissioner McLaughlin's statement about the letter Peter Heslin wrote from the death-house is concerned, of course the inmates there get service. They have to be kept in solitary confinement, under the law, and very carefully watched. That they are kept locked up most all of the time then someone must wait upon them as they cannot look after themselves. What would Commissioner McLaughlin take away from them that they now get? The food? The sleep? What do they get that anybody would deny them before the high court has passed upon their guilt or innocence?

"If a condemned man, while exercising for a half hour a day with a guard standing over him, plays alone with a handball for exercise, that could not be called coddling.

"There is no sentimentality wasted upon state prisoners. They are treated humanely, and that is all. The prisons are run all right and keep good order."

WORKERS PARTY EXPOSES INSULL GRIP ON VOTERS

Fight Corruption by Ruthenberg Campaign

By R. S. CLEWS.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—Samuel Insull, the central figure in the congressional slush fund scandal last year, who corrupted all the old parties, has issued a warning to the governmental authorities against arbitrary interference with the power industry. After stressing the importance of the power business, and its future growth, he said: "I think no greater blow could be aimed at the general development of industry in these United States than anything which would attack the credit of the great power companies of the country. That is one subject our friends who sit in legislative councils need to consider well and fully before they attack an industry which bears so important a relation to the whole industrial development of the country."

"His Own Business."

Insull's view is interesting, since he takes the liberty to "interfere" with the legislative councils, even to the extent of crushing candidates under the weight of campaign contributions. Insull, in the last few days, has refused to divulge to the senate committee to whom he paid the $238,000 he admits having spent. That he calls his own business.

The corruption of candidates in the local Chicago political situation calls for a change in the administration, and the Workers' (Communist) Party is now gathering signatures to put its candidates for Mayor, C. E. Ruthenberg, on the ballot, as a labor candidate for mayor.

Getting Signatures.

Insull's interest in traction and public utilities of Chicago is "it" by the election platform planks of the Workers' (Communist) Party, which call for municipal ownership of traction and public utilities, with participation in the management by the workers employed in them.

The mayoralty election campaign is beginning in earnest now, with the primaries over, the republican candidate being William Thompson, and Mayor Dever for the democrats. The Workers' Party is speeding up its work of getting signatures for its candidate, having until March 5th to do the trick. Petition lists may be had by writing 19 S. Lincoln Street, Chicago, or phoning Seeley 3363.

Our Proletarian Friends

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

IN the February number of the "Proletarian", the official organ of the proletarian party of America, we find reprinted an article from The DAILY WORKER of January 6th, 1927, by Anthony Bimba, on "Do We Believe in Parliamentary Action?"

This article by Comrade Bimba was written with the purpose of stirring up greater interest in the work of participation in the election campaign. Comrade Bimba desired to emphasize the importance of the election campaigns for agitation and propaganda and to impress upon the members of the Workers' (Communist) Party, the need of more serious and energetic work in making use of the opportunity for Communist agitation and propaganda which the election campaign provides.

In doing this Comrade Bimba presented a one-sided picture of the activities of the party in the New York City election campaign last November. He emphasized the weaknesses and failures, leaving out the achievements in the form of many successful meetings, and hundreds of thousands of pieces of literature distributed during the campaign.

Our friends of the proletarian party seized upon this article to substantiate their charge that the work of the Workers' (Communist) Party is "bombast and bluff."

It is not the purpose of this article to defend the Workers' (Communist) Party against this attack from our proletarian friends, except to note in passing that the situation in the whole American labor movement is the best answer to this charge, and the best proof that the only living force in the American labor movement today which is endeavoring to build it up and lead it forward in the struggle against the capitalists is the Workers' (Communist) Party and its membership. The fact that the whole force of reaction in the labor movement, beginning with President Green of the American Federation of Labor, and down through the ranks of the lesser bureaucrats, such as Lewis Sigman, MacMahon, and so forth is being hurled against the Workers' (Communist) Party is the evidence that the efforts of the Workers' (Communist) Party to mobilize the workers for militant struggle against the capitalists, as against the policies of the reactionary bureaucrats of collaboration with the bosses, is making such headway that it has aroused the fears of the whole labor bureaucracy which is opposed to a class struggle policy in the labor movement.

The history of the labor struggle during the last year clearly showing the only militant fight against the capitalist employers to have been led by the Communists and left wingers also stands as an answer to our proletarian friends. The furriers strike, the garment workers strike, the heroic struggle of the Passaic workers—what other militant fights against the capitalists were there during the year 1926?

What Is The Proletarian Party?

However, as stated above, the purpose of this article is not to discuss the progress and achievements of the Workers' (Communist) Party in stimulating and leading the workers' struggles in this country. On the contrary, its purpose is to challenge the right to separate existence of the proletarian party.

The proletarian party is not large in numbers. It has possibly a half a dozen local organizations, maybe as many as ten, consisting of a hundred or two of members. It declares that it is a Communist organization, that is, that it accepts the principles of the Communist International. The number of the "Proletarian" which contains the reprint of Comrade Bimba's article, prints notices of meetings to honor the memory of Lenin on the anniversary of his death.

Now, either the proletarian party is what it professes to be, a Communist organization, or it is something else, possibly a new and smaller edition of a variety of socialist labor parties.

If it is a Communist organization, and its members Communists, then it has no right to a separate existence outside of the Communist Party of this country, the Workers' (Communist) Party. If its profession of acceptance of Communist principles are not borne out by the policies it advocates and the tacts of its activities and it is the latter, then it should not just its differences, and become part of that other sect,—the socialist labor party.

A Challenge To The Proletarians.

Our challenge to the members of the proletarian party is: that they examine their organization and its policies, and find out where they belong.

In making this examination, we raise the following points for the consideration of the members of the proletarian party in deciding whether they are Communists, as they profess to be.

The proletarian party devotes its energies largely to study-class work. The teachings of Marxism and Leninism, in study classes is an essential part of the work of a Communist Party, but the conduct of such study-classes, does not in itself make the proletarian party a Communist organization. The knowledge gained in study-classes must be carried into the actual class struggle. Marxism and Leninism are living forces only if they are carried into the actual fights of the workers and used to lead these fights to develop the workers' struggles into a struggle against the capitalist class. Where and how is the proletarian party participating in the day to day struggles of the workers, and how are its members applying the knowledge gained in study of their studies, in the struggles of the workers?

2. The winning of the organized workers to the unions, for a policy of militant class struggle against the capitalist class and capitalism is a fundamental policy of the Communist International. What is the proletarian party doing in support of this policy?

3. The Communist International supports the principle that the masses of workers cannot be drawn into a political struggle against the capitalist government merely through carrying on study-classes and educational work in Marxism and Leninism, but that such a struggle must be developed on the basis of the immediate experiences of the workers, and partial demands. That is, for example, through a fight against the use of injunctions in labor disputes, or for nationalization of the mines, etc. etc. and that in the United States, the immediate form of the organization of this political struggle is through the building of a labor party, based upon delegates from the trade unions and other labor political and economic organizations. What is the proletarian party doing to aid in developing a mass political party of the workers through the formation of a labor party?

4. One of the major contributions of Leninism to the extension of Marxism is the role of the struggle against imperialism in the fight to overthrow capitalism, both through the struggle of the workers in the imperialist countries against their imperialist government, and the struggle of the colonial and semi-colonial peoples against imperialist domination. Does the proletarian party consider its duty merely to expose the reactionary role of imperialism, or is it ready to join in a united front movement to carry on the fight against American imperialism as it is manifested itself in Nicaragua, Mexico and China at the present time?

5. Do the members of the proletarian party accept mass action of the workers, outside of the form of the capitalist parliamentary government, as the means of bringing about the eventual overthrow of the government, and the establishment of the Soviets?

These are only a few of the suggestions which might be made to the members of the proletarian party for consideration, in deciding whether their party really is. It may be that they will agree in principle with the statement of Communist policies contained in these few questions, but that is not sufficient. They must be willing to carry these principles into action, in order to qualify as Communists.

If the members of the proletarian party question both the principles and agree that the principles must not remain merely the subject of study-class discussions, but be carried into action then the road which they follow is clearly before them. They should amalgamate their party with the Workers' (Communist) Party which stands today for both the principles and which is carrying these principles into action in the day to day struggles of the workers.

The work of developing a movement of revolutionary class struggle among the American workers has great obstacles to overcome in the present period of American imperialism and the general movement toward the right and collaboration with the capitalists on the part of the officials leaders of the labor movement. Every conscious and understanding Communist is needed and should give his services where they can achieve the greatest results. If the members of the proletarian party are Communists then they are not rendering the service which they could to the revolutionary movement by standing apart and maintaining their separate organization. They should unite with the members of the Workers' (Communist) party. There is a place for them within the Workers' (Communist) party and their services will be welcome. Those members of the proletarian party who actually participate in the day to day struggle of the workers (there are such elements in the party as a whole does not) know from their experiences that such work brings them into support of the Workers' (Communist) Party. Why should not all the Communist forces of the proletarian party be drawn into support of the Communist policies in the actual class struggle.

As Communists, they should immediately take steps to become part of the main stream of the Communist movement and give their energies to the Communist struggle in this country.

Dare the members of the proletarian party face this challenge and answer it?

The Manager's Corner

A TEST OF RADICALISM.

The standing of The DAILY WORKER as a revolutionary paper has been challenged by William Allen White, publisher of The Emporia (Kan.) Gazette. Declaring that advertising men have done more to revolutionize the daily life of the American public than Communists, Mr. White adds, "The New York Times is the most dangerous newspaper in this respect in this city, much more so than the Fourteenth Street publication of the reds." According to this bourgeois publicist, "The real revolutionist is the advertising man, whose stimulation of mass desire and demands results in mass production and buying."

The attempt of Mr. White to put the New York Times in the same class with The DAILY WORKER must have been highly flattering to the editors of that august sheet. We must repudiate the comparison which even the simplest worker will see through. The false logic of Mr. White's argument, and the hypocritical veneer of altruism with which he tried to cover the real character of the capitalist press as typified by the New York Times, will deceive no one.

To the bourgeois like Mr. White, who is constantly worrying whether he shall wear this or that kind of a collar, or whether he shall partake of this or that delicacy, or whether he shall go to this or that pleasure resort, advertising is a potent factor. But to the worker whose wants are limited by the size of his pocketbook, advertising can make no fundamental difference, except to create certain desires, which neither the "dangerous" New York Times nor the "real revolutionist," the advertising man, tells him how to fill.

We may not be as smart as Mr. White of Emporia, but we can't for the life of us see how we can squeeze from the bosses more food, better homes, and more wholesome living conditions than by organizing and fighting to get them. It is this message which The DAILY WORKER is constantly bringing to the workers of America. Mr. White will not succeed in his effort to convince the workers to patronize the New York Times instead of The DAILY WORKER.

Women's Day Will Echo Words of Clara Zetkin; Many Good Speakers

The Workers' (Communist) Party, District 2, will celebrate International Women's Day, Tuesday, March 8th, 8 p. m. at Central Opera House, 67th Street and 3rd Avenue.

In connection with the meeting it is well to quote the words of Clara Zetkin:

"All the special women's demands for the fulfillment of which the masses of women will be mobilized on March 8th are rills, streamlets and rivers which flow into the stream of the revolutionary proletarian class struggle that will drive the bourgeoisie back from the offensive on to the defensive and culminate first and foremost in the dictatorship of the proletariat."

The speakers will be M. J. Olgin, Rose Wortis, W. W. Weinstone, Fanny Warshafsky, Louis C. Engdahl, Kate Gitlow, Y. W. L. and Pioneer speakers.

A good musical program is being arranged.

New Philadelphia Cab Rule Intended to Put Drivers Out of Work

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 27.—The slave driving program adopted by the local taxi owners is exposed in the February issue of the Cab Driver, official organ of the Cab Drivers' Union.

It points out that "A rule is now being put over that requires that you book $50 week or get fined. All the weak ones will be terminated and the rest will have to fight like hell to make the mark set for them. The fleet of cabs will be cut so that several hundred drivers will be knocked out of a job and those who remain will have to put in 12 to 18 hours a day to make ends meet. Out of 350 you get $16.66. If your tips are good you will make $24.00 a week. But look at the hours. Only by organizing will we be able to get a decent wage and decent hours."

Thayer Is Condemned By Harvard Dean in Sacco Case Review

Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law School has written an article for the March issue of the Atlantic Monthly, in which he proves that Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti were not given a fair trial by Judge Thayer, when they were brought before him on the frame-up charge of murder for their activity in the labor movement.

He points out that Judge Thayer allowed the prosecution unusual latitude in introducing evidence that his charge to the jury and his rulings on motions were biased and that there is no doubt that a new trial should be granted.

So testified Morris H. Silverman, a student, of New York City, this afternoon at the trial of thirty-five students and four others in Third District Court.

Section 3, Chicago, Helping Shop Bulletin

CHICAGO, Feb. 27. — Workers Party, Section 3, of Chicago, in line with the decision of its last conference, is mobilizing all its forces for issuing a shop bulletin for the Stockyards within the next month or so.

The comrades in the yards are particularly enthusiastic as they feel it rather difficult to carry on effective work without outside help. And the comrades of the street nuclei in the section realize more than ever the necessity of getting behind the shop nucleus in putting over this bulletin.

As always the financial question is forever present where the printing of a bulletin is concerned. To meet this obstacle the section is giving a box social and dance Saturday evening, March 5, in Vilnis Hall (rear), 3347 S. Halsted Street.

Comrade Herbert Zam is the speaker for the evening.

DRAMA

What Every Broadway Boy Should Know

'New York Exchange," Machine-Made, Depicts Pitfalls of Cabaret Youths.'

Reviewed by HARBOR ALLEN.

PERSONALLY I'm for the machine age. But I object to machine-made plays; and "New York Exchange," by Peter Glenny, at the 49th Street Theatre, is one of them. Its three acts run off with all the thumping regularity of a pianola roll. Its climaxes are carefully timed. Its curtains never come a moment too soon or a moment too late. At the proper place in the proper act the hero tells all about the little personage covered with roses back in the old home town (while the orchestra sobs off stage); at the proper place the heroine says: "If you go out of that door, Ernest, you go out of my life"; and having gone out of her life and lived to regret it, the time comes when Ernest heaves at his seducer: "You rotten old hag!"

In the interim an assortment of freaks cavort before the audience. Lesbians, fairies, pimps, gigolos, kept women, kept men, aged dowagers in pursuit of boys, a collection of human sewage calculated to tickle even the palate jaded with the much-advertised "Sex" and "The Virgin Man." The audience is shocked. It giggles and gasps. But it likes it.

With the material I have no quarrel. There is room in the theatre for freaks and abnormalities. But it takes a strong hand and steel pliers to make a play of them. Mr. Glenny has only a pair of nickle-plated tweezers. For strength and honesty he has only costumes and gush.

"New York Exchange" is the old youth - led - astray - by - money theme with the old "new twist." Lulu Belle used it with the Harlem twist. Here is the fashionable Freudian twist.

Poor, bright-eyed, fresh-cheeked youth from Indiana, chasing the phantom of fame on Broadway, is no longer a demure ingenue. Now he is a cabaret tenor. And the wealth that dazzles, that lures from ambition and true love, is no longer the millionaire in cutaway. Now it is a dowager in spangles. As usual, it ends in suite in Paris. Disillusioned youth is filled with remorse. It chokes, and writhes, and spouts moral thunder. Then it throws itself out of the window, and the dowager doesn't even wince.

All the cheap sale left-overs are patched together with a canny eye for the theatre. The out-of-town audience will eat it up; here is wicked Broadway laid bare. "Dallas Dixon's night club"—everybody knows who that is! Even some of the leading characters have had their day in the newspapers. Sure-fire stuff; written by formula; the prescription never fails. You mix it as you would mix a cocktail; so many ounces of love, so many ounces of suspense; so many ounces of fight, so many ounces of comedy, so many explosive curtains. Subtitle it "Male Captive" and charge $3.30 a sip! They say it has a kick. Me it made only sleepy.

It has a prize line. The seduced hero thinking: never since I've been in New York I haven't met a single decent, hard-working chap." Won't somebody volunteer to kill him out!

Mischa Levitski, pianist, returns to this city in recital at Carnegie Hall on March 29.

Mieczyslaw Horszowski gives his third recital this season next Thursday evening at Aeolian Hall.

00 CUTTERS DENOUNCE DUBINSKY; PLEDGE EFFORTS TO SAVE UNION

Condemn Expulsion of Joint Board and Call for Renewed Fight for Democracy in I. L. G. W. U.

The opening gun of the campaign to rid Local 10, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union of Dubinskyism was fired Saturday afternoon when 600 cutters gathered at Stuyvesant Casino at the call of the Welfare League of Local 10 and after listening to many speakers the cutters adopted a resolution that after reciting the activities of the right wing in the past, formulates the program for future action.

Harry Berlin, of this meeting, recently suspended with 17 other members of the local on the flimsy charge of not obtaining a working card, in spite of the fact that they were not working at that time, indicated the spirit of the assembled workers when he said that the purpose of the Welfare League is "to save the union and to preserve it as an instrument to be used for the advancement of the workers."

Secret Pact With Bosses.

Louis Hyman, manager of the Joint Board, greeted with heartly applause, referred to Dubinsky and his clique. "How dare Dubinsky say that a man such as Harry Berlin is not fit to be a member of the union?" he asked.

Speaking about the drawing up of the wage scales recently, Hyman pointed out how Dubinsky, after the contract had been signed with the bosses association by the Joint Board, got in touch with them and arranged a secret agreement for a raising of the standard of production of work. In exchange for a $3 a week increase. This was done without the consent of the members of the local.

Other speakers were Charles S. Zimmerman, manager of the dress department, and the following members of Local 10: Irving Horowitz, Falk Cooper, Henry Robbins, and Max Cooperman.

The resolution adopted follows:

1. Whereas, the I. L. G. W. U. with the aid of the administration of Local 10 has illegally expelled the duly elected cloak and dress-makers Joint Board, and

No Election Held.

2. Whereas, the International flatly refused to hold a general election for the various officers of the Joint Board whereby the membership could choose the officers that are in their opinion most fit to represent them, and

[illegible]hereas, the International has [illegible] shamefully united with [illegible] under-world, police and [illegible]ng up and sending work[illegible]erms to jail, and

[illegible] administration of [illegible]ubinsky at the head [illegible]hief part in this at[illegible]ion, using the entire [illegible]eal for luring gane[illegible]rancis, and

[illegible]Sigman, Dubinsky [illegible]ad into open be[illegible]peration with the [illegible]5th St., to be completed in 1929. The [illegible]e the interest of the new home will be "distinctly Amer[illegible]h of this work-can"

Progressive Cutters To Protest Expulsion By Dubinsky Faction

A meeting will be held this afternoon by the progressives in Cutters' Local 10 at the Stuyvesant Casino, 140 Second Ave., to protest against the expulsion of 18 members from the Cutters' local.

Many prominent speakers, including Louis Hyman and Charles Zimmerman, will tell of the betrayal of the reactionary faction led by Dubinsky, and urge upon all progressives to resist the high handed expulsion of other members who are also being victimized.

ers are being daily thrown off their jobs, and Needs To Destruction.

6. Whereas, the methods and tactics of the International in conjunction with the administration of Local 10 has adopted and are being daily pursued, leads to a total destruction of our union, and

7. Whereas, this program that Sigman, Dubinsky and Co. are carrying on will eventually ruin all union standards in the shops, thereby destroying the hard won gains for which we, cutters, have fought so heroically since the inception of Local 10, therefore, be it resolved:

That we cutters of Local 10 assembled at Stuyvesant Casino February 26, 1927, emphatically condemn the International for illegally expelling the Joint Board and for the vicious attacks upon the membership, be it further resolved

That we condemn the International and the administration of Local 10 for its tactics and policies of destroying our union and thereby bring back the open shop system, be it further resolved:

That we pledge ourselves to stand together with the workers of the other crafts and with renewed strength and fighting spirit carry on the struggle for a real democratic union, a union which will defend and fight for the interest of the workers.

On with the fight for a labor union controlled by the workers and for the workers!

Barge Sinks; Leaves Crew to Cold Exposure Two Seamen Die Later

NEWPORT, R. I., Feb. 27.—Two seamen died from exposure and three other men were in serious condition at Newport Hospital today following the sinking in the harbor of the Barge Hooper of Wilmington, Del. Captain W. S. Goslee, during a roaring gale.

Dragging her anchors at the dock of the Newport Coal Company, the Hooper, heavily laden with coal, drifted helpless into the harbor.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27. — One man, plus twelve quarts of liquor, equals one bootlegger.

SLUMS FILLED BY RATS, BUGS, SAVANT ADMITS

He Defends Landlords Just the Same

Professor Charles Gray Shaw, secretary of the National Housing Committee, resigned his affiliation with the landlords' trust in a statement issued yesterday in which he set forth a claim that the extension of the emergency rent laws cannot cope with the situation in the slums.

In an endeavor to aid the landlords in "climbing out from under," Prof. Shaw asserted that there is now no reason why people are forced to live in the sordid quarters of the slums, are not "grouped by the landlord half as much as they are gnawed by the conditions" under which they must live.

A recent survey conducted by this newspaper gives the lie to the professor's statement that the slum landlords do not gouge their tenants, and that rooms are procurable for $4 and $5 a room. The survey revealed that rooms cost $3 and $10, even in the most abominable districts.

Filled With Vermin.

A significant portion of Prof. Shaw's statement depicts conditions in the slums that prove the accuracy of The DAILY WORKER survey. All were of vermin and rodents, gas, combine with lack of repair to make the living conditions of the poor unbearable.

"The extension of the rent laws," Shaw continues, "has its value, but cannot relieve the situation which demands suitable dwellings for all.

"Municipal housing," he said, "along with other municipal enterprises, seems to be the only adequate measure to control this sum of misery and deep situation. The city could go into the housing business with the prospect of substantial earning power. I would not be worried that housing was not a bad business venture after all."

Workers Will Get Raw End, Prediction

The State Housing Commission rent at the Flatiron Building yesterday afternoon, but refused to make public its decisions. It is predicted that it will oppose the extension of the rent emergency laws which expire June 1.

The expiration of the rent emergency law will leave New York workers to the tender mercies of their landlords, since the law regulates apartments where the rents are $20 per room or less.

If the commission recommends the extension of the emergency statutes, which is regarded as improbable, it will recommend their application to flats renting at $10 a room per month or less. Most workers in New York are compelled to pay more than $10. Either of the decisions of the State Housing Commission will therefore leave the mass of New York workers without protection.

Realtors Block Relief.

ALBANY, Feb. 27.—Realtors, lobbying here, declared they would oppose any measure providing for housing relief or for the investigation of housing conditions in New York City.

A bill introduced by Assemblyman Samuel Hofstadter, which would study housing conditions in New York City has met with the opposition of realtors. Many New York tenements are violating the present housing laws, it is believed.

Garment Employers Shut Down to Avoid Paying for Holiday

Thousands of needle trades workers, estimated by some at 10,000, are out of work this week due to the cupidity of their bosses.

Taking advantage of shops where the union is weak to Sigman machinations, the bosses closed down work in order to avoid payment for Washington's birthday. The union agreement calls for payment on certain legal holidays.

The shutdown comes in the midst of a busy season, presaging plenty of overtime work next week.

THOUSAND MEMBERS OF PLUMBERS' HELPERS ASK ADMISSION TO UNION

Will Seek Charter From A. F. of L. if Journeymen's Reactionary Officials Continue to Bar Them

The campaign for the organization and affiliation of the plumbers' helpers with the American Federation of Labor is being successfully continued by the American Association of Plumbers' Helpers, organized two and a half months ago. The union already has 1,000 members.

Their aim is to organize themselves and then apply for admittance to the Plumbers' Union and if not successful to apply for a charter from the executive council of the A. F. of L.

Recently it sent a letter to Brooklyn Local 1, of the Plumbers' Union, telling of its program and aims. The reactionary officers did not even bring this letter before its membership. At the same time they proposed to the bosses that the new agreement to be signed on April 1 should include a clause that forbade of one helper to every plumber as at present, there should be one helper to every two plumbers. This was suggested by the reactionary officials to counterbalance the two dollar a day raise that they are demanding for the plumbers.

Welsh Tells Plans.

In an exclusive interview with The DAILY WORKER, organizer of the association, told of the plans of the organization, the present situation in relation to the Brooklyn local of the plumbers and what is contemplated for the future.

"The plumbers' helpers' association was organized on account of the right young workers in Brooklyn," he said. "Since that time we have obtained 1,000 members and are still growing. Recently we sent a letter to the Brooklyn local of the plumbers stating our case but I have been told that the letter was never even presented to the membership. We will write them another letter in the near future and also write letters to the plumbers' locals in Manhattan, Bronx and Long Island. Our executive committee is preparing a letter that we intend to send to the national headquarters of the Plumbers' Union in Chicago applying for admittance to that organization."

Not a Dual Union.

Referring to the situation in Brooklyn, Welsh stated that, "We are not a dual union. We cannot understand why the plumbers, especially those in Brooklyn, who are on the eve of a strike, ignore our appeals. Are they trying to force us into the position of potential scabs? However, if they strike we will join them.

"The plumbers' helpers are the only group of helpers in the building trades that is not organized in the American Federation of Labor. The helpers for the teamfitters, electrical workers and bricklayers are all organized.

Ask $9.50 a Day.

"At the present time the plumbers' helpers are paid anywhere from $8 to $8 a day according to the whim of the boss, and straight time for overtime. Our demands include $9.50 per day and time and a half for overtime."

The association held a mass meeting recently at Brownsville Labor Lyceum. It will be followed by a meeting Friday, March 4, at the Church of All Nations, 9 2nd Ave. Arrangements are also being made for a Bronx meeting.

The officers are as follows: C. E. Miller, president; H. Rose, first vice-president; M. Patrick, second vice-president; J. Jacobson, third vice-president; J. O. Farrel, recording secretary; A. Spreiregen, financial secretary; M. Jacobs, treasurer.

The office of the association is located at 15 East Third St.

QUEENS BECOMES SLUM TERRITORY

emigrated to Yorkville in the late eighties. There they re-established their old villages. Yorkville became a foreign city, complete with its own business. And the workers were hard hit.

Then a new generation grew up. Yorkville became a native community. The melting pot was gone. Yorkville sensed a demand for apartments. Then it became the stronghold of the United Real Estate Owners' Association. The Twelfth and Nineteenth Wards of the Real Estate Trust were consolidated. The rent gougers were ready for business.

Boom Starts There.

The real estate boom started in Yorkville. Its landlords were the first to realize its existence. They were the first to prepare for it. And they were the first to profit from it.

Early in 1919, the executive committee of the U. R. E. O. A. started an organization campaign among the landlords of Yorkville. The membership was increased from 20 per cent to over 60 per cent. Here they had a strong majority. The real work was begun.

Rents started to climb. The best flats east of Lexington Ave. prior to that were rented for less than $25 a month. Today, they cost $50 and $60 a month, with the average, $45, a very conservative estimate furnished me by the landlords. And the average weekly wage is only $34. This was the result of the concrete organization of the landlords.

If You Don't Like It, Move!

Repairing of apartments ceased. All sorts of conditions in flats went without attention. When tenants complained, they were told to move if they didn't like it. When officials of the tenement house department filed complaints against the landlords, a special legal committee of their organization was formed, and the cases fought. The landlord was ready for an orgy of profiteering.

Meetings of the entire membership of the association were held twice a month. Almost every member attended. Even the busiest of them realized the necessity for joint action. If the tenant was to be trimmed, Stewart Browne, the president, attended every meeting of the local ward, when he was not in Albany directing the activities of the powerful real estate lobby that had been created.

An Expert Lobby.

Browne, in rewarding to his membership, were quite frank about this lobby. He told how they killed bills. How they assisted legislators in framing measures by means of which they might betray their constituents, and get their votes.

At one meeting a year ago, he related in detail how he conducted a two weeks' campaign that resulted in the defeat of the Tenement House Fire-proofing Bill, which provided for the fire-proofing of all wooden stairways in tenements, the erection of efficient fire-escapes, the furnishing of fire extinguishers throughout the buildings, and many other safety measures. This is the work that [illegible] is responsible to the U. R. E. O. A. He has held his job for [illegible] a decade.

Yorkville's big banks co-operate with the landlords. Members of the banks' staffs are elected honorary members of the landlords' association. The landlords were recognized members, militant members, in the ranks of [illegible] business. And the workers were hard hit.

No Water Even.

No attempt was made to renovate the houses, which amidst all this booming had grown very old. Unheated, unpainted, the rooms decreased in value as the rents increased. There was water shortage caused more inconvenience. Low pressure due to a drought left all apartments above the second without adequate water. And the landlords did not bother their lobby in an endeavor to correct this condition.

Naturally, the melting pot, due to this interference of the U. R. E. O. A. started Teutonic, tired of being imposed upon, emigrated to Queens. Apartment houses sprang up one after another in the borough. And the landlords in an attempt to meet the boom. As quickly as they were erected, they were filled.

In time, they became exact replicas of the tenements in Yorkville. Their rents, only slightly above the reasonable amount at the beginning of the boom, took jump after jump. Soon, they approached Yorkville's high-water mark, with the average rental at $12 and the average wage at $33. But this is a conservative estimate. It would perhaps be more accurate to state that it is impossible to procure a comfortable apartment in Queens for less than $50.

Slums grew in Astoria, Elmhurst and Corona became crowded. Workers were restricted from Jackson Heights, where the bourgeoisie settled, amidst fine gardens and elaborate houses.

Houses in Queens are comparatively new, and yet they look to be as though they were built when Yorkville was a village. Jerry-built hardly describes them. But rents are almost as high. In spite of the poor transportation facilities, the negligence of the street cleaning department, and other deficiencies.

In spite of these conditions, rooms are at a premium in the two sections. Yorkville gave birth to the "waiting list" idea. In Queens, the renting agents are organized into the Queens Borough Chamber of Commerce. Certainly, if rooms are in demand despite the abominable conditions that are prevalent, even Assemblyman Jenks must admit that there is a housing shortage.

Boost Fake Union in Subway Sun's Reward; Use Bum Yiddish, Too

In a phoney effort to make its "company union" appear as a real concern, the I. R. T. in the latest issue of "The Subway Sun," is offering a reward of $5,000 to the person giving information which will lead to the arrest and conviction of the man who shot and killed Joe Brady, an elevated guard, on Jan. 11.

Of this sum, $500 is offered in the name of the "Brotherhood of Subway and Elevated Employees," the official paper organization known among the Interborough men as the "yellow dog outfit." It is generally known that the finances of the company unions are in a pretty low state, and it is clear that its inclusion in the reward offer is a shrewd attempt to play up the "Brotherhood."

Incidentally, "The Subway Sun" announcement is translated in Italian and Yiddish. The Yiddish translation has been badly bungled by Ivy Lee and his assistants, who do the publicity for the Interborough.

Labor Journalism Classes Open Today At Workers School

Aspiring labor newspaper writers will meet Monday evening for the first sessions of two classes in labor journalism at the Workers School, 108 East 14th Street.

The elementary class will deal largely with workers' correspondence, the reporting of factory news, the founding of shop papers and cooperation between the shop and The DAILY WORKER. The course is open to all. The advanced class will be composed of students who completed the elementary course in the first semester and others with an equivalent training in writing. The cooperation of a dozen local newspaper men working on capitalist and labor papers, have been obtained. Each session will be devoted to a specific subject, such as the tabloids, the regular morning papers, types of A. F. of L. papers, strike publicity and the foreign labor press.

Throughout the course, the creation of a distinctive style of writing suitable for workers' papers will be aimed at. Frank, crisp, short English, free from the cheap sensationalism of the tabloids and the dull blowziness of the Times, will be fostered. News assignments, by which students will be brought in touch with the labor world and trained in good reporting, will be given at each class. Competent stories by students will be published in the DAILY WORKER.

Mexican Wreck Exaggerated.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 27. — The casualty list of the Tampico railroad wreck of Thursday has been reduced considerable in the official statement issued by the railroads. This statement declares that there are but six dead and six seriously injured. Early reports fixed the dead at forty.

DUBINSKY BOYS HELD AGAIN FOR ASSAULTING MAN

Arrested Twice in Two Days for Gangsterism

Three gangsters, said to be right-hand men of David Dubinsky, czar of the cutters' local of the I. L. G. W. U., were re-arrested on Saturday charged with assaulting Aaron Wortuns, a presser in the Charles Meisel shop at 224 West 36th St., and were held under bail of $1,000.

Sam Greenberg, Max Blum, and Harry Cohen well known to garment workers as "strong arm men" of Local 10, attacked and brutally assaulted Wortuns on February 23 as he was standing near the door of his shop waiting for it to open. The shop is not on strike. Wortuns reported the attack to the Joint Board and arrangements were made for him to identify the gangsters and file a complaint against them.

On Friday morning, Wortuns and union officials were on the lookout for these thugs, who are usually to be found attempting to terrorize picket lines every morning. When the three came along they again attacked him, declaring that they would not "finish the job." He escaped and police arrested the three, who were released on bail of $500 each to appear March 4 in Jefferson Market Court.

On Saturday, Wortuns brought charges against them for the attack of February 24 and they were re-arrested and held on a charge of felonious assault.

Wortuns is known to be loyal to the Joint Board and has picketed shops near his which were called on strike by the Joint Board because workers were discharged by the International.

Bail for both charges against the three gangsters was furnished by the International.

Taxi Combine Wants to Run Independents Out; Drivers to Plan Defense

The taxi combinations are planning to run the independent taxi drivers out of business. The hundreds bill at Albany, which raises insurance rates so high that only a combine could meet its terms, is aimed at the independents, according to three local drivers' associations, which will meet tonight at Central Opera House, 67th St. and 3rd Ave., to plan defense.

The Yellow Taxi and the Fifth Ave. Corporation are among the companies backing the kennedy bill, the independents claim. The Amalgamated Taxi Association, the Broad St. Taxi Association and the Independent Taxicar Owners' Associations have called the meeting.

The Farm Bloc and "Progressive" Leadership—Futile and Dangerous.

The veto of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill and the passage of the McFadden banking bill reveals the futility of the farm bloc.

The farm bloc senators and congressmen combined with the banking interests to put over the McFadden bill which Coolidge signed. The farm relief bill got the ax.

The bankers have what they wanted. They are in a position to squeeze the farmers a little harder than before and in addition to this their agents in the house and senate, having voted for a bill they knew Coolidge would veto, can now avoid the wrath of the followers of the farm bloc. Their record on the matter is clear but the farmers are still denied relief.

The farm bloc senators and congressmen are enthusiastic exponents of the "nonpartisan" policy. So are the officials of the American Federation of Labor. Workers and farmers are told continuously that no good purpose can be served by leaving the old parties and forming a party of their own. The farm bloc is always pointed out as a shining example of the power that can be exerted in congress by a judicious use of the processes of the primary law.

The "good men," the "friends of the workers and farmers" that have been sent to Washington from the middle west and northwest, not only have been unable to enact any real beneficiary legislation for the masses but their recent attempt in this direction, the alliance with the bankers without guarantees, has given new life to the leadership of such enemies of the farmers and representatives of the banking interests as Dawes and Lowden.

It is true of course that Coolidge's veto of the farm relief bill antagonizes large sections of the farming population but at the same time it demoralizes the farm bloc following. It makes possible the continuation of the pooling of the farmer that has been the principle activity of the capitalist politicians of the middle west for fifty years. The farm bloc leaders cannot escape responsibility for this situation. They made support of the farm relief bill a test of loyalty to the farmers and since the alliance with the banking interests, Lowden and Dawes are in a position to appear just as legitimately as farmers' friends as Brookhart is, for example.

We cannot disregard, of course, the tremendous mass pressure for the farm relief bill as the principal factor in determining the attitude of Dawes and Lowden for farm relief but it is also true that they seized the opportunity to weaken the farm bloc by diluting its policy with their own and appearing as champions of the farmers.

Lowden and Dawes are now definitely presidential candidates. They entered the race the moment the Coolidge statement attacking the farm relief bill was made public.

They have out-maneuvered the farm bloc leaders.

Yet it is precisely this element, together with A. F. of L. officialdom which attacks the advocates of a labor party as "impractical." Futile and dangerous, the leadership of the farm bloc and the so-called progressives is playing into the hands of the enemies of the masses.

The whole history of the farm relief legislation with its final tragic farce of the banker-farmer alliance and the rise of the Lowdens and Dawes to new influence is one of the most powerful arguments yet delivered for a party of farmers and workers.

In the work that must be carried on for a labor party between now and the 1928 elections not the least important is the exposure of the role of the farm bloc and so-called progressive leaders as elements whose historical role is that of keeping the farmers and workers in the camp of their enemies—prisoners of American capitalism's two big political parties.

American Imperialism Gets More Cruisers.

Out of the excitement over the invasion of Nicaragua, the controversy with Mexico and the dispatch of gunboats and troops to China, the naval department has secured three more cruisers.

The militarists, ever on the job, managed to collect without much difficulty from the anti-Coolidge forces denouncing the Nicaraguan invasion and supporting the farm bill, the votes to increase the number of fighting craft.

Here is a choice example of imperialism at work. While popular sentiment is undeniably against the conquest of Nicaragua and the militarist adventures which accompany it, the machinery of imperialism is strengthened by the same elements which are opposing its use in Latin-America.

This is sufficient to prove that lacking congressmen and senators directly responsible to the masses and subject to the discipline of a party of workers and farmers, there is no genuine opposition to American imperialism in Washington.

The bankers' press in New York City is working overtime trying to create the impression that Coolidge did an heroic act in vetoing the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill. It was heroic—for Wall Street.

"Babe" Ruth demands $200,000 for two years' work at playing baseball. That ought to cause a few more wage workers to reflect on the low wages they are receiving in comparison for doing very necessary social labor.

THE DANCE OF THE IMPERIALISTS

The "Student Suicides"

By DOUGLAS P. HASKELL
Editor, The New Student.

THE score of suicides among students since the Christmas vacation have succeeded in doing one thing; they have managed to make fools of the living. Hardly had their tragic Dance of Death got fairly under way than there began also, led by the eminent clergy, the circus of the living clowns, the Great Explainers. Every "authority" had an explanation; and he delivered it like the Clown Grimaldi, very, very seriously.

An eminent rabbi pronounced these deaths to be the culmination of the movement toward "self-expression."

A famous psycho-analyst declared them due to "the desire to hurt."

The leader of a modern school of psychology found the fault to lie in Christianity, the killing of curiosity by the radio, too much boozing and automobile riding, and not enough playing of pirate, cowboy or miner.

THE divines laid it all to "modern philosophy and psychology."

A most important sociologist thought the reason was "cowardice" and put in a good word for Christianity as a stopper.

The president of a large university offered "a materialistic conception of the universe."

The editors of a most dignified undergraduate paper called it "misdirection."

On the contrary said a newspaper-reading professor in New York, there was too much education; too much "inquiring mind" without enough "inhibitions."

An expert on mental hygiene included in his formula "an increase in freedom of speech and action, an immoderate desire for speed and thrills, disregard for law and order, the divided home, and the continued breeding of the nervously unfit."

Somebody mentioned "war hysteria."

AND in such fashion every clown in the show got out his own favorite little bubble and blew it very hard, either puffing it up or exploding it, very, very seriously; and if all of them were talking the truth, there is only one thing sure for you and me; there are plenty of reasons why anyone should commit suicide.

The "Facts."

THE facts about the suicides, as printed in the newspapers, don't point toward any single explanation any more than do the authorities. Through all the reporting there runs the inability to measure death with words. Blanche Cabathaur was supposed to have killed herself after being scolded at the dinner table, no more than that. Rugby Wile was not concerned with a simple scolding but spoke about life as a whole: "Everything is dark and worthless. I have found life barren and futile." If Rugby Wile thought he hated life, J. Morgan Darr was simply tired of it: "I have experienced all life has to offer and am better dead" is what he wrote. Cassels W. Noe at the University of Wisconsin cheerfully announced he "wanted to find out how things were over there"—he seemed to have no fear about it. But one of the girls destroyed her life, supposedly, because she was afraid to face her parents with her poor grades!

In all of this, maybe the reporters were kidding the public, and maybe the youngsters were kidding themselves.

Of course some of the psychiatrists and physicians found these people simply abnormal. But since anybody who commits suicide can never be called anything except "abnormal" that doesn't help explain very much.

The Medical Side.

THE reasons for the large number of deaths might be personal reasons or they might lie in some social cause. On the personal side, the medical authorities were all sure of one thing: it's hell to be young. "Every virile adolescent is a potential suicide," said Dr. Louis I. Bisch, of the New York Polyclinic Medical School. Any adolescent feels that nobody understands him, and can easily get to pity himself. Youth is the time of sex batties and also the time when the notions of "guilt" and "inferiority" first enter the mind. Let a youngster in this state of mind read about other suicides that sound heroic in the press, and the suggestion comes strongly to him to do the same. "Then there is a misery all with pitiable letters left behind or the stressing of a reason for the act that of itself is relatively unimportant."

The Social Side.

WHAT had social conditions to do with these deaths? A good deal could be said about that, and very little proved, unless you are a Great Explainer. One thing nobody seems to have noticed: none of these youngsters seems to have been busy at work. None of them was doing anything—yet—that seemed important and indispensable. The pre-medics came nearest to being connected with the notion of work and responsibility and importance. The rest were all in the unreal world of school where nothing really matters.

There was no purpose in life for them to get very much het up about. Business? The prospect of dog-eat-dog has little appeal to any college sophomore who knows that business is not very much more. Service to the State?—That means telling mean lies in the "national interest" of blackguards. To be a bishop is to hire sob-sisters to hand out the publicity bunk that will build a cathedral. Would you be a big college president? Then learn the trick of saying anything at all to get the maximum, and spending it on any "research" that won't keep you from getting more.

AS in the Europe of Metternich, there is in America very little call for the glamorous notions that make life interesting during student years. Revolution and idealism and sentiment in college are dead, while there is nothing economic for most college students to fight for in even a meanly, selfish way.

To be a hero, as every student wants to be, to step out of himself, is forbidden not only by the perfect civilization of Mr. Babbitt, but even by modern "psychology." This evidence proves that you can't start anything that doesn't first start you; obviously only mud or money can do that.

Death as a Critic of Life.

THAT there is something in the idea of suicides as a sign of social decay is shown throughout history. Look at the Age of Napoleon and Metternich and you find a whole trail of suicides and early deaths among its best young men. Shelley and Keats and Byron, Novalis and Kleist and Buechner, Leopardi and Bellini and Grbojedof and Pushkin—all of them died young, some by their own hand, and most of them unnaturally, while numbers of others went insane. Look at Russia after the first revolution in 1905 and you find student suicides there.

THERE'S no getting around it; either a fight has to be put on to make life generally worth living, or death will cop the round. People may not all be conscious of this debate, like Tolstoi, who often put away his pistol for fear he might be tempted too strongly, but the debate goes on. The Great Explainers kid themselves out of it by turning to religion or education or psychoanalysis or business success or cynical criticism, and others by going to booze or the movies. No use. Some child, more honest than they are, goes straight to his own death, and shows them up for fools.

Negro Rotary Club Formed by Whites To Fight the ANLC

(By Worker Correspondent).

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 27.—Wednesday, Feb. 23, 1927 saw the formation of a "Civico" club among the local Negro middle class elements. The installation was attended by numerous white business men, bankers, politicians, preachers and such like "persons of importance."

These latter lauded the establishment of "Civico," the first organization of its kind in this city and promised their support. Officers were elected from the petit bourgeois elements present.

The formation of this club should not be lightly passed over. The presence of several of the most prominent white capitalists and their politicians indicates that they are aware of the importance of having their agents among the Negroes to effectively stifle any protest against the outrages of Bourbonism.

Another factor, no doubt, is the presence of a local of the American Negro Labor Congress in this city which arouses the hate of both the white and black exploiters.

The Negro workers must not give any support to this treacherous "Civico" gang, but build up their own independent power through the A. N. L. C. and the unions to which they have access, building up unions where such are not in existence.

Under no circumstances can they leave their fate to the middle class, that only seeks to betray the members of its own race in order to win an approving smile from the white bosses.

Ramsay MacDonald Explains Why and How the Miners Were Betrayed

"RAMSAY MACDONALD Reveals Why Strike Was Called Off" is the headline in the New Leader over an article by the same person. The article is a weak and unconvincing apology for calling off the general strike and deserting the miners. What the miners thought about the policy which MacDonald defends is best shown by the fact that in the recent Trade Union Congress conference which considered the whole question, they voted solidly against the official report, casting 900,000 votes.

TWO facts stand out in the MacDonald article:

(1) That the General Council, over the protest of the miners' executive, agreed with the government on a wage cut.

This is what MacDonald says:

"These terms were the best that in the opinion of the General Council could be secured UNDER THE EXISTING ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL CIRCUMSTANCES . . . The council considered that wages could not be saved for the time being however long the strike was to last." (Emphasis mine.)

IF the general strike was not called to change the "existing economic and political circumstances" what was its purpose?

MacDonald explains this when he speaks of the theory of the general strike:

"This policy never received the wholehearted support of all the leaders who saw that by extending the line of battle you weakened it rather than strengthened it and that by bringing new issues into a fight you run the danger of confusing it rather than clarifying it."

The majority of the General Council was opposed to the strike. This we can gather from MacDonald's statement. But these leaders felt that they could not oppose the general strike in the face of the mass pressure for action in support of the miners. They did, however, maneuver with the government to prevent the strike developing its full strength and thereby changing any of the "circumstances" of which MacDonald speaks.

HE continues:

"Mainly by the PURELY PARTISAN action of the government, the general strike at the end of the first week was being forced into constitutional channels, and had the general council agreed with the miners' leaders and continued the strike after its industrial effectiveness was ended by the rejection of the Samuel Memorandum by the miners, the strike would HAVE CHANGED ITS CHARACTER AND HAVE BECOME PURELY POLITICAL." (Emphasis mine.)

WHAT is that MacDonald says here?

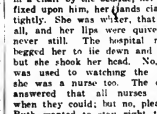
Simply that having tried and failed to get the miners to agree to a wage cut and finding that the government—whose activities MacDonald naively describes as "purely partisan" (did he expect the government to support the miners?)—was the real enemy and must be fought as such, the General Council called off the strike and left the miners in the lurch.

(2) MacDonald was against both kinds of a struggle—militant action to prevent a wage cut and a general political struggle against British capitalism.

"But," says MacDonald, "the General Council kept its head, and having done its best as a legitimate industrial power declined to form itself into an illegitimate constitutional power and called the strike off."

IT'S "best" consisted in trying, with the aid of the government, to force the miners to agree to a wage cut.

It is quite plain that MacDonald has succeeded only in proving the correctness of Communist criticism of the leadership of the General Council. That leadership was both afraid and unwilling to head a struggle against British government—the only possible way by which the labor movement could have won.



IT is well to state here that MacDonald devotes a long paragraph to abuse of Arthur Cook, the miners' secretary and the only prominent labor official who fought through to the end but finds no time to explain why the desertion of the miners was May followed by a consistent fight by labor officialdom to put an embargo on foreign coal—an action which could have saved the miners from as bad a defeat as they suffered.

THERE is every reason to believe that MacDonald's article will be hailed in socialist circles as restrained and reasonable. He is coming here Easter week and the New Leader is already creating atmosphere. We have for instance in the same issue of the New Leader in which the MacDonald article appears an appreciation of him by one Kritzer who has just returned from England where he attended a meeting at which MacDonald spoke. The New Leader makes Kritzer say:

"There is still no one to compare in ability with Ramsay MacDonald . . . Mr. MacDonald's address . . . was constructive, statesmanlike and responsible, while the others, delivered merely ordinary party speeches."

Responsible MacDonald . . . not to the British work[ers] . . . for the time to strik[e] . . . three weeks of the . . . turned loose his . . . was like a vast c[loud] . . . the sky black wi[th] . . . stinging, burning, . . .

Morning came, and they went back to the hospital room. Nothing was changed. Paul still lay, breathing hoarsely; and Ruth sat in a chair by the bedside, her eyes fixed upon him, her hands clasped tightly. She was whiter, that was all, and her lips were quivering, never still. The hospital nurse begged her to lie down and rest, but she shook her head. No, she was used to watching the sick; she was a nurse too. The other answered that all nurses slept when they could; but no, please—Ruth wanted to stay right there.

The surgeon came again. There was nothing he could do, time would have to tell. Bunny took him aside and asked what were the chances. Impossible to say. If Paul were going to get well, he would return to consciousness. If he were going to die, there might be a meningitis, or perhaps a blood clot on the brain.

Rachel said the family ought to be notified. So Bunny sent a telegram to Abel Watkins at Paradise, telling him to engage an auto and bring the family at Bunny's expense. He debated whether it was his duty to telegraph Eli, and decided not to. Old Mr. Watkins might do it, but Bunny would be guided by what Paul would have wished. Then he got the morning papers, and read their exultant account of the night's events: the reds had been taught a much-needed lesson, and law and order were safe at the harbor.

It was the morning of election day: the culmination of a campaign that had been like long nightmare to Bunny. Senator LaFollette had been running, with the backing of the Socialists, and the great issue had been the oil steals; the indicted exposers of the crime against the criminals in power. At first the exposers had really made some headway, the people seemed to care. But the enemy was only waiting

Cable from Mexico Shows Kellogg Lies

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Correspondence between Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and President Calles, of Mexico, revealing that only 22 oil companies out of a total of 402 had refused to accept the new Mexican oil law, was made public here this afternoon by Borah.

It revealed that Edward L. Doheny, Harry F. Sinclair, and the Standard Oil of Indiana, were among those who refused to accept the law. Doheny has just been convicted of practising fraud on the people of the United States.

The information given in the Calles message is directly contradictory to Secretary of State Kellogg's report to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, that only a few oil companies had complied with the terms of the Mexican land law.

The state department greeted its appearance with the observation that publication of this refutation of Kellogg's claims was "particularly unfortunate" at this time when some prospect of the Mexican government's yielding were visible.

Calles States Facts.

Calles' reply, dated January 24, follows:

"These 380 companies have solicited on the whole 643 petroleum concessions on lands with claims previous

Virgin Man Trial Is Only Publicity Stunt Charge of City Judge

Trial of the author and seven members of the cast of "The Virgin Man", one of the three plays recently raided as immoral, was postponed yesterday until March 18 when one of the justices in special sessions had questioned the proceeding as a publicity stunt.

"I don't propose to permit myself to be used in a publicity stunt", said Justice Caldwell. "The question in my mind is whether the prosecution is a real one or a publicity stunt."

Furriers Await Expulsion by Black Gang

International Spars for Time; Workers Go to Jail

All is still peaceful along the battle front in the New York Furriers' Joint Board.

Although it was announced that the sub-committee of the General Executive Board of the International Fur Workers' Union would hold a meeting last Saturday morning, at which it was understood the next step in the "task of reorganization" would be voted upon, the meeting was postponed.

There was no official announcement as to why it was not held but the rumor is that those who will lead the expulsion work asked for the delay of a few days in order to prepare for the job more fully.

60 Day Terms for Workers.

Two of the fur strikers whose cases were suddenly called last week—almost a year after the strike—were sentenced yesterday morning, in General Sessions, to 60 days each. The two workers are brother, Nathan and Julius Mailman, who are active trade unionists and they are being sent to jail because they helped the fur workers win their victory of last spring.

Other strike cases which were

Real Estate Boards Report Rent Increase

CHICAGO, (FP). — Out of 304 boards reporting to the National Association of Real Estate Boards, 11 per cent report residential rents increasing, compared with 9 per cent a year ago. Only 23 per cent reported decreases, compared with 27 per cent a year ago. Rents remained stationary among 66 per cent, compared with 61 per cent the previous year. In short, more districts report rising rents and fewer falling rents than a year ago.

T. V. O'Connor Is Charged Here With Graft

Living Off Standard Oil Money, Suit Asserts

T. V. O'Connor, former president of the International Longshoremen's Association, was charged with participation in $1,600,000 Standard Oil graft yesterday in United States District Court.

As chairman of the United States Shipping Board, a soft berth given him by President Harding in return for political favors in the 1920 election, O'Connor is accused of benefitting personally from a shipping board deal with the Tidewater Oil Co., a Standard Oil subsidiary. Since the consummation of the deal, O'Connor "has been living in a fashion wholly unsuited to his presumptive means," asserts the suit filed by a taxpayer here.

"Mutual and reciprocal interest" exists between members of the shipping board, headed by O'Connor and the Tidewater Oil Co., the complaint continues.

Big A. F. of L. Deal.

O'Connor, whose unsavory record as head of the Longshoremen's Union earned him such enmity from the rank and file that he sighed with relief when Harding gave him his present $25,000 year job, was known as one of the most reactionary and influential international officials in the entire American Federation of Labor. He broke at least two big strikes of New York waterfront workers and participated in a shady German deal at the beginning of the war.

John C. Hackett, a former deputy police commissioner, filed the taxpayer's suit in federal court yesterday in an effort to break up the O'Connor-Tidewater Oil deal. Through a subsidiary, the Tidewater Terminal Co., the oil outfit leases to the shipping board's four army bases which it owns. The bases are located at Philadelphia, Boston, Brooklyn and Norfolk. Hackett wants the leases declared void by the court.

Sons Also Benefit.

William and Stephen O'Connor, sons of T. V., both are being "cared for" by the Tidewater Company, Hackett asserts. William is on the payroll while Stephen acts as go-between for his father.

The action asks for a ruling from the court declaring the leases void, and an order demanding the appearance of the defendants, including O'Connor, in court for questioning.

The suit charges that the shipping board has received $1,600,000 in revenue from the Tidewater Company, and has paid out $1,375,000 for repairs and upkeep. It further charges that the board has extended "undue favoritism" to Carl B. Miller, named as the owner of the controlling interest in the Tidewater Company.

Staten Island Workers Prey of Landlords, Too

Richmond Borough Rents Nearly as High as In Manhattan; Insufficient Fire Protection Is Added Hazard There.

By WILL DE KALB.

Richmond is a part of New York City that makes no boast of that fact. It is strictly a workers' colony; it is more like a small town than a part of a great city.

It takes exactly one hour to get from Times Square to St. George Plaza, and sometimes longer. One first must take a subway to the Battery. Then a ferry, which runs every ten and fifteen minutes, and takes about twenty to twenty-five minutes to reach Staten Island. There one has to take the surface car, which runs after long intervals, but takes its time about waiting and running.

The borough is a conglomeration of steep hills and deep valleys. When a storm breaks, heavy fogs make the usually damp night air unbearable. When the rain pours down, little rivers form in the streets two and three feet deep. Cellars are always wet or damp.

Little Fire Protection.

One fire battalion answers all alarms on the island. Due to the lack of men, the firemen consider it an achievement if the fire is prevented from spreading.

Houses are chiefly two and three story affairs outside the limits of the ten good-sized villages that were established long ago. In the villages, the five and six story tenement, and its resulting evils, appear.

Just as in Manhattan, few of the houses, large and small, have heat. The small houses have all the faults of quickly built houses; the large all the evils of crowding, bad planning, lack of privacy, etc.

$38 Average Rent.

Isn't it a crime, then, that landlords should be permitted to charge

Reply of U.S.S.R. To Britain Is Defiant

Quotes Provocative Speeches Of Tory Leaders

MOSCOW, Feb. 28.—The Soviet government's reply to the provocative British note threatening to break off diplomatic relations is couched in polite and restrained language, but between the lines one can read a note of defiance which gives the impression that the Soviet Union feels itself capable of defending the interests of the workers and peasants against imperial Britain.

The note was prepared by M. Litvinoff, acting foreign minister and was not given to the press until it was possible for the British attache to cable it to Downing Street.

Soviet Union For Peace.

The note declared that the Soviet Union would continue its work for peace, since peace is nearest the hearts of the masses of Great Britain and of the Soviet Union and will welcome any step towards peace on the part of Great Britain.

M. Litvinoff quoted liberally from speeches delivered by Messrs. Birkenhead, Churchill, L. C. M. Amery and other British ministers which viciously attacked the Soviet Union, attacks for which Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary, accepted complete responsibility.

Quoted Rabid Speeches.

The Soviet note quoted just as liberally from the anti-Soviet speeches of the British tory reactionaries as Chamberlain did from the anti-imperialist speeches delivered by Bukharin, and other leaders of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

Referring to the British threat to sever diplomatic and commercial relations the note concludes:

"If the British government thinks that such abrogation is demanded by the interests of the British people and general peace, the British government must assume full responsibility for the ensuing consequence."

Britain to Remain Mute.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Great Britain will make no rejoinder to the Russian reply to its protest against alleged Soviet propaganda in Great Britain, Sir Austen Chamberlain announced in the house of commons this afternoon.

The Russian reply, which was a sharp allegation that British statesmen have been anti-Soviet in their utterances and a denial of any violation of the agreement not to distribute propaganda in Great Britain, has aroused considerable interest here.

The anti-Soviet faction in the cabinet is reported to be pressing for abrogation of the Anglo-Russian trade agreement.

Tories are Incensed.

Press comment on the Soviet Union note is varied. The tory papers are incensed. They claim that British dignity has been taken liberties with. They accuse Chamberlain of being too moderate in his language. They call for a rupture in relations, but there is an undertone of pessimism and a note of resignation to the inevitable. The prospect of a war with the powerful Soviet Union has a depressing effect on the most vitriolic of the aristocratic swashbucklers.

Flay Diplomatic Bourlishness.

The liberal press condemns the manner in which the foreign office conducts diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union, stresses the value of the Union's markets to Britain and calls for less provocative methods.

The Daily Herald, labor organ, condemns the government's sniping at Russia and justifies its original condemnation of the British note by the peaceful tone of the Soviet reply.

CHINESE ARMIES GIRD FOR BATTLE BEFORE SHANGHAI

SHANGHAI, Feb. 28.—The revolutionary armies of the Nationalist government are assembling before Sunkiang, 28 miles south of Shanghai, to attack the 35,000 troops of Sun Chuan-fang and Chang Tsung-chang, which are entrenching at that point. A victory for the southerners will probably secure Shanghai for them.

In spite of preparations for a "war of position" like the battles of the world war in western Europe, Generals Sun Chang-fang and Chang Tsung-Chang are taking precautions for their own safety. General Sun has his residence at the Lunhwa Yamen and at all times has a special train, automobiles and a motor boat standing by for an emergency exit.

A New China in the Making

CURRENT EVENTS By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

A NEW YORK TIMES editorial writer usually labors in front of his dictaphone with a cake of ice on his brow, judging by the clammy fare that is served up to Mr. Ochs' customers in the editorial columns of the young lady of Times Square. But there are times when Mr. Ochs' hired men jazz themselves up with a dose of indignation and leap to the defense of some worthy cause or to the rescue of a hard-pressed reactionary. In the Times of February 28, Senator Borah is pounced upon for introducing a resolution which would authorize the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations to visit Mexico and Nicaragua during the Congressional recess.

Coolidge did not like the idea, Neither did Kellogg. Neither did the Times. What business has this committee meddling with the manner in which the state department conducts Wall Street's affairs? "But this is a republic" the amazed citizen may observe, and "Coolidge is not a monarch; neither is Kellogg court jester." But evidently Wall Street looks on the senate as a nuisance only when the said senate parks its collective brain in the chair and remains silent and seated.

Pulling the stops on all the jingles ever chanted by comedians at the expense of senatorial intellectual sluggishness the Times sarcastically observes: "The freedom of learning ought to be conceded to senators in the fullest degree. Whether they will take advantage of it is another question." The capitalists have no objection to "dumb" senators as long as they vote the right way and say nothing. But the fury of a scorned woman has nothing on that of Wall Street when one of its chosen children bites the hand that would have willingly fed him.

Lest some reader looking for trouble might assume from the foregoing that the writer entertains any illusions about the political sincerity of Borah, another paragraph is necessary. Borah is one of those who voted against the proposed child labor law. On many occasions he has voted for the administration's reactionary measures. As chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations he could arouse the masses against the rape of Nicaragua, the threat of war with Mexico and the dispatching of armed forces to China.

He confines his activities to congressional speeches and to a proposed investigation that could not be finished until the flag of Wall Street floated over Nicaragua. The fact that the administration is going right ahead indicates that Borah's opposition is not taken seriously. If Borah wants to prove his sincerity he can do so. Let him arrange a nationwide tour, boldly attack the Coolidge administration and call on the masses to prevent the conquest of Nicaragua by Wall Street.

Here again we come to the question of a Labor Party. Reactionary the leaderships of the British Labor Party is it is forced by the Communists and genuine radicals inside of it to protest against the action of the government in sending troops to China. It is true that those leaders do their stunt in the house of commons and then adjourn to some fashionable restaurant or dine at someduke's home and forget all about the

Philadelphia Snooper Heads China Expedition

Col. A. B. Miller.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Gen. Smedley D. Butler was ordered to Shanghai today to command the U. S. marines corps expeditionary forces in China.

Today's order follows notification to Gen. Butler several days ago to "hold himself in readiness" for the assignment.

Accompanying the General on the first available transport leaving San Francisco will be Col. A. B. Miller, Col. Percy Archer and Lieut. Charles H. Whittaker.

Butler is "Trouble Maker."

The choice of General Smedley Butler to head the United States marine forces dispatched to China indicates that the United States government is prepared to give the Chinese the same treatment meted out to the Latin Americas. Here is Butler's record in part:

He participated in the imperialist war on China when the Boxer uprising gave the powers an excuse to march on Pekin. He has participated in many bucaraering excursions in Latin America, including the raid in Vera Cruz under the mountebank Wilson's instructions. Three thousand Americans were slaughtered by Butler and his army.

Butler won the Congressional Medal of Honor for his work in looting Haiti for the National City Bank of New York. General Butler is referred to in army circles as the "star trouble maker of the marines."

Where Butler Fell Down.

Butler first broke into national prominence when he accepted the position of public safety commissioner in Philadelphia with the object of cleaning up the vicious Quaker city. If the general has as little success in this as he had in Philadelphia, Wall Street is wasting a lot of petroleum on him.

Butler again broke into the limelight when he attended a booze party in California as guest of a prohibition director. After the guests rose from under the table Butler reported the affair and had his host arrested for violation of the prohibition act. This it is quite evident that Mr. Butler is thoroly qualified for any dirty job that Wall Street has for him.

LAST WEEK OF CONGRESS WILL DO BUT LITTLE

Wets Gagged to Pass Stricter Prohibition

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28. — In a desperate move to end the legislative blockade in the dying sixty-ninth congress, the senate this afternoon adopted cloture, limiting debate on the Andrews prohibition reorganization bill. It was the fourth time in its history that the drastic "gag-rule" was invoked and the dry bloc won only after the senate had rejected cloture three times in as many days on other bills. This action brought the Andrews bill before the senate, permanently sidetracking the Boulder Dam bill, and insures its enactment over a determined wet filibuster.

The vote was 55 to 27, exactly the required two thirds majority.

Probably No Building.

A few minutes previously, the senate refused to invoke cloture on the $165,000,000 new public buildings bill and thereby seriously impaired its chances for enactment at the present session.

The senate immediately proceeded to debate on the dry bill, which the administration had supported. Under cloture, each senator will be limited to one hour's debate and the measure then will be finally enacted, as it already has passed the house.

Much Talk, Little Done.

The sixty-ninth congress will die at noon next Friday with the final enactment of a radio control bill, passage of the new branch banking act, the vetoed farm relief measure, the prohibition reorganization bill and a dozen appropriation bills as its principal legislative achievement. Unless political miracles occur, administration leaders admitted, there will be no other major legislation enacted during the four remaining days. The lone chance for any measure of national interest becoming a law, they said, lay in its enactment by unanimous consent.

Congress found itself in this jammed condition partly because of the eight-day filibuster against the Boulder Dam bill.

Third Term Resolution.

Leaders expected the final week to be devoted to "considerable" politics. One incident which faces certain debate will involve President Coolidge's reported suggestions for a third term. Mr. LaFollette's resolution, declaring against a third term for any president who presides and will provoke constitutional debate whenever it gets a chance. The administration forces have also determined to block a vote on it to save the president embarrassment.

Look After Smith.

The public will comment investigations also have a place on the closing program. The senate is due to take final action on the contests against Senator-designate Frank L. Smith (R) of Illinois and Arthur R. Gould (R) of Maine, but may postpone both cases until next December. There will also be the matter of passing upon contempt citations against Samuel Insull, of Chicago, Daniel F. Schuyler, his attorney, and Thomas W. Cunningham, a Philadelphia court clerk, who defied the Reed committee. And lastly the Reed committee will seek extension of its powers throughout the coming recess. All these will be highly controversial matters.

SEAMEN OF NEW YORK OPPOSE PLAN FOR TWO WATCH SYSTEM

Shipowners Violate Protective Measures Granted by Seaman's Act.

By FRED HARRIS.

The re-introduction of the two watch system by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey on all of its vessels marks a definite move of reaction and places the seamen again in the position prevailing some 20 years ago, which forced them at that time to organize the International Seamen's Union of America and seek protection against the conditions of slavery.

Ever since the Seamen's strike of 1921, conditions on American ships have been getting from bad to worse. Wages which at that time were $60 a month, with a three watch system, were reduced to as low as $45 a month. Overtime work, recognized as such and paid for at the rate of $1 per hour, was at the end of the strike regarded as necessary work for the safety of the ship for which no payment could be demanded. The Seamen's Act, granting the right of discharge to any seaman in all American ports and to all American seamen in any foreign port and the right to demand one-half of his earned wages at any time, is now grossly violated.

The American seaman as such has been divorced from any of these rights. He is held to a twelve month contract, encounters difficulty in drawing his pay, is compelled to work overtime without payment for the same and has been subjected to a discipline more appropriate for a convict than a free man.

One of the pet schemes to punish him is the nefarious "shipping articles," the "log," and the "official number." For every one day absent the captain may impose a two day fine. The ambiguity of this law permits the master of the ship to make three or four charges out of one. Thus for staying on shore for one day the sailor may find as many as six charges against him such as "leaving the ship without permission," "endangering the safety of the ship," "being drunk and unfit for service" and "attempting to desert the ship." For each a two-day fine may be imposed, thus sometimes leaving a sailor indebted to the ship after completion of the voyage.

Board Cuts Food Allowance.

Much as the disciplinary measures have increased, yet his living conditions have been reduced continuously. Only recently the U. S. Shipping Board reduced the food allowance for its seamen from 62 to 52 cents per day. If it is taken into consideration that the Shipping Board has always, and is now, maintaining the best conditions of all American ships, little imagination is needed to realize what private ships may be like. Ships which on Shipping Board boats run from $62 to $65 per month for seamen are as low as $45 on private liners.

Previously the American ship owners pleaded continuously that the high rate of wages for American seamen kept them from competing with foreign ships. It is significant therefore to note that at present the condition is completely reversed, so that Norwegian wages are as high as $90 and wages for Australian seamen are $100 and over per month.

The greatest dynamic at present however is the re-introduction of the two watch, twelve hour a day system. According to waterfront information, the U. S. Shipping Board is now going to follow the example of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and will, so it is stated, beginning April 1 to enforce the two watch system on all of its vessels. With such a strong lead it would only be a matter of a short time until all American vessels revert to this former system, and will thus completely abolish the greatest gain ever made by seamen.

Mass meetings are being arranged by the Marine Transport Workers and the International Seamen's Club, to formulate the necessary protection against the two watch system, and to defeat the Shipping Board and American ship owners in their endeavor to reduce the American sailor to the level of a coolie.

Counter Revolutionist Mexican General Given Light Sentence by U. S.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 28.—General Enrique Estrada, former Mexican minister of war, was sentenced here to serve one year and five months in a federal penitentiary and to pay a fine of $10,000 following his conviction on charges of conspiracy to violate the neutrality laws of the United States.

Estrada tried to overthrow the Calles regime and re-establish the clerical De La Huerta rule. His forces entered into striking contract to that inflicted upon Rangel, Cline and others who were convicted of attempting to overthrow extremely mature governments on Mexico and set up more liberal ones.

Governor of Carolina Enforces Sunday Law; Paralyses Whole State

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 28.—South Carolina's Sunday today is the South Carolina legislature, over the state's contrary old "blue laws."

Following Governor Richards' enforcement of the ancient Sunday law yesterday on a state-wide scale, in pursuance of pending legislation to modify the law announced they would press for early passage of their bills.

First arrests in the governor's drive against Sunday law violators were made at Greenville, when four golfers were nabbed on the Greenville Country Club links.

The Aiken winter colony went unmolested. Golf and polo were played outside the city limits, but within the city itself even the sale of newspapers was prohibited.

At Camden, another tourist town, the Sunday law was strictly enforced, yesterday on a state-wide scale, in pursuance of pending legislation to modify the law announced they would press for early passage of their bills.

SCHUYLER AND INSULL CITED FOR CONTEMPT

Millionaire Says Feels a Duty to Give Money

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28. — Samuel Insull, the Chicago utility magnate, Daniel F. Schuyler, his personal attorney, and Thomas Cunningham, a Philadelphia court clerk, were cited to the senate this afternoon for contempt by the Reed campaign fund committee.

Gifts A "Duty."

While the citation for contempt was being prepared, Insull relaxed a little, and made a statement to the press as to his reasons for giving over a quarter of a million dollars to influence the course of elections in Illinois. Insull's excuse, made with a smile, was that he firmly believes his contributions were "a duty"—a necessary duty in his "guardianship" of the wall over a billion dollars invested in the public utilities under his control." He "sleeps with an easy conscience and he feels that to have ignored the local elections in Illinois, would have made him faithless to the trust imposed in him." The investments in his care, he estimated, totaled more than the value of all Henry Ford's properties.

Must Run Country.

The implication was, that he believes it necessary for his companies to control the government out his way, and that anything short of this is treason to his stockholders.

He added that he loved politics, spent a lot of time in the houses of parliament while in London, but wouldn't have anything to do with national politics in America after this.

Admits Huge Gifts.

Insull, while being investigated by the Reed senatorial committee investigating graft in the elections of U. S. senators, admitted giving $125,000 to the candidacy of Frank L. Smith, now under fire in the senate. He admitted giving Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney in Chicago $5,000 and other sums elsewhere, a grand total of $237,000, but refused to say where two gifts of $20,000 each went. It was for this refusal that he was cited for contempt.

Labor Must Show Its Own Face in the Fight With Its Class Enemy

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE most important question before the American working class today is the attitude of the Wall Street government at Washington toward Mexico, Nicaragua and China. Every bit of light that can be shed on these maneuvers of American imperialist diplomacy, that leads inevitably toward new wars, is of great value in arousing the masses to the approaching danger.

The dollar diplomats always choose to move in darkness. This is shown in their bitter hostility to the demand made by Senator Borah that the senate foreign relations committee be allowed to make an investigation of conditions in Mexico and Nicaragua by visiting these countries. Opposition is even raised against an investigation carried on in Washington.

This war of secret diplomacy against every effort to bring the facts about Mexico and Nicaragua into the open, where the worker and farmer masses of the nation can get a good look at them, easily becomes the outstanding issue during the closing days of congress. The fight for publicity is worthy of a filibuster that would keep every bit of legislation off the floor of the senate, if it would merely bring to the attention of the nation the fact that Coolidge-Kellogg-Mellon-Morgan government is trying to carry forward in secret its dark designs against Pan-American countries.

Whatever struggle has been made thus far, has been waged by Senator Borah, as chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations. This initiative, and the questions, notably the battle over the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, the so-called "insurgents" have no independent position. Borah does not consider himself an "insurgent." He was never a part of the LaFollette group. Just as Dawes and Lawden, open reactionary capitalists, led the fight for the McNary-Haugen legislation, so Borah, always a regular republican, with the aid principally of reactionary southern democrats, becomes the forefront of the demand for publicity on American relations with Mexico and Nicaragua.

LaFollette, Shipstead, Nye, Frazier and the rest accepted the leadership of Dawes and Lowden, on the question of farm relief, and now they have no independent stand in the Wall Street imperialism, altho the workers and farmers of the states from which they come demand, in overwhelming numbers, that an effective attack be carried on.

Both these situations arise out of the surrender of the LaFollette group to the reaction in congress, so that they might have their regularity restored and committee assignments returned to them.

The argument was made by its members that if the LaFollette group remains silent, then the McNary Haugen bill would have a chance to pass. The actual result is now bitter history. The bankers guth their McFadden-Pepper law, as a result of this maneuver, while the farmers got a veto by Coolidge.

The LaFollette insurgents not only hid in the trenches while Dawes and Lowden were up front making the fake fight under the false colors of the farm-bank bloc. They even tried to sneak to the rear and out of sight. The result was that they got shot in the back and must return to their various states thoroly discredited.

The same development is taking place in Borah's fight for publicity to rout the dollar diplomats out of their cellars of secrecy. Borah carries on a lukewarm fight against imperialism. Senator Wheeler (Democrat-Montana) was active for a time. But he, too, seems to have let down. LaFollette, Shipstead, Nye and Frazier merely play the role of "me, too" men when a issue is to be made. But the real struggle has not yet lured them "over the top" in an effective attack against the administration policies. Not will it.

Even if the LaFollette group flares into a display of fireworks during the closing hours of this congress, it cannot wipe out its complete capitulation to the reaction, which must mark the onset of a new epoch in the political struggle in the United States back home. This new period will be signalized by a rapid development of independent political action of the workers and farmers thru the labor party, as a result of a growing realization of the fact that the working class cannot fight with a capitalist class front. Labor must show its own face to its class enemy.

Fewer Men Work in British Mines But Produce Same Amount

LONDON, Feb. 28. — A hundred thousand miners have been thrown out of work in the last year. Reliable estimates place the number of workers employed at present at 1,000,000 as against nearly 1,200,000 for the same week last year.

Despite the increased unemployment British coal output has reverted to normal. This indicates that the number of constantly unemployed in England has been increased by a hundred thousand.

WORKERS' SHOP NUCLEUS PAPERS BEST ANTIDOTE FOR COMPANY HOUSE ORGANS

By ROBERT DUNN (Federated Press).

One popular antidote to workers' discontent is the employee magazine. Between 500 and 1000 are published by American corporations. They are highly recommended by all leaders of the personnel and industrial welfare profession as well as by anti-union organizations—Natl. Mfrs. Assn., American Plan-Open Shop Conf., etc.

In outlining ways to make the employe magazine a "go" with the workers, Teed and Moteafle in their book "Personnel Administration" says, "there is one personal interest that always claims the attention of the working force. Nothing appeals to the average man more than his babies. Most of the company magazines recognize this fact, and print all kinds of reproduction of proud parents and their children."

Another expert writing in the American Management Review says, "They like to see their names in print. The wise editor will see to it that every worker's name appears in the publication at least once a year. . . . Next to seeing their own names in print, they like to see the names of their friends. The alert editor will ask workers to write short stories about factory things and help them to do so if necessary."

The personnel director of a great paper company who edits a plant publication as a substitute for higher wages and collective bargaining tells the management method that his contents deal with thrift, "ambition inspiration," "Americanization," "baby pictures," "birth records," "economic principles," "the history of the company and its employees' mental improvement." Not one word about wages, hours, trade unions, the labor movement or other "controversial issues" is permitted to appear in these publications.

Labor Spy Papers.

One specialist on the company magazine is the notorious Sherman Corporation, Engineers, the largest labor spy concern in the world. In a sales booklet prepared for prospective clients, the research division of this super-espionage company mentions among its services the "House Organ —A 'dummy' copy of House Organ, suitable for Employees' Association, with suggestions for suitable contents."

A few magazines are published directly in the name of the company union, or the mutual benefit association, or boosters' club of the plant.

Given Free.

Most of these magazines are given away free but in some plants workers have a small amount checked out of wages on the theory that they will value more highly what they pay for. In the Lynn plant of General Electric Co. the workers pay 20 cents a year which doesn't cover the cost of getting it out.

Especially since the rise of workers' shop papers urging organization into real unions, have personnel managers urged the employe magazine as a counter-propaganda weapon. The shop newspapers have in some plants already eclipsed the employer-edited sheets. The Ford Worker, for example, has a 25,000 paid circulation, while the Ford News, (the company's organ) is finding its way to the gutter.

The effective answer to the management-edited house organ is the publication of real workers' shop papers, some 40 of which already exist in this country with a circulation of over 80,000.

WAR DEPARTMENT MAKING CAPITAL OF FLYERS' FALL

Demonstration to Awe Latins Goes On

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28. — The death of Captain Woolsey and Lieut. Benton, two of the "Good-Will" American military flyers touring over Latin America with their great bombing planes, 'did not stop the flight. The political exagincies are the same as before, and the necessity of overawing the Latins remains.

The war department announced a cable from the ranking survivor Major Dargue, in which all the blame for the mishap is laid on the dead flyers, and in which, it is said, a plea is made for the continuation of the flight, "in the spirit of the best traditions of the service". This request was immediately complied with, after a conference of Secretary Dawson and Major General Patrick.

War department officials have seized readily on the fact that the accident provides them with a martyr, and are capitalising it for all it is worth.

In all public statements the heroism of the surviving officers is insisted upon, tho their heroism seems to have been merely that of trusting their lives to what a recently deposed head of the air service declared to be "toy planes", nearly useless. Once up, and once in the wreck, the men not knocked unconscious jumped with parachutes and came safely to earth.

Yesterday's crash occured after the aviators had gone through maneuvers over Buenos Aires.

The four planes were flying together six hundred meters high when suddenly two swung to the right and the Detroit and New York swung to the left in their maneuvers. It was then that the New York and Detroit became tangled.

Dargue and Whitehead jumped with their parachutes, but Woolsey and Benson were evidently unable to find their own parachutes. Benson made a heroic effort to reach Woolsey a parachute but missed and fell. He was badly mangled. Woolsey fell in his flaming plane and was burned to death. Dargue and Whitehead were knocked senseless but as soon as they recovered consciousness they ran back to where their companions lay dead. Dargue wept bitterly.

The plane Detroit was burned and the New York was dashed to pieces. The war department explanation of the mishap as gathered from Major Dargue's report was:

Major Dargue in the front plane gave the agreed signal to break formation and land. Igne was understood. The planes behind and to his right and left obeyed, one turning out to the right, the "Detroit" to the left.

In his maneuver the hull of Capt. Woolsey's plane evidently hid from him the plane "New York" which was at a slightly lower attitude, and turned to the right as he started his glide to land the nose of his plane struck the "New York."

The planes, each traveling at least 100 miles an hour locked together and were out of control.

LIBERALS WILL KEEP UP FIGHT, CABLES SACASA

Appeals to "American Fairness" to Stay Out

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The Nicaraguan revolutionists will continue in fight as long as Adolfo Diaz holds the presidency, Dr. Juan Sacasa, revolutionary leader, declared today.

He forwarded a cable to this effect to Dr. T. S. Vaca, confidential agent here.

Appeals for Fairness.

Dr. Sacasa expressed fear that the continued policy of the United States in protecting the Diaz regime would result in a needless loss of life. His message concluded with an appeal to the American public for fairness and thanks to members of congress who have opposed intervention.

His statement follows:

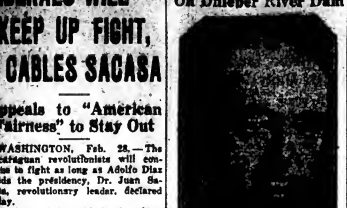
"The latest news indicates that large reinforcements of marines are landing on Nicaraguan soil to crush the constitutional armies and, by violence, impose the regime of Adolfo Diaz upon the Nicaraguan people.

Never Offended.

"Such occurrence will exact a larger toll of sacrifices from the people of my country who have never offended or injured the United States.

"In order to save them from ravage and affliction, I am, and I have always been ready to set aside my constitutional rights to the presidency, but it is impossible for me to betray my oath and my conscience by accepting Adolfo Diaz whom the masses of the people of Nicaragua clearly reject. To accept him would be only to sanction a further increase of the internal distress of my country.

Sacrifice Lives.



"I fear our military successes may impel the department of state to sacrifice the people of Nicaragua and the lives of American marines for the benefit of purely material interests.

"Nicaragua feels deeply grateful to every one of the American senators, congressmen and newspapermen who so nobly defended her cause and I, once more, appeal to the spirit of fairness of the American people to help secure justice for my country in the interest of true Pan-Americanism, the only hope of salvation for the future of the new world."

OFFICIAL SAYS MEXICAN ROADS PAY EXPENSES

Denies Wall Street's Bankruptcy Charge

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 28.—The national railways of Mexico are meeting operating costs and hope through the activities of a committee on efficiency to effect operating economies which will make it possible to cover full interest and amortization on obligations.

Such was the substance of a statement made today by Mariano Cabrera, executive vice-president and general manager, dealing with the financial condition of Mexico's largest system.

Previous to Senor Cabrera's declaration, reports emanating from New York describing the national railways as in a state of "complete bankruptcy" had caused widespread concern in Mexico, particularly among the holders of the system's obligation.

WORLD CONGRESS AGREES TO FIGHT ALL IMPERIALISM

Demands That Subject Nations Be Freed

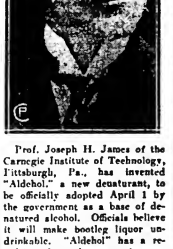
BRUSSELS, Belgium (By mail).—The anti-imperialist congress called together by the world league against colonial suppression is in session at present in Brussels, Belgium.

This congress on the world liberation movement is of tremendous importance, since for the first time in all history a delegated body, representing all peoples of the world, is gathered together to decide upon certain tactics to prevent further encroachment of imperialism on any of the weaker nations and to free those countries which are already suffering under imperialistic domination.

Tried to Stop It.

The capitalist powers of Europe showed great anxiety to prevent the calling of the congress but were unable to stem the tide. The colonial peoples have decided to have their voices heard.

The outstanding thing in the congress is the tremendous response which has come from all over the world. Powerful delegations from Mexico and China bespeak the seriousness with which these countries are following the call to freedom. The Kuomingtan sent a delegation of 50, including the wife of the late Sun Yat-sen, its founder. Mexico has a special representation from the government, the labor unions and the farmer organizations.



Delegates from All.

Delegates from all over the world have arrived, from the nationalist party of Egypt, the French North African colonies, the Negro Freestate Liberia, from Syria and Palestine. A strong representation came from the All Indian Labor Congress, the Chinese trade unions and from the labor movements of Mexico and Central America.

Political and industrial labor organizations of Europe have shown a keen interest in the congress and have given very active assistance.

Delegations have been sent from Germany, France, Belgium, Holland and Great Britain. Among the notables from the British labor party are George Landsbury, Brailsford, Ellen Wilkhawn. Among the trade union leaders are Davies, Cook and Purcell.

"Aldehol" Inventor

Prof. Joseph H. James of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pa., has invented "Aldehol," a new denaturant, to be officially adopted April 1 by the government as a base of denatured alcohol. Officials believe it will make bootleg liquor undrinkable. "Aldehol" has a repulsive odor and a non-poisonous, but its disagreeable taste would give warning of wood alcohol.

Crew of Elkton Drowns; Rescuers Couldn't Find

TOKIO, Feb. 28.—The foundered United States Shipping Board freighter, the Elkton, has been found 1,000 miles off Luzon, according to wireless reports received at Yokohama today. The crew of 36 men were drowned, the reports said.

Caught in a typhoon last week, the Elkton sent out distress signals, but rescue ships, including four destroyers, were unable to locate the vessel.

The Elkton carried a cargo of sugar valued at $3,000,000. The cargo is a total loss, wireless reports said.

CHINESE CHRISTIAN HAS TO RECOGNIZE THAT MISSIONARIES PLAN DESTRUCTION OF COUNTRY

The following letter has been sent to The DAILY WORKER by Woo Min Fang, a Chinese christian, who still feels that the missionaries are not all they should be. After denying that China is "Bolshevistic," Mr. Woo continues:

The great giant has been sleeping for so many years in the past while the other nations were progressing. It has been tightened by the various kinds of unequal treaties which allowed her only a small space to progress. Because of that fact comes the Chinese Nationalist Party to save her from foreign imperialistic intervention and to cancel all unequal treaties with the help of friendly Russia.

Not Anti-Foreign.

Do not regard the Kuomminchun military forces as enemies to foreigners. They may stay in China and continue to do business constantly if they are willing to trade on an equal basis and respect the sovereignty of China.

The Chinese have no objection to christianity, but why are they so anxious to see the missionaries out of their country? This is the missionaries' own fault, they have not done what they were supposed to do. Instead they have loaded China with debts and unequal treaties. The foreign missionaries and other influences combine on a "hypocritical policy" not only to weaken China but to spoil her gradually.

Missionaries Destructive.

These missionaries are not true followers of Christ and we real christians should not regard them as such. Of course most of them are good but a great many of them go to China in the name of christianity but in fact for the destruction of China, instead of educating the Chinese people.

Our late Dr. Sun Yat Sen, father of the Chinese republic, had laid out principles to liberate China and also to equalize the world. For forty years he toiled hard for the reconstruction of his own country and for world peace. But I am sorry that the rest of the world is still sleeping about his work. He did not unify China before he died but his principles will remain among the people.

Chiang Drives On.

Now comes Chiang-Kai-Shek, one of Dr. Sun Yat Sen's most promising followers, to continue his work. As commander of the Nationalist forces in their northward sweep, in about a half a year's time he has got control of more than half of China.

In conclusion let me hope, first, that the world will have a better understanding of the situation in China, and secondly, that the principles of Dr. Sun Yat Sen will shortly come to practice.

Respectfully yours,
Woo Min Fang.

U. S. NAVY PUTS ON GRAND SHAM BATTLE AT CANAL

To Popularize War With "An Asiatic Power"

PANAMA CITY, Feb. 28.—In an effort to spread militarist propaganda and prepare the United States for an Asiatic war, the Atlantic and Pacific fleets will engage in an extensive military display and sham battle this Wednesday at the Pacific entrance of the Panama Canal.

That this naval demonstration is also intended to intimidate the Panama congress which recently rejected the proposed American treaty, is an opinion widely entertained by those who know the situation. The proposed treaty would make Panama a virtual colony of the United States.

Japan and England?

All of the customary tricks for arousing militarist sentiment are employed. The Pacific fleet will represent an Asiatic power "bound by a treaty with a European power," which is represented by the Atlantic fleet; the canal forces will represent the United States. The attack of the Pacific fleet will "include a bombardment of heavy ships and with aircraft, efforts to land troops, smoke screens, espionage and everything which might be expected from a determined enemy," according to Brig.-General Charles Mearlin, commanding the Canal forces.

CANTONESE IDEAL OF NATIONALISM REACHES MANILA

Gabaldon Declares for Independence

MANILA, Feb. 28.—The first echoes from the Chinese revolution to be heard here is a speech by Commissioner Gabaldon on the eve of his return to Washington to carry on the struggle for a grant of national independence.

"To abdicate now," said Gabaldon, "from the ideal of complete independence when the Orient is on the crest of intense nationalism—Java and Sumatra agitating the overthrow of foreign control, India clamoring for the right to stand by herself and China fighting against alien interference—would be the blackest stain on the escutcheon of the Filipino people."

New Railroad Merger Close to Consummation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Another step in the railroad consolidation plans of L. F. Loree was seen here today in the application of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to operate, through trackage rights, over the Pennsylvania lines between Buttonwood and Dubois, Penna., where the Pennsylvania connects with the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh.

AMERICAN INDUSTRIES HAVE NOW GROWN INTO SEVEN BIG BILLION DOLLAR CORPORATIONS

Just what is the size of big American corporate wealth of which we hear so much; who are the industrial giants, and what are their aggregate financial resources?

As a result of the Ford tax investigation classifying the Ford industry as a billion dollar concern, a survey has been made which shows that there are six other corporate unities which in their total value are now of such enormous proportions as to be classed as billion dollar corporations.

The biggest of these modern industrial octopuses in the American Tobacco [illegible] Chapin, with an [illegible] amount of $1,000,000,000.

The next five in rotation are: The United States Steel Corporation with $1,778,803,000; General Motors with $1,521,316,000; the New York Central; the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Other corporations coming close toward the billion dollar mark are: The Bell system; the Southern Pacific Railroad; the Union Pacific Railroad and the Standard Gas and Electric Co.

The Ford concern is the smallest of the billion dollar giants; however, since the stock is entirely owned by the Ford family, it places Henry Ford in the enviable position of being the richest man in the world.

BRITAIN AGREES TO TALK PEACE, BUT WANTS NAVY

Brands U-boat, Weapon of France, as "Cruel"

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The British reply to President Coolidge's proposals for a new armament conference has already been cabled to Washington, and will be in possession of the state department tomorrow.

The documents had been held up for the observation of all the British dominions, all of whom were consulted.

Condemns Sub.

The text of the note will not be given out here until it has reached the state department at Washington but it is understood reference is made to Britain's unsuccessful efforts to curb the building of submarines at the Washington arms conference when Lord Balfour characterized the U-boat as a cruel and inhuman craft.

Would Control Sea.

At the same time emphasis is laid in the note in Britain's special imperial "obligations" for her protection of trade routes and upon the nation's dependence upon foreign countries for sea borne food supplies.

With references to the officially expressed unwillingness of France and Italy to curtail the building of light cruisers, destroyers and submarines,—the note endorses the Coolidge proposals and agrees to join the United States in a further survey of the international naval strength.

U. S. Treasury Agrees To Take Thirty Million Pending French Treaty

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28. — Announcement of the United States' acceptance of the offer of Premier Poincare to pay $30,000,000 due the first year under the Mellon-Berenger French debt agreement, is expected to be made shortly after congress adjourns, it was learned tonight.

The treasury department is completely in accord with the principle of the plan, pending ratification of the debt agreement, it was understood.

Forced to modify the scope of his investigation, as exclusively reported by International News Service Saturday, by confining it to Washington, instead of going to Mexico and Nicaragua, Borah still faced today a stiff fight. His resolution was backed by a ten to eight vote in the Foreign Relations Committee, but administration senators have threatened to filibuster against it if necessary to defeat it.

NATIONAL SECURITY LEAGUE RAVES AGAINST COMMUNISTS; WANTS BIG ARMY TO BUST 'EM

By SYLVAN J. POLLACK.

The National Security League, America's potential fascist organization, is campaigning for a $100,000 fund to fight Bolshevism and agitate for a larger army and navy.

In a letter that it has sent to all of its members it states that "Bolshevism and our lack of national defense—both army and navy—are now presented by congress and the government as matters of deep concern to the whole country."

Wants Money Too.

It urges all of its supporters to contribute to its funds so it will be able to help the bigger army and bigger navy men in congress pass legislation along the lines that will kill two birds with one stone, that is from their point of view—of increasing the military and naval forces of American Imperialism and at the same time carry on a red baiting campaign.

Apparently the super-patriots of the National Security League realize that Bolshevism (read Communism) is the greatest menace to the program that would result from a larger army and navy. That know that with a larger fleet, more marines and a bigger army more small countries in Central America will be made to follow in the same path that is being prepared for Nicaragua. Therefore at the same time that they agitate for militarism they must fight its only sincere and organized enemy—the Communists.

This should be a lesson to the workers of America. While the National Security League rallies to its support the open shoppers and Imperialists, the laboring masses should rally to the banner of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Major General Leads.

It is interesting to note that the executive board of the National Security League is headed by a retired major-general, Robert Lee Bullard. On its executive we find Theodore Roosevelt, Myron T. Herrick and George Haven Putnam, one hundred per cents, each and every one of them.

STRIKERS' HEAR WEISBORD PLEAD TRADE UNIONISM

Philadelphia Workers Resist Wage Cut

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—Striking textile workers packed the Kensington Labor Lyceum to hear Albert Weisbord, who successfully led the textile strike in Passaic.

Declaring that Passaic is a typical American industrial city, Weisbord said that workers throughout the country would soon organize and fight for their rights to a decent livelihood. Strike leaders would arise from the masses he declared, and would lead the workers to victory.

Strikers Encouraged.

Attacking the A. F. of L. for its failure to organize workers in the basic industries, Weisbord said, "If the A. F. of L. officials refuse to organize the rubber, the oil, the textile, and the automobile workers, then the workers themselves, those organized in the Workers' (Communist) Party, will lead the struggle for a higher standard of living."

Encouraged by Weisbord's address, Philadelphia textile workers are more determined than ever to fight the wage-slashing campaign of the Textile Manufacturers' Association, which has been rolling up enormous profits by means of a well-controlled market. More than 700 workers are now engaged in the strike, which has lasted twenty-two weeks. They are resolved not to accept the 15 per cent wage cut foisted on them by the bosses.

Workers Wade Thru Deep Snow to Hear Weisbord's Speech

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 28.—Albert Weisbord spoke on "Organizing the Unorganized" to a crowd of about 500—all the Labor Lyceum Hall would hold. Weisbord was roundly cheered and applauded.

In East Pittsburg, the same speaker delivered an address in the afternoon. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Workers' (Communist) Party, Shop Nucleus No. 1. A two foot snow and consequent paralysis of the transportation system made workers walk to get there, but still they came. The speech was a real Communist one, and well delivered.

A NEW NOVEL

By Upton Sinclair

IX

It was a day like midsummer, and the windows of the hospital room were open. Next door, some twenty feet away, was an apartment house, and in the room directly across this space, by the open window, was one of the two hundred thousand radio sets which are in use in the state of California. The occupant of the apartment was one of those two hundred thousand housewives who are accustomed to perform their domestic duties to the tune of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," or else of "Flamin' Mamie, Sure-fire Vamp." There are a dozen broadcasting stations within range, and some are always going, and you can take your choice. This housewife had catholic tastes, and the watchers at Paul's bedside were beguiled by snatches from the Aloha Hawaiian Quartette, and the Organ Recital of the First Methodist Church, and the Piggly Wiggly Girl's Orchestra, and Radio QXJ reporting that a large vote was being cast in the East, and Radio VZW offering second-hand automobiles for sale, and an unidentified orator exhorting all citizens to hurry to the polls, and Miss Elvira Smithers, coloratura soprano, singing, "Ah loves you mah honey, yes Ah do-oo-oo-oo."

There came telephone calls from the Workers' party, and from the wobblies at the harbor, and newspaper reporters, who politely listened to Bunny's indignation at the raid, and made a few notes, but published nothing, of course. The newspapers of Angel City have a policy which any child can understand—they never print news which injures or offends any business interest.

A telephone call from Paradise; Meelie Watkins, now Mrs. Andy Bugner, calling. Her father and mother, with Sadie, had gone to attend a revival meeting. Meelie didn't know just where it was, but would try to locate them. How was Paul? And when Bunny told her, she asked had they summoned Eli, whether they believed in him or not, it was a fact that Eli was a great healer; he had cured all sorts of people, and surely should have a chance with his own brother! So Bunny sent a telegram to Eli at the Tabernacle, telling him of Paul's condition; and two hours later a large and expensive limousine stopped at the hospital door.

Eli Watkins, Prophet of the Third Revelation, wore a cream white flannel suit, which made his tall figure conspicuous. He had adopted a pontifical air in these days of glory and power. He did not shake hands with you, but fixed you with a pair of large, prominent, bright blue eyes, and said, "The blessings of the Lord upon you." And when he was in the presence of his brother, he stood gazing, but asking no questions; he was not interested in X-ray pictures of skulls, the Lord knew what was needed. Finally he said, "I wish to be alone with my brother." There was no evident reason for denying that request, so Bunny and Rachel and Ruth went out.

It didn't make any difference to Ruth where she was—there was nothing to do but stare in front of her, with that terrible quivering of her lips that wrung your heart-strings. A picture of dreadful grief! The doctor of the hospital begged her to drink a little milk, and the nurse brought a glass, and Ruth tasted, but she could not swallow it. There came a rush of tears to her eyes. You couldn't talk to her, or do anything with her at all.

Eli went away without saying a word; the ways of the Lord being not always understandable by common mortals. There was no apparent change in Paul's condition. Ruth went back to her vigil; but now the doctor gave an order, she must take a sleeping powder and lie down; he would not permit her to kill herself on his establishment. Being trained to take the orders of doctors, Ruth was led away, and Bunny and Rachel kept the vigil.

SUPREME COURT IN BLOW AT ELK HILLS OIL LEASES

Says Fall, Robison and Denby Conspired

held by Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair are approximately the same. The Teapot case is now pending in the court.

The evidence, Justice Butler said, was conclusive that the contracts were obtained by fraud.

The court found that after the navy department requested Fall to make the lease he dominated the making of the contracts.

Fall and Admiral Robison, Justice Butler said, conspired with Doheny's companies in the contracts. He traced the correspondence between the pair and Doheny.

$100,000 For Lease.

The $100,000 which Doheny gave Fall, the court held, was a part of the conspiracy. The day after the $100,000 was paid Fall said that Doheny would be given additional privileges.

The final lease, the court found, was made without any competitive bidding.

The court failed to sustain one contention of the government—that former Secretary of the Navy Denby acted in the leasing under misapprehension. The court found that Denby acted collusively with Fall, but did not say that he acted fraudulently.

It was not necessary to find whether or not the $100,000 paid Fall was a bribe, the court said. Fall's whole action was fraudulent, the court found.

Tank Contract Illegal.

Justice Butler held that the navy department's agreement to have Doheny build tanks at Pearl Harbor in exchange for Royalty Oil was illegal. Congress had made a practice of appropriating funds for every such construction and this authority was lacking, the court pointed out.

Was Civil Suit.

The case which the Supreme Court decided today was one of equity, and was separate and distinct from the criminal charges brought against Doheny and Fall. It was ordered by the senate, and was instituted on March 17, 1924, the government seeking to cancel the leases and contracts with the Doheny companies.

The suit was first tried in the federal court at Los Angeles late in 1924, and on May 20, 1925, Judge T. J. McCormick handed down a decision in which he nullified Doheny's contracts on the ground that the secretary of the navy had exceeded his authority. He also stated the leases and contracts were grounded in fraud. He awarded the Doheny companies $100,000 damages, however, that had been expended for storage facilities, construction, etc.

Doheny Appeals.

The Doheny companies then appealed from so much of the decision as deprived them of the leases, and the government appealed from that part which gave reparation to Doheny.

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals at San Francisco reviewed the decision and on Jan. 4, last year, handed down a decision which gave the government the complete victory it had appealed for. It confirmed Judge McCormick's decision insofar as the cancellation of the leases was concerned, and denied the right of the Doheny companies to the $12,000,000 reparation. Doheny then appealed to the Supreme Court.

Doheny Whitewashed.

While the civil cases were being tried and appealed, the government brought both Doheny and Fall to trial on criminal charges of conspiracy to defraud the government, and Fall was charged with bribery.

After a trial lasting several weeks, a jury in District Supreme Court in Washington returned a verdict of not guilty against both men. The jury decided there was nothing fraudulent in the $100,000 loan, or the entire transaction—a contention concurred by today's decision of the nation's highest court. So far as Doheny is concerned, however, he is free and cannot be tried again.

Fall is due to face a criminal trial here in April with Harry F. Sinclair over the Teapot Dome lease.

In view of today's decision, there was lively speculation as to what effect the court's finding of "fraud" would have on the jury that is to decide the fate of Fall and Sinclair.

The Manager's Corner

THE WELDER:

Walter W. Petry, welding-engineer, contributes a valuable article on the subject of welding metals in The Pure Iron Era (Middleton, Ohio): The electric-arc welder produces temperatures about thirty to forty times higher than the boiling point of water, or from 6,300 up to 9,400 degrees. He adds, "The welder can produce this almost unimaginable heat for any length of time and concentrate it on any desired spot. It makes possible the fusing and building up of nearly all kinds of metals." The automatic arc welder, we are told describes a metallic bond evenly and smoothly and such welds are often stronger than the surrounding metal.

The labor movement is composed of numerous strands, currents and elements. The fact that these elements are not working together in the most coordinated fashion, that instead of one smoothly-working and powerful machine, we still have a loose disjointed structure, is a factor to which we must attribute the present weakness of our labor movement.

The DAILY WORKER might in a sense be compared with the automatic arc welder. It acts as an instrument to fuse the various elements in the labor movement together into one powerful, unified whole. The campaigns which The DAILY WORKER carries on for the Organization of the Unorganized, for Amalgamation, for Trade Union Unity, are but the stages in this fusing process. The intense heat under which this welder operates, is the intense heat of the class struggle, typified by gigantic struggles like the Passaic Strike, the Cloakmakers' Strike and the Furriers' Strike. Every reader of The DAILY WORKER is helping along this important welding process.

PLASTER, TILE, SHEETROCK, BRICKS, MAKE ENORMOUS PROFITS FOR THOSE WHO OWN STOCK

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

Profits, profits and still more profits has been the daily refrain of the financial press since the beginning of 1927. Each week brings a new crop of corporation reports showing 1926 as a record profit year.

Outstanding is the report of the U. S. Gypsum Co. showing a profit of $10,763,219. After all deductions for depreciation, federal taxes and preferred dividends, this means $7,808,184 or 77% on the $10,138,300 book value of the common stock.

The real return is much larger than this 77%. Beginning with December, 1920, a series of annual stock dividends have increased the original investment of the owners 126%. The actual money put into the common stock was probably not more than $4,500,000. So the 1926 profit is really at least 173% on the money risked in the enterprise.

Leads World.

U. S. Gypsum leads the world in the production of hardwall plaster, fireproof partition, floor and roof tile, Sheetrock and other plaster boards. It controls about 40% of this business in the United States. It is on labor's unfair list.

In the last 5 years U. S. Gypsum has made a total of $41,282,930 in profits. The profits year by year, and the amounts remaining for the common stockholders after all deductions, were:

	U. S. Gypsum Profits	Net Earnings	Profit for common
1926		$10,763,219	$7,808,184
1925		10,474,302	7,834,191
1924		8,825,697	6,574,204
1923		8,448,441	6,096,744
1922		4,370,771	2,700,152
Total		$41,282,930	$29,526,475

Big Percentage.

The 5-year profit of $29,526,475 on the $4,500,000 which the owners appear to have invested in the common stock represents a return of more than 650%, or an average of 130% a year.

U. S. Gypsum in 1926 as usual capitalized some of its excess profits by issuing a 35% stock dividend. Altogether the investment of the owners in 1920 has been increased 206% without an additional cent of cash from them.

Lots of Dividends.

The Gypsum company has also been very generous with cash dividends. Common dividends of $619,659 in 1922 had grown to $6,116,088 in 1926. Altogether the 5 years brought the owners a total of $15,998,754 in cash, or about $355 on each $100 they had nominally invested in 1920.

Like other building material concerns report generous profits at the expense of home seekers. These are the Illinois Brick Co. and the Certain-teed Products Corp.

Gold Bricks.

Illinois Brick, with a capacity of 500,000,000 bricks a year, reports a 1926 profit of $1,465,832. This is a return of $17.86 on each $100 invested in the company's common stock. In the last 5 years, roughly marking the building boom, Illinois Brick has turned over to its owners profits equivalent to $95 on each $100 worth of common stock.

The profits of Certain-teed Products for 1926 amounted to $2,334,828 after all deductions for depreciation, interest and federal taxes. This gives the common stockholders a return of $6.02 a share. But as each no-par share originally had a value of not more than $83 the owners are really getting about 18% on their investment. Certain-teed profits over the past 3 years represent nearly 60% on the investment in common stock.

Had to Break Law to Bring in Fine Sheep

Central Press

One of the principal varieties of wool sheep raised in the United States today were introduced by an 18-year-old, illiterate Russian immigrant in violation of United States law.

Dr. C. C. Young of El Paso is that immigrant today in the Americanized form, and Karakul sheep, extensively raised throughout the central and far west, and noted for their rich closely-kinked wool, are the products of his enterprise. They are probably the only variety of Asiatic sheep raised extensively in the United States.

And the sheep have prospered until today the department of agriculture says the Karakuls are among the most rapidly increasing varieties of sheep in the United States.

Chinese. But the exploited workers inside the party are not invited to the homes of dukes and lords. DULL indeed is the day that does not bring forth some fresh ridiculous bulletin from the executive office of Benito Mussolini. His latest is the creation of a new Italian nobility, founded on "good conduct," open to all families of "unsullied records." There is nothing novel in this. Benito is simply aping Napoleon. Any fascist who shows Benito a murder list as long as a round trip ticket from here to California is sure to land a dukedom. This new development does not look too well for King Emanuel. If I were that particular king I would take the first boat to New York and open up a protected cabaret.

This offers still further verification of the report that England and the United States entered into a deal whereby one would look benevolently on American intervention in Nicaragua while Washington would stand by while John Bull attempted to blast the Chinese into submission.

DRAMA

Shaw's "Pygmalion" to Be Given for Benefit Of Daily Worker

By LEON BLUMENFELD.

George Bernard Shaw's brilliant satirical play, "Pygmalion" is being revived by the Theatre Guild. We know that it is his object to surprise the populace by his topsy-turvydoms, to make people sit up and take notice. The manner of his work is flippant, vivacious. Yet people are likely to miss the serious purpose that lies behind his persiflage. Shaw is an enemy of bumbug, conventionalities and all sorts of befogged thinking, and to all evils these have led. His plays are brimming with ideas. The source of their merits cannot be traced to its "plot," as so many theatrical productions depend upon. The weak point is that the action is often subordinated to the discussions and that all characters talk with paternatural brilliance.

The fact that he does not and cannot please and appeal to all theatregoers has never yet caused Shaw to go into spasms of worriment. If the entire world told him that his stuff does not appeal to them, it would mean, literally, less than nothing to him. He writes to please himself. In all of his works his personality is always obtruded, even if people fail to understand him. In their eyes he is not English; he is unnatural and unreal, and attains his chief points by persiflage.

In taking over "Pygmalion" for the entire week of March 21-26, inclusive, The DAILY WORKER has borne in mind the aesthetic qualities of the Shaw comedy-satire and his popularity among proletarian theatre-goers in New York. During the week mentioned the show which is being presented by the Theatre Guild, will be given for the readers and friends of The DAILY WORKER, and a percentage of all seats purchased at the office of the newspaper (108 East 14th Street) will be used as a direct benefit to it. A special list of reasonable prices will prevail for this occasion. Seats will be $1.50, $2 and $2.50 for the balcony and $3 for the orchestra, plus the tax. It will be given at the beautiful Guild Theatre, 52nd Street, west of Broadway.

Carnegie Endowment Circulates Fascist Defense of Tyranny

The Carnegie Endowment, for International Peace has printed in pamphlet form a defense of fascism by Alfredo Rocco, Italian minister of justice. The defense is approved by Mussolini, and the pamphlet is circulated by New York fascists who have organized the Italian Digest and News Service.

The Rocco statement is a denial of every ideal that a democratic people hold and revives the old Roman and later the German theory that the individual exists for the state rather than the state for the individual.

The pamphlet contains a list of suppressions of individual rights that are justified on the theory that the state is supreme, and that the individual is but a unit that can be used for the development and aggrandizement of the state.

The suppressions include free press, trade unions and parliament, denial of local autonomy to towns and villages, government recognition of trade unionism that recognize Fascist principles, compulsory arbitration, outlawing of strikes and confiscation of the property of Italian emigrants who oppose the Mussolini system.

TAXI MEN FIGHT TRUST'S EFFORT TO OUST THEM

Pack Central Opera House in Protest

Thirty-five hundred independent taxi drivers crowded Central Opera House yesterday evening to plan an offensive against the Kennedy bill pending in the state legislature. This measure, by boosting insurance rates to $45 and $50 a month for each driver, would practically wipe out the independent drivers and give the big taxi combinations complete domination of New York's great taxi business.

On March 2 when the bill comes up for hearing before the committee of internal affairs, the taxi drivers, through their associations, plan to have a delegation of 100 members to present their case. The bill if approved will go into effect July 1, sounding the death knell for the men who own their individual cabs.

Industrial Squad There.

As usual, the industrial squad of the police force was on hand, with many other cops and plainclothes men, although there was not the slightest hint of disorder.

Governor Smith is understood to be in favor of the Kennedy bill, together with the Tammany representatives of New York but the drivers' delegation hopes to put their case so strongly before them, that they will hesitate before playing into the hands of the Yellow Taxi Co., notoriously anti-union, and other taxi companies.

4,700 Organized.

Michael Donnella of the Amalgamated Taxi Cab tiwners, acted as chairman. He declared 4,500 independent cab drivers are organized and ready to fight the bill tooth and nail.

Hugo Werber, business manager of the Broad St. Taxi Association, asserted that the bald purpose behind the bill was to put the independents out of business. He urged a central organization to handle the affairs of the organized drivers. M. J. Kennedy, of the 18th senatorial district of Manhattan, sponsors the bill.

John Ullmon of the Taxi News and Otto Goodfriend, former president of the 20th Century Taxi Association, spoke in opposition to the Kennedy measure. Goodfriend declared cheap lawyers, hungry for fees, were in league with the taxi combines.

Slipper Workers' Meeting Tonight; Manhattan Lyceum

Opening of a campaign to organize the 10,000 sititch-down and felt slipper workers will start this evening at a mass meeting to be held at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th St., under the auspices of Local 55, Shoe Workers' Protective Union.

Working nine to twelve hours a day for wages as low as $12 a week the workers are beginning to realize that only by unionization can their problems be solved.

Craftsmen Used to Swing Election in Local 38 to Rights

An interesting local union election where the lefts, according to the official count, were defeated by the votes of the skilled workers who make a comfortable living because the left wing administration dared to organize the semi-skilled and unorganized dressmakers recently, was held by Local 38, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The local is composed of 3,000 members, of which 940 are ladies' tailors. 540 votes were cast in the election, of which 308 went for the left and 379 for the right wing candidates. The organization campaign, which increased the membership by 300, antagonized the big firms in the trade, which make their main profits out of the unorganized dress and millinery workers, and they served notice on the skilled that their jobs will be endangered and their work diverted to the semi-skilled and unorganized if the union would not stop organizing.

This corrupting terrorism of the employers supported by the Sigman machine, by its assignment of three vice-presidents to manipulate the elections, caused the temporary defeat of militants in this trade. The left wing leadership halds near an elevated station and 30 votes cast by dressmakers who were suspected of voting with the lefts were ruled out by vice-presidents on a subterfuge.

ASK N. Y. LABOR TO RALLY AID TO 16 CLOAKMAKERS

Metropolitan Conference March 12

A defense of the cloakmakers conference of representatives from all labor organizations and sympathetic groups in greater New York has been called for March 12 at Manhattan Lyceum, by the Cloakmakers Defense Committee.

The call, issued by John Robbins, and S. Biro, chairman and secretary of the defense committee, is addressed to all labor organizations, points out that the sixteen cloakmakers now under heavy sentences meted out by "the labor hating Judge Rotalsky," have been victimized because they made a courageous fight for their own union and for labor. It summons labor to the conference as the first step in a campaign to defend these men and to aid their families while they are in prison. Many of the imprisoned men have families of small children.

The summons to the conference is as follows:

Dear Friends:

The Cloakmakers' Defense Committee appeals to you on behalf of the sixteen cloakmakers who have been sentenced to long terms in prison because of their activities in the last cloakmakers' general strike.

You already know that the cloakmakers carried on a bitter struggle for 20 weeks to better their conditions. The bosses employed every means to break the strike. At their request, the police arrested hundreds of strikers daily. Gangsters were employed to terrorize the cloak district, and hundreds of cloakmakers were attacked and brutally beaten.

The police and hired gangsters, and the judges as well, were the defenders of the bosses and the scabs who were attempting to break the strike. The very life of the union was threatened by all these furces allied against it.

Crime of Self-Defense.

The cloakmakers carried on a courageous struggle for their union and the Strike Sixteen of the brave cloakmakers who defended themselves against scabs were arrested, and were sentenced by the labor hating Judge Rosalsky to terms in prison of six months to five years. Sixteen honest workers whose only crime was that they defended themselves against the thugs, were separated from their homes and families. They fought for the union this was their only offense.

While these innocent men are condemned to jail, the hired sluggers of the bosses are allowed their freedom. This is the first time in the history of the cloakmakers' union that strikers have been meted out such brutal sentences.

The labor movement must not allow these sentences to stand. Every effort must be made to free these men from their bars. Every effort must be made to relieve and support the families that they have left behind.

Labor Must Do Job.

Dear friends, the Cloakmakers' Defense Committee appeals to you to come to the aid of the sixteen victims and their families.

Under normal conditions, the cloak and dressmakers' union would have been able to undertake the work of freeing these cloakmakers without calling for outside assistance, but the union now finds itself in a critical situation. The duty must fall on the labor movement to free these victims and assist their families during their imprisonment.

27 Militant Office Workers Expelled

when he arrived for last night's meeting.

The rest of the group, whose names were read off impressively by Feigenbaum, as worthy of expulsion, had 48 votes against them, 31 votes for them; and the chairman refused to count the votes of the 15 members having proposed for expulsion although they were still members of the union.

Cops Out in Force.

Such a friendly, cooperative spirit has developed lately between the right wings of various locals and the police force, that it was not surprising to see the B. S. & A. U. members to find 15th Street lined with detectives and police; official gangsters from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the Neckwear Workers; and a substantial delegation inside the hall from the neckwear workers which by working with both bands of thugs strengthened the administration vote in the expulsion proceedings.

An attempt to seat the about-to-be-expelled members in one group where they would be easy prey for the gangsters was foiled when the members insisted on sitting where they pleased in various parts of the hall. When one member rose to ask whether there was any rule of the union which determined the seating arrangements, the war told by the chair:

Rough Stuff Ready.

"If we hear any more objections from you we will not wait for the regular procedure"—and his glares at one of the strong arm attendants made his meaning doubly clear.

The meeting opened with the reading of the last minutes in which it was mentioned that an organizing committee had been called for and 15 volunteers had responded.

Expel Real Militants.

These fifteen names were read, and among them were 12 who not ten minutes later were read in the list of those whom the union expelled for their lack of adherence to trade union principles. It was a clear example of the falsity of the union's charges. All of these members have been among the most active in all branches of the union's work.

After the trial committee had read its list of names, several of the members tried to speak in their own defense dunying the right of the union to expel them, and denying the charges so falsely brought against them.

When one of these speakers had the floor, someone raised as a point of order the fact that the member instead of addressing the chair was addressing the members at the meeting. Many shop supporters of the administration had denounced several of those expelled and made various accusations against them, but members were denied the right to defend themselves and their demands for the floor was so flagrantly ignored that several at the meeting objected and finally cast their votes against the expulsion.

The chairman, President Leonard Bright, overruled the objection that it was unconstitutional to [illegible] should be voted upon separately, [illegible] that occupied [illegible] that he had proved no crime against any member. Each one had been charged:

(1) With membership in the Communist Party.

(2) With membership in the T. U. E. L.

Valskas, Jack Samuk Rea Clymon, Eve Blum [illegible] some Roman, H. Silverstein, Margaret Cowel, Irwin Frelkin, Ray Rappaport, Dat Gerjoy, Beatrice Colle, Ray Bennett, A. S. Negin, M. Technical Union Draw Up Wage Scale For Work With City

A special meeting has been called for today at 6 p. m., by the Union of Technicel Men, Local 37, at the Labor Temple, 14th Street and 2nd Avenue.

The union will adopt its salary schedule for municipal engineers and technical employes. This schedule will be presented to the Board of Estimate, and James P. Counihan, secretary of the Central Trades and Labor Council, one of the speakers of the evening, will lead the fight for the adoption of the union scale.

The union will also take a stand on the question of state licenses for professional engineers. The civil service commission will hold a special hearing in the Municipal Bldg., on Wednesday, March 2nd, to hear the unions stand on this problem.

MT. SINAI CREW WALKS OUT AS TWO ARE FIRED

Firemen, Oilers and Engineers United

Determined to support two Mount Sinai engineers who had been discharged because they were union members and had demanded a six-day week, firemen, oilers an engineers at the power plant of the Mount Sinai Hospital, East 100th St., walked out yesterday.

Employes of the powar plant had planned to petition for a six day week, no discrimination against union men and abolition of the custom of employing men from employment agencies. This petition was to have been presented on March 1st.

In an attempt to forestall this move of the employes, two engineers were promptly discharged. Their union activities were the only reason given.

Engine Men Stand Together.

Supporting the two engineers, all of the firemen, oilers and engineers in the plant walked out yesterday, and demanded that the case be taken up by the board of directors of the hospital.

The union demands a six day week for the power plant workers and no discrimination against union men. The chief engineer at the plant is trying to break the strike by using scabs obtained through employment agencies.

Staten Island Labor Prey of Landlords

an average rent of $38 for rooms under those conditions?

Thirty-eight dollars for rent alone! And the average salary is only $33 a week!

Why people will continue to live under these conditions is almost a mystery. Maybe it's because they like the climate. The sea air, if one's lungs can stand it is said to be stimulating. Maybe they like the informality of open place, the small-town atmosphere. Maybe because it's cheaper they like to live near the big city but apart from its noise and bustle and hustle. Maybe Forced There by Shortage.

But from what I learned about the place and its residents, the one thing that is keeping them there is the housing shortage. They can't get rooms anywhere else. So they must be content with what they get. The landlord-trust has an absolute monopoly. It makes use of it.

Even under these important handicaps the Staten Island landlord has no trouble keeping his rooms rented. Organized into the Richmond Board of Trade, and the Real Estate Board of Staten Island, he is able to compel the tenant as easily as his Manhattan and Bronx brothers.

If rooms are at a premium in Richmond, in spite of the backwardness of that borough, does that not prove the existence of a housing shortage? I'm not sure how the Richmond landlord would like to see the defeat of the Emergency Rent Laws!

The demands of the union are: The renewal of the old agreement and a three dollar raise.

The strike committee elected by the last meeting of the union consists of: A. Klein, chairman, B. Schwartz, A. Fribush and W. Hochman.

The settlement committee selected consists of: H. Cohen, F. Ornt, and P. Tabachnick.

Law committee: N. Bresnick and H. Gordon.
